

PROGRAM FOR SPOUSES

Welcome Back!

77th Annual Conference for Veterinarians
New York State College of Veterinary Medicine
January 15, 16, 17, 1985

Members of the Veterinary Circle of the New York State College of Veterinary Medicine cordially invite you to participate in the spouses' program of the 77th Annual Conference for Veterinarians. We have planned activities to increase your business acumen, to present an introduction to microcomputers, and to provide hospitality over coffee.

Last year's program introduced several departments of Cornell University outside of the Veterinary College. This year we will venture a bit further afield with discussions of the architecture of historic Ithaca and the wines of New York State. A wine sampling will be included with the luncheon compliments of the Veterinary Circle! The educational program will begin with an introduction to microcomputers and programs. No previous knowledge or experience is required for this demonstration. Literature on uses of the computer in veterinary practice will be on display, and computer terminals will be available in the library reading room throughout the meeting. Lectures by Susan Cohen and Ezra Cornell III will be open to veterinarians and spouses. On Thursday morning, you may participate in a craft discussion, for which we urge you to bring a favorite project, or join in a cross-country ski tour.

Coffee and friendship will be offered in the Hagan Room throughout the Conference. We are looking forward to renewing old friendships and beginning new ones; please come and join us!
