Industrial & Labor Relations School: A Part of Cornell University

By DEAN MARTIN P. CATHERWOOD, PhD '30

THE GREATNESS of Cornell University comes in no small measure from the co-ordinated strength and the mutual usefulness of its various Schools and Colleges merged in the whole University structure. It requires some work—some engineering—to fit a new unit into the over-all structure and to do it in such a way that the new unit functions in an integrated way with all the other units.

Progress is being made in this engineering feat, of establishing the Industrial and Labor Relations School as a solid working unit of the University.

To begin with, and most important, a School at Cornell must advance scholarship and learning by means of thorough, objective research and by means of thorough, objective teaching. To build, verify, and reverify a body of knowledge through objective research and to teach this body of knowledge objectively has been the first concern of the Industrial and Labor Relations Faculty and administration. The School is an educational institution!

Students Interchange

The fifty men and fourteen women of the School's Faculty come from many different educational backgrounds and have various combinations of training and practical experience in business, labor, and government. Acceptance of the School's program by business, labor, and government is, we believe, the best evidence of the staff's qualifications. To emphasize the student's exposure to practical, current, and realistic situations in the School's courses, extensive use is made of visiting lecturers from business organizations, both large and small, and of representatives from labor and from government.

One of the obligations of each School or College within the University is to add to the over-all teaching program of the University with courses open to all University students. In every year of the School's operation, the number of Cornell students enrolling in Industrial and Labor Relations courses has increased. Last year, there were in the School more than 700 course-registrations from such Colleges as Engineering, Law, Business and Public Administration, Home Economics, and Arts and Sciences. The School is glad to share its specialized courses in labor-management relations with the whole University community; courses such as collective bargaining, personnel administration, labor history, industrial history, labor market economics, social security, and human relations.

Industrial and Labor Relations students, on the other hand—some 300 undergraduate and 75 graduate students—take good advantage of courses offered in other divisions. Such opportunities are not limited to the Freshman and Sophomore years, in which a substantial portion of the work is supplied by the College of Arts and Sciences, but include elective courses in Arts and Sciences, Engineering, and other Colleges for upper-class and graduate students.

Participate in All Activities

Students of the School are students of Cornell University, not alone from the standpoint of the courses in which they participate, but also in University-wide activities. During the brief period of I&LR's existence, the students in the School have held far more than their percentage share of Campus leadership positions, such as the editorship of the Cornell Daily Sun and other student publications, presidency of the Student Council, and offices of various Classes, associations, sororities, fraternities, and honorary societies. Last year the School was represented in all Varsity sports and on the football squad by Todd Kolb, John McCarthy, Stuart Merz, Robert Malm, William Wilson, and Jeff Fleischmann. Eric Jensen, Varsity tackle, now with Bethlehem Steel Co., maintained one of the highest averages in his Class in the School.

Under present concepts of the University's larger responsibilities to the State and nation, the work of Cornell is not confined to on-Campus research and education. Business, government, and to a limited degree, labor, turn more and more to universities not only for research but for assistance in education. To this

Dean Explains Newest School—Dean Catherwood's account of the State School of Industrial & Labor Relations is adapted from his address to members of the Cornell University Council in Ithaca, October 12. He has headed the School since July 1, 1947, when he succeeded its first Dean of two years, US Senator Irving M. Ives. Formerly professor of Public Administration in the Department of Agricultural Economics, Dean Catherwood had been on leave in Albany from 1941 as the first State Commissioner of Commerce. He came to the Graduate School in 1927, having received the BS the previous year and then the MS at University of Illinois. He received the PhD in 1930; was appointed professor in 1939. He was chairman of the New York State Planning Council from 1936-41.

end the Industrial and Labor Relations School's extension program makes the whole State its campus, and the School is being called on for assistance in educational programs outside the State.

School Aids Outside Groups

The School's extension or adult education program last year, in addition to a great deal of informal work, included 230 special programs, conferences, and institutes for adults throughout the State. Personnel from labor organizations, from government, and from business and professional groups were included in some 5,000 persons participating in such programs. Conferences and institutes were held for labor groups such as the State Council of Machinists and the Steelworkers; for professional groups such as the National Association of Cost Accountants and the New York State Society of Professional Engineers; and for business groups such as training directors, personnel supervisors, and savings bank personnel administrators.

As an outgrowth of this type of educational work, the School has just received a grant from the Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co. to finance a two-year educational project for leadership training of industrial executives at the Amsterdam plant. This program, in which the School will be assisted by the College of Engineering, will be accompanied by studies of its effectiveness, which should contribute to the development of further cooperation between industry and institutions of higher learning. Similar programs are under consideration with other organizations.

Conducts Broad Research

The School has broadened and strengthened the University's great library resources at the service of all Cornell students and Faculty by the addition of outstanding collections in the labor-management field. The School library is recognized as an outstanding collection in industrial and labor relations and, as rapidly as resources permit, is developing a documentary center for unpublished materials widely used by labor, management, and government.

Consistent with one of the important policies which has made Cornell great, the School has placed strong emphasis on research as it has developed its program in this new academic field. The Division of Research is given equal weight in the School's internal administration with the Divisions of Resident Instruction and Extension or Adult Education Teaching. The normal funds of the School for research purposes are supplemented by a number of special grants from foundations, government, business, and other organizations.

A bare sampling of recent and current research includes: (1) a study for the Controlling Institute on effective selection and presentation of facts and figures during collective bargaining with unions; (2) a series of studies of management, employee, and patient relationships at New York State hospitals undertaken with the cooperation of the American Hospital Association; (3) a study of the human relations among union leaders and members of two locals at Dunkirk, N.Y., the first of a series of similar studies; (4) a study of manpower mobilization in the Buffalo area during World War II, from which information useful in future times of labor shortage was obtained; and (5) the compilation, indexing, and evaluation of management and trade association materials and techniques concerning wage surveys. In all, twenty-three Faculty research projects are in progress.

The School has brought no little academic recognition to the University through its publications, including several series of bulletins, books, and the quarterly professional magazine, Industrial and Labor Relations Review, a journal with 2500 paid subscribers.

Fosters World Understanding

Cornell is a world institution. With this country thrust into a position of world leadership, the University's international program and its knowledge and contacts throughout the world assume increasing importance. The School of Industrial and Labor Relations is proud to have an important part in this worldwide program. Through the recently established Institute of International Industrial and Labor Relations, the School hopes to expand the research which already has been undertaken in this area.

For the world of the future, those working in labor-management relations—whether for business, labor, or government; whether in this country or abroad—must be informed concerning problems and developments in labor-management relations throughout the world. During the past year groups from France, Norway, and Germany, including representatives from labor, management, and government, have spent from two weeks to several months in study at the School. Currently, sixteen technicians from Turkey are here for six months on a program arranged by the School which provides both on-Campus instruction by the School and the Engineering College and experience in industry. In addition, twenty-three West German youths are enrolled as special students in the School for nine months.

Teach American System

In all these programs for foreign students, emphasis is placed on acquainting the visitors with the American system, not in matters of industry and labor alone, but in American customs, history, and institutions as well. In the worldwide struggle against Communism, much of which is being fought out on the labor-management front, this program is one which has much more than an academic contribution to make.

Finally, the School, if it is to meet its responsibilities as a part of the University, must, as the end-product of its research and teaching activities, produce graduates competent to fill responsible positions which are rewarding to themselves, to their employers, and to society. In the long run, the acid test of the School's operation will be found in the appraisal of the contributions of those who have been its students.

Alumni Find Varied Places

Now, of course, old grads aren't in existence from a six-year-old School, but the junior alumni who have already been graduated from the School's temporary buildings on Sage Green are doing very well indeed for themselves, for their employers, and for the reputation of the University. Substantial numbers are in the armed forces and some 20 per cent of those who have completed the undergraduate work have continued with the study of law or with graduate work. Some graduates have been employed by organizations such as the State Mediation Board and by various other agencies of the State government. They have been employed by Federal agencies such as the Department of Labor and the Atomic Energy Commission. A number have been employed by trade associations and by labor unions.

