MOTORBOAT RACING

Cornell, along with four other colleges, has accepted an invitation to participate in an outboard motor boat regatta under the auspices of the Colgate University Outing Club on Lake Cazenovia May 16 and 17.

College interest in the sport of outboard motor boat racing is growing, according to the National Outboard Association. Other colleges which have accepted Colgate's invitation are Dartmouth, Syracuse, Hamilton, and Union.

THE POUGHKEEPSIE REGATTA

The annual regatta of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association will be held on the Hudson River at Poughkeepsie on June 26, it has been decided by the Board of Stewards, on which Charles E. Treman '89 is the Cornell representative.

The United States Naval Academy has been admitted to membership in the Association. The original group consisted of Cornell, Columbia, and Pennsylvania. Syracuse was admitted some years ago.

Invitations to the regatta are to be sent to four colleges outside the association which participated last year, California, Wisconsin, Washington, and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and to Princeton and Stanford.

COURT LEAGUE GAMES

Princeton defeated Yale, 23-21, in the only game in the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League last week, and Cornell moved out of a triple tie for last place to fifth position in the League standing.

Mid-year examinations have halted the games in the League, the next contest scheduled being the annual Pennsylvania-Cornell Junior Week game in the Drill Hall February 8.

RED ROSEBUD CABBAGE

DEVELOPED BY CORNELLIAN

A new variety of cabbage, resembling an enormous red rosebud, has been developed at Cornell in the effort to find methods of improving garden products. The experiments have been conducted by the Department of Plant Breeding under the direction of Professor Clyde H. Myers, Ph.D. '12.

New flavors are also introduced into cabbages through the culmination of these experiments. The new cabbage, deep red in color, is a complete departure from the purple commercial variety. It was obtained by cross breeding.

Professor Myers is in charge of an experimental patch including about thirty thousand cabbages.

The twenty-third annual Farm and Home Week will begin Monday, February 10, when Dean Albert R. Mann '04 will give an address of welcome. He will discuss "Some Significant Trends in Agriculture."

TELLS OF CLEMENCEAU

Colonel Edward M. House '81, confidential adviser and emissary of President Woodrow Wilson in Europe during the World War, has paid a tribute to the late Georges Clemenceau, wartime premier of France, with whom he enjoyed an intimate friendship.

"He was easily the most picturesque figure of the war period," Colonel House said, "and will be considered one of the greatest. Eventually history will give him a place in France similar to that of Bismarck in Germany. Both were great nationalists and interested only in international affairs where they affected their own countries."

Colonel House first met Clemenceau at Paris in November, 1917, at the Inter-Allied Conference.

PLAN LECTURE SERIES

Gilmore D. Clarke '13, landscape architect for the Westchester County Park Commission, and other engineers, city planners, and experts, will give a series of lectures on regional planning and the development of public properties during the second term.

Carlsark Sailing Home

Weagant Writes Parents of Winter Voyage in Warm Mediterranean Waters

Carl L. Weagant '29, captain of the ketch Carlsark, which set sail from Ithaca last June for European waters and which is now en route to the Bahamas, has written another chapter of the voyage in a letter to his parents from Ithaca, Ionia, dated December 18, 1929. With Weagant are Dudley N. Schoales '29 and Joseph M. Rummier '29. The letter follows.

"We arrived here on schedule at three a. m. Wednesday after a tough run across the Ionian Sea, but it has been worth many times the trouble.

"This is a glorious little land-locked harbor and there is no place where the influence of classical associations is so lively or so pure.

"Today we shall climb Mt. Aitos, the ancient home of Ulysses—there to erect our little marble tablet on which we have carved CORNELL to face west toward our Alma Mater and on the other side FOREVER to face toward the land of "Father Greek," assuring him that his learning will be carried on by Cornell.

"From the ruins, we will secure a piece of stone to return to Cornell, as a memento of the trip by three wild Cornellians from Ithaca to Ithaca."

