

Council Review Committee Named Will Look at Future of Governance

President Frank Rhodes has announced the selection of committee members to serve on the Third-Year Review Committee of the Campus Council.

In accordance with the charter of the Campus Council, a third-year review and evaluation of the council is scheduled for 1979-80.

Committee members are:

Presidential appointments: Donald Holcomb, chairperson, professor of physics; Joan R. Egner, associate dean of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences and professor of education.

Faculty appointments: David L. Ratner, professor of law; Walter R. Lynn, professor of environmental engineering/civil environmental engineering; Ronald Donovan, professor of Industrial and Labor Relations.

Committee on Committees/Student Trustee appointments: Nancy J. Koch '80, ILR; Nancy E. Huntington '82, ILR; Brad I. Markowitz '80, Arts and Sciences; E. Schuyler Flansburgh '80, Arts and Sciences and Engineering.

Committee on Committees/Employee Trustee appointments: Mildred Sherwood, administrative supervisor in the Graduate School; Thomas Greweling, lab operations manager in agronomy; Scott Robinson, storekeeper, Noyes Lodge.

William D. Gurowitz, vice president for campus affairs, will serve as consultant to the committee.

At its Sept. 20 meeting, the Campus Council discussed and approved an amended form of the draft.

Included in the amendments was the following: "Within constituencies, any member of the Cornell community except for 1979-80 members of the Council or the Board of Trustees or the Committee on Committees shall be eligible to serve on the Committee."

Under the terms of that amendment, Flansburgh, a student trustee, and Huntington, a member of the Committee on Committees, must resign their respective positions. (Flansburgh has since withdrawn his application to the Third Year Review Committee. See related story page 2.)

Veterinarians Cure a King's Horses Morocco Calls for, and Gets, Cornell's Help

When 15 of the King of Morocco's prize thoroughbred horses suddenly became gravely ill, the king turned to experts at the State College of Veterinary Medicine, who solved the problem.

The college's Equine Research Program is known for its multi-disciplinary team of specialists in disorders of the horse.

On Sept. 21, a clinician, a parasitologist, a toxicologist, a neurologist and a pathologist met with College Dean Edward C. Melby Jr. to discuss what appeared to be a mass poisoning of the king's horses.

Dr. John Lowe, clinician, and Dr. John King, pathologist, left for Morocco the next day to conduct an on-site investigation at the royal stables at Haras Royal, Sale.

Drs. Lowe and King found the common thread in the history of all 15 horses to be a widely used worm medicine. The first horse was affected in late August after being wormed with the drug—although 11 other mature horses wormed at the same time showed no ill effects. On Sept. 13, 15 more horses were wormed with the medicine, and 14 of the 15 began to show severe central nervous system signs including uncoordinated movements, staggering, stiff fore limbs and difficult or painful breathing. Two horses died.

By the time the Cornell veterinarians arrived, several of the horses had developed founder (laminitis), a painful inflammation of the hoof that is often accompanied by rotation of the pedal bone in the horse's foot. Founder, while not well understood, is believed to be a local manifestation of a more generalized metabolic disturbance.

Although they could not find a specific causative agent in the worm medicine, Drs. Lowe and King concluded that a reaction to the drug, or perhaps to the drug in combination with some factor such as an unusual plant in the pasture area, was the probable cause of the outbreak.

They recommended that the offending batch of worm medicine be discarded, that the animals be bedded on wet sand, that the most severely affected animals be fitted with corrective shoes, and that other symptomatic treatments be started or continued.

In mid-October the Cornell veterinarians learned from the Moroccan consulate in New York City that all 13 surviving horses were recuperating. One probably will be used only for breeding because of a severe rotation of its pedal bone—the result of its bout with founder. The other 12, however, were not permanently crippled by the disease, and most, if not all of them, probably will race again.

Cornell to Aid Rural Schools State Program to Be Established Here

A Rural Schools Program will be established at Cornell in response to problems and recommendations discussed at a statewide conference on rural education in New York State, in Albany a year ago.

Participants felt rural schools had not been adequately represented in the decisions made at the state level, although one-third of the school population in New York lives in rural areas, according to the Council on Rural Education.

The October 1978 conference steering committee asked the Department of Education at the State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences to establish a program to provide leadership to guide rural schools in coping with educational changes in the 1980's.

The RSP advisory committee, headed by Joe Bail, chairman of the Department of Education at the college, now is searching for a director for the new program.

Benefits Enrollment Cards Due

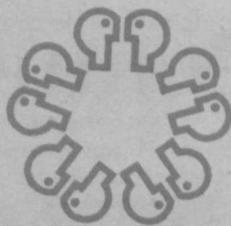

Nov. 1 Is Deadline for Signups

All regular full- and part-time employees are reminded to return their benefits enrollment cards to University Personnel Services. Cards and other materials should have been received by all employees on Oct. 11 or soon thereafter.

Any employee who did not receive an enrollment packet is urged to contact the Benefits Division, University Personnel Services, at 6-3936.

Full information on the new fringe benefit program is in that packet. Major points of the new program are:

1. All regular full- and part-time employees are covered for 1/2 X salary of basic life insurance, including statutory benefit programs, at no cost to them.
2. Optionally, employees may enroll in supplemental life insurance equal to 1 1/2 or 3 X salary, in addition to the coverage mentioned above, at low group rates. For statutory and extension employees, supplemental coverage is in addition to other benefits from state or federal plans.
3. A Long-Term Disability Program, guaranteeing a monthly income and pension benefits is an automatic part of the new benefits package. The cost of the mandatory coverage is shared by the employee and Cornell. Statutory and extension employees pay for this coverage only when they are not covered by a New York state or federal retirement program.

The chart at right shows, in brief, the new benefit program scheduled to become effective on Jan. 1, 1980.

Q & A

Several questions were asked frequently by employees attending informational meetings on the new benefit plans during the week of Oct. 15. Some of those questions and the answers offered by University Personnel Services are listed below:

Group Life Insurance Plan

Q Since the personal accident provision of the old group life plan is being eliminated, does that mean that I'll have no life insurance if I died in an accident?

A No, cause of death is not a factor in determining the availability or amount of insurance coverage. You will be covered by your Group Life Insurance if you die by any cause whatever, with no exceptions.

As an additional option, employees may elect Voluntary Accidental Death and Dismemberment Insurance. This plan can provide coverage in the event of accidental death or dismemberment for you and your family in addition to the new Group Life coverage or any other coverage which might be in effect. For more details, please contact the Benefits Office, 6-3936.

