Keeping America Green

Professor Norman Hummel checks experimental grass in a Cornell greenhouse.

Millions of people spend much of their lives surrounded by grass. They gaze at it, play on it, they're even buried under it. There are 27,000 acres of grass-covered cemeteries in the state, not to speak of the 635,000 acres of home lawns, and 80,000 acres of parkland. Golf courses, highway medians, college campuses, sewage treatment plants, prison yards—all are carpeted in green.

For 50 years past there has been at least one scientist in the college studying how to produce and maintain the disease- and weed-free turf we've come to expect. Today the Turf Science Program has six specialists in the areas of weed science, agronomy, plant pathology, entomology, and integrated pest management. They serve the public and the state's $1-billion-plus turf production and service industry.

Norman W. Hummel Jr., an assistant professor of floriculture and ornamental horticulture, is the man up front. He fields more than 2,000 phone calls a year on everything from what vegetation to use on a landfill cap to diagnosing brown splotches on a golf course green. Among Hummel's more exotic projects is consulting with a state contractor in charge of producing three acres of disposable playing field to be installed at the Meadowlands Sports Complex for the 1994 World Cup Soccer Championships.

"The challenge here," he says, "is to design a system for growing grass entirely off-site yet that can be installed quickly, is light enough to be supported by scaffolding erected over the stadium's Astroturf, but will hold up for seven games."

More typically, Hummel spends his time on public teaching. Last winter, during 12 weeks, he made 24 presentations to turf industry representatives, grounds managers, homeowners—even kids—on how to design, plant, and maintain grassy areas using as little mowing, fertilizer, pesticides, and water as possible.

In research parlance, these four are referred to as "inputs," and reducing inputs is the approach that drives the program's education and research activities. "There are tools already in existence, and others currently being developed, that could be incorporated into a turfgrass management program to reduce these inputs—especially the need for pesticides—without compromising turf quality," says Hummel. "Much of what we do is train people to identify problems, what exactly to look for, then how best to act."

Among the diverse research activities that inform the advice Hummel gives, four projects hold particular promise. One is Eric Nelson's work on using compost to reduce soil-borne diseases (see "Let the Microbes Have It"), two on other types of biological control, and a fourth on identifying the potential for pesticide contamination of groundwater.

Weed scientist Joseph Neal, an associate professor of floriculture and ornamental horticulture, is tackling the major cosmetic problem faced by the turf industry—weeds. He's tracking down the naturally occurring organisms that cause diseases in weed species. The idea is that these so-called natural antagonists could be developed commercially as biological weed killers.

Let the Microbes Have It

Composting to Alleviate Our Solid Waste Crisis

Each year every one of us adds another ton to the problem. As our garbage cans overflow with pizza boxes and grass clippings, detergent bottles and potato peels, municipalities scramble to find economically viable, environmentally safe ways to save us from our own waste.

Only a few researchers in a handful of educational institutions around the country are investigating the potential that composting holds to cut the volume of solid waste in half. Among them Cornell stands out. Within ten different departments in the college, 15 scientists are hard at work bringing the virtues of this age-old practice to bear on one of today's most vexing problems.

Research and extension activities cover the whole gamut: from fundamental studies of the microbial ecosystem that fuels the composting process to teaching gardeners how to build backyard compost bins; from advising municipalities and businesses on the most effective composting technology to investigating the uses of compost to control fungal diseases.

Splitting his time between the lab and the road, engineer Tom L. Richard, a senior research support specialist in the Department of Agricultural and Biological Engineering, has perhaps the broadest take on the subject. He points out, for example, that the reason 25 percent of the sewage sludge composting facilities in the Northeast have nuisance odors is because so little is known about how this complex process operates on the biological, physical, and chemical levels, particularly on an industrial scale. "Until recently our knowledge has come from trial and error," Richard points out. "We're just now beginning to develop an engineering framework for designing various types of composting facilities that will be reliable, yet free from the side effects that have given municipal composting a rather bad name."

"Anything that's organic, around in huge supplies, and no one knows what to do with—yard, food, and industrial wastes and sewage sludge—can be composted."

—Tom Richard

There's still much to be learned in the lab, but Richard also takes to the road to encourage communities and businesses to use those already-proven technologies. In collaboration with the Department of Agricultural Economics' Local Government Program and the state's Department of Environmental Conservation, Richard has helped more than 150 communities establish yard waste composting facilities that operate at a fraction of the cost of landfill disposal. He's worked with the state's Sea Grant Program to develop small-scale facilities for composting much of the fish entrails generated along Lake Ontario, more than a million and a half pounds each summer. And he's conducted feasibility studies on composting pea shells, grape pomace, and other wastes from food processing plants, the dregs from breweries, and sludge from paper mills.

