TABLE OF CONTENTS

Biographical Sketch iii
Dedication iv
Acknowledgements v
Table of Contents viii
List of Examples x
List of Figures xiv
List of Tables xvii

Part One
Genre and Performance

I. The Canzonet
   An Encounter on the First Page of The Sun 1
   Definitions and Reception 2
   Contemporary References: Authenticity and Domesticity 11
   Gendering the Genre 25

II. Public and Private “Moral Sentiment” and “Physical Truth”: The Upstairs and Downstairs of Anne and John Hunter 35
   Separate Spheres as Critical Heuristic 44
   The Staircase Flattened: Shared Spheres in Late
      Eighteenth-Century London 55

Part Two
Canzonets Under the Clinical Gaze: Embodiment and Death

III. Sighs
   Sighing Beauty in the Staircase 66
   “A Pastoral Song” 71
   Sighing Out the Canzonet 75

IV. Body Parts in Captivity
   Pathologizing Women 102
   “Despair” 109

V. (Undying) Death
   Downstairs Death, or, Death’s Uncertainty 115
   “Fidelity” 128
   Upstairs Death, or, Death’s Muse 136

viii
Part Three
Singing the Hours: Time and Memory

VI. Singing the (New) Hours 156
   Death an Outcome of Time 157
   Making Time: The Aftermath of the Horological Revolution 168
   Time and / as Love 173
   Productive Time 197
   Ladies’ Watches and the Futility of Fashion 213

VII. Singing the (Old) Hours 224
   Writing Time Past 224
   “Recollection” 233
   “The Clock Still Points Its Moral to the Heart”: The Pleasures
   and Powers of Memory 241
   “Pleasing Pain” 251

Part Four
Afterlife

VIII. Haydn’s Canzonets in Nineteenth- and Twentieth-Century
      Transformations 260

Appendix. Catalog of English Canzonets, 1770-1820 280

Bibliography 293