Business Takes Most

Business, however, is by far the largest employer of graduates of the School of Industrial and Labor Relations. More than ten times as many graduates of the School are employed by business as by labor. Most of the jobs with business relate to some aspect of personnel administration and industrial relations. Business wants young executives with the type of knowledge and understanding of all phases of labor-management relations which the School gives. This is not to the disadvantage of labor or the public.

Among the well-known organizations that have employed graduates of the School, some of the several, are Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), Botany Mills, Chrysler Corp., Prudential Insurance Co., General Electric Co., Columbia Broadcasting System, Bell Aircraft Corp., Allied Stores Corp., Procter & Gamble Co., McGraw Hill Book Co., Mergenthaler Linotype Co., Gimbel's Department Store, Chase Brass & Copper Co., American Sugar Refining Co., Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corp., Commercial Credit Corp., Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co., E. R. Squibb & Co., Inland Steel Co., Kaiser Metal Products Co., Scott Paper Co., Crucible Steel Co., U. S. Rubber Co., Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., B. F. Goodrich Co., Johnson & Johnson Co., Nash-Kelvinator Co., Koppers Co., Johns-Manville Corp., US Steel Corp., Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Carrier Corp., E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

School Furthers Cornell Traditions

The great body of Cornell alumni have extended the University's good name throughout the world. Their contributions to every field of human endeavor are the University's best justification. Alumni of the School of Industrial and Labor Relations, too, are making their individual contributions, I am confident, in the soundest Cornell traditions.

As the junior member of the University team, we are still growing and developing, and we are still relatively unknown to many Cornell alumni. Let me repeat the invitation which I extended at the University Council meeting: We welcome you to the School on any and all occasions; we hope that when you are on Campus you will drop in to learn more about us at first hand.

'51 Alumnus Writes

A GRADUATE of last June, now in the Army, enclosed his contribution to the Alumni Fund in a personal letter to President Deane W. Malott. He writes:

With the World Series, football, and all, this appears to be the time of the year when everyone wants to support a winning club. Cornell, to me, is not a club, but I feel I shall always be cheering and rooting for it.

Man to man, some people might say that it is not as strong as a few other members in the League; but the spirit of Cornell enables it to do for its graduates a lot that other schools cannot. It did much for me. The enclosed is only a small token of my appreciation.

Congratulations and best of luck to you as President. Since I couldn't tell you in person, I thought that you'd like to know you're working with a champion!

Sign Agreement for GE Electronics Center—Unique cooperation of educational and industrial research is exemplified in the new General Electric Advanced Electronics Center at Cornell. Formal agreement was signed by Vice-president for Research Theodore P. Wright (at left); Dr. W. R. G. Baker, GE vice-president and electronics division general manager; Robert B. Meigs '26, secretary of the Corporation and University Counsel; and Dean S. C. Hollister, Engineering.

General Electric Electronics Center To Cooperate In Research

NEGOTIATIONS of several months between University officials and those of General Electric Co. have resulted in a unique General Electric Advanced Electronics Center, "to carry out advanced study and development in the field of electronics, and at the same time provide scientists and engineers with teaching and educational opportunities of a type never previously established."

A large laboratory building owned by the University near the East Hill airport and not far from the "radio astronomy" station is being made ready for renting to the new Center, beginning in February, and some work has already started in temporary quarters.

It is expected that the Center will have a staff of about eighty persons in its first year of operation, with perhaps three times that number eventually. Described as "an immediate attempt to fulfill the rapidly-increasing needs of both industry and the armed services for additional military electronics research and development," the Center may be concerned principally at first with such "high-priority military projects" as control systems for guided missiles, electronic counter-measures, and infra-red systems. Its long-term emphasis is expected to be on work of non-military nature.

The Center is established to supplement General Electric research and development at Electronics Park near Syracuse and at Schenectady. It will be managed by Brigadier General Tom C. Rives, US Army, Retired, whose headquarters as a General Electric official are at Electronics Park. Resident manager is H. R. Oldfield, Jr., former Air Force officer who has been with GE since 1945. Also on a four-man steering committee will be Director Charles R. Burrows of the School of Electrical Engineering, as associate principal scientist, and a principal scientist not yet named.

The University will thus be represented in approval of projects to be assigned to the Center by General Electric. Members of the Electronics Center staff may be appointed to the Faculty and may be called upon to teach University classes, along with their laboratory work for the company. Some members of the University Faculty and staff may be employed by GE, part time and as consultants, and graduate students and those in the fifth year of Engineering may also be employed at the Center, part time, with possible University credit given to some graduate students for mutually-approved work done there.

Plans for the Center were developed with Dean S. C. Hollister, Engineering, and Theodore P. Wright, Vice-president for Research, by Dr. W. R. G. Baker, vice-president of General Electric Co. and general manager of its electronics division. At a luncheon in Ithaca announcing the new Center, Vice-president Wright said the Center "would enhance many educational phases of the University's program" and indicated that it is not only a "pioneering venture in educational and industry cooperation for research" but is very definitely not exclusive of similar arrangements by the University with leading industrial firms in this and other fields.

Student Grades Improve

ACADEMIC GRADES of students last year averaged higher than at any time since statistics have been kept by the University. The average for all undergraduates, as compiled by Ernest Whitworth, Associate Registrar, was 77.68 per cent. This average has increased in each of the last four years. In 1949-50 it was 77.47 and last year was 2.47 percentage points higher than the 1938-39 pre-war average of 75.21.

A similar rise took place in the averages of all men, all women, fraternity and sorority men and women, and independent men and women. This is attributed both to greater selectivity in admissions and to more widespread concern by the studentry for good scholarship.

Last year for the second time, the average grade of members of fraternities and other men's associations was higher than for all men; but the average of sorority women fell back below the all-women's average after having risen above it in 1949-50. Increasing attention is being paid to grades in the fraternities. Most defer initiation until the second term and require satisfactory scholastic standing as a condition to membership.

The following comparative averages are weighted for the number of credit hours carried by each student.

New Students Apply

APPLICATION BLANKS for prospective Freshmen next fall and for more than 100 competitive scholarships open to Freshmen are now being mailed to seniors in secondary schools all over the country who request them from the Office of Admissions. Information for prospective applicants and a leaflet on Freshman scholarships have been sent to members of Cornell Club secondary schools committees by Robert W. Storaandt '40, Associate Director of Admissions, and posters and information about scholarships have been distributed to about 3300 schools.

Many divisions of the University require all their applicants to take the Scholastic Aptitude Test which will be given throughout the country by the College Entrance Examination Board, next January 12. This test is required of all applicants for Freshman scholarships, for which applications must be received by or before March 1. Beginning January 1, the Office of Residential Halls distributes application forms for rooms in the men's dormitories next fall.

Most valuable awards offered to Freshmen are twenty-five National Scholarships which range from free tuition and $900 a year. Designed to bring to Cornell the ablest graduates of secondary schools in all sections of the country, both in capacity for scholastic achievement and leadership potential, they are open to men and women entering any undergraduate division of the University and may be held for as many years as are required for a first degree.

Information given on the same blanks is also used in awarding thirty McMullen Regional Scholarships in Engineering, worth up to $600 a year for the five-year course; seven Lefevre Scholarships of $400 a year and eighteen University Undergraduate Scholarships of $200 a year for two years, good in all divisions; and about thirty Burrell Scholarships of $200 for the Freshman year in Engineering. Last year, about 1800 Freshmen applied for these scholarships.

Alumni members of secondary schools committees are increasingly being asked to interview applicants in their localities and to report on blanks supplied by the Admissions Office, for use by the Faculty selection committees in the various Colleges.

Now In My Time!