While Richard tackles waste in the millions of pounds, Robert Kozlowski approaches the problem by the rake and pailful. As extension associate in the Department of Floriculture and Ornamental Horticulture, Kozlowski develops materials used by Cornell Cooperative Extension's 1,100 Master Gardeners to teach homeowners the ease of backyard composting. Each American generates about 330 pounds of food and yard waste that never need go to the landfill. "We want people to know that composting isn't complicated," says Kozlowski. "There are many ways to go about it, from tossing the material into a holding unit and leaving it alone for a year or so to more labor-intensive methods that produce finished compost in just six weeks. The important thing is to pick a method and give it a try."

Kozlowski's amply illustrated, straightforward instructions—from single-sheet pamphlets to 48-page manuals—are much in demand. He receives requests from all over the country and as far away as Argentina and New Zealand. "In all the areas I've worked in during my 16 years on campus, I've never seen anything like it!"

Eric Nelson, too, has found that his expertise is a hot commodity. "Five years ago when I proposed the idea of controlling turfgrass diseases with compost, golf course superintendents would burst out laughing. But they're not laughing now," says Nelson, associate professor of plant pathology. Ever-tightening federal restrictions on pesticides, along with pressure from club members who now question the traditional practice of maintaining pristine turf with large volumes of broad-spectrum, environmentally persistent systemic fungicides have prompted these same superintendents to take Nelson very seriously indeed.

In New York State alone, more than 800 golf courses spend $6.4 million annually for fungicides, whereas Nelson's work shows that the right types of compost—some of the very stuff Richard is helping local governments to produce—can do the job just as well.

He is one of an elite group of scientists (there are only three others in the country, 10 worldwide) studying how the same bacteria, molds, protozoa, and other organisms that cause organic matter to decompose during composting can also inhibit the pathogenic fungi that cause most plant diseases.

"While we've recognized that this is so for 40 years, we really don't understand the precise mechanisms at work," says Nelson. "It could be certain members of the complex mix of microorganisms themselves or the chemicals they release during composting, or both." While teasing this out in the lab, Nelson is also active sharing what is known about this biological method of disease control with professional groundskeepers and the public.

Time is running out. In the last five years solid waste disposal has reached crisis proportions in this country. These three scientists, like another dozen of their colleagues in the college, are leading the way toward solutions that are environmentally, politically, and economically acceptable.

Cornell Glee Club in Jamestown

The Cornell Glee Club will perform at the Jamestown (N.Y.) High School on June 9 at 7:30 p.m. The concert will be sponsored by the Jamestown Concert Association and the High School A Capella Choir.

Entomologist Michael G. Villani, an associate professor at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva, is stalking another kind of killer. He's looking for natural enemies of white grub, the pest most destructive of turf itself.

Agronomist Martin Petrovic, associate professor of floriculture and ornamental horticulture, is developing a tool for making site-specific assessments of the potential for pesticides and fertilizers to leach into groundwater. "Whether these substances leach or not depends largely on the soil type and the chemical properties of the material," Hummel explains. "Since there are thousands of soil types and 30 or so pesticides used on turf, it's impossible to conduct research studies on all of them." Instead Petrovic is determining the reliability of computer models that can predict pesticide movement through soil. Such models could then be used to determine which pesticides and fertilizers are safe to use on the type of soils prevalent where, say, a new golf course is being built. Hummel, who was recently asked by the United States Golf Association to revise and rewrite its specifications for putting green construction, spends much of his time taking his colleagues' research and making it available to homeowners through Cornell Cooperative Extension bulletins and fact sheets. He edits a quarterly bulletin, Cornell University Turfgrass Times, to keep the industry abreast of the latest developments, and he writes several booklets in the "Cornell Recommends" series, among them Cornell Grass Species and Varieties Recommendations. The educational programs he presents annually at turfgrass trade shows generate income that is channeled back to support college researchers.

"Because of the public's perception of the dangers of pesticides, many landscape management companies are now offering strictly organic lawn programs. It's the fastest growing segment of the industry."

—Hummel

"Homeowners and the public at large won't tolerate a high degree of weeds and diseases on lawns," Hummel says. "But there's a lot involved in meeting this demand. We're working to do so in ways that better protect the environment and the people of the state."

Palm Honored by Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research

Charles Palm (left), dean of the college from 1959 to 1972, was honored recently by the Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research through establishment of a new endowed position. Chosen to be the first Charles E. Palm Distinguished Scientist is Robert R. Granados (right), program director of plant production at BTI. Over a sixty-year span, Palm has had a continuous association with BTI, beginning with collaborative research between the college and the institute and continuing today as consultant to BTI's current president, Ralph W. F. Hardy. Palm was instrumental in bringing BTI to Cornell's campus in 1978 after fifty-four years in Yonkers, N.Y. BTI has set a goal of $200,000 to support the new distinguished scientist position and has reached the halfway mark. Those interested in contributing in Palm's honor may send checks to Dr. Hardy at BTI, Cornell University, Ithaca, NY 14853.