"We leave tonight, as we left our Alma Mater, with the full moon rising over hill and ruins of old Ithaca and then on 1,300 miles to Gibraltar. When we have reached it successfully, the anxiety and worry of this great trip will be over, as the old Atlantic with the N.E. trades will never harm us like this stormy Mediterranean and its rocky shores."

BOOKS

AN EMERSON MEMORIAL

Chaucer Essays and Studies. A Selection from the Writings of Oliver Farrar Emerson, 1860-1927, Ph.D. '91. With a Foreword by Walter Graham and an Introduction by William H. Hulme. Cleveland. Western Reserve University Press. 1929. 21.5 cm., pp. 455.

This memorial volume is a worthy tribute to a distinguished scholar. Dr. Emerson was the author of over one hundred and fifty papers and books, produced in a little less than forty years. The range of his scholarly interests was wide, extending from modern American and British speech to Scott, Johnson, Milton, Spenser, Shakespeare (he was Barnes Prizeman in 1889), and Old and Middle English language and literature. But he devoted a relatively large amount of effort to the elucidation of Chaucer problems; and his colleagues have doubtless been well advised in presenting his Chaucer work in this handsome reprint as "his most substantial and interesting contribution to English scholarship." Fifteen papers are here reprinted.

There is prefixed a well written and judicious introduction in which Professor Hulme traces the ancestry, early years, and scholarly activity of the author of these papers. Limiting himself to thirty pages, he had perforce to omit much; but he has managed nevertheless to give us more than a glimpse into Emerson's life.

It was fortunate for the cause of scholarship that Emerson, when he was about twenty-eight, declined a Dakota college presidency to become Goldwin Smith Fellow in English at Cornell. He was not always sure himself that he had the making of a scholar; but the test of time has abundantly justified his decision. The presidency of the Modern Language Association in 1923 was a well deserved mark of distinction.

The bibliography by Professor Clark S. Northup '93 runs to 167 items. There is one slight omission: a review of Flasdieck's Mittelenglische Originalurkunden in The Journal of English and Germanic Philology for July, 1927, xxvi, 406-7. There is a good index of ten pages.

THE UNIVERSITY'S INVESTMENTS

AN ALERT SUBSCRIBER questions our recent statement that the average return on the investment of the University was fifty per cent. We are inclined to agree with him. The statement of the Comptroller gives the return as five and one half per cent. This is a succession of typographical changes converted into fifty. Out of such stuff miracles are made.

Nevertheless the Finance Committee of the Board of Trustees, while disclaiming ability of this sort, performs regularly and constantly and receives very little public recognition for a hard job well done.

The list of investments in the annual report is regarded by many alumni as a very good guide to sound investment, and the rate of return, at five and a half, is considered a rather remarkable achievement. To the skill of the Finance Committee credit should be given for the comfortable situation after the recent decline in the security market.

We are glad to make this correction in the records and to insist that even at the reduced rate of interest the performance is highly noteworthy.

WILLED BRAIN WHEN FRESHMAN

Elizabeth Ellsworth Cook '08, member of Phi Beta Kappa and winner of the Woodford Prize, is the subject of one of a series of articles on "Women in Wall Street," in The New York Telegram. She is associated with Hemphill, Noyes and Company, in which company many Cornellians are employed.

The article says that Miss Cook's advice to salesmen of the concern is "backed by twenty years' experience in Wall Street and much solid economics from Cornell."

The story reveals that when she matriculated as a freshman Miss Cook immediately made her will and bequeathed her brain to the collection in the Medical College at Ithaca.

NO ISSUE NEXT WEEK

In accordance with the new schedule, there will be no issue of the ALUMNI NEWS on February 6. Publication will be resumed the following week.

Ice on Airplane Wings

Problem of Preventing its Formation Being Thoroughly Studied at Cornell By William C. Geer '02

Science is waging at Cornell a new battle against the forces of nature, according to the Associated Press. William C. Geer '02 is directing the fight.