Romeyn Perry

WE TALKED with an eighteen-year-old Sophomore about his courses. He was evidently an eager student and probably didn't miss by much being a brilliant one. He was, however, highly critical of University teaching methods as he was currently finding them. This year the boy was stressing government, politics, and economics and was getting more and more confused every week. His professors, he complained, were doing no more than presenting their subjects and the problems incident to them. Out of nobody could he ever get any answers. They all shot questions at him and then left him to work the answers out for himself. He was in a fog.

We tried to explain to this boy that what he'd run into was the essential difference between university methods and what he'd become accustomed to in the secondary schools, and if he'd hang on and be patient all would be made clear to him in good time. In a college of liberal arts, we told him, no student was taught what to think; just how to. When he got through, he still wouldn't know the answers, but he'd probably possess the crude machinery which, with reading, discussion, and contemplation, would enable him to pick apart many questions and discard most of the wrong answers; might occasionally help him to find the right answer. We suggested he read the first twenty-two pages of the Becker Book, which deal with the state of higher education in America when most colleges took pains to see that none of their students was ever told anything a nice boy shouldn't hear about.

Afterwards, we were pretty sure that nothing we'd said had made the slightest impression; but it cheered us to hope that the boy's education had progressed to a point where he would no longer accept ready-made answers from your reporter or anyone else.

And how can you expect an eighteen-year-old Sophomore to grasp at once the mysteries of education at the University level when so many mature alumni — Trustees even — are concerned about what some professor, whose published views they do not share, may be "teaching" in their own college; when some of the more opulent indicate a willingness to endow professorships abundantly, provided the incumbents teach, as demonstrated truths, the donor's views on the gold standard, free enterprise, and the Hamiltonian philosophy of government?

So many of our Classmates whom we recall as active participants in those important educational exercises known as "bull sessions," in which it was attempted to reconcile divergent views on religion, morals, and the protective tariff, now come back upset over what they've heard somebody has said in a classroom. How about it?

We try to remind these that in our time our more successful professors didn't "teach" us anything; just threw us into the mill of free discussion to come out with whatever happened to stick to us. We suggest that what they'd heard was probably never said and, if it was, it doubtless represented no more than a sentence thrown off in a course which followed the modified pedagogical approach of the bull session.

We try to explain, but with even less luck than we had with that Sophomore! At three score and ten, most men have their own answers and little patience with those of any age who are still groping. It shocks them to learn that there are those in their own University who permit debate on the undebatable and do not put in a hurry call for the FBI when a bull session occasionally gets out of hand. The Trustees, they chant, ought to do something about this!

O, well! There isn't much you can do about men old enough to be your reporter's Classmates. They've salted down all the answers and repel any information that might lead them to go back and check the cornerstones of their ancient faith. They've utterly forgotten the bull sessions of nearly half a century ago in which they tore away at many cornerstones with benefit to themselves, no doubt, and without much lasting damage to the cornerstones.

One must bear alike with the bewildered Sophomore, who thinks he wants his answers ready-made, and with the old fuddy-duddies who don't want their cherished answers tampered with. Campus dwellers must deal tenderly with the Classmates; must remember that an extravagant statement thrown off carelessly in an educational bull session becomes blood-curdling when repeated without its context in the watchful and suspicious shadows of the Union League Club.

"CORNELL HAS BEEN BLESSED in her head men. Andrew D. was probably the greatest American college president of all time."—

Information For Boston Letter from Cornell, May, 1951. In Boston last summer, an alumnus friend challenged me to defend that statement. He wasn't quarrelling with it, but seemed to be looking for ammunition. After all, that was a rather sweeping declaration for a person living in the aura of the late great Harvard president, Charles W. Eliot, to accept!

My impromptu response seemed to satisfy him. I pointed out that Andrew D. White revolutionized higher education in America. He made the scientific study of agriculture and the mechanic arts respectable, but took care to see that the humanities still remained the core of the University. He instituted non-sectarianism, in spite of the outcry that Cornell was a Godless institution. He embraced the elective system. He soon installed co-education. He was a great picker of men. The sum total became Cornell, the prototype of the modern American university; a norm now so well established, so universally copied, that we of today can hardly conceive of its ever having been otherwise. It was no mere happenstance that Stanford and California came to the Cornell Faculty for their first presidents!

I further remarked that other presidents inherited going concerns, with established traditions. Andrew D. started from scratch. It is true, as a Harvard friend of mine later pointed out, that neither did he inherit any dead wood which he had to live with or clean out. I might say that this Harvard friend, who is a profound student of history and a professor at Ursinus College, bolstered my thesis not a little. During World War II, when he was cultural attaché at our Embassy in Rio de Janeiro, he wrote an article on American universities in which he cited White as one of the four greatest American college presidents and possibly the greatest. When a Harvard man calls him "possibly" the greatest, I can certainly use the word "probably!"

Dean Dexter S. Kimball has testified on more than one occasion that Andrew D. was an "extraordinarily persuasive man." With a wondering shake of his head he says, "How he ever got a Regius Professor at Oxford [Goldwin Smith] to come to his undeveloped cow pasture in the wilds of Central New York, I'll never know." He tells with delight of the dedication of Goldwin Smith Hall, where President White recounted his recruitment of Scottish Dr. James Law, founder of our Veterinary College, and then said, "and there he sits now!" He also relishes Andrew D.'s account of his talk with Sibley College's legendary Bobby Thurston: "Before I left I had him!"

Of course, Andrew D. had a part in the development of Cornell's unique relationship with the State of New York, with its mutual sharing of facilities, cross fertilization among different fields of study and research, and with the State supporting those Colleges peculiarly important to its economy which might otherwise languish because of non-appeal to private benefactors.

Inviting outstanding non-resident lecturers, like Louis Agassiz, to Ithaca to supplement the regular staff was a device which, if he did not invent, he employed with telling effect. And think of the mental and spiritual stimulus the Campus has had all these years from the succession of distinguished Sage Chapel Preachers. I mentioned to a summer neighbor of ours, Dr. Karl Reiland, for many years pastor of St. George's Church in New York, that Andrew D. as far back as around 1910 in his Diary praised his Sage sermons. He was really moved at this evocation of memories. A young assistant pastor at the time, he was assigned to the afternoon service there because his superior didn't care much for music, heavily stressed at vespers. Andrew D. loved music, attended St. George's in New York, liked the young minister, and invited him to Ithaca. It became an annual appointment until President Day regretfully had to suspend it because of the age limit.

I find that I never even mentioned our Founder-President's eminence in other fields. His books, Warfare of Science and Theology and Fiat Money in France, are still very influential and much quoted. He was one of the policy-makers in Republican State and national politics. He embellished diplomacy in his service in Russia and then as Ambassador to Germany. He was a key figure in Andrew Carnegie's public-spirited endeavors, notably the Hague Court and world peace. He's still my man in the greatest-American-college-president sweepstakes!

The foregoing was written before President Malott's installation. Its validity is attested to by the frequency with which the example of Andrew D. was evoked in the speeches, notably in Professor Cushman's masterly address. Governor Dewey's presence was also a reminder of the influence of Andrew D. White's six years as professor at University of Michigan under President Tappan. It's pleasant to look back; profitable, too, in lessons drawn for the future. Of course, it's the present and the future that really count. Still glowing from the unforgettable beauty of the scene and the warmth and inspiration of the whole installation ceremony, I look forward with confidence to the University's continued progress and leadership under the captaincy of our present promising candidate for all-American honors, our sixth President.

630 Alumni in Who's Who

630 Alumni in Who's Who

CORNELL RANKS SEVENTH among colleges and universities in number of graduates included in Who's Who in America for 1950-51. This is reported by B. W. Kunkel and D. B. Prentice in the October 20 issue of School and Society. They counted Bachelor's degrees only in their tabulation of the 29,203 college graduates included in the volume. The number of colleges represented is 963.