On May 15-16, 125 healthy, trainable wild horses from fragile western rangelands will be offered for adoption at the Cornell Equestrian Center in Ithaca. The adoption event is sponsored by the Department of Interior's Bureau of Land Management. Denise Meridith '73 is state director for all Eastern states for the Bureau. To adopt up to four animals, applicants must have a sturdy corral at least 6 feet high, shelter, transportation, and means of caring for the animals. The adoption fee is $125 to help cover the government's cost of the roundup. Each animal is vaccinated, blood-tested, dewormed, and given a clean bill of health by a veterinarian before being shipped. For applications or more information, contact Art DiGrazia, Bureau of Land Management, P.O. Box 631, Milwaukee, WI 53201-0631, or call 414-297-4417.

Retired Faculty Awarded

'Hairy Potato' Honored for Its Potential

A pest-resistant potato developed by college researchers has won accolades as a promising new star in the 'green revolution' to feed the hungry.

The "hairy potato," as a national Associated Press story labeled it, garnered an award for the International Potato Center in Peru, sponsor of the research, as well as recognition at a National Press Club press conference for its breeder, Robert Plaisted, professor of plant breeding and biometry, and his colleagues in the decade-long effort, John Steffens, a biochemist in the same department, and Ward Tingey, professor of entomology.

Plaisted attended a ceremony last fall in Washington, D.C., at which representatives of the International Potato Center accepted the King Baudouin award (named for a king of Belgium).

The award is given annually by the Consultative Group on International Agricultural Research.

The fourth most important food crop in the world, potatoes require the heaviest applications of agricultural insecticides, costing developing countries alone some $300 million a year, according to a statement from the Consultative Group.

Cornell and the potato center have tested the cultivar in the United States, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Europe. Next year, potato varieties derived from the Cornell potato will be introduced for cultivation in 30 to 40 countries.

FACULTY NEWS

Nina L. Bassuk, associate professor of floriculture and ornamental horticulture, has been awarded the 1993 Scholar's Award by the New York State Arborists' Association. The award recognizes her extension and research work in the evaluation of tree planting sites, particularly in urban environments, and tree selection and establishment.

Carlos Castille-Chavez, associate professor of biomathematics and 1992 recipient of a Presidential Faculty Fellowship, received accolades in his native Mexico City during a December visit. The city, his subdivision, and all the schools he attended honored him, and there was an article about him in Mexico City's largest daily newspaper. Castillo-Chavez is an authority on the dynamics of epidemics such as flu, typhoid, cholera, measles, and AIDS.

Paul J. Chapman, who turned 92 last fall, recently was honored by the Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva for his many contributions to the field of entomology. The station cited the outstanding research program he developed for controlling mites on tree fruits and his years of dedicated service at the station. In 1968 he retired as chairman and professor of entomology, but he has continued to work a rigorous schedule since. He also endowed a fellowship fund for a graduate student in entomology.

Gary W. Fick, professor of soil, crop, and atmospheric sciences, has been elected a Fellow of the Crop Science Society of America. He has been a leader of multidisciplinary research in forages, helping to develop crop growth models for use in integrated pest management and the prediction of forage quality. He is also a recipient of the American Forage and Grassland council Merit Certificate.

Michael Joseph Jr., executive director of the Rural Schools Program and former superintendent of the Marathon Central Schools, was presented the Distinguished Service Award from the State Council of School Superintendents. The award, the council's highest, is given annually to a recently retired superintendent in recognition of exemplary service to public education.

Joseph Neal, associate professor in the Department of Floriculture and Ornamental Horticulture, has received an outstanding applied research award from the Weed Science Society. The award cites his efforts in integrated pest management for turfgrass and for container and field-grown ornamentals.

William Tomek, Department Chair and Professor of Agricultural Economics (right), was recently honored by the Chicago Board of Trade Educational Research Foundation with the Earl M. Combs, Jr. Award. The award acknowledged Professor Tomek's contributions to research in agricultural futures markets. Tomek, visiting economist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture in 1978, has served as associate editor of the Board of Trade's Review of Futures Markets since 1986 and currently is co- editor. The Combs award was presented by Patrick Catania, president of the Research Foundation.

Ronald E. Pitt, professor of agricultural and biological engineering, has received the 1992 Ford-New Holland Young Researcher Award, presented by the American Society of Agricultural Engineers for the "dedicated use of scientific methodology to seek out facts or principles significant to the agricultural engineering profession." The award honors members under the age of 40 who have made unique contributions to the profession of agricultural engineering. Pitt is recognized as a national and international authority on preservation processes in forage.