Q If I elect supplemental life insurance coverage, is that in addition to my basic 1/2 X salary coverage provided at no cost?

A Yes. For instance, if you chose the additional 3X your salary supplemental coverage, you would have a total of at least 3 1/2 X your annual salary in life insurance coverage. If you are a statutory employee, some, or all of the 1/2 X salary basic coverage may be provided by the New York State Employees' Retirement System, while the entire 3X salary would be provided by the Cornell Group Term Life Insurance Plan.

Q If I don't want supplemental life insurance, should I still send in my enrollment card?

A Yes. It is necessary to send in a completed enrollment card and

NEW BENEFITS PLANS

	BASIC LIFE INSURANCE	SUPPLEMENTAL LIFE INSURANCE	LONG-TERM DISABILITY
Enrollment:	Automatic	Optional	Mandatory and automatic if eligible
Cost to You:	None	+ Low Group Rates	+ Shared with Cornell
Coverage:	One-half times annual salary	+ One and one-half times annual salary OR three times annual salary	+ Long-term Disability; monthly income; pension build-up make sure you elect a beneficiary and sign the back of the card for the basic 1/2 X salary portion of the Group Life Insurance Plan.

Q I'm a statutory employee. If I elect supplemental (1 1/2 or 3 X salary life insurance coverage) will it be offset by my coverage under the New York State or Federal Retirement Systems?

A No. Only the basic life coverage (1/2 X your annual salary) may be offset by your New York state or Federal Retirement System benefits.

Long Term Disability

Q How do I sign up for Long Term Disability?

A The enrollment card for the Group Life Insurance Plan also serves to enroll you in the Long Term Disability (LTD) Plan if you are eligible for it.

Q How do I know if I'm eligible for LTD?

A All endowed employees and those statutory employees who are in TIAA/CREF are eligible for LTD. Other statutory employees will be covered by the new LTD plan only until they are eligible for disability benefits under the New York state or Federal Retirement System. If you are eligible, you will automatically be enrolled when you sign your enrollment card.

Additional group meetings explaining the benefits changes can be arranged by calling E. Peter Tufford, benefits specialist, at 6-3936.

Council Confirms Committee Conflict

At its meeting last week the Campus Council reaffirmed its position that members of the current council, the Committee on Committees and the Board of Trustees have an irreconcilable conflict of interest in serving on the Third Year Review Committee.

In accordance with the finding, Student Trustee E. Schuyler Flansburgh '80, who was selected as a member of the Third Year Review Committee, has withdrawn his application to the committee.

In other action taken the council voted to recommend to Provost W. Keith Kennedy that he amend the 1980-81 academic calendar and all academic calendars for the 1980s to provide for a block of uninterrupted study days before final examination.

Kennedy recently announced a University calendar, which starts in 1980-81, that includes interspersing study days with final exams. The council also voted to recommend to the administration that it not implement its current plan to erect a safety barrier on Cascadilla Bridge and that it undertake a detailed planning study of alternative safety barriers.

A recent CAMPOLL survey, which included questions concerning Cascadilla Bridge barriers and the calendar, revealed that students were clearly in Favor of an unbroken study period. Faculty and employees showed a slight preference for interspersal of exam and study days.

On the question of safety barriers on Cascadilla Bridge, the survey revealed that there was an overwhelming preference to keep the bridge as it is.

The survey also revealed that those polled preferred the placement of safety nets under the bridge to the placement of a metal barrier on top of the bridge.

Council chairperson Peter E. Cooper '80 announced that there would be an open hearing on the proposed reorganization plan for the Division of Campus Life from 4 to 5 p.m. today in 701 Clark Hall. The regular council meeting scheduled for today will start at 5 p.m. instead of 4:45 p.m.

Items on the agenda include discussion of the reorganization proposal for the Division of Campus Life and a discussion of a proposal concerning the establishment of a standing subcommittee of the Committee on Committees.

The subcommittee would be responsible for the selection of members of the presently self-selecting committees such as the Student Finance Commissions, Willard Straight Hall Board, North Campus Union Board and Noyes Center Board.

CONFERENCES

Arms Race Is Topic for CURW's 50th Anniversary

"The Arms Race and Its Implications for Our Campuses" is the title of a conference being held in conjunction with the 50th anniversary of Cornell United Religious Work. The two-day conference is Thursday and Friday, Oct. 25-26, in Anabel Taylor Hall.

Registration fee for the conference is $10. Students will be admitted free.

CURW, founded in 1929 by Richard Henry Edwards, grew out of the Student Christian Association. It included all groups of the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths. Today, 20 national and international religious groups are members of CURW, including Eastern Orthodox, Muslim and Baha'i.

George Quester, chairman of Cornell's government department and director of the Peace Studies Program, and Betty Lall, senior executive in the School of Industrial and Labor Relations and U.S. delegate to the United Nations Disarmament Committee, will be the main speakers.

Quester will speak at 2:30 p.m. Thursday in the Founders Room on "Is Immorality Necessary for Peace?"

Lall will speak at 9:30 a.m. Friday, also in the Founders Room on "Prosperity Without Guns."

A series of workshops is scheduled for 11 a.m. on Friday.

Workshop leaders and their topics are: Cora Weiss, director, Disarmament Program, Riverside Church in New York City, "Strategy and Tactics for Organization;" Gordon Feller, Institute for World Order, New York City, "Education;" Thomas Boudreau, Cruise Missile Control Project, Syracuse, "Direct Action;" Wendy Mogy, New

Manhattan Project, New York City, "Soviet Threat;" and Lall, "Arms Economy."

The workshops will be repeated at 2 p.m.

For registration and information, call the CURW office at 256-4214.

"Cornell United Religious Work came to life as an organization in 1929. Its origins go back, however, to the special way that religion developed out of the non-sectarian beginnings of Cornell," according to W. Jack Lewis, director.

When Ezra Cornell and Andrew Dickson White founded Cornell in 1869, they insisted the University not be formally associated with any religious group.

However, four months after the University opened, 12 students organized the Young Men's Christian Association. In 1872, when women began to be admitted to the University, the name was changed to the Christian Association, a change made to allow women to join.

There was no official chaplain and no required attendance at religious services.

Although the Christian Association had a Protestant membership, it encouraged cooperation between dominations and stressed the need to bring religious ideals to the whole of life.