Cornell has 630 alumni listed for 1950-51, as compared with 413 in 1938-39, the other year reported in the survey. Distribution of the 630 Cornellians by graduation-year periods was: to 1884, 0.3 per cent; 1885-89, 1.1; 1890-94, 5.4; 1895-99, 6.2; 1900-04, 11.1; 1905-09, 16.9; 1910-14, 20.3; 1915-19, 15.3; 1920-24, 13.4; 1925-29, 7.8; 1930-34, 2.1; 1935-39, 0.2.

In the 1950-51 listing, Harvard leads with 1,556 names. Others in the first ten are Yale, with 1,299; Michigan, 754; Princeton, 746; Columbia, 653; US Military Academy, 631; Wisconsin, 585; US Naval Academy, 566; Chicago, 517.

Seek Prospective Trustees

IN PREPARATION for the election of two Alumni Trustees by degree-holders of the University next spring, the Alumni Association committee on Alumni Trustee nominations has asked some 500 officers and directors of the Association's member organizations to suggest possible candidates.

William M. Vanneman '31, chairman of the committee this year, points out that "Its work is intended to supplement—and not to interfere with—the system which permits anyone to be nominated, provided he is sponsored by ten or more degree-holding alumni. Its objects are to bring to the attention of the electorate the names of alumni best qualified to serve the immediate needs of the Board [of Trustees], to eliminate solicitation of votes, and to give each voter an opportunity to cast his ballot solely on the basis of the candidate's ability to serve the University." He says:

"The Committee has carefully considered the personnel needs of the Board as expressed by Board members. On the basis of the information so far gathered, it is the Committee's conclusion that in making recommendations, alumni in the following categories should receive your primary consideration: (1) Public Relations; capable of interpreting and handling public relations, not necessarily in the profession. (2) Business and Industry; of demonstrated executive capacity. (3) Academic; not necessarily a teacher, but with appreciation of the educator's point of view."

"It is to be clearly understood," he continues, "that this list is not exclusive. Any and all names are welcome. . . . When all suggestions have been received, the Committee will thoroughly review all potential candidates' records, both newly submitted and those submitted in past years, then recommend for nomination those people considered qualified to fill the Board's needs for the next five years. . . . We wish to consider only those men and women who are actively engaged and are recognized leaders in their chosen fields. They should have character and integrity that inspire confidence in Cornell. They should have a strong interest in sponsoring higher education and an unselfish devotion to Cornell. They should be willing and able to contribute liberally of their time and abilities. . . ."

Represent All Organizations

Vanneman is with Matthew Bender & Co., Inc., 443 Fourth Avenue, New York City 16. He represents on the committee the Alumni Fund Council. Other present members are Halsey B. Knapp '12 chosen by the Agriculture Alumni Association; Robert B. Lea '15, Society of Engineers; Dr. John E. Sutton, Jr. '15, Medical College Alumni Association; R. Harris Cobb '16, Federation of Cornell Men's Clubs; Frank B. Ingersoll '17, Law Association; H. Cushman Ballou '20, Association of Class Secretaries; Dr. Preston A. Wade '22, Alumni Trustees; Irvin L. Scott '23, Architecture Alumni Association; Frederic C. Wood '24, Alumni Association directors; Mrs. John Vandervort (Helen Bull) '26, Home Economics Alumnae Association; Dr. George H. Hopson '28, Veterinary Alumni Association; Marjory A. Rice '29, Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs; and Henry B. Williams '30, Society of Hotelmen.

Alumni Trustees whose terms expire next June 30 are Matthew Carey '15 and Ruth F. Irish '22. The University Charter provides that any ten or more degree-holders may nominate candidates for Alumni Trustee on or before April 1.

Ballots containing the names of all candidates nominated are thereupon mailed by the Treasurer to all degree-holders of record, and results of the election are announced at the annual meeting of the Alumni Association in Ithaca during Class Reunions in June. The Trustees elected take office July 1 for a five-year term.

Fraternities Pledge 700

MORE THAN 700 students were pledged by fraternities this fall, about 560 of them at the end of two weeks of organized rushing, September 29.

The day bids were handed out in Willard Straight Hall, the Cornell Daily Sun gave rushees some last-minute advice and made a few comments on fraternity rushing. The editorial writer maintained that "two weeks of vicious scrimmage," is neither fair to the Freshmen nor to the fraternities because "neither the rushee nor the fraternity has any real basis for selection." "In addition," he said, "initial rushing attaches high value to fraternity membership; more value, we think, than it deserves, considering the broad picture of Cornell life. Scholarship and activities, the University as a whole and the assimilation of the Freshman Class within the University are made subordinate to the fraternity through the heavy club of initial rushing. A situation which is far from satisfactory deserves considerable study. A new, saner method of fraternity rushing is needed. The new method would mean rushing at a time when the Freshman is given a chance to obtain a more realistic picture of the value of fraternities, and an opportunity to be judged as a Cornellian on his accomplishments here at the University."

It has since been announced that the Faculty committee on student activities would hold at least two hearings, November 14 and 28 and more if necessary, to gather opinions of students, Faculty members, and others of the University on the desirability of deferred rushing by fraternities. A special committee which the Student Council appointed to study the matter was to be heard, along with representatives of the Interfraternity Council and Independent Council and any individuals who wished to appear. The Faculty committee appointed a subcommittee of three Faculty members a year ago, which last spring considered the matter with an Interfraternity Council committee of three Seniors. This fall's hearings were for the further information of the student activities committee before it should come to a decision.

Pledges reported by the fraternities to mid-October are listed below. All are Freshmen unless otherwise designated by Class numerals.

Forty-five Years Ago

November, 1906—The War Department is contemplating a step peculiarly interesting to Cornell University; nothing less than abolishing of military drill in the "land grant" colleges. There have been rumors of such action in years past, and still the Freshmen are drilling. But this time there seems to be a likelihood that drill will be dispensed with, at least in the higher institutions like Cornell, and course of lectures substituted. . . . For presentation in Junior Week, the Masque has accepted a play written by Kenneth L. Roberts '08. It is to be a comic opera ["Panatela"], and the music is now being written in competition by T. J. Lindorff '07 and others. Romeyn Berry '04 is the author of the words of some of the songs.

Thirty Years Ago

November, 1921—The best football team that has gone out of Cornell in years crushed Pennsylvania on Franklin Field Thanksgiving Day by the score of 41-0. . . . What is generally considered the best cross country team that has ever gone out of Cornell won a magnificent victory in the intercollegiate championship race at Van Cortlandt Park, capturing first place with the remarkably low total of 18 points.

Ten Years Ago

November, 1941—The football team wound up its season disappointingly on Franklin Field by losing, 16-0, to Pennsylvania. . . . University Faculty voted that students be allowed to leave the University for 'defense purposes' on and after May 30.

Conduct Diet Tests

REDUCING DIET containing fat has been proved successful with young persons by nutritionists in the School of Nutrition. A new diet, high in protein, moderate in fat, and low in carbohydrates, was developed by Dr. Margaret Ohlson, head of the department of food nutrition at Michigan State College, and is being tested under the direction of Dr. Charlotte M. Young of the University Clinic, in the School of Nutrition. Further research is underway to determine the diet's effects on older age-groups, results of which may not be known for at least a year.

Ten students, averaging twenty to forty pounds overweight, volunteered for the test. They ate at a special diet table in the apartment of Martha Van Rensselaer Hall. After two months, the average loss was eighteen pounds.

The diet, designed to meet fully the nutrient allowances recommended by the food and nutrition board of the National Research Council and with an allowance of 1400 calories a day, allows whole milk with all meals. The old type diet, in which fat was taboo, specified skim milk when it allowed milk at all. Meat of any kind is permissible in two meals a day. Heretofore, pork and other fatty meats were not allowed. One egg, one slice of bread a day, and fruits and vegetables are also included.

