MR. TAFT gave four lectures last week which completed his course on the Goldwin Smith Foundation. The earlier part of the course was given in February. All four lectures were devoted to the subject of the Presidency of the United States. Mr. Taft discussed the powers of the office and the constitutional checks upon its powers. He advocated a federal budget system to be controlled by the President, and also a presidential term of six or seven years without eligibility to re-election. The second lecture was devoted almost wholly to a consideration of the veto power, and the third lecture to a study of the civil service. The last of the four was on the limitations of the President's power. Mr. Taft's audiences filled Bailey Hall. During his stay in Ithaca he was the guest of the President and Mrs. Schurman.

JAMES WILSON, former Secretary of Agriculture, was in Ithaca for one day last week. He was the guest of Dean Galloway of the College of Agriculture. Dean Galloway was for a dozen years one of Secretary Wilson's most important bureau chiefs. The former Secretary is now interested in the organization of the National Agricultural Society, an organization designed to provide a forum for the discussion of such questions as those of rural credits, uniform market laws and standards, and agricultural legislation. Mr. Wilson met the members of the faculty of agriculture at an informal reception in the home economics building.

PROFESSOR ALLYN A. YOUNG of the department of economics has been elected chairman of the committee on academic freedom and academic tenure of the American Association of University Professors. This is perhaps the most important committee of that new association. Under the chairmanship of Professor E. R. A. Seligman of Columbia University, the committee last winter presented a report embodying a general declaration of principles. During the year it also dealt, through subcommittees of inquiry, with complaints or controversies at several universities. The present committee will have to deal with similar cases at several other institutions which have been brought formally to the association's attention. It will also endeavor to formulate a general body of principles related to the questions of academic freedom and academic tenure. Among the fifteen men who served on the committee this year were Professor Charles E. Bennett, of the department of Latin, and Professor U. G. Weatherly, Ph.D., '94, of the University of Indiana.

BALLOTING last Friday by the upper classes resulted in the enactment of two amendments to the Student Council. The first provides that the life secretary of the class shall become automatically on graduation the class representative on the Cornellian Council. The second provides for the election by the Council of a graduate treasurer who shall audit the books of the classes and take charge of them during the period in the fall preceding the election of an undergraduate treasurer. Both amendments take effect this year.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the Era that Professor Martin W. Sampson, head of the department of English, has been chosen to be the president of the board of directors of the publication. The Era congratulates itself on its enlistment of Professor Sampson's good taste and keen interest in undergraduate activity.

THE "COMPETITION," that apparently essential element of much student activity, is under investigation by the Student Council. The Sun says that the Council is now making an effort to have the facts concerning all the competitions "made so public that there need be no ignorance as to the form in which they are run and the work election is supposed to represent." The Council is therefore "asking each undergraduate organization which elects members through competition to make public a written statement containing the full details of the management of its competition and the subsequent choice of the winner." These statements are to be published. A tendency to shorten the period of competition has appeared. The Sun is now conducting a regular editorial competition in the freshman class which, it announced, was to run for only one month. The Athletic Association is contemplating the adoption of shorter periods of competition for some managements next year. Requiring sophomores to take military drill may interfere somewhat with present customs in the selection of managers. Already the association has much reduced the amount of work required of competitors by a division of labor. At the offices on Alumni Field only a handful of competitors are seen in comparison with the swarms which used to hunt for work in the offices on Tioga Street. As a rule the athletic competitor is asked to report only one or two days a week and is forbidden to hang around the office at other times.

THE BOOK of extracts from the files of the Era is now promised for next fall. The search for available material has revealed a large quantity, the Era says, and the material is now being sorted and selected. Although the final selection has not yet been made, there are certain to be included articles or poems by Andrew D. White, David Starr Jordan, Goldwin Smith, Arthur Brisbane, Dana Burnet, Francis Miles Finch, George W. Curtis, and President Schurman.

THE CORSON BROWNING PRIZE has been awarded to William Elmer Seely, of Poughkeepsie, a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences. This prize was founded in 1902 by Professor Hiram Corson and consists of a gold medal of the value of fifty dollars to be awarded annually for the best essay on Robert Browning. The Corson French Prize has been awarded to Charlotte Helen Pekary '15 (now a graduate student), of Brooklyn. The prize was founded in 1902 by Professor Corson in memory of his wife, Caroline Rollin Corson. It is awarded annually for the best essay on a subject in French literature or philology, and is of the same value as the Browning prize.