Three members of the department of plant pathology at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva were honored with awards by the American Phytopathogical Society. Herb Aldwinckle, chair of the department, was elected a Fellow of the Society in recognition of outstanding contributions in extension, research, teaching, and other activities in the science of plant pathology. His research concentrates on developing new varieties of apples and apple rootstocks resistant to diseases. Helene Dillard received the Extension Award for excellence in extension plant pathology. Her responsibilities emphasize the biology, ecology, and control of disease of vegetables caused by fungi and bacteria. Wayne Wilcox was presented the Ciba-Geigy Award for significant contributions to the advancement of knowledge of plant diseases and their control, particularly the diseases of apples, cherries, peaches, strawberries, and raspberries.

Donald Wallace, professor of fruit and vegetable science, is one of 12 U.S. scientists recently named fellows of the American Society for Horticultural Science. He is an expert in vegetable breeding and vegetable crop physiology, and he was the principal investigator for the Guatemala/Ecuador project from 1980 to 1986, and for the Guatemala project from 1986 onward. He retired from the faculty last June, but continues to breed improved bean varieties.

OBITUARIES

Ora Smith, professor emeritus of vegetable crops whose international distinction in potato research led to his nickname on campus of "Mr. Potato," died Feb. 4 at a nursing home in Ithaca. He was 92.

At the time of his retirement in 1967, he was the best-known potato scientist in the world, according to Elmer Ewing, professor and chair of the Department of Fruit and Vegetable Science. His books are standard references in every potato researcher's library, and he published 500 scientific and popular articles on potatoes.

Smith's technical innovations contributed to the development of potatoes suitable for potato chips and frozen french fries. Prior to his work in the 1940s, only 2 percent of the U.S. potato crop was used for processed products. Now nearly two-thirds is used in this way.

He joined the Cornell faculty in 1930. During World War II he helped the Army improve the quality of potatoes for military food. He also served on a farm commission for President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Smith continued to work at Cornell for many years after his retirement. Many of the items that used to occupy his office and laboratory in East Roberts Hall before the building was torn down were taken to the Potato Museum in Washington, D.C.

Robert W. Holley, a biologist who won the Nobel Prize for work carried out while he was with the USDA Plant Soil and Nutrition Laboratory at Cornell, died Feb. 11 at his home in Los Gatos, Calif. He was 71.

He won the 1968 Nobel Prize for physiology of medicine, along with two other scientists, Marshall W. Nirenberg and H. Gobind Khorana. Holley was the first to decipher the genetic code of ribonucleic acid, or RNA, which directs the building of proteins in every living thing.

Holley earned a doctorate in organic chemistry from Cornell in 1947. During World War II he did government research and was part of the five-member team at Cornell that first synthesized penicillin.

He taught organic chemistry at the Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, beginning in 1948, and in 1958 he joined the USDA laboratory at Cornell. Starting in 1962, he taught biochemistry and molecular biology at the university and was chairman of the Biochemistry Department from 1965 to 1966.

ALUMNI PROFILE

In 1920, when Ken Asai was five years old, his father bought a Ford truck to carry household goods and a Ford Model T station wagon for his wife and nine children to ride in on a month-long trek from Houston, Texas, to Ithaca. The journey, plagued by inclement weather and poorly built roads, was made on faith. The elder Asai had heard a school teacher friend sing the praises of Cornell University.

"In those days in rural Texas almost no one went to college," Asai recalls. "My family was very education-minded and when my father was told Cornell was a great school he decided to move us to Ithaca, site unseen, solely so my brothers, sisters, and I could get a good education."

The money for such an ambitious undertaking came from the the Mr. Asai's success at raising vegetables. He'd come to Texas from Japan in 1903 to grow rice, but turned his hand to truck farming instead and prospered during the First World War. In Ithaca he bought a farm a mile from campus and took up growing vegetables once again.

Although they all started their education here in a one-room school house—one teacher and eight grades—there was never any question that all nine Asai children would enroll at Cornell. "My father didn't need to convince us," says Asai. "It was just expected of us and we never questioned it." All lived at home, often walking back to the farm for lunch. Five of the nine graduated, Tazu '31, Hannah '36, George '38, Phd '43 and Ken with agriculture degrees and Sim '33 from the nascent hotel school. None but Sim paid tuition.

Unlike his sisters Tazu and Hanna, who were floriculture and ornamental horticulture students, and his brother George, who studied plant physiology, Ken's interest was forestry. "Cornell was the first forestry school in the country and the only one for many years. The professors had come from Germany to teach the science of forestry." His class of 18 students was the last before the school was moved to Syracuse.

But forestry wasn't to be Asai's career. "In 1936 there were few jobs, apart from those of ranger, so I joined a Japanese-owned import-export business in New York, which sent me to Brazil to open an office for them." He returned just before Pearl Harbor. His mechanical talents led to a position in IBM Corporation's physical sciences research group in the early 1950s, where he spent 28 years designing research equipment. Since his retirement in 1981 he has continued as a consultant with IBM, conducting studies of metal diffusion in thin films, a research area essential to the further development of microcircuitry. "I always loved the work and would have done it for nothing if I hadn't needed the money to raise my family."