Cooperative religion continued to grow through the years and in 1929 CURW was founded by Edwards, who was invited by the University in 1919 to head what was still called the Christian Association.

Edwards felt there was a need for interreligious harmony and insisted he would take the position of executive secretary only if religious groups "were willing to embark on a real experiment in cooperative religion."

In 1929 Hillel Foundation was formed on campus and in that same year the Protestant membership of the united program (Presbyterian, Baptist, Congregationalist, Episcopal and Methodist) expanded to include the Newman Club for Catholics, which already existed, and Hillel Foundation for Jewish students.

Cooperative religion and pastoral care for the University community have been hallmarks of CURW. But also, social service (e.g. CIVITAS) and social action in behalf of justice, equality and peace have characterized the ongoing united religious work. This has been intensified in recent years because of CURW's close relationship to its collegial partner in Anabel Taylor Hall, the Centre for Religion, Ethics and Social Policy (CRESP).

Four-Part Series to Explore Mormon History

Cornell, located near the geographic center of events that led to the organization of the Mormon Church in America 150 years ago, will be the scene of a four-part series on Mormonism beginning Oct. 30.

"Scholarly Perspectives on Mormonism after 150 Years" is the general topic of lectures scheduled Oct. 30, Nov. 19 and Dec. 3. On April 30, 1980, the series will end with a conference on "Contemporary Approaches to Mormon History."

Prior to April 6, 1830, when the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the official name of the Mormon Church, was organized by Joseph Smith, he traveled through Ithaca several times.

Smith's parents lived in Palmyra, N.Y., and his in-laws and a number of supporters lived in Harmony, Pa., south of Binghamton. The route from Palmyra to Harmony, where he and others were involved in the translation and preparation for publication of the Book of Mormon, was through Ithaca.

The Book of Mormon was published in Palmyra. The Mormon Church was founded in Fayette, N.Y., at the north end of Cayuga Lake.

A number of researchers on American religions in general and Mormonism in particular have studied early records in the Ithaca area.

One of them, R. Laurence Moore, professor of history at Cornell, will be the first series speaker at 4:30 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 30, in Kaufmann Auditorium of Goldwin Smith Hall. His topic will be "Mormon Outsiders and the American Mainstream in Historical Narrative."

Moore has done extensive research on religions in America in the 19th century. His book on spiritualism, "In Search of White Crows," is regarded as a landmark in that field.

The second lecture, "Joseph Smith and the Apocalyptic Tradition," will be presented at 1:25 p.m., Monday, Nov. 19, in Kaufmann Auditorium by C. Wilfred Griggs, assistant professor of classics at Brigham Young University. Griggs has recently completed a book on Egyptian Christianity up to 450.

Bruce W. Jorgenson, professor of English at Brigham Young, will speak on "The Book of Mormon as Typological Narrative" at 4:30 p.m., Monday, Dec. 3, in Kaufmann Auditorium.

Jorgenson, who earned his Ph.D. at Cornell, was one of the first scholars to engage in a literary analysis of the Book of Mormon. His poetry and literary criticism has been published also.

Three authors who have written often on Mormonism—L.J. Arrington, R.L. Bushman and Jan Shippo—will be the main participants in the April conference.

The lecture series is being sponsored by the University Committee on Lectures, the Religious Studies Committee, the Society for the Humanities and the departments of history and English.

Scholars to Discuss 17th Century Absolutism

American and French scholars will present five public lectures on a unique period of European history, the 17th century, the week of Nov. 5 at Cornell.

"The Cornell community will have a rich and unusual opportunity to learn about one of the most fascinating phenomena of Western civilization, the absolutism of the 17th century," according to Daniel A. Baugh, associate professor of English history at Cornell.

After a long period of political instability and social and cultural chaos, European leaders in the 17th century envisioned a new system of control that they called absolutism. By absolutism they meant a world that would be subject to rules and that would conform to a pattern meant to enhance the leaders' glory and power.

The lectures at Cornell will be given daily by scholars from other universities who are working in the field of absolutism in the 17th century.

Lecturers will be Jean Alter of the University of Pennsylvania, Guy Walton of New York University, Yves-Marie Berce of the University of Limoges in France, Orest Ranum of the Johns Hopkins University and Derek Hirst of Washington University.

Four of the five lectures will be given in the Hollis Cornell Auditorium of Goldwin Smith Hall.

On Nov. 5, 6 and 7, the lectures there will be at 4:15 p.m. The Nov. 9 lecture will be at 4:30 p.m.

The Nov. 8 lecture will be at 8:15 p.m. in Kaufmann Auditorium of Goldwin Smith Hall.

There will be a public colloquium on the absolutist state at 12:15 p.m., Nov. 9, in Room 202 Uris Hall. Participants will be Berce, Hirst, Ranum, Baugh, Colin Brooks, visiting associate professor of history at Cornell, and Steven Kaplan, associate professor of European history at Cornell.

The main focus of the series is the absolutist state that arose in France, with particular emphasis on the reign of Louis XIV, the Sun King. The absolutizing tendencies of other European countries at the time will also be discussed.

"In this series absolutism is seen not merely as a constitutional phenomenon, but also a cultural one, involving literature, art, architecture, law, customs and political culture in the broadest sense," Baugh said.

Alter, professor of Romance languages at Penn, will deliver the first lecture on "Writing Under the Sun." He has published several books on anti-bourgeois literature in Old Regime France.

Walton, professor of fine arts at NYU, will present an illustrated lecture on Nov. 6 on "Versailles:

Seat of Power, Work of Art." He has published a number of articles on 17th century French sculpture and is working on a book on Versailles.

Berce, professor of modern history at Limoges, will discuss "Order and Disorder: 'Acculturation' of Law in 17th century France." Berce is an internationally known historian for his work on popular uprisings in France from the 16th to the 19th centuries.

"Berce is coming here from France," Kaplan said. "We are especially delighted that he could arrange the visit."

Ranum, professor of history at Johns Hopkins, will deliver the one evening lecture on "Absolutism and the Death of Political Discourse in France." He is well-known among historians in this country for his writings on society, government and politics in 17th century France.

Hirst will speak Friday on "Power and the Early Modern English State." He has written extensively on both court and electoral politics in early 17th century England.