THE BARNES SHAKESPEARE PRIZE has been awarded to Harry Caplan, of Albany, a senior in the College of Arts and Sciences. The prize was founded in 1887 by Mrs. Alfred Smith Barnes, of Brooklyn, and consists of about fifty dollars, the income of her gift of $1,000.

College Arms for New Halls

The Scheme of Charges to Be Carved on the Many Shields

In the ornament with which the architects have embellished the four new student residence halls are included numbers of shields. They are situated over entry doors or between the mullions of windows. At the recent meeting of the committee on buildings and grounds President Schurman presented a report from Professor George L. Burr '81, whom he had called in for advice on the scheme for the charges to be carved on these shields. The report was read and adopted. It was resolved that the thanks of the committee "be tendered to Professor Burr for the valuable assistance he had rendered to the committee and for the generous manner in which he had put the wealth of his scholarship at their disposal."

The scheme contemplates the carving on the shields of the arms of various colleges, in addition to those of Cornell. For the four buildings thus far erected the arms chosen (except those of Cornell) all belong to European universities. Thus all the shields on South Baker Hall are to be devoted to the arms of Oxford University and its several colleges, and all the shields on North Baker Hall have been selected for the arms of Cambridge University and its colleges.

Baker Tower, the main building of the present group, is to bear over each of its two gateways the arms of Cornell.

For South Baker Hall the scheme of charges is as follows: Northwest side: Over east door, arms of Oxford University (escutcheon with the ox); on the two smaller shields, arms of Corpus Christi College and Christ Church College; on the five smallest shields, arms of Merton College, Queen's College, New College, All Souls' College, and St. John Baptist's College; over the west door, arms of Oxford University (escutcheon with the book); over the west upper window, arms of Magdalen College, University College, and Oriel College; over the west lower window, arms of Jesus College, Wadham College, Pembroke College, Worcester College, and Hertford College; Southeast side: Over the west window, arms of Balliol College and Brasenose College; over the east window, arms of Exeter College and Lincoln College.

The Cambridge University arms selected for North Baker Hall are to be distributed as follows: Northwest side: Over the east door: upper shields, arms of Queens' College and St. John's College; smaller shields, at the upper corners of the door, arms of Corpus Christi College and Magdalene College; smallest shields, over the door, arms of St. Peter's College, Clare College, Trinity Hall College, Gonville and Caius College, and King's College; over the west door, arms of Cambridge University; under the west window, arms of St. Katharine's College, Jesus College, Sidney Sussex College, Downing College, and Selwyn College: Southeast side: Over the west door, arms of Cambridge University; over the east door: upper shields, arms of Trinity College and Pembroke College; lower shields, arms of Christ's College and arms of Emmanuel College.

In distributing the arms of the Oxford and Cambridge colleges it was necessary to take account of the smallness of some of the shields, which seemed to make impossible too complex a charge.

Founders Hall has at its south end a ribbon which is to bear the name of the hall, and at each end of the ribbon will be carved the arms of Cornell. On the west side of Founders Hall, between the mullions of second-story windows, are two shields. On the north shield will be carved the arms of the University of Bologna, and on the south shield the arms of the University of Paris. There are two entries on the west side of Founders Hall. Over each door will be carved the arms of Cornell, surmounted by the legend "True and Firm."

Cadet Corps Inspected

Captain Schindel Says He Noted a Distinct Improvement

The cadet corps was inspected last Friday and Saturday by Captain S. J. Bayard Schindel, of the General Staff of the United States Army. The actual inspection of the corps took place on the first day. It was preceded by a review, and was followed by an inspection of the first battalion's shelter tent camp on the Quadrangle, and a pack inspection of the third battalion. The cadets unrolled and placed in prescribed order the equipment recently purchased from the fund presented to the military department by Willard Straight '01.

Later in the afternoon two companies were sent to operate as enemy from the neighboring villages of Etna and Ellis while the remainder of the regiment protected Ithaca as a base of supplies. The home guard was required to establish an outpost line, to do which it had to drive back the two companies of the enemy. This was successfully accomplished.