Thinking back on an education that served him so well, Asai says: "I'm really happy that my father made the decision to leave Texas. I thank him for his courage that, despite being an immigrant farmer who was born in 1874, he was so determined to educate his children."

ALUMNI NOTES

Rebecca Cady '95, Student Writer

1910

Dora Earl Decker '13 of Herkimer, N.Y., at 109 years old, is the oldest living Cornellian. Mrs. Decker graduated with a B.S. in Home Economics, a program in the College of Agriculture at that time. With this degree, she became a teacher of biological science, a secretary for the Department of Home Economics at the University of Wisconsin, a farmer, and a lecturer for the Cornell Extension Department at the Farmers' Institutes.

1930

Phil White '34 of Mecklenburg, N.Y. is the new president of the Cornell University Class of 1934.

Edward C. Raney M.S. '35, Ph.D. '38 was posthumously recognized in Copeia, the journal of the American Society of Ichthyologists and Herpetologists. Raney worked as a professor at Cornell in the departments of zoology and Conservation. In 1966, he founded Ichthyological Associates, a private ecological consulting firm. Former students remember Raney for his dedication to ichthyology and his guidance, both in and out of the classroom.

Ralph B. Colson '43 of Schenectady, N.Y. retired in 1983 from the NYS Conservation Department/DEC in the Division of Fish and Wildlife. Colson is also a retired Lt. Colonel in the U.S. Army Reserve.

Edmund E. Newhard '43 of Hopewell Junction, N.Y. is a retired landscape architect. Retirement hasn't slowed him down though; he's still quite active in his community.

William A. Williams '45, Ph.D. '51 of Davis, Calif. retired in January after 42 years as a professor of agronomy and range science. Williams is the agriculture editor for the McGraw-Hill Encyclopedia of Science and Technology.

Arlene W. Lungen '47 retired and moved to Rehovot, Israel in 1990 to be near her daughter and her daughter's family.

Harry E. Beasley '48 of Heth, Ark. has been married for nearly 50 years to Elly Beach Beasley.

Warren D. "Scotty" McPherson '48 is an insurance consultant in Fredonia, New York with his son, Gordon '86, also an ALS graduate.

Franklin P. Cism, Jr. '49 of Harpursville, N.Y. has been a pastor for the past fourteen years. He is active in many aspects of his community including the Harpursville School Board, Broome County Environmental Council, and the Scottish Rite and Shrine. Cism is also on the ALS Alumni Association Leadership Team for Broome and Tioga Counties.

Arthur H. Kantner '49, M.S. '50, Ph.D. '52 is retired and living in Baton Rouge, Louisiana with his wife Val. He was executive vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta.

Charles Ernest Wille '50, Montgomery, N.Y., was recently re-elected president of New York Farm Bureau. Wille also serves on the American Farm Bureau Federation board of directors and chairs Governor Cuomo's Agricultural Advisory Council. He also serves on the college's advisory council.

George Andrew Johannessen Ph.D. '50 of Danville, Calif. continues his interest in Cornell crew and has had a distinguished career in agriculture between California and Hawaii. (See his letter, page 6.)

Guy de Chadenedes '51 of Colorado Springs, Colo. retired from the U.S. Army in 1971. Since then, he has been active in construction, mortgage, real estate sales and development, and financial planning.

Robert J. Giebitz '51 of Portales, New Mexico is the regional sales director for Midland National Life. He lives on a farm with Marge; he has nine children and 24 grandchildren.

Wayne F. Keim Ph.D. '52 of Fort Collins, Colo. recently retired as Professor of Agronomy at Colorado State University after a 40-year genetics and plant breeding career at Iowa State, Purdue, and Colorado State.

Mary Anne Cranston Sovocool '52 of Leroy, N.Y. teaches students with learning disabilities and has developed a college awareness program for eighth graders. She is also active in her church choir and Cornell alumni activities.

Janina W. Wirth '52 moved to Bradenton, Florida in June of 1992. Since retiring in 1973, she has traveled around Europe, Asia, and Morocco.

William J. Ash '53, M.S. '58, Ph.D. '60 of Westhampton, N.Y. is a professor at SUNY Stony Brook. He is married to Gertrude L. Kehn Ash '53 who works for Suffolk Life Newspapers.

Gordon R. White '53 of Cornwall-On-Hudson, N.Y. retired in 1981 from many years of service teaching landscaping for Rockland County BOCES. Since then, he has been a representative for landscape and garden supplies. His wife, Wini Wildman White '51, is a librarian.

Phillip T. Eastman '54 of New Hartford, Conn. retired from the New Hartford Central School Administration where he was the director of Pupil Personnel Services for 21 years. He is now an education consultant.