Faculty to Consider Investments Special Committee Proposed

A special meeting of the Review and Procedures Committee of the University Faculty will be scheduled within a week or so to consider establishing an ad hoc committee "to study the behavior of companies in which Cornell holds equity, particularly in respect to companies operating in South Africa," according to Dean of Faculty Kenneth Greisen.

A special meeting of the faculty was conducted Oct. 17 for the same purpose. However there were only 61 faculty present, 14 short of the required quorum. The 61 present did vote unofficially and unanimously in support of the establishment of such a committee.

As a result of a faculty referendum which had already been in process at the time of the meeting the Review and Procedures Committee now has the power to establish ad hoc committees based on an amendment to the Organization and Procedures of the University Faculty. That amendment was passed by a mail-in vote of 482 (yes) to 26 (no). Voting closed Monday afternoon. The amended sections of OPUF now read:

VII-A-4. There shall be such other standing committees of the University Faculty as may be created by the Faculty and ad hoc committees as may be created by the Faculty or the Review and Procedures Committee. The Review and Procedures

Committee must designate the procedures for establishing the membership of any ad hoc committee it creates.

VII-C-2. Except as otherwise provided in the legislation or resolution creating the same, or except as reappointed by the University Faculty or the Review and Procedures Committee, each ad hoc committee shall automatically expire at the end of the academic year.

X-B-3. Such other standing and ad hoc committees and subcommittees, elective or appointive, as may be established by the Council of Representatives. The Executive Committee may also establish ad hoc committees and subcommittees.

Music

The University Glee Club under the direction of Thomas A. Sokol, professor of music and director of choral music, will present its annual Homecoming Concert at 8:15 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 3, in Sage Chapel.

The Homecoming Concert program will be a preview of the Glee Club's upcoming winter tour of the southwestern United States. Works by Palestrina, Bruckner, Liszt and Toch, as well as folk songs arranged by Marshall Bartholomew and the popular songs of Cornell will be performed.

Since its founding in 1868, the Glee Club has traveled extensively throughout the United States and abroad. Its international tours have included performances in 24 countries.

The Glee Club has performed with many major American orchestras, including the Philadelphia Orchestra under the direction of Michael Tilson Thomas. Last spring the club performed with the Eastman Wind Ensemble "An American Te Deum," by Pulitzer Prize Winner Karel Husa, the Kappa Alpha Professor of Music at Cornell.

Tickets for the performance are $2.50 in advance and $3 at the door, and are available at Willard Straight Hall, the Lincoln Hall Box Office and Hickey's Music Store.

'Dido and Aeneas'

Henry Purcell's opera "Dido and Aeneas" will be presented by the Cornell University Chamber Orchestra and the Ithaca Opera Association at 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Oct. 26 and 27, in Barnes Hall.

Tickets for the performances are on sale at Willard Straight Hall, Egbert Union, Hickey's Music Store and McBooks.

Edward Murray, director of the Cornell University Orchestra, is the musical director and Barbara Troxell, associate professor of music at Cornell is artistic director. Gary Race of Binghamton is stage director.

Roland Bentley of the Ithaca College School of Music is in charge of choral preparation. A dance ensemble from the Ithaca Ballet Guild will be performing with Lavinia Reid as choreographer.

First performed in Chelsea in 1689, "Dido and Aeneas" is the only opera written by Purcell. The theme of the opera is described as a tragic struggle between love and duty and is based on the writings of Roman poet Vergil in his epic poem, "The Aeneid."

"Dido and Aeneas" is a full length opera in three acts with prologue. Its performance is being made possible with public funds from the New York State Council of the Arts.

The text for the prologue, which all operas and plays had in the day of Purcell, has been available through the years. The setting of the text has recently been published by Novello. Murray has included additional music by Purcell, and essentially a special edition has been put together by him, Troxell and Race.

Members of the cast include students from both Cornell and Ithaca College as well as such local artists as Janet Bell-Graf, Paul Gibbons, Linda Paterson and Mel Ankeny.

According to Nan Hanslowe, second vice president of the Ithaca Opera Association, arrangements have been made for a limousine to provide transportation between the Dairy Bar and Barnes Hall the night of the performance. Persons using the limousine must show a pre-purchased ticket.

Hanslowe also said that other transportation arrangements have been made and anyone interested should call her at (607) 564-3645 for further information.

Organist Donald Paterson

A program of baroque music will be presented by University Organist Donald R. M. Paterson at 4 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 28, Anabel Taylor Hall chapel. Paterson will perform on the Hellmuth Wolff tracker action organ.

The recital will open with Five Variations on "La Romanesca, Romanesca," a 16th-century composition of Antonio Valente. Paterson will play three selections by 17th-century writers: Ricercare VII by J. J. Froberger, Desus de Tierce from the Mass on the Fifth Tone by Gilles Jullien and Concerto in B flat Major by Giulio Taglietti.

Works from the 18th century included on the program are Noel Suisse by Dacquin, Adagio, K. 617a by Mozart, Prelude and Fugue in E Major by Lubeck, the chorale partita "Meinem Jesum lass' ich nicht" by Walther, who also arranged the Taglietti concerto, and two pieces by J.S. Bach: the chorale prelude "Christe, aller Welt Trost," S. 670 and the famed "St. Anne" Fugue.

Paterson, associate professor of music at Cornell, came to the University in 1964 as University Organist. Since 1966 he has also served as director of the Sage Chapel Choir.

Paterson was co-chairman and organizer of the First International Romantic Organ Music Symposium held at Cornell last summer. The symposium, which attracted students, teachers and professional organists from all over the country, was held for the purpose of beginning a serious study of early 19th-century organ music.

The opening recital Paterson gave for the symposium has been praised in the October issue of "The American Organist," as a "brilliant and bravura performance." "The American Organist" is a publication of the American Guild of Organists.

The recital is free and open to the public.

Alumnus to Receive High ILR Award

Golodner Selected for Groat Honor

A 1953 Cornell graduate who believes "the future of the labor movement is with the white-collar employees in this country" will receive the ninth annual Judge William B. Groat Alumni Award.

Jack Golodner, director of the Department of Professional Employees of the AFL-CIO, will receive the Groat Award from the State School of Industrial and Labor Relations at the award dinner Monday, Nov. 19, in Washington, D.C.

The dinner is scheduled for 6 p.m. at the Sheraton Washington Hotel, where the national AFL-CIO convention is taking place at the same time.

"We expect a large spectrum of national labor and management leaders to be present at the dinner," said Robert E. Doherty, acting dean of the ILR School.