The maneuvers of the second day were confined to field operations. A force from Etna sent forward a battalion accompanied by the machine gun platoon to cover the crossings for the remainder of the force, which was to advance later. The rest of the regiment was sent from Ithaca to perform a similar mission for friendly troops. The contact was gained at Varna, where the superior force gradually forced back the weaker by a flanking movement.

All these field maneuvers were actual field problems. The officers of each side knew only the orders of their own troops. The force of the corps during the two days was 958 men. Only twenty-seven men were absent because of sickness or other good reason.

The inspecting officer, in a talk with the cadet officers after the inspection, said that a distinct improvement had been shown over previous years. Captain Schindel was entertained at an officers' banquet Saturday night. President Schurman spoke and expressed the wish that the service rendered the University by the officers of the cadet corps might be recognized as equal to that of men who are engaged in various activities outside the curriculum. Professor M. W. Sampson spoke on the work done by the recently organized military society in the Faculty, and Professor W. A. Hammond talked on the value of compulsory military instruction in the University.

Mr. William H. Taft saw a part of the inspection on Friday, and seemed to be interested in it. He came into the Quadrangle while the inspection was in progress. President Schurman joined him, and the two walked down the line of companies.

For Industrial Preparedness

Seven Cornell Men Designated as Directors in Various States

In the NEWS of April 27 were published the names of three Cornell men who had been appointed state directors of the Organization for Industrial Preparedness and associate members of the Naval Consulting Board of the United States. Since then the complete list has become available and the names of seven Cornell men have been found in it.

The purpose of this organization is to make an industrial survey, or inventory of industrial resources, of the United States. There are five directors for each state, designated respectively by the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and the American Chemical Society. The information to be collected is to be for the use of the War and Navy Departments in formulating plans through which every resource of the nation may, in time of emergency, be quickly enlisted in government service.

J. G. White, Ph.D., '85, president of J. G. White & Co., is the A. S. C. E. member for New York State and has been elected chairman of the New York directors. W. M. Rose '10 is the secretary of the New York committee, with office at 43 Exchange Place, New York City.

Daniel W. Mead, C.E., '84, professor of hydraulic engineering in the University of Wisconsin, is the A. S. C. E. director for Wisconsin. The A. I. E. E. director for Wisconsin is Arthur W. Berresford, M.E. (E.E.), '93, vice-president and general manager of the Cutler-Hammer Manufacturing Company of Milwaukee. So the five Wisconsin directors include two Cornell men.

William K. Hatt, C.E., '91, is the A. S. C. E. director for Indiana. He is professor of civil engineering in Purdue University.

Carl C. Thomas, M.E., '95, professor of mechanical engineering in Johns Hopkins University, is the A. S. M. E. director for Maryland.

Fred A. Jones, M.E. (E.E.), '98, of Dallas, is the A. I. E. E. director for Texas.

Orin B. Coldwell, M.E. (E.E.), '02, general superintendent of the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company, is the A. I. E. E. director for Oregon.

H. J. Davenport Coming Here Well Known Economist Accepts a Professorship at Cornell

Professor Herbert Joseph Davenport, of the University of Missouri, has been appointed Professor of Economics at Cornell. Professor Davenport succeeds Professor A. S. Johnson, who has been on leave of absence during the present year, and who has recently resigned in order to accept the professorship of political science at Stanford University.

Professor Davenport has won unusual distinction both as scholar and as teacher. Most of his publications have been in the field of economic theory, and he has generally ranked as one of the leaders of American thought in that field. His success as a teacher has been no less pronounced, for he is generally regarded as one of the most successful and inspiring teachers of economics in the country.

Professor Davenport received a legal training at the Harvard Law School and practiced law for some years in the West. Becoming interested in economics he pursued advanced studies in that subject in Europe and at the University of Chicago, from which institution he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in 1898. From 1902 to 1907 he was a member of the faculty of the University of Chicago, but resigned his associate professorship at Chicago to become head of the department of political economy of the University of Missouri in 1908. His principal books are: "Outlines of Economic Theory," 1896; "Value and Distribution," 1908; and "Economics of Enterprise," 1913.

The work offered by Professor Davenport next year will include a graduate course in value and distribution, an advanced undergraduate course in economic principles and a course in the principles of taxation. It is also probable that he will give the lectures in elementary economics (Political Science 51).