Dr. Young stresses the fact that the students did not feel hunger while on the diet. "Fifty per cent of the calories come from fat," she pointed out. "With moderate fat diet, the stomach is able to hold food longer, thus lessening the pangs of hunger."

The students reported feeling better. Some indicated that their skin had cleared and others felt greater vitality. All expressed satisfaction with results of the diet.

The study is made possible with a grant from Trustee Frank E. Gannett '98, who has provided funds for diet research in the School.

Parents Give Memorial

A FUND of $3,000 has been established at the University by George H. Coxe, Jr. '23 and Mrs. Coxe to endow awards for students in American Literature, in memory of their son, George H. Coxe III '53, who died last July as a result of an automobile accident. Income from their gift will be used for George Harmon Coxe Awards in American Literature, given annually to a Sophomore, Junior, or Senior man; one year for excellence in scholarly work or writing, in alternate years for creative work. The gift is from funds which had been set aside for their son's education.

Young Coxe entered Arts & Sciences in 1949 from Phillips Exeter Academy and was especially interested in his study of American Literature with Professor Henry A. Myers, PhD '33, English. In his two years at Cornell, he showed marked talent as a student, played lacrosse, was elected advertising manager of the Widow, was active on committees of the Student Council and Interfraternity Council, and was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon. He was initiated posthumously as a member of Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalism society, to which he had been elected last spring, and the Widow board this fall made him honorary business manager. His car left the road as he was driving to his home in Old Lyme, Conn., from his summer job in a bank in Saybrook; he died July 27.

October issue of the Widow published a tribute to Coxe which said, in part: "... he was to become business manager in February, he was one of the best advertising managers in Widow history, he was one of the two or three Sophomores to be elected to Pi Delta Epsilon, the journalism honorary, last year. About all we can say is that George would have succeeded mightily, both in business and in the social world. He was one of those rare people who excel in whatever they try to do, and who will try anything which needs to be done"

The Library Aids A New Book

By PROFESSOR CURTIS P. NETTELS, HISTORY

THIS SKETCH tells how the University Library helped a member of the Faculty to put the finishing touches to a book.*

A semester's leave of absence enabled me to devote the summer and the fall term to the task of getting the completed manuscript into the hands of the publisher. The work for the book had been going on for ten years. Most of the material had been gathered, largely in libraries outside Ithaca, and much of the preliminary writing had been done. The subject of the book was the part played by George Washington in preparing the way for the Declaration of Independence. The findings of the research had shown pretty conclusively that Washington did more to bring about that historic decision than any other American.

The final work on the study began at the end of the spring term in 1950. By that time, I had acquired quite a large collection of notes, maps, manuscripts, books, and illustrations; all assembled in my personal working quarters. This material had to be used constantly. But at the same time, it was also necessary to consult a large number of books in the Library. There were gaps of information to be filled in, statements in notes that needed to be checked, and loose ends that had to be tied together. It was at this point that the Library and its policies proved to be a godsend. It was far more convenient for me to have at my elbow all the books I needed than to shuttle back and forth continually between the Library and my working quarters.

Four features of the Library made the last stages of the work a pleasure. First, the Library contains a fine collection of books in the field of my subject. In 1871, the University acquired a large part of the private library of Jared Sparks, one-time president of Harvard, the foremost collector of material pertaining to Washington, and one of his leading biographers. This collection includes many rare books and pamphlets that are very difficult to obtain elsewhere. They were especially useful to me because many of them contain notes in Sparks's handwriting which convey the gist of some of his vast knowledge of Washington and his times.

*The title of Professor Nettels's new book is George Washington and American Independence. Published by Little, Brown & Co., it was chosen as the October selection of the History Book Club. Bernard Knollenberg, an authority on Washington, said of it in the New York Times Sunday Book Review, September 30, "... the volume emerges as an exceptionally well-written, interesting, and important book, deserving the wide audience it is likely to attract."

In the second place, the books I wanted were exactly where they were supposed to be in the Library. They were all there, and they were made available to me at a moment's notice. And this brings me to the third point: From the Library staff I received, at all times, the most prompt, efficient, friendly, helpful, and courteous service I have ever encountered in thirty years of work in libraries in many parts of the country and abroad.

And finally, and perhaps most important, the liberal lending policy of the Library enabled me to work with maximum efficiency. There was no limit placed on the number of books I could take out. The staff went to extra trouble to enable me to keep the books as long as I needed them. I was permitted to use exceptionally rare and valuable books with a freedom that I have not met in any other library.

As a result of these favoring conditions, I was able to get together in one room all the books, papers, and materials that I needed for the completion of my volume. For about eight months I was able to work, day and night, without any interruption. Everything I needed was at my finger-tips. Without the Library's fine collection and without its liberal lending policy and its efficient, co-operative service, my book would not be in print today.

Somebody may ask: does such a liberal policy on the part of the Library expose the books to loss and to excessive wear and tear? The reply is that all the books I needed were there, and that most of them were in excellent condition. It seems evident that the liberal policy of the Library implies a sense of confidence in the users of the books, and that this sense has inspired the users, over the years, to justify that faith by giving exceptionally good care to the printed treasures with which they are intrusted.

On The Sporting Side

Lose Two Heartbreakers

CORNELL lost two football games, October 27 and November 3, the first by the incredibly high score of 53-15 to a high-riding Princeton eleven at Palmer Stadium, the other at Ithaca to Columbia by a slim but reminiscent margin of one point, 21-20.

Richard William Kazmaier, Princeton halfback, accomplished a football tour de force the like of which has seldom been seen, as he personally accounted for five touchdowns, passing for three, running for two, and amassing the astounding personal total of 460 yards. He passed seventeen times and completed fifteen and served as a most effective decoy for the running of his teammates, Pivorotto and McNeil. As Jess Abramson wrote in his New York Herald Tribune account: "He did everything. He even scored for Cornell when he was tackled behind his goal-line for a safety by Todd Kolb."

Second Team Beats Princeton Seconds

There was a sell-out crowd of 49,000 people there to see this performance. They remained until the end, too! Princeton's Coach Charles Caldwell was himself so intrigued with the apotheosis rendered by his varsity that he kept it operating for fifty-four minutes of the game. Not until the clock showed six minutes to go and after Coach James had sent in his scrubs and after Caldwell's chief acolyte, Richard Kazmaier, had scored his fifth touchdown and the score was 53-8, did he try out the others. The game was different from that point. The Cornell seconds won over Princeton's, 7-0!

Cornell's score came after left guard Herbert Pick '52 recovered a fumble on the 26-yard line and quarterback John Jaeckel '53 passed to the tall end, Todd Kolb '53, who just made it across the line for Cornell's fourteenth point. William Kirk '52 completed the scoring for the day with a place kick with about four minutes to go.

It was a good game the first half, and even though it ended 20-6, there was hope left that something could be devised to stop Kazmaier and hope, too, that perhaps Cornell's passer, Rocco Calvo '53, would be able to connect as he had in the earlier games. It was not known then that he had hurt his throwing arm. And the second half started as if the hope might be realized, too, but it was short-lived. Kolb spilled Kazmaier for a safety after Cornell had set the Princetons back on their heels with the best defensive play of the day. Stuart Merz '52 ran the kick-off back twenty-five yards to the Princeton 45 and the Cornell stands rocked. They soon quieted as fullback Harold Seidenberg '52 fumbled on the next play from scrimmage. Princeton scored three times in that period and the die was cast.

Princeton Team Great

Although Kazmaier was superb, he had more than adequate help from his offensive teammates and the Princeton defense, although pierced for plenty by Seidenberg, Bill Whelan '53, and Bill Scazzero '52, rushed the injured and harassed Calvo to the point of frustration; and when the passing threat was gone, so was Cornell.

Columbia Passer Repeats

It was a passer who was principally responsible for the Columbia 21-20 victory and this time it was Mitchell Price, the junior who passed his team last year to a 20-19 win in much the same kind of contest.