The department Golodner heads has a membership of more than 1.5 million white-collar employees, and is the newest in the AFL-CIO. Twenty-six unions make up the Department of Professional Employees.

Golodner directs the legislative, research, policy, public relations and technical assistance activities of the two-year-old department.

Golodner was executive secretary of the Council of AFL-CIO Unions for Professional Employees for 10 years. When the council was dissolved in 1977, the department Golodner now heads was formed to replace it.

That same year he was named director of the Labor Institute for Human Enrichment, a non-profit educational and charitable arm of the department.

Most of Golodner's early career was in the private practice of labor arbitration with clients in the steel industry, shipbuilding and airlines. Golodner said he left private practice and joined the council in 1967 "because I saw an opportunity to create something."

He is a member of the Labor Advisory Committee for Multilateral Trade Negotiations of the Department of Labor. He is also vice president of the board of trustees of Ford's Theatre in Washington.

He has served on the Secretary of Labor's Committee on Specialized (Professional) Personnel and the Education/Manpower Council of the Manpower Institute in Washington.

In 1975 Golodner was a member of the Arts and Humanities Committee of the President's Commission on International Women's Year.

After graduating from Cornell's ILR School, Golodner earned his law degree at Yale Law School. A native of New York City, he now lives in Mount Vernon, Va.

The Groat Award is given annually in recognition of Judge Groat's contribution to the establishment of the ILR School at Cornell.

As counsel to the New York State Joint Legislative Committee on Industrial and Labor Relations, Judge Groat played a major role in the thought, action and legislation that brought the school into existence in 1944. Since the school's creation, he has served as a member of the ILR Council.

In 1944 the ILR School at Cornell was the first institution of its kind in the country. It is still the only college in the United States that offers a four-year program leading exclusively to the Bachelor of Science degree in the field.

Campaign at $165 Million 'Climb to the Top' Is Slogan

The Cornell Campaign stands at $165 million and "we are climbing to the top," according to Campaign Chairman Austin H. Kiplinger.

In making the announcement to the joint meeting of the Cornell University Board of Trustees and the Cornell Council last Friday in Alice Statler Auditorium, Kiplinger said he is "extremely pleased with these results."

"Climb To The Top" has been adopted as the slogan of the campaign as it enters its last 15 months. The five-year campaign for $230 million began in 1975.

Kiplinger stressed that campaign efforts must not let down. Raising the remaining $65 million is "a stiff, formidable challenge that will require every ounce of our energy."

However, Kiplinger expressed optimism that the $230 million goal would be reached on schedule.

"We...have the leadership and we have the people. We have them in the right states of mind and spirit. I know that all of these ingredients will lead us to the successful completion of the campaign," he said.

In reviewing 1978-79, Kiplinger said Cornell had received $41 million in new commitments to the campaign during the year.

Total cash received during 1978-79 was $30.7 million for the colleges at Ithaca, up more than $3 million from 1977-78. Total cash received last year, including the Cornell Medical College, was $38.4 million, up almost $5 million from 1977-78.

Kiplinger called this "another measure of success of our efforts," and said that the last two years "exceed by far" any previous years' totals.

Cornell ranked sixth in the nation in total gifts received by private universities in 1977-78, Kiplinger said, and that the University would probably rank fourth or fifth in 1978-79.

Alcoholism on Campus United Way Helps Fight It

United Way contributions this year will help in part to deal directly with a growing issue on campus—alcoholism.

In only its third year of operation, the Alcoholism Council of Tompkins County has, during the first nine months of 1979 provided its counseling services and guidance to 44 members of the Cornell community—18 students, 18 faculty and staff and eight spouses and children.

According to Florence B. Ricciuti, executive director of the council, this is nearly double the rate of last year. This growth indicates that alcoholism is undoubtedly a much larger problem than is immediately perceived, she said.

The Office of the Dean of Students has recently established Alcohol Education, Research and Training (ALERT), a committee aimed at raising the awareness of alcoholism on campus and at directing those who need help to the agencies that can assist them.

The Alcoholism Council is the key public agency in the county to which persons can go to for help. Its services are free and as a result the council is dependent on outside funds. Some $19,500 of its projected $113,897 budget for 1980 is scheduled to come out of United Way contributions. Its other funding will be from a $22,000 federal grant and a matching fund grant from the state. The agency must come up with $38,290 in voluntary funding including its United Way appropriation to qualify for matching funds from the state.

As of Oct. 17, the halfway mark of the Cornell United Way campaign, Cornell had raised 54 percent of its $250,150 goal or $135,947.

The need for community-wide support for the council's program is regarded as an extension of one of the basic approaches to helping alcoholics to overcome their problems: Involving the whole family, spouses, children, other close relatives and friends in counseling sessions.

"Sometimes," Ricciuti said, "these are the only people we can deal with in the beginning because alcoholics often won't recognize they have a problem."

"But," she said, "the friends and relatives soon find out that they are not just innocent bystanders or victims but in many ways active participants in the alcoholics problems and salvation."

Professional Improvement Sought Statutory Units Initiate Plan

A professional improvement plan for academic nonprofessional staff in the state colleges at Cornell is being considered by a recently appointed committee.

"Department chairmen and College administration foster the professional growth of staff with the expectation that they will be able to contribute more significantly to the department and to college programs," said Lucinda Noble, director of Cooperative Extension.

The current professional improvement plan provided by the University, she said, is helpful to on-campus staff who are able to study here. However, there is less opportunity for staff who work off campus and need to study at another institution or for on-campus staff who need to take courses at other institutions, she said.

On behalf of Deans David L. Call and Jerome M. Ziegler of the State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences and the State College of Human Ecology, Noble has appointed a nine member committee including: Professors Olan D. Forker, Department of Agricultural Economics, chairman; Harry R. Ainslie, Department of Animal Science; Ruth N. Klipstein, Division of Nutrition; Robert D. Miller, Department of Agronomy; Ethel W. Samson, Cooperative Extension; William J. Wasmuth, Industrial and Labor Relations Extension Division; Elizabeth D. Earle, Department of Plant Breeding and Biometry; Jane W. McGonigal, Cooperative Extension; and Nancy S. Meltzer, assistant dean, College of Human Ecology.

Academic nonprofessional staff include such positions as extension and research associates and senior extension and research associates as well as lecturers and instructors. Approximately 350 positions fall into this category in the three state colleges. The College of Veterinary Medicine is not included because of different professional requirements.