The Woodford Prize

Awarded to Morris Julius Escoll, of New York City

The Woodford Prize was awarded last Friday night to Morris Julius Escoll, of New York. Escoll is a senior in the College of Agriculture. His oration was entitled "Strife," and was an argument against the theory that war is a biological necessity. He attempted to show that the analogy between man and the lower animals, which has been used by advocates of the biological theory of war, does not hold in the case of human beings where the strife is not one for actual means of subsistence.

The award to Escoll was the unanimous decision of the judges, Professor T. F. Crane, Professor L. B. Packard, of the University of Rochester, and Ernest I. White '93, of Syracuse, a former winner of the Woodford Prize.

The other speakers and their subjects were: J. M. Van Horson, "The Spirit of the University;" M. W. Howe, "The Super-conservative;" Harry Caplan, "A New Birth of Freedom;" H. A. Wichelns, "The Price of Freedom," and L. H. Jayne, "The Price of an Education."

AWARDS OF PRIZES

THE LUANA L. MESSENGER MEMORIAL PRIZE has been awarded to Paul Berwig Schumm '15, of New York, for his essay on "Human Perfectibility and the Revolutionary Epoch." The prize was founded by the late Hiram J. Messenger '80, and is awarded annually to the student of the University who submits the essay "giving evidence of the best research and most fruitful thought in the field of human progress or the evolution of civilization during some period in human history or during human history as a whole." Schumm is a graduate student in the College of Agriculture and was the winner last year of the Guilford Essay Prize. The Messenger Prize is $250, the income of Mr. Messenger's gift and bequest aggregating $5,000. It is the largest prize the University has to offer.

THE MORRISON PRIZE for the best original poetry written by an undergraduate of the University was divided last week by the terms of the award between Archibald Oboler, of Brooklyn, a junior in the College of Law, and Jacob Gould Schurman, jr., of Ithaca, a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences. The prize was founded by the late J. T. Morrison, of Ithaca, and consists of $100. Honorable mention was received by K. P. Royce, M.E. '16, of Fulton, and Samuel Wilson, Arts '17, of Brooklyn.

THE SHERMAN BENNETT PRIZE was awarded last week to William Dudley Smith, of Schenectady, a graduate student. The prize was founded by Philo Sherman Bennett, of New Haven, who, by a provision in his will, established prizes to consist of the income of a fund of four hundred dollars bequeathed to each of twenty-five colleges or universities, to be awarded "for the best essay discussing the principles of free government."

The Fiske Icelandic Collection

Review by an Eminent Danish Librarian of Mr. Hermannsson's Catalogue

That foreign scholars appreciate the value and importance of the Fiske Icelandic Collection in the University Library is evident from the reviews of the Catalogue which have appeared in various German and Scandinavian periodicals. One of the longest, by Mr. Sigfús Blöndal, librarian of the Royal Library in Copenhagen, was recently published in the Nordisk tidskrift för bok-och biblioteksväsen (Upsala). He says:

"The Catalogue of the Fiske Icelandic Collection in Cornell University Library lies before us in a large, well-made, quarto volume the work of Halldór Hermannsson, the curator of the collection.

"In the preface the author tells us that it had been Mr. Fiske's intention to prepare a detailed bibliographical catalogue of the collection similar to his Bibliographical Notices. This plan had to be abandoned because of the great expense and other difficulties it involved. It would have been desirable, however, if the opportunity had been taken to publish a complete bibliography of Icelandic literature, indicating by a special mark those works which are not in Cornell University Library, and possibly another volume, or supplement, containing the non-Icelandic works in the collection. But for various reasons the present plan, which is in every way justifiable, was decided upon, though it is to be hoped that the author will issue later a supplementary volume containing the Icelandic literature which is not in the collection and which, by the way, can not be of great extent. If that were done Iceland would be better off in regard to the bibliography of its national literature than most other countries of the world.