Columbia has won three of the six one-point games that Cornell has lost since it started playing football, sixty-four years ago. The other one was in 1942 when another great passer, Paul Governali, threw a last-minute touchdown pass from his own 25 on fourth down, thirty-five yards to go for a first down, to win 13-7. Paul Governali is now assisting Coach Little at Columbia, evidently to good effect!

In the 1951 game, though, it was Cornell that was driving in the last minute, after playing its best football of the year for the previous ten minutes, only to have John Jaeckel's pass intercepted to stop the last chance. Lyndon Hull '52 was the expected recipient, but he was neatly brought down by Columbia's defensive left end before reaching the spot on a flagrant interference infraction, but the officials, who otherwise did a splendid job, missed it and a doughty but tardy effort was brought to an end.

Had Cornell started earlier on this

Whelan Gets Away—The Junior halfback from Lynn, Mass., sparked the Cornell team when it came to life in the last ten minutes of the game with Columbia on Schoellkopf Field. He evaded these Columbia tacklers for a twenty-yard run across the goal line in the third quarter, but a penalty for back in motion nullified the touchdown. Veerman '52 cold, snowy day and played all through the way it did the last quarter of the game, the result would have gone the other way, in spite of Mitchell Price. The defense was lackadaisical and gave Price plenty of time to throw and he rarely missed. On the strength of his throwing, Columbia scored the second and third times it had the ball. His favorite target was Wesley Bomm, who caught six. Cornell, on the other hand, stalled time after time at the outset and seemed rather disinterested.

Cornell Catches Fire Late

But Cornell demonstrated its real potential and its real fire in the last ten minutes. Columbia had scored its third touchdown after 4:55 minutes of the last quarter had elapsed and the score was 21-7. Just one minute and six seconds later, Cornell had its second; and four minutes and twenty seconds later, it had its third. The first TD was accomplished in four plays. One was a twenty-five-yard run by William Whelan '53, who was an irrepressible stand-out for the losers. Bill then caught a thirty-two yard Jaeckel pass and after one vain try, Lyndon Hull '52 took it over from the 4.

James Jerome '52 recovered a Columbia fumble by Kermit Tracy on the visitors' 29, three plays after the kick-off, and with Jaeckel passing and Whelan running, the goal was crossed and the score was where it was to stop, at 21-20, when William Kirk '52 missed the point.

The defensive team, tough as it never had been, stopped Columbia during this spurge, and it took the ball away on the 17-yard line with 2:40 minutes left. The play of the day came off here. A deep triple reverse on third down and 10 to go, with Bill Scazzero carrying, brought the ball to the 47-yard line where Scazzero was hit by the last Columbia defender, end Bob Wallace, who not only brought him down but sent him from the game with a slight concussion. On the next play with a minute-and-a-half to go, Jaeckel's pass found its way into Mion's hands instead of Hull's, who was intercepted on the way.

Whelan was great in defeat. His running, his kicking were just too good to waste on a defeat. Had Scazzero not leaned forward too soon on Whelan's abortive 20-yard touchdown run in the third period, the game would not have had to be a defeat. Bill Kirk played well on defense, as did James Quinby '53.

The crowd of 21,000 at this game was the largest in the East. Played in freezing temperature, which plagued the whole Northeast, it was nevertheless on a sound turf, due to the noble efforts of the City of Ithaca's two caterpillar snowplows which cleared six inches of snow from Schoellkopf Field during the morning and right up to game time, aided by a sidewalk plow operated by the Uni-

Early T Formation—Program for the Alumni Homecoming game with Harvard, October 13, carried on its cover this picture of the 1897 Varsity football team, taken on Percy Field. On the line, left to right, are Captain William McKeever '98, Manager Daniel M. McLaughlin '98, Mark R. Faville '01, Layton M. Schoch '98, Daniel A. Reed '98, Archie B. Leuder '99, and Lyndon S. Tracy '97. Quarterback is Charles V. P. Young '99; right halfback, Philip B. Windsor '00; fullback, Christopher W. Wilson '00; left halfback, Allen E. Whiting '98. This was the first Cornell team coached by Glenn S. Warner '94. It beat Colgate, Syracuse, Tufts, Penn State, and Williams; tied Lafayette; and lost to Princeton, Harvard, and Pennsylvania.

Cornell's junior varsity football team fell victim to the potent Princetons, 26-0, at Princeton just before the varsity debacle, October 27. It was a rough contest and the Princeton team just overpowered Cornell. This was the second defeat for the Jayvees, who had lost to Yale, 27-0, the previous week.

Others Lose and Win

THE FRESHMAN football team lost its third game in three starts, to Colgate, 45-7, October 27 at Hamilton. Al Antinelli of Geneva led the Colgate attack with his passing, which netted four of the touchdowns, and his running, which accounted for another, and his kicking, which scored 3 more points. Cornell's score, by Edward Waldon of Lynn, Mass., came with one minute left and climaxed an eighty-yard march.

Playing without benefit of snowplows, the 150-pound football team lost a hard-fought battle to Princeton on lower Alumni Field, November 3, by a score of 6-0. Despite the six inches of snow which covered the field, the Princeton first-period score came on an eighteen-yard pass from Austen to Nalen.

Two other November 3 contests were cancelled because of the weather. The cross country races with Syracuse and sextagonal sailing regatta on Cayuga Lake with Hobart, Adelphia, Cooper Union, Hofstra, and Wagner were called off.

October 27, the cross country team defeated Alfred, 25-32, at Ithaca. This was Alfred's first defeat. Robert Grossman '52 was first. Cornell's other scorers were Robert Robinson '52, fourth; Stephen Pierson '54, fifth; David Pratt '54, seventh; Lester Knapp '52, eighth. Grossman's time for the five-mile course was 28 minutes, 5.5 seconds.

Varsity soccer team played a scoreless tie with Sampson at Ithaca, October 27, and lost to Colgate, 5-1, Friday November 2, at Hamilton. The snow hindered the Ithacans, but it bothered not the Colgate team. The Freshman booters won from Ithaca College, November 2, by a score of 4-2, to offset a 3-2 loss the previous week to Cortland State Teachers junior varsity at Cortland.

The Cornell polo team lost for the second time this year to Akron, 17-15, at the Riding Hall, November 3. Peter R.

Johnson '55 had 5 goals for Cornell; Maurice Houseman '54 and James W. Leaton '53 each made 3.

Fall Week End Goes Well

THE STUDENT POPULATION, under fire from administration, Faculty, and student sources for past misconduct over houseparty week ends, appears to have met a major test successfully. Fall Week End passed without serious disturbance, a happy condition resulting from a sincere effort by fraternities to police and regulate their events (many parties were held under the specific restriction of "no stags") plus the Ithaca weather, which provided two wet, cold days and thus kept people quietly in one place instead of scattering them over the Campus.

First prize in the lighting display contest went to Alpha Chi Rho, which produced an animated sign depicting the beheading of the Columbia Lion to the slogan of "Let 'er Roll, Big Red." Pi Lambda Phi fraternity joined with Alpha Phi sorority to take second prize and Theta Xi placed third. Many fraternities had trouble putting their signs into operation in time for the judging because of the freezing rain which fell Friday.

Komos Aeidein's second annual "Big Red Revue" in Bailey Hall was a substantial improvement over last year's opener, and the organization has a good chance of establishing itself permanently as a source of Fall Week End entertainment.

The Week End appeared headed for financial success as well, since attendance at the Barton Hall dance, featuring the music of Charlie Spivak, was considerably above the 1150 couples calculated by the Week End committee as the minimum needed to avoid a loss. Alan Steinberg '54 was chairman of the committee, which operates under the Student Council.

Room telephones for residents of the dormitories, long a major source of expense, appear to be on the way out. Sage College, currently occupied by men but being prepared for women, and Cascadilla Hall, now a women's dorm, have only corridor phones. Similar arrangements are likely in the other dormitories within a few years.