Guide for Handicapped

A 16-page booklet, Campus Guide for the Handicapped, featuring an index of campus buildings equipped for the handicapped and eight "quadrant maps" of the campus, has been produced by the University.

The two-color maps divide the Cornell campus into eight areas. Each map shows campus buildings, accessible—or planned accessible—entrances, major and minor access routes, curb cuts and handicapped parking spaces.

The index of campus buildings includes such information as which buildings have elevators, telephones and rest rooms accessible to the handicapped, special facilities, and the locations of appropriate entrances.

Copies of the booklet are available at the Office of Equal Opportunity, 217 Day Hall, and the Information and Referral Center at the main entrance of Day Hall.

The booklet also offers information pertaining to the handicapped on physical education and athletics, the campus transit service and campus parking. Instructional aids and related resources are described, and the names, addresses and telephone numbers of Cornell's 18 area representatives for the handicapped are listed.

"This brochure is an initial, brief presentation of some of the features of Cornell's program for the handicapped," according to an introductory statement. "It will be revised and expanded as the program develops."

Bruce W. Turnbull, associate professor of operations research and industrial engineering, received the George W. Snedocor Memorial Award at the annual national joint meetings of the American Statistical Society, Biometric Society and Institute for Mathematical Statistics held in Washington, D.C. last month. The award was for the best research publication in statistics with biological or medical applications to appear during 1978. The research was undertaken jointly with Toby J. Mitchell of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory and involved the development of new statistical techniques to evaluate the effects of low-level radiation on disease incidence in laboratory animals.

William Foote Whyte, internationally known author and long-time professor in the State School of Industrial and Labor Relations, has been chosen president-elect of the American Sociological Association. Whyte won the first ASA election to use simple preferential voting for the top office. He received 1,858 of the 3,974 first place votes cast for three candidates. Whyte will assume the presidency after the 1980 ASA annual meeting. As president-elect, he will chair the 1981 Program Committee. He began a three-year term on the ASA Council, the governing body in September. A member of Cornell's ILR School faculty since 1948, Whyte was named professor, emeritus, effective July 1.

Robert W. Everett, associate professor of animal breeding at the State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, has received the 1979 National Association of Animal Breeders Award for his contributions to the science of artificial insemination and animal breeding. His scientific contributions in evaluating sires used in the Northeast with resulting genetic improvement of dairy cattle and his economic evaluation of sires and of the Dairy Herd Improvement program have had major impact on the dairy industry.

Kenneth L. Turk, professor emeritus of animal science at the State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, has been named honorary fellow of the American Society of Animal Science. Head of the animal science department from 1945 to 1963, Turk was also director of International Agricultural Development at Cornell, from 1963 to 1974, during which time he developed a graduate program with research conducted in underdeveloped countries.

Ronald G. Ehrenberg, professor of economics and labor economics in the New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations, has published a volume in the Studies in Labor Economics series of Academic Press. His book, "The Regulatory Process and Labor Earnings," deals with the issue of what is, and what should be, the relationship between government regulation of industry and wage determination in regulated industries. Among the questions Ehrenberg addresses are: Does the regulatory process influence labor earnings and contribute to inflation? What standards and types of evidence should be used to ascertain if utilities' cost increases are "just and reasonable?" What public policies can be implemented to moderate the rate of labor cost increase in regulated industries?

Judith Stewart, who recently earned her Ph.D. degree at the New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations at Cornell University, has been appointed equal opportunity specialist in Cornell's Office of Equal Opportunity. Stewart, who has a wide range of research experience, will assist Michael J. Montgomery, executive director of OEO, in the management of Cornell's affirmative action program. "She will help prepare annual revisions of goals and timetables, analyze and evaluate program progress, maintain and update the recruitment resource system, and assist in the development of internal and external reports relative to equal opportunity and affirmative action requirements," Montgomery said.

Vance A. Christian has been named the Villa Banfi Professor of Hotel Administration in the School of Hotel Administration at Cornell. In making the announcement, Dean Robert A. Beck said he was "particularly proud that a man with the highest qualities to meet the goals of the new professorship was already on the faculty of the Hotel

School. The professorship was established earlier this year to stimulate research and program development in wine management education for the hospitality industry," he said. The chair was endowed with a $500,000 gift from John Mariani Jr. (a 1954 graduate of Cornell) and Harry Mariani. They are chairman and president, respectively, of Villa Banfi U.S.A., one of America's leading importers of premium wines. A member of the hotel school's faculty for 17 years, Christian is a pioneer in University wine education, designing and conducting one of the first accredited university level courses on the art, science, and social use of wine. This course has received international recognition and is a model for similar courses at institutions across the nation, Beck said.

Michael C. Jones, formerly an investment officer at New York Life Insurance Co. in New York City, has been appointed investment officer at Cornell University, retroactive to Sept. 4. His appointment was approved by the University's Board of Trustees at its meeting here this month. As a University investment officer, Jones has the authority to sell, transfer and assign securities, real estate and other university investments and to sign and issue drafts and checks necessary to carry out those tasks in accordance with the University's by-laws.

Stephen Risch, assistant professor at the University, is one of five winners nationally this year of the Charles A. Lindbergh Prize. Risch, who holds a joint appointment in the University's Program on Science, Technology and Society and its Section of Ecology and Systematics, received the $10,580 award for his study of the effectiveness of combined plantings of corn, beans and squash, a traditional Indian agroecosystem in Central America, in reducing insect pest damage. The Lindbergh Fund award recognizes "a significant contribution toward the achievement of a balance between technological progress and the preservation of our natural environment."

Gwendolyn Owens has been appointed assistant curator at the Herbert F. Johnson Museum of Art. Owens replaces Elizabeth C. Evans, who left Cornell to continue her graduate studies in the history of American art at the City University of New York. As assistant curator, Owens will be responsible for the documentation, exhibition and preservation of the museum's collection of western European, American, and primitive paintings, drawings, sculpture and decorative arts.

Charles Everette Short has been promoted to professor of anesthesiology, with tenure, in the Department of Clinical Sciences, State College of Veterinary Medicine. When Dr. Short joined the Cornell faculty in 1977, he had already established a reputation as a leader in the clinical discipline of veterinary anesthesiology. In 1970 he organized the first meeting and became the first president of the American Society of Veterinary Anesthesiology. The organization now has more than 200 members. In 1975 Dr. Short became a founding charter diplomate of the American College of Veterinary Anesthesiologists.