L. John Wilkerson MS '67, PhD '70

In January 1972, with a hefty mortgage and his first child on the way, John Wilkerson lost his job. It was, he says, the best thing that ever happened to him.

"Being laid off from Allied Chemical, where I had been doing new business development work, forced me to step back and ask myself where the new jobs were going to be, where the opportunities of the future were," he recalls. "I saw that it was in health care. From there everything was uphill."

Twenty-one years have gone by and Wilkerson is chairman of the Wilkerson Group, Inc. (TWG), the world's largest independent consulting firm focusing exclusively on the medical industry. With its staff of 85 specialists in business, medicine, and biotechnology, TWG crafts business building strategies for senior executives of companies located in the United States, Europe, Asia, and Australia. Among the firm's services is research and development portfolio evaluation.

Wilkerson explains: "In an industry where up to 17 percent of sales is spent on research, we identify where the biggest opportunities are for them to create meaningful new medical products that will positively impact society and make a very healthy return for the company."

In order to create what he calls "truly amazing companies," Wilkerson not only consults with established corporations (15 of the top 20 U. S. and European pharmaceutical firms), but also provides financial backing for emerging ones. Three years ago he and two partners created the Galen Fund, a risk-capital pool to invest in small- to mid-size medical companies before they sell shares publicly. The first pool, which has had 50 percent annual returns, raised $76 million from wealthy investors and pension fund managers. He'll soon establish a second pool of $125 million.

These are big bucks for a guy who started out in the business world as a worm rancher. But then he was only eight years old at the time and the entrepreneurial instincts he believes he was born with saw raising worms as a potentially profitable enterprise. And so it was. Consider, too, his paper route—the biggest, he boasts, in his home town of Elko, Nevada. "I'm still very proud of that, although nobody else gives a damn," he says with a boyish grin. Selling tailor-made shirts paid for his undergraduate degree in biological sciences at Utah State, but it was his years here at Cornell in the Department of Agricultural Economics that equipped him to succeed in the world of corporations and Wall Street.

"The tools I use to build our firm and that our employees use to help build other companies came from Cornell," he says. "And I learned to be a critical thinker here, to really get my act together." On his recruiting trips back to campus—TWG now has five alums, with offers out to more—Wilkerson observes that the college is in a unique position to prepare its students for the biotechnology boom that he's confident will hit by the turn of the century.

"The skills being taught now in entrepreneurship, the biological sciences, and general business training is just the right combination for students to succeed in this new industry. No other university has pulled it all together like Cornell has."

Metta Winter

Thank You Cornell

"Where freedom with responsibility is lived each day."

Nearly 100 Cornell horticulturists and their wives had a wonderful reunion in Ithaca in early October. From the east and west coasts they came, students, teachers, researchers, and many from the broad field of agribusiness. There were outside breakfasts and barbecues on the Ag Quad, a seminar, a victorious football game, trips around the campus, and a grand-finale party at a wonderful professor's ranch home just outside Ithaca.

The reunion brought back great memories of the education and work we experienced in our Cornell years. It filled hearts with joy (and some sadness) as we learned of the lives of friends in the years after our time there. The friendships forged at Cornell are one of life's greatest gifts. The world is well acquainted with Cornellians. They have made a positive difference in agriculture throughout the world. This visit back to "the hill" revealed how deeply we appreciated what Cornell provided as we wandered our way through life.

We enjoyed the football game as some of us watched Cornell win over Lafayette College. Later, I watched the Cornell Classic women's soccer game on Alumni Field. Cornell lost 2 to 1 to Hartford College. I couldn't resist talking to two young Cornell players sitting together on the bench after the game. There was beauty in their strong, healthy, young bodies—and tears in their eyes. They looked as though all had been lost. I told them there were many ways of winning in this world and that they were winners that day. What great life experiences Cornell provides.

Cornell remains an institution where "Freedom with Responsibility" is lived each day. This is the greatest gift I took from Cornell. It was there for every Cornellian then and is there today. It is priceless. It gives meaning to the word education when, in many cases today, there is none.

Many wonder "What is success?" "What should it be?" "What will it be?" "What was it?" For me, the heart of it was, in large measure, Cornell. There was choice. There was knowledge from the educational programs. There were human experiences, the joy of accomplishment, fun, living life to the fullest, and special friends for life. We relived those days in early October when Cornell horticulturists celebrated their own wonderful reunion. Thank you, Cornell, for the education, the memories, and the friendships.

A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Another banner year!

Bruce Wright '75
Associate Professor
SUNY Cobleskill

The ALS Alumni Association continues to make significant progress in many areas. Our membership again reached an all-time high—6,247 members—with a significant increase in the number of lifetime memberships and young alumni members from the graduating class of 1992. At the beginning of this year, the Board of Directors received recommendations from the Five Year Mission Task Force (alumni, friends, students, and administrators) to address the future direction of the association. Board members will continue to work with these recommendations to strengthen the association, enabling it to respond to the diverse interests and needs of our alumni and our college.

All ALS alumni and friends are invited back to campus on October 16, 1993, for Showcase ALS, a fall reunion celebration. On March 4 and 5, 1994, the second Alumni Leadership Conference will be offered for the association's volunteer leaders who are an important part of the association's success.

Recognition of outstanding alumni, high-achieving students, and retiring faculty will always be a high priority of the ALS Alumni Association. The Board of Directors continues to be a strong part of our organizational structure with extensive local activities, on-campus events, and locally organized Dean-Alumni Get-togethers and annual alumni gatherings in every alumni area. These programs are an important part of our strength and diversity.

The ALS Alumni Association continues to be a recognized leader on campus and in the nation. The heart of our Association lies with membership. Each of the members listed here in the Membership Roster is an important part of our strong past and challenging future of the ALS Alumni Association. If you are not a member, I invite you to complete the membership form on the following page 9.

YOUNG ALUMNI

Andrea Jeffers '93

While discussing a reading during a communication course recently, the professor, Dr. Linda VanBuskirk, asked each of us to reflect back to the time when we were freshmen, and how we had changed since that time. Sifting through the last three years, I found the senior class has changed. Changes have taken place in the world around us, and I thought about the changes we will make as we graduate.

As freshmen, we were a naive mass without direction. We will graduate as well-educated individuals, most with a focus. We discovered the interesting, and not so interesting, courses in the Ag school. We watched as Kennedy and Roberts were built, and were some of the first to eat at Trillium. Now, a little more impatient, we have learned when to avoid the chaotic lunch time mobs. We have seen the development of the Landscape Architecture facility, the closing of Rice Hall, the opening of a new underground library on the Arts Quad, and plans for expansion of Mann Library. We have welcomed a new Associate Dean, Brian Chabot, and said good-bye to a very dear friend, Ken Wing, who as president will no doubt inspire the men and women of SUNY Cobleskill.

This senior class has experienced the shift from a Republican President to the shining promises of Democrat Bill Clinton. Communism has become nearly obsolete as the Berlin Wall and the Iron Curtain fell before our eyes on the TV screens and in the headlines of Ithaca media. We watched the Alamo restaurant come and go in Collegetown, Dino's open again, and fast food arrive on College Ave. in the form of Wendy's.

Yet amidst all of this change, traditions remain. Doc Aplin and Doc Sisler continue to teach this year, the Alfalfa Room still has the best muffins around (and they finally take the Cornell charge card), the McKay reading room is still the place to study, dogs still roam free, the rain hasn't stopped, and many seniors fear the changes that loom ahead. Though there is a sense of excitement regarding graduation itself, fears are expressed with, "What will I do without Cornell?"

As alumni, you must have pondered this question. For Cornell is more than the classes and the Ag Quad, living in dorms, studying for finals. The real Cornell is the everlasting friendships, the memories, the moments at Homecoming tailgates, long talks on the walk home, the sunsets from the Plantations, and the comfort of growing to call Ithaca home.

Things will change as they always do, but our Cornell spirit and memories will remain.

Questions posed to the young alumni:

Who did you vote for? How do you feel about the new administration?

How do you think the United States will change in 1993?

Alan O. Chittenden '90
Dairy Farmer
Schodack Landing, N.Y.

New Administration: "Actually, I didn't have a chance to vote. I guess I am not a real Clinton man. The Republicans said that the next four years would be tough regardless who is president."

Change: "I hope the economy improves. I am not an economist, so it is not my place to guess."

Lawrence King '87
Stock Broker
Merrill Lynch
Brunswick, N.Y.

New Administration: "I voted for George Bush. I think the new administration is doing an average job. I hope they will find ways to reduce the size of the government."

Change: "I think the U.S. will increasingly realize that we are affected by a global economy and not just our own domestic economy."

Kimberly Anne Weimer '89
Designer of Computer Software
IDX Corporation
Burlington, Vt.

New Administration: "I voted for Bill Clinton, and I am happy with the new administration so far."

Change: "In 1993, I feel the economy will improve. I also believe that there will be more health care reform."

Debra E. Kelder '89
Teacher of Science
Kingston City Schools
Kingston, N.Y.

New Administration: "I guess we'll just have to wait and see. We will know how good this administration is after the next four years."

Change: "I hope the country improves. I especially hope the government places more money into education and technology."

Sheryl B. Church '89
Farm Credit
Loan Officer
Batavia, N.Y.

New Administration: "I voted for Bush. The new administration has a lot of challenges ahead of them. I think the problems they have had so far will be a reflection of how the administration will do in the coming years."

Change: "It is tough to get change from the government. Change must come from the people. People must feel better about the economy in order for it to improve. I do feel, however, that things should improve."

Mark S. Danetz '89
Fourth Year Vet Student
Purdue University
West Lafayette, Ind.

New Administration: "I voted for Clinton. I simply think it is too soon to tell."

Change: "I only hope that the economic conditions will improve."

Beth E. Keene '87
Dairy Farmer
Gilbertsville, N.Y.

New Administration: "I voted for Bush. Clinton is trying to solve everybody's problems, he has a hang-up on trying to please everyone. I just really don't care to read about him. But you have to give him a chance. I hope he does well, but I don't think the new administration will do anything for the agricultural sector."

Change: "I don't know how the United States will change in 1993. Betterment of the U.S. will all depend on Clinton. I hope the economy will pick up some. I think spending will be down, I just believe people will be holding onto their money. Lastly, I would like to see Clinton create more jobs. I believe this will have a lot to play in how the economy does in 1993."

ALS Campaign Progresses

ALS development staff members keep the ALS Regional Campaign moving ahead full steam. Maya Gasuk, assistant director of development, shown with Dean David L. Call, is key in the management of the college's regional campaign and supporting regional campaign leaders. Maya is a native Pennsylvanian who graduated from the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications at Syracuse University where she majored in advertising and minored in Russian. Maya began her work in development as a freshman at Syracuse working as a student phoner for Telefund, S.U.'s annual giving program. Her position grew and changed over the four years in the job, giving her a broad range of fund raising experience. Maya also served as a summer intern at Nouveau Magazine as an assistant to the editor, gaining experience in design and media production. On the ALS development staff since the Cornell Campaign kickoff in 1990, Maya supervises the production of most publications for the ALS Campaign, and she takes responsibility for the college's regional campaign programs.

William Berley '45, Assistant Dean William Boldt, and Gordon Jones '43, make plans during the Cornell Campaign kickoff in New York City.

Thomas O. King, Ph.D. '37, believes that the quality of life while he was a student at Cornell was one of the most meaningful and memorable of his college studies. King recently made the largest pledge to date, $100,000, for the ALS Charitable Trust to enhance the academic experiences of future generations of students who will reside in the new Alpha Zeta Chapter house. The AZ dining room will be named in honor of Dr. & Mrs. Thomas O. King. John Sterling '59 (left) accepts Dr. King's pledge, which boosts the campaign over the $1 million mark.

ALS Capital Campaign leaders are pleased with the news that the College Campaign has passed the 80 percent mark, as announced by Campaign Chair John Dyson. From left, Daniel Winch, Glenn Dallas '58, Robert Bitz '50, Albert Beard '52, W. Keith Kennedy '47, and William Berley '45.

Alumni Leadership Teams

240 ALS alumni provide leadership for alumni events and college connections

When so many alumni of our College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell team up as district or regional leadership teams with District Directors, Regional Captains, or State Coordinators, great things are destined to happen for the betterment of Cornell, the college, and alumni. We proudly list these alumni leaders by districts and regions.

PURE ADIRONDACK MAPLE SYRUP –Terrific Gifts!

The college's Department of Natural Resources can ship Cornell-brand maple syrup in "mailable" plastic jugs anywhere in the United States. Each jug carries a label which indicates the syrup's production in Lake Placid.

Pure Cornell maple syrup is produced at the Uihlein Sugar Maple Research-Extension Field Station in the Adirondack Mountains. Sales support sugar maple research and extension. Syrup is available on a year-round basis.

List prices include shipping:

Size	Price by Zip Code Prefix 01 to 50	51 to 99
Pint	$8.90	$10.50
Quart	13.20	15.75
Half-gallon	20.90	22.40
Gallon	35.70	41.90

To order, write Uihlein Sugar Maple Research-Extension Field Station Bear Cub Road, Lake Placid, New York 12946. Attn: L. Staats. Make checks payable to Cornell University.

Fessenden Gets State Committee Assignments

Assemblyman Daniel J. Fessenden '87 of Ledyard has been named ranking Republican on the New York State Assembly Agriculture Committee. He also will serve on the Environmental Conservation and Social Services Committees.

Fessenden said he will be working to hold the line on taxes and stringent regulations that have had an adverse impact on New York's $3 billion agriculture industry.

"As the only farmer in the Assembly," said Fessenden, "I believe I can tackle problems from a unique prospective. I am anxious to provide leadership on the issues affecting our state's number one industry."

Fessenden grew up on his family farm in King Ferry, New York. He graduated from Cornell with a degree in agricultural economics, and has worked for the New York Farm Bureau. Today, he operates a 300-acre beef and vegetable crop farm in Cayuga County.

He is a member of the New York State Vegetable Growers Association, Cayuga County Farm Bureau, New York Beef Cattlemen's Association, the national agriculture fraternity, Alpha Gamma Rho, and ALS Alumni Association District Director for Seneca, Cayuga, Oswego and Onondaga Counties.