A Cornell debate team composed of Fraeda Aronovitz '52, president of WSGA, and Barbara Krogulski '53 lost to a team of Harvard men on the topic, "Resolved: That Coeducation Should Be Abolished," the week end of the Harvard game. The Cornellians upheld the affirmative before an audience of about seventy, in Willard Straight Hall, one of the largest audiences attending a debate in recent years. The topic originally agreed upon was, "Resolved: That a Girl Should Choose Death Before Dishonor," but this was changed at the suggestion of the Dean of Men. The Cornell debaters were not too happy at the idea of the substitution, but since they had been having considerable difficulty building a satisfactory case for the affirmative of the dishonor question, they took the change without much grumbling.

The Student Council's block-seating committee and the Glee Club business staff slipped a gear somewhere in the process of allotting tickets for the combined Michigan-Cornell Glee Club concert, November 10. As a result, independent students were not given adequate notification of how they could obtain seats under the block plan. When individual tickets were put on sale, less than 200 tickets were left.

Crusade for Freedom collection boxes on the Campus yielded a total of $271.04. Sphinx Head and Quill and Dagger Senior societies were in charge of the campaign.

William G. Hoffman '52 has been named the outstanding dairy student in the Northeast by the Milk Industry Foundation. He received the award at the Foundation's annual convention in Detroit, Mich., October 25-26.

Demand for tickets to the Michigan game surpassed anything known previously around the Campus. Fraternity members and others able to get tickets relatively painlessly through block seating were unconcerned, but other students began lining up a full sixteen hours early to exchange their AA book coupons for tickets.

Six undergraduates attended the New York Herald Tribune Forum on "Balancing Moral Responsibility and Scientific Progress" at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York City, October 22-24. The six were Leon F. Banigan '53 from the Student Council; Martha L. Ludwig '52, Women's Self-Government Association; Robert W. Beyers '53, W. Fletcher Hock, Jr. '53, and Nancy A. Webb '53, Cornell Daily Sun; and Alison Bliss '52, WSGA and The Sun. Four of these turned up prominently in pictures of the Forum which were printed in the Herald Tribune, October 28.

Traffic jams in the streets around the women's dormitories near the 1:30 a.m. deadline on Saturday nights have long been a source of bitter complaint, both from other motorists eager to be on their way and from students trying to get their dates home on time. In an effort to eliminate some of the confusion, the Deans of Men and Women have suggested a traffic-flow plan intended to keep cars moving one way through the congested zone on Saturday nights. If the Deans could also hatch a plan to regulate the local climate, which has a nasty habit of icing the streets and reducing all traffic-flow patterns to absurdity, they would be well on the road to a genuine solution.

Fraternities and sororities played host to 125 foreign students from forty-three countries for dinner, October 24. Most of the guests were graduate students. The arrangements were made by the foreign students committee of Cornell United Religious Work, with the cooperation of the Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Council.

Sage Chapel is now open to students throughout the day, and a daily meditation period with music and readings has been instituted from 4 to 4:30. The Campus life department of CURW, in cooperation with President Malott and Dean of Women Lucile Allen, arranged the new schedule.

Thirty-four Seniors from the School of Nursing visited the Campus over Fall Week End. The trip has become a yearly event, helping bridge the gap between the Ithaca Campus and the students in New York, most of whom did not attend Cornell before entering the Nursing School.

Sampson Air Force Base band presented a Sunday afternoon concert in Bailey Hall, October 21, under the joint sponsorship of the University Music Department and the Willard Straight Hall music committee.

An unidentified thief made off with over $120 worth of glasses and liquor from a cabinet in the Tau Delta Phi fraternity house, October 14.

The US Ambassador to Thailand, the Hon. Edwin F. Stanton, participated in a graduate seminar on Chinese minority problems in Southeast Asia, October 15. President Malott was host at a luncheon for him at the Statler Club.

Two British students are enrolled in the School of Electrical Engineering for a semester under the Marshall Plan program of academic training. They are Graham Bookler of Sale, Cheshire, and John Hamilton of Nottingham, Kent.

Community Players Gather

NEW YORK STATE Community Theatre Association annual meeting at the University, October 19-21, brought more than two hundred thirty-five State community theater groups and visitors from Canada, Wisconsin, New Jersey, and Virginia.

President John C. Adams '26 of Hofstar College, formerly of the English Department, gave a University lecture the first evening, on "Shakespeare's Stage." The following afternoon, Professor Walter H. Stainton '19, Executive Director of the University Theatre, discussed solutions to community theater housing problems and that night the Cortland Community Players presented "See How They Run." Philip King's gay farce that takes place in a vicarage in England was well received by the audience of delegates and townspeople which packed the Willard Straight Theatre. Howard S. Cogan '50 was good in his role of an Army corporal.

Professor Mary E. Duthie, Rural Sociology, is executive secretary of the State Association.

'86 MS—William S. Turner and Mrs. Turner, of 3252 N. E. Irving Street, Portland, Ore., celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary, May 19, 1951.

'98—The Class of '98 had a Reunion dinner at the Cornell Club of New York on Monday evening, October 8. Andrew E. Tuck, who sent out the notices to the members of the Class, read very interesting and illuminating letters from nineteen members who were unable to attend. The Class holds Reunion dinners at the Cornell Club of New York twice each year. The next will be on Monday evening, May 5, 1952. During the dinner there were many reminiscences of past years and the present fine football team. Frank Gannett spoke in glowing terms of the new President, Deane Malott, and of the new and worthwhile developments at Cornell. Those in attendance were Wilton Bentley, Frank E. Gannett, John J. Kuhn, Andrew J. MacElroy, Fred W. Midgley, William M. Smith, Andrew E. Tuck, and Allen E. Whiting.—A.J.M.

'01 ME—After forty-five years, Frank D. Newbury, 577 Briar Cliff Road, Pittsburgh 21, Pa., has retired as vice-president of Westinghouse Electric Co. He has written two books: The American Economic System, an economics text, was published in 1950 by McGraw Hill, and Business Forecasting will be out in February, 1952. Newbury has been doing some work in business and price forecasting.

'05 AB—A cruise, a new Club office, and three grandsons, are "in the news" of Arthur D. Camp, 56 Hughes Avenue, Rye. Recently elected to the board of governors of the Cornell Club of Westchester County, Camp joined James C. Forbes '37 and Arthur J. Wullschlegler '40, skipper of the sloop Ruge, for a Nantucket-to-Larchmont cruise in July. His three grandsons are Tory (seventeen) and David (fifteen) Horton, in Peekskill, and Curtis, six, son of Richard C. Camp '34.

'06 AB, '08 LLB—Charles F. Landmesser and Mrs. Landmesser (Jane Cheney) '06 have returned to 801 Hollingswood Road, Lakeland, Fla., after spending the summer at their home in Searsport, Me. On their way south, the Landmessers visited their son, Dr. Charles M. Landmesser '39, and his family in Loudonville.

Rosevear, and Herbert E. Mitler.

The next meeting will be held at the same place, December 13. Any members of the Class who are in New York at that time would be more than welcome to attend. Send communications to Herbert E. Mitler, 505 Fifth Avenue, New York City 22. —H.E.M.

'09 ME—Seth G. Malby, product manager of The Aluminum Company of America, Edgewater, N.J., has moved to the country. The Malbys have a kennel of Scottish terriers, and are active in raising and judging. Their new address is Pulis Avenue, Campgaw, Borough of Franklin Lakes, N.J.

1910 MEN I. Ellis Berhman (above) runs a hospital now. He is executive director of the Beth Israel Hospital of Newark, N.J. After all he's been through in this country and abroad since graduating from the College of Civil Engineering in 1910, most of his Classmates would naturally think that the man's chief interest in hospitals would be to pick himself a nice quiet room in a good one, get into bed, and just rest there for years and years. But Berhman isn't that kind of a man.