Dr. Walter Modell, emeritus professor of pharmacology at Cornell Medical College, received the 1979 Harry Gold Award for his excellence in research and teaching in clinical pharmacology. The annual award of a certificate and $1,000 was given by the American Society for Pharmacology and Experimental Therapeutics in the honor of a pioneer in the field, Dr. Harry Gold. Dr. Walter Riker, chairman of the department of pharmacology at Cornell Medical Center, said, "Walter Modell's contributions to clinical pharmacology during the last two decades have been uniquely beneficial to the science. He has served as a leading spokesman for the interests of the field in recent years."

Several new appointments have been announced at the Cornell University Press. Barbara L. Burnham, former executive editor at the University of Texas Press, has been named acquisitions editor for the social sciences. Donald R. Snodderly, former senior manuscript editor, has been appointed acquisitions editor for art, architecture, and the sciences. Glen T. Hartley, former promotion manager, has been named advertising and promotion manager. Cynthia Gration, a 1978 graduate of the University of Denver Publishing Institute, has been appointed assistant advertising and promotion manager. Allison Dodge, previously a copy editor and staff writer for the National League of Cities in Washington, D.C., has joined the Press as a manuscript editor. Laura E. Schuett, who attended the 1979 University of Denver Publishing Institute, has been appointed copywriter. Ann E. Regan, has been named promotion assistant.

Financial Positions Established Analysis, Accounting Formalized

The positions of financial analyst and cost accountant in the Office of the Controller have been filled, according to John S. Ostrom, controller.

Mary Jo Maydew, senior financial analyst with Communications Satellite Corp. in Washington, D.C., is now financial analyst at Cornell. John P. McKeown, budget analyst at Cornell since 1977, is now cost accountant.

"A limited amount of financial analysis is done now at Cornell, principally on an ad hoc basis," Ostrom said. "With the elimination of the position of Vice President for Finance, the financial analyst position will formalize that responsibility. Mary Jo will be expected to create indicators of the University's financial health in order to guide decision-making."

Ostrom described cost accounting as "a relatively new field in the University setting. McKeown will have to develop policies and 'sell' them to the community."

Maydew has worked in both public and private business. She was an auditor with the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago and Argonne National Laboratory, and budget manager with the Public Broadcasting Service. She was an auditor with Martin Marietta Corp. and a cost accountant with Honeywell, Inc.

Maydew is a 1970 graduate of the University of Denver.

McKeown was internal auditor at St. Lawrence University before joining the Cornell staff in 1977. He previously worked two years at Nicholson Division in Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

A 1973 graduate of the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell, McKeown earned his MBA in 1974 from Cornell's Graduate School of Business and Public Administration. McKeown was a football and track star at Cornell. In 1973 he was captain of the track team and was named an Eastern College Athletic Conference Scholar-Athlete.

Brief Reports

German Fellowship Applications Open

Applications are now being accepted on campus for one DAAD Fellowship at a West German university and for one Exchange Fellowship each at the Universities of Heidelberg and Goettingen. Open to all advanced undergraduates and graduate students for all academic units, the fellowships cover the 1980-81 academic year.

Applications should include a description of the proposed study or research project, student's qualifications, Cornell transcript and letters of recommendation from two professors in the student's field, plus local address and telephone.

Deadline is Nov. 5, with applications to be submitted to the Selection Committee, c/o Prof. Herbert Deinert, Department of German Literature, 172 Goldwin Smith Hall.

Many Key Tags No Longer Valid

It is estimated that hundreds of the more than 10,000 persons with key tags registered at the Department of Public Safety for lost and found purposes have failed to notify safety of changes in their addresses and telephone numbers over the past three years.

As a result, if these persons lose their keys and the keys are turned over to Public Safety as the tag instructs, it will probably do no good because of the incorrect address and telephone number now on file, according to Frederick D. Rosica, crime prevention officer.

He urged all persons who have changed their address and telephone numbers since getting their key tags to call Safety at 256-7302. The new information will be put on the card filed with their key tag identification number, he said.

Persons wishing to get a tag under the free program sponsored by safety in conjunction with the Cornell Federal Credit Union may obtain them either at safety's office in Barton Hall or at the two credit union offices.

Rosica also asked that any person finding keys with the tags turn them over to Public Safety immediately. He said, "Do not keep them and hope the owner will come back for them. Do not call us for the name of the owner. We will not give out that information. We notify the owner and the owner picks up the lost keys."

Potshop Schedules Series of Classes

The Potshop in Willard Straight Hall has scheduled a number of classes for the fall semester.

For the year the cost is $25 for Cornell students and $30 for nonstudents. For further information, call 256-5170.

Reading Programs Get Coordinator

Anne B. Grinols, executive director of the American Cancer Society of Tompkins County in 1978-79, has been appointed coordinator of reading programs at the University. Grinols will be responsible for the activities and services of Cornell's Reading and Study Skills Program previously headed by Walter Pauk, professor, emeritus, of education.

A certified reading specialist, Grinols has been a study skills instructor in Cornell's Learning Skills Center. She is a graduate of Dickinson College and holds a master's degree from Elmira College.

"Just about any student can benefit from developing better reading skills," she said, "and that's why it's a University-wide program." Most students double their reading speed during four years of college, according to Grinols, and "when students are helped to accomplish this in less time, they reap the benefits sooner."

The reading program will offer workshops and mini-courses on ways to improve reading speed and comprehension. Plans are underway to develop a University course on reading skills.

Reading program offices are in 375 Olin Hall and include a reading laboratory where students can practice the techniques learned in the workshop.

PBS Changes Time For Cornell Show

A change in the previously-announced schedule for the television showing of the documentary "Until I Get Caught" has been made by the Public Broadcasting System, according to James B. Maas, associate professor of psychology.

WNET-TV, the PBS station in New York City, will broadcast the film on the drunken driving problem in America at 9 p.m., Dec. 13. The film will be fed to PBS stations nationally for airing at 10 p.m., Dec. 14 or thereafter.

Maas and David H. Gluck, a filmmaker in Cornell's Department of Psychology, produced "Until I Get Caught," the first documentary on drunken driving. Television personality Dick Cavett narrates the one-hour film.

The film was originally scheduled to be broadcast in November by PBS stations, with WNET-TV planning a Nov. 29 airing.