"The Fiske Collection, as a matter of fact, covers much more ground than its name indicates. When the catalogue was printed, it numbered about 10,200 volumes. Of that number about 500 volumes are not included in this catalogue, principally those on runology, as there is to be published a special supplementary volume dealing with that subject [the catalogue of runic literature forming part of the Fiske Icelandic Collection, which is now in press]. The Collection contains, in the first place, nearly all editions and translations of the works of the Icelandic and Old Norse literature, and most of the commentaries and studies written on them. Furthermore there are to be found in it a great number of works on the language, religion, history, and the civilization in the widest sense of the Ancient North, with special reference to Iceland and Norway; also archaeological and ethnographical works, in short, almost everything which may be of importance in any way for the study of Icelandic conditions in ancient and modern times. In the collection there are even a good many works which have no other connection with Iceland than that their authors have taken subjects from the old Icelandic literature, or from Icelandic history, and have treated them poetically. Of rare early books surprisingly few are lacking, and as to non-Icelandic works dealing with Iceland and the early middle ages in the North, there are perhaps only one or two libraries which can compare with the collection. On the other hand, when it comes to the borderlands of these subjects, to works on Scandinavian matters in general, or to special works on the other Northern countries, which also may be of secondary importance for various questions in Icelandic history, literature, and language, quite a number of important works will be found lacking, * * * but we are sure that both these and other desiderata will eventually be secured, either for the Collection or for the University Library; the absence of these works, however important some of them are, does not count for much in proportion to the great number of momentous and rare works which the Collection already possesses.

"Of manuscripts the Collection has not many. Worthy of notice is Deacon Hallgr. Jonsson's original manuscript containing biographies of Icelandic authors, which it is to be hoped will be utilized as material for a dictionary of Icelandic authors since the manuscript can hardly be published as it stands. The Collection also contains much of Rafn's correspondence, a selection from which it would be desirable to see published."

After dealing at length with various bibliographical details of the Catalogue, the reviewer concludes by saying:

"Iceland can never fully thank Fiske for his life-work, the formation of the Collection which bears his name. But it is in no small degree due to Halldór Hermannsson that this Collection can be fully appreciated and made useful. The few and insignificant mistakes which might be pointed out in this and other of his bibliographical works count

ROBERT STANTON '07

Corporal in the French army, detailed to the British army; mentioned in despatches "for showing great capacity and diligence in carrying out his duties."

for nothing in comparison with the weighty contributions to the furtherance of knowledge which they contain. In Icelandic bibliography he has become a pioneer of the first rank, and his writings are indispensable for all further researches in this field."

1911 COMING STRONG

Replies coming in from the east and middle west indicate that there will be about seventy-five men at the 1911 reunion, May 26 and 27.

Four class dinners have been held at the Cornell Club in New York and more than a carload of men have arranged to take the "Cornellian" special for Ithaca at the Lehigh Valley station May 25 at 8:50 P. M.

Dinners have been held by the 1911 Chicago contingent at the University Club there. A dozen men are arranging to return together for the "big time."

Other cities between Chicago and the coast have yielded a basketful of replies to the reunion letters sent out by the committee.

All who have not arranged for their tickets for the observation train or baseball game, or who have failed to forward the reunion tax to the secretary, should do so at once.

The next class dinner in New York will be held at the Cornell Club May 17 at 6:30 P. M.

CLASS OF 1913

This is the last call for 1913 men to send in their money for their reunion uniforms. If you have not already done it, do so at once. Read the last letter. Over one hundred replies have been received. The reunion is assured of being a success with men coming from all directions. Everybody is urged to arrive early, and get acquainted. There will be plenty to do. Special notices will be posted down town. Write immediately to your secretary.

1913 DINNER

An enthusiastic get-together dinner at the Cornell Club on May 2 was attended by fifty 1913 men from New York City and surrounding territory. Bill Walker was toastmaster. There were stunts by Terry McGovern, 1900, and Johnny Little '13. George Macnoe and Larry Lawrence kept things at top notch vocally, and George Fowler, fortunately, was on hand to play the piano. Eddie Butler, Ced Major and Bob Krogstad made brief talks urging the class to get back for the reunion on May 26 and May 27. Les Groser said a few words in recognition of the hard, efficient work George Rockwell has done in making the plans for the reunion and working out the many details. The class voted to have special transportation on the Lackawanna.

The Cornell Club had made every arrangement for the dinner and everything went well. The class committee in charge was Aertsen Keasbey, Johnny Little, and Johnny Whinery. The local reunion committee consists of Eddie Butler and Les Groser.