Mr. Geer, a retired official of the Goodrich Rubber Company, who has returned to Ithaca to live, is now conducting experiments as a research associate in physics to solve the problem of preventing the formation of ice on the wings of airplanes.

Formation of ice is one of the greatest dangers facing aviators in cold weather, and the experiments at Cornell are designed to reach some solution of this problem. Mr. Geer, who personally knows many noted pilots in the air mail service, is working under a grant from the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics.

The experiments at present are with substances designed to prevent the formation of ice. Various materials are spread on the wings of model planes and subjected to tests under all conditions of zero weather. A "wash" for an airplane wing is being sought which will not permit the adherence of ice.

The National Air Transport, air mail operating company, has agreed to furnish airplanes for test purposes when the experiments at Cornell have reached the stage where they may be applied in practical instances.

PSYCHOLOGY INSTITUTE FOUNDED

Incorporation of the National Institute of Psychology, whose membership includes many foremost American experimental psychologists is seen as the first step toward the establishment in Washington of a national research center for problems in human and animal psychology.

Among the active members are Dr. Madison Bentley, Ph.D. '98, Sage professor of psychology, Professor Karl M. Dallenbach, Ph.D. '13, and Professor Margaret F. Washburn, Ph.D. '94, of Vassar College.

DR. HENDRICK W. Van Loon '05 contributes an introduction to Ten Thousand Shall Fall (in England published as L. M. 8046) by David King. The book is published by Duffield at $2.50.

IN School and Society for January 18 President George F. Zook, Ph.D. '14, of the University of Akron writes on "The Financial Support of Municipal Universities."

THE WEEK ON THE CAMPUS

THE students refer persistently to the past week, the week immediately preceding examinations, as Block Week. Yet surely, according to the purest and oldest tradition, Block Week was a synonym for Examination Week. I remember observing, long years since, the phenomenon that the longest week in the year, Block Week, ten days from end to end, was immediately followed, according to the law of compensation, by the shortest week in the year, Junior Week. It seems an outrage and a burning shame that the old meaning of Block Week should thus be lost. Why, you ask me. Ah, there you have me.

AT ANY RATE, this pre-examination week has a character of its own. It is Earnest Week, Sincerity Week, Industry Week. The Arts College is continuing for the second year its experiment of abandoning most of its classes, so that the students may review at ease, without interference from their professors. Is the experiment successful? There are two contradictory opinions. One group thinks that the students profit from working independently, without direction; another group concludes that too large a proportion of the class postpones all the term's work to this final week of cramming.

JUNIOR WEEK, while we're on the subject, has been vigorously press-agented. The Junior Prom, on February 7, will have two very celebrated bands. (Come to think of it, two years ago The Sun campaigned loudly for the abolition of the Junior Prom.) The Dramatic Club will put on "Fanny's First Play," one of George Bernard Shaw's best.

THE SUN's fifty-year book, A Half-Century at Cornell, should be on sale by the time this meets your eye. The boys have done a very praiseworthy job; the book is in prose and pictures an invaluable and most entertaining record of the lusty youth and young manhood of our University. But of this more anon. In the meantime, send cheque to The Cornell Daily Sun Fiftieth for a copy. $2. in paper covers, $3.50 in boards.

NEW SOCIETY of the week: The Lincoln Doorknob Society, honorary association for upperclassmen in the College of Engineering.

A RADIO was installed in Willard Straight Cafeteria to receive the opening exercises at the London Disarmament Conference on Tuesday. The management was pleased, and no doubt surprised, to find seventy-five on hand at six o'clock, and the number rapidly increased. These loyalists ate their breakfast in reverent silence as the voice of His Majesty rolled through the cafeteria. "A toast to the King—God bless him!" was the general cry, with appropriate gestures.