Up to the time that World War I reached out and took him, Ike practiced as a municipal engineer engaged mostly with problems of water supply, sewage disposal, and highway construction. Then in 1917 the US Engineer Corps commissioned him a lieutenant, took him away for service in the AEF, and in 1919 discharged him as a major. But he was not to come home for another six years. Immediately upon his discharge from the Army, he was appointed a member of the Technical Advisory Commission (at that time headed by Herbert Hoover) and stationed in Czechoslovakia with headquarters at Prague where, until 1925, he was constantly engaged with the exchange of capital goods between and among Yugoslavia and Poland. After that experience with the animosities which prevailed in Central Europe, he came home to regard the worst conditions in America as relatively sweet, decent, and kindly.

Freed from public duties in 1928, Berhman became engineer in charge of construction for L. Bamberger & Co. of Newark, N.J., and later its chief engineer. While so engaged, he was elected a trustee of the Beth Israel Hospital and his intense interest in that institution led to his becoming its executive director.

The Berhmans live at 36 South Munn Avenue, East Orange, N.J. They have no children. Ike's office address is 210 Lyons Avenue, Newark 8. Ellis is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, holds the honorary degree of Doctor of Engineering, and gives "Fish" as his hobby.

'11 ME—Stanley B. Kent has retired after forty years service, mostly as patent attorney, with Bell Telephone Laboratories in New York City. He lives at 3 Summit Road, Port Washington.

'11 BArch—Raymond B. Spencer has practiced architecture since 1912, and has designed many churches and other public buildings in Southern States from Florida and North Carolina to California. "I have one wife, one son, one daughter, one grandson, and one wire-haired terrier," he writes. His address is First National Bank, Memphis, Tenn.

'12 ME—Cornelius H. Evans III, 4157 East Burns Street, Tucson, Ariz., is the grandfather of twin girls born April 5, 1951, to his daughter, Mrs. William C. Macey, Jr. of Tucson.

'12—Rudolf M. Triest, 29 Washington Square West, New York City 11, has retired from John Wiley & Sons, publishers of scientific books, because of poor health.

1913 MEN Always the one to throw a light-hearted challenge at fate, Robert F. Corley, 77 Loomis Place, New Haven, Conn., broadcasts: "I retired September '50; if that interests anyone except me." It sure does. Lots of us would like to know how it's done. Quite a few '13ers have preceded Bob into retirement and the underground whispers of a number of others are slated to go, but most of us have to stagger along under the yoke. However, Bob was ever the genial, sympathetic guy who in student days announced in his carefree way, "I've got 30 cents in the bank. Now I'm going up the Hill to learn how Uncle Sam worries along on $700 million a year." Shades of the day when the word "billion" was something applied only to light-years and not to budgets. Now the 30 cents ain't got no standing in court at all and Uncle Sam worries over $700 million only from Sunday to Wednesday of one week.

Bob has maintained a very close and happy friendship with Classmate Dudley Ingraham, who is Big Brass in E. Ingraham Co., manufacturers of clocks at Bristol, Conn. Dud sent along a very cordial note of regret (two engagements and a directors' meeting) to the Pre-Reunion Dinner Committee last May. "I would have enjoyed very much meeting my Classmates in New York, for I must admit having seen few of the gang since graduating nearly forty years ago." You'll see a heap of them in June '53, so mark that calendar and get them director meetings disposed of beforehand!

In 1948, Sheldon E. Brink, who lives in Walton, retired from school teaching but now he is at it again; teaching advanced Veterans Administration course. Maybe there is some connection between the veterans and his having been interested in guns in school days (Rifle Club, Varsity Rifle Team), but the two grandsons came in due course.

At New Paltz, Edgar V. Beebe rang down the curtain July 1 on his career as professor of education, State Teachers College, but continues in the elective office of justice of the peace. A few months before his retirement, grandson Richard Willson Beebe was born to Edmund W. Beebe '40 and Priscilla Davis Beebe. The grandson is a nephew of Kathryn Beebe Towner '44 of Mohawk Lake. Richard makes Edgar a grandfather a second time.

Ultimate retirement came suddenly, March 1, to Jesse R. Howland at 37 North Main Street, Bainbridge. His passing was a great shock to the family. In reporting the sad news, Mrs. Howland graciously sent sincere good wishes for a happy Reunion to all.

'14 AB—H. W. Peters announces the opening of offices at 37 Wall Street, New York City, as consultant in fund raising and public relations for non-profit organizations. Secretary of his Class and former Provost and Secretary of the University, he has been vice-president of John Price Jones Co.

During late September and early October, he visited his home town of Kinderhook in the course of a business trip to Washington, D.C.

'16 AB—A delegate at the convention of the National Association of Life Underwriters in Los Angeles during the week of September 17, Allan W. Carpenter was installed as president of the Buffalo Life Underwriters, September 28. His home is at 101 Conneticut Street, Buffalo 13.

'16—Robert A. Dahn is now living at 219 Greymon Drive, West Palm Beach, Fla., and is with Harris, Upham & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, in Palm Beach. Dahn writes that he would be very glad to see any of his Cornell friends who are Florida visitors.

'17 AB—Formerly with the Norwalk, Conn., office of Fish & Marvin, Brandreth Symonds, Jr. has joined the firm of Van Riper & De Veaux in Wilton, Conn. His address is Silvermine Road, Norwalk.

'14 Men—Some forty-five 'Fourteeners gathered at the Cornell Club of New York the night before the Yale game for the annual area dinner of the Class, and a good time was had by all. Bill Upson presided wittily, among other things establishing a record of 4.7 seconds in getting the story of the two Irishmen out of the way. Selly Brewer '40 made a hit with his remarks, and with the new "Spring in Ithaca" movie. Norbert Fratt '28 of Seattle and his undergraduate son, Poe, were with us long enough so that Poe, who is a National Scholar and a (presently sidelined with injuries) football player, could tell us something about the squad. Harold Riegelman was called upon for a message about civic betterment in New York, but instead told a story with Chicago as its locale, a story with which I have since had considerable success in civic circles in Ithaca. Walter Addicks was the leading spirit in arranging the affair. He was called away on business, but Norm Kappler, Frank Rees, and others carried on in his absence. Carl Ward was scheduled as the orator of the evening, but he had to be absent on urgent University business so your correspondent told of the subtle distinction between a substitute and a pinch-hitter, as defined by former Varsity baseball captain, Les Clute '13, and then proceeded to demonstrate the point.—Emerson Hinchliff

'18 BS—80 East Jackson Boulevard, Chicago 4, Ill., is the address of Thomas R. Wagner as new regional sales manager for The Budd Co. in Chicago. For the last five-and-a-half years, he handled the same work for them in New York City.

1920 MEN

1 Romeo played a matinee
On a sunny stage, a summer's day—

The part was long, his throat grew dry—
So he had some Ballantine by and by;

Then sighed "M'llove, I'll stay down here,
I've lost my heart to this fine beer.

"Odds bodkins, I have yet to savor Beer with such ambrosial flavor!"

"He means It Tastes Better!"

Ballantine brews for flavor.
For lightness, yes.
For dryness, of course.
But first and last—

Hottest thing in the skies

JET AND ROCKET SHIPS top them all for high flying speeds—and searing engine temperatures!

Zooming through the air at speeds far faster than sound, their engines generate heat that would soften any ordinary steel.

Special alloy steels to withstand the terrific heat and pressure of the jet powered engines are made by adding such alloying metals as chromium, tungsten and vanadium. Not only in aviation but in almost every field alloy steels are on the job.

Our automobiles and ships are safer and stronger because of the alloy steels used in them. The gleaming, streamlined trains in which we ride get their combination of beauty, strength and lightness from steel made tough and stainless by the addition of chromium.

Furnishing steel makers with alloys essential to the manufacture of special steels is but one of the important jobs of the people of Union Carbide. They also provide the giant carbon and graphite electrodes for the electric arc furnaces which are used to make many of these fine steels.