Alcohol Awareness Committee Formed

Alcohol awareness and consciousness on campus will be the focus of a new committee being formed by the Office of the Dean of Students.

The Alcohol Education, Research and Training (ALERT) committee is seeking members and will have an organizational meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 30, in G-92 Uris Hall. Interested students, faculty, or staff members are welcome to attend.

"The creation of the committee arises from a real concern for the detrimental effects on individuals involved in alcohol abuse and on the community in which they live," according to Ruth Darling, acting dean of students.

The purpose of the committee, said Darling, is to educate, not to be judgmental.

Darling also said the committee will seek to promote awareness and consciousness through special programming and a media campaign. For further information, call Brian Dunn, graduate assistant and staff person for ALERT, at 256-4221, or Phil McPheron, assistant dean of students and ALERT chairperson, at 256-5533.

Historical Center Receives Grants

A total of $109,000 in grants has been received in the past few months by the New York Historical Resource Center which has its headquarters in Olin Library.

David Brumberg, who heads the center established in 1977, announced the funds will be used to continue several projects already under way throughout the state. The center's goal is to produce a data base on, and guide to, manuscripts and archives collections in New York state, and generally support a growing interest in grass-roots history.

A $43,000 grant from the National Historical Publications and Records Commission will be used to continue a survey of manuscripts and archive collections in New York state. So far 14 counties in the Southern Tier and Eastern Finger Lakes areas have been surveyed. The grant will enable the survey to move into the Rochester area and possibly Syracuse and its surroundings.

The data gathered will be published in county and statewide guides to archives and manuscripts and become part of a similar nationwide publication now in the making.

Another $6,000 for the survey has been provided by the New York State Council on the Arts. The council has also given the center $20,000, along with $40,000 from the New York Council for the Humanities, to support the center's Historian-in-Residence Program. Under the program historians are supported in working with local historical agencies in developing public programs which include local exhibits, lectures and slide presentations. There were 10 such scholars in the state last year.

Hunters Will Need Cornell Permits

Gun and bow hunters need written permission to hunt on Cornell property and also must have their weapons registered with the Department of Public Safety, according to a University spokesman.

Permission to hunt on specific parcels of Cornell land can be obtained from either the farm manager of the land or from John Bentkowski, the University's real estate manager, whose office is at 104 Maple Ave.

The hunting permits are needed before the weapon permits can be obtained at the Department of Safety offices in Barton Hall.

Memorial Fund Aids Ag Students

The Walter Hochstrasser Memorial Fund, an endowed memorial fund to assist graduate students in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, has been established by the wife of the man who earned his master's degree at Cornell in 1926.

Mrs. Cornelia Hochstrasser of La Jolla, Calif., asked that in selecting Hochstrasser Fellows preference be given to graduate students enrolled in the Department of Food Science who are concentrating in the area of dairy products.

Walter Hochstrasser, who died in 1976, worked in the dairy industry throughout his life. His master's thesis on the manufacture of Camembert cheese from pasteurized milk is considered a significant work on the subject. The process he developed still is being used commercially.

After earning a bachelor's degree at the University of Zurich and his master's at Cornell, Hochstrasser was with a Swiss cheese importing firm in this country for many years. During World War II, he was a dairy price specialist with the federal government.

After the war he went to Europe and established his own business as the representative of cheese manufacturing firms in Switzerland, Denmark, Holland and France in their sales to New York importing firms. He sold the business and retired in 1958.

Department of Food Science chairman John Kinsella said the fellowship is "most welcome. The Hochstrasser Fellowship will be used to assist graduate students in the area of dairy fermentation and chemistry. We do not have many graduate fellowships in this area." Graduate students in dairy chemistry are doing "profitable" research toward improvement in the quality of dairy foods, Kinsella said. New York state is the third largest dairy state in the nation. Income from dairy products accounts for 60 percent of the state's agricultural income.

Cornell to Share In Vole Research

A $1.3 million attack is about to be launched upon pine and meadow voles, destructive pests of apple orchards in the eastern United States, and $370,000 of that sum has been earmarked for research agencies affiliated with the State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences.

Ten agencies in six states have been proposed to share in funds awarded by the U.S. Department of the Interior for vole research, said Ronald J. Kuhr, associate director of research in the college.

The major target of the research effort will be the pine vole, a particularly severe pest of apple orchards in the lower Hudson River Valley which has caused economic losses estimated at $12 million annually in New York state, Kuhr said. Losses due to pine voles have been estimated at $50 million annually for the eastern United States as a whole.

Populations of the small rodent burrow under trees and gnaw away the outer layers of the roots, weakening and eventually killing the trees.

The grant announcement comes just as apple growers are petitioning the State Department of Environmental Conservation to make available the banned pesticide Endrin, thus underscoring the need for research into economical and environmentally safe methods of pine vole control. Endrin, a persistent and highly toxic chemical which at present is the only practical method of controlling the pine vole, was banned in the state in 1971. Its use was reinstated for one year only in 1977, with its further availability to be contingent upon the results of an analysis of the environmental effects of the 1977 application.

Final Moot Court Competition Slated

The final round of the Law School Moot Court competition at 8:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 2, in the Moot Court Room of Myron Taylor Hall, is open to the public.

Among the three distinguished jurists presiding will be Thomas M. Stark, justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, Tenth Judicial District, who presided at the DeFeo murder trial in 1975. The trial was the background for the book and subsequent movie, "The Amityville Horror."

The other jurists on the judging panel will be Charles L. Brieant, judge of the United States District Court, Southern District of New York; and Stewart G. Pollock, associate justice of the Supreme Court of New Jersey.

Campaign Receives Foundation Gift

A $150,000 grant from the U.S. Steel Foundation, one of the largest grants by that foundation in recent years, has been made to the University.

Though the grant is unrestricted, Cornell expects to make use of the gift in support of the physical sciences and the College of Engineering.

"We feel privileged to be associated with you in (the Cornell Campaign) designed to maintain the educational quality of a first-rate institution and wish you the very best," said James T. Hosey, vice president and executive director of the foundation, in a letter to Cornell President Frank Rhodes.

The five-year Cornell Campaign for $230 million began in 1975.

Robert Hatfield, co-chairman of the national corporate gifts committee of the Cornell Campaign, and William T. Lankford of the U.S. Steel Research Laboratories worked closely in describing Cornell's need for support to the U.S. Steel Foundation.