THE PLEASANTEST of concerts was given on Tuesday in the University Chamber Music Series. The Societe des Instruments Anciens, consisting of a viole d'amour, a quinton, a basse de viole, a viole de gambe, and a clavecin, played a series of compositions of the seventeenth, eighteenth, and early nineteenth centuries, transporting their hearers into the past by the most compelling magic known.

IF INTRINSIC, and not news value, determined the right of an item to a recording on this page, I would list weekly Professor Harold D. Smith's organ recitals. But as they are fixtures they do not seem to have that subtle and topical charm which makes the rest of these records so fascinating. Nevertheless, remember that if you are in town (Ithaca) on Friday you would enjoy dropping in either at Bailey Hall or Sage Chapel at 4.15. Professor Smith gives his programs unity by various devices. Last week he played compositions of Russian and Bohemian composers.

KERMIS will produce, on Friday of Farm and Home Week, an original play by Walter H. Hoose '30 of Dryden. "After Caucus" is its name.

PUBLIC LECTURERS of the week were Dean Emeritus Veranus A. Moore '87, speaking on "Undulant Fever"; Professor William M. Dunbar '21 of the College of Architecture, who dealt with "The Domestic and Civil Architecture of Florence in the Late Gothic Period"; and Professor Wolfgang Lieve of the University of Kiel, lecturing on "Das Deutsche Theater der Gegenwart."

THE SAGE CHAPEL Preacher on January 26 was Dr. Augustus T. Murray, of the Friends' Meeting in Washington, D. C., formerly professor of Greek in Stanford.

A CHOW puppy belonging to Sigma Alpha Epsilon and specifically to Mearick J. Funkhouser '32 of Dayton, Ohio, fell into Fall Creek Gorge a few days ago. He apparently tried to swim the icy stream in zero weather, was carried over the thirty-foot falls below the suspension bridge, and sustained a deep wound in his side. After being missing for two days, he was discovered, and rescued at very considerable risk by Motorcycle Patrolman Charles McDougal and Officer William Simmers of the S. P. C. A. Mr. Simmers slipped as he was picking his way down the icy bank of the gorge and suffered a wrenched ankle. Nothing discouraged, however, he accompanied Patrolman McDougal along the treacherous gorge where the dog was huddling. The puppy, nearly frozen, was taken to the Veterinary College and at last reports was doing nicely.

WELL, here we are with all our news gone and a couple of inches to go. Let us then discuss for a moment, seriously and in a large way, the problem of Cornell's athletic future. If we look at the performances in the sports in which comparative records are possible, i.e., track and field events, what do we find? Why, that the records reached their approximate peak several years ago. If anyone is to run the mile faster than John Paul Jones ran it in 1913 (4 min. 14 $\frac{2}{3}$ sec.) he will beat that record only by fractions of seconds. We have been approaching the ultimate possibilities of the human constitution as a limit; we are not far from that limit now. What then can the truly forward-looking college do? It must turn from the effort to force an extra half-ounce of energy from a protesting frame; it must improve that frame. It must take a tip from the biologists and geneticists who are able to develop racial strains by careful crossing and selection. It must study the methods that have developed the seedless orange, the spineless cactus, the Belgian police dog, the fleetfoot race horse. It must encourage its champion runners, its mighty pole-vaulters, to marry only into families of other famous harriers, into other pole-vaulting strains. The individuals would feel that they were consecrating their lives to a noble cause; they would bring back to us the lost crown of the Intercollegiates, simply by taking to heart and putting into practice the motto: Breed for Cornell!

Thrift is a Royal Road

Much was published and said during Thrift Week about the wisdom of Saving. In this the Life Insurance business heartily concurs.

Men who practice Thrift do more than put money away for future use. They build their own characters, set a decent example for others and stabilize their own credit.

Practice Thrift and prosper.

Begin by acquiring enough life insurance!

(Thrift week was Jan. 17 to 23)
