

I think the challenge for me as a anti-racist white person is that my antenna is only sometimes as active as I would like it to be, so I know it is important to call out people on racism and I think I'm fairly cognizant of it, but every once in a while I know that I'm missing things that are important which shows that I still have a long way to go and to learn from my colleagues and friends and collaborators of color.