Nearly every man at the dinner promised to get back for the reunion and a number of others who were unable to attend the dinner wrote that they would be in Ithaca on the 26th and 27th.

NOTICE TO 1915 MEN

Many of the members of the class of 1915 who will be in Ithaca for the first year reunion of the class have requested that there be a separate seating section for 1915 men only. Arrangements have been made with the Athletic Association to reserve for this purpose a block of seats for both the ball game and the crew race. These seats will be held until May 20, when the ones remaining unsold will be placed on sale for the general public.

To assist those who want seats Bob White has obtained special application blanks which should be used if possible. These may be obtained from C. M. Colyer, 1006 Swetland Building, Cleveland, Ohio; G. P. Rea, care of Guaranty Trust Company of New York, 1008 Marine Bank Building, Buffalo, N. Y., and R. W. White, 102 Waverly Place, New York City. If any member of the class does not have these blanks, he may secure tickets by sending $3.50, plus fourteen cents postage, direct to the Cornell Athletic Association, P. O. Box 38, Ithaca, N. Y. No seats in this section will be reserved except upon receiving a remittance.

Judging from the reports, there will be a large number of 1915 men back. Buffalo will be well represented and the Cleveland contingent, headed by Chuck Colyer and Chick Benton, will make an impressive appearance.

1915 DINNER

The members of the class of 1915 located in New York and vicinity will dine together at the Cornell Club, 65

Park Avenue, on Thursday, May 18, at 6:30 P. M. There will not be any formal notices mailed to the individual members, and, for that reason, each one who reads this notice is requested to get in touch with all of the local 1915 men with whom he is acquainted.

This is the second 1915 dinner to be given at the Cornell Club this year, and of the thirty-four present at the first one, each declared himself in favor of another. Like the first one, it will be strictly informal, economical, and full of "pep." If any member of the class should temporarily feel that the condition of the exchequer would not permit, he should immediately sell "the winter over" for at least one dollar ($1.00) and again meet all of those other boys who are equally anxious to see him.

THE NEW YORK CLUB

The following men were elected in April to membership in the Cornell Club of New York: E. J. Moore '99, W. L. Wright '00, W. R. Couch '02, M. G. Brown '09, J. B. Turner '09, G. P. Buchanan '12, T. M. Baseball

Cornell 5, Rochester 2

Cornell defeated Rochester 5 to 2 on May 3 in the only home game of the week. Cornell was out-hit, but won the game through the visitors' errors. Rochester made nine hits off the three Cornell pitchers, Olson, Sutterby, and Russell, while Cornell hit Patchen safely only six times.

Olson, who pitched the first three innings for Cornell, got into trouble in the first inning. A base on balls, a sacrifice, a single, and a wild pitch enabled Rochester to score two runs. Cornell tied the score in the second inning. Ludwig and Eckley reached first on errors and scored on Burpee's three base hit. Burpee attempted to stretch his long hit into a home run, but was caught at home. Cornell won the game in the seventh inning. O'Connell and Eckley singled and scored when Ogden threw wild to first base to catch Whitney. Whitney reached third on the error and scored on another poor throw to first base. The score by innings:

Rochester 2 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 —2 9 6
 Cornell 0 2 0 0 0 0 3 0 x—5 6 1

Cornell 4, Columbia 3

Columbia was defeated 4 to 3 in New York on Friday. Columbia presented a hitherto undefeated nine, having won seven games and tied one. Sutterby, pitching his second game of the season, held the home team to five hits, and was never in trouble until the ninth inning, when Columbia started a batting rally that all but tied the score. With Cornell ahead 4 to 1, two out and a man on first, Eckley's error filled first and second. Watt then singled, bringing in a run. Benson's hit scored another run, and Buonaguro, the Columbia shortstop, who has a batting average of about .600, came to bat. He struck at the first ball and was an easy out, Sutterby to Ludwig.

Cornell began the scoring in the first inning. Sauters doubled and came home on Clary's double. O'Connell reached first on a fielder's choice and scored on Budd's hit. Again in the eighth Cornell tallied twice. Ludwig doubled and scored on Eckley's triple. Sutterby brought Eckley home with a single. Columbia scored her first run in the same inning. Buonaguro reached first on a fielder's choice and scored on Mernstein's triple. The score:

Cornell 1, Princeton 0

Cornell defeated Princeton at Princeton on Saturday by the score of 1 to 0, the same score by which Cornell had beaten the same team at Ithaca one week before. Russell again held the Tigers to two hits. Cornell made ten safe hits off Link's delivery, four more than the same pitcher had allowed in the game at Ithaca. Link always tightened when a score for Cornell looked inevitable, and the game went nothing to nothing for eight innings. Budd, Cornell's new rightfielder, distinguished himself by making four hits in as many times at bat. Valentine, the Cornell leftfielder, also had a perfect batting average for the day, making three safe hits and a sacrifice in four times at bat. These two men were responsible for the winning run in the ninth inning. Budd led off with a clean single and stole second. He took third on a passed ball and scored when Valentine laid down a perfect bunt toward first base.

Cornell's closest approach to scoring earlier in the game was prevented by fast fielding of Lee in the left field. The fifth, with Mellen on second and O'Connell on first, Budd singled to left field. Lee scooped up the ball and made a perfect throw to the plate. Douglas tagged Mellen out, retiring the side. The score:

Interscholastic Track Meet

Mercersburg Wins for the Fourth Time

Mercersburg Academy won the annual interscholastic track meet last Saturday. It was Mercersburg's fourth victory in five years. One more victory would give that school permanent possession of the trophy. The event was held on Schoellkopf Field immediately after the dual track meet with Harvard. About 140 athletes from 26 different schools took part. Mercersburg finished far ahead of all other entrants with a total score of 60 points. Lafayette High School, of Buffalo, and Bethlehem Preparatory School, of Bethlehem, Pa., tied for second place with 11 points. These two schools will each have possession of the second place trophy for six months. Although the track was in excellent shape the performers were as a rule below standard, and no records were broken. Mercersburg won first place in seven of the thirteen events.

The various trophies were won as follows: 100-yard dash, trophy given by the Cornell Club of Philadelphia, won by Mercersburg; high hurdles, Cornell University Association of Chicago, won by Mercersburg; mile run, Cornell University Alumni Association of Milwaukee, won by Morris High School, New York City; 440-yard dash, Cornell Club of Northern New Jersey, by Mercersburg; two mile run, Cornell Club of North China, by Albion (N. Y.) High School; low hurdles, Cornell Club of Western New York, by Mercersburg; 220-yard dash, Cornell Club of Western Pennsylvania, by Mercersburg; half mile run, Cornell Club of New England, by Hutchinson Central High School, Buffalo; shot put, Ithaca alumni, by Bethlehem Preparatory School; high jump, Cornell Alumni Association of Michigan, by Yonkers High School; pole vault, the Cornell Club of Cleveland, by Mercersburg; hammer throw, Cornell Club of Maryland, by Mercersburg; broad jump, Cornell Club of Washington, D. C., by Jamaica (Long Island) High School.

These trophies must be won three times by the same school before they are awarded permanently. Two of them were won for the third time Saturday by Mercersburg Academy, the cup for the 220-yard dash, presented by the Cornell Club of Western Pennsylvania, and the cup for the pole vault, presented by the Cornell Club of Cleveland. New cups will have to be provided next spring for those events.

VOCAL BASEBALL

Williams had a clear lead as a chatter-box team at Princeton until Cornell came along. And such chattering! The players anticipate the umpire's decisions by calling "strike"! and register their disapproval of decisions by hoots and by hurling the ball to the ground. Cornell suggested more a team of the American Association than the team of a proud University where culture and science go hand in hand.—Lawrence Perry in the New York Evening Post.

SWAPPING INFORMATION

It was Nickalls who startled every one by measuring the Harvard oars in the boathouse at Cambridge two years ago. He did it without a thought of harm, having at the same time the utmost willingness for any Harvard man who cared to do so to visit the Yale boathouse and measure oars and examine rig to his heart's content. Some persons were inclined to raise their eyebrows, but now no one would think of expressing either surprise or concern of whatsoever sort over such an incident. In other words, Mr. Nickalls, whether he intended to do so or not, took the bull by the horns, and, without batting an eye, revolutionized certain accepted theories by making them appear absurd and ridiculous. At Cornell annually, when crews visit Ithaca, the rival coaches
