Outlines University Position on Tenure Decisions

President Frank Rhodes has written a letter to the approximately 230 persons who have signed a petition in recent months in support of the so-called "Cornell 11," a case involving allegations of sexual discrimination in the granting of tenure.

Here is the text of Rhodes' message to the signers, which was mailed late in the week before Thanksgiving:

"From time to time during the past several months I have heard from alumni and friends regarding Zahorik v. Cornell University, a lawsuit involving four unsuccessful candidates for tenure and one individual with a term appointment that was not renewed. I write now to express my appreciation to you for having taken the time to share your concern with me on this matter.

"It has long been the university's policy that pending cases should be argued in the courts, where both parties are protected by rules of evidence, rather than in public or in the press. I feel, however, that it is appropriate to respond to your very proper concerns by sharing with you some of the reasons why I believe the university must continue to support the tenure recommendations of the faculty when there is no evidence that the decision was biased.

"In continuing to give great weight to the tenure recommendations of the faculty, the university is not striving either to defend or to preserve an outmoded practice. Tenure review — the practice by which men and women are given permanent appointments to the faculty — is fundamental to the character of the university. The distinction that Cornell has achieved in the academic world is due largely to the quality and integrity of the faculty. This position has been won because the university's founders and their successors have consistently pursued a shared vision of excellence. Our task is to safeguard that academic excellence which, in little more than a century, has elevated Cornell to its present stature.

"Promotion to tenure in this university has always been an extremely selective process. In the College of Arts and Sciences, for example, only about 65 percent of those considered for tenure are successful. Should the university adopt a policy of offering a 'speedy settlement' in disputed cases in which no palpable evidence of discrimination is present — cases that, after careful investigation, appear to be based upon the best academic judgment of the faculty — we would soon guarantee that an increasing number of

Final Examinations

I. If any examination day is cancelled due to inclement weather conditions, the canceled examinations will be held the next day at the same time and place. The remaining examination days will be moved one day later, with makeup examinations to be given on Dec. 24.

II. If two consecutive days of examinations are canceled, makeup day will be eliminated. Makeups will be scheduled in the evening. The procedure for canceled examinations will be the same as in I, except the examinations will be held two days later. For example, if days 1 and 2 are canceled, examinations for day 1 will be given on day 3 and day 2 examinations will be held on day 4.

Questions should be directed to the Office of the University Registrar, 222 Day Hall, 256-4232.

Two Named Presidential Councillors

Treman, Ward Are Selected

Two alumni, Charles E. Treman Jr. and J. Carlton Ward Jr., have been elected Presidential Councillors by the University Board of Trustees upon the recommendation of President Frank Rhodes.

The designation, which can be held by no more than 25 persons at one time, is "conferred for life upon men and women who during their most active years have given high service to Cornell and have made an outstanding contribution to the future of higher education." It is the highest honor the university can confer upon its alumni and friends.

Ward is a 1914 Cornell mechanical engineering graduate and former director of Pratt and Whitney Aircraft Corp. (now United Technologies).

Treman, who received his A.B. in 1930, J.D. in 1934, is former president, chief executive officer and chairman of the Board of Tompkins County Trust Co. He has been one of Cornell's most active fund raisers.

Elected trustee emeritus in 1978, he was among the first members of the Cornell University Council, served on its Administrative Board for five years, and as its chairman for one year. When he joined the Board of Trustees in 1968, he was the fifth Treman to serve in that capacity.

Treman concluded 11 years as National Estate Affairs chairman this year, was a member of the Major Gifts Committee, chairman of Ithaca Area Special Gifts during the Centennial Campaign, worker on Cornell fund drives for many years, and chairman of the National Area Campaign in Ithaca in the recently concluded Cornell Campaign. Secretary of the Class of 1930 from 1932 to 1954, he was also the Class Estate Affairs chairman and leader in its 50th Reunion Fund campaign.

He is a life member of the Laboratory of Ornithology and serves on its Administrative Board. In 1975, Tompkins County Trust Co. established in his honor the Charles E. Treman Jr. Fund for the benefit of the Laboratory of Ornithology, pledging $50,000 over a five-year term.

Treman and his wife, Margo, donated the Naturalistic Walk in the Cornell Plantations. Treman was a member of the Board on Physical Education and Athletics from 1970 until 1976. For many years he provided trophies for the Treman Cup Regatta. He was treasurer and director of Tompkins County Area Development Corp., which developed Cornell Research Park. Besides his service to Cornell, Treman has been active in community affairs, national and state banking associations.

Ward, who retired in 1961 after a distinguished career in engineering and aeronautics, has for many years been closely involved with Cornell, particularly the College of Engineering.

He is a member emeritus of the Cornell University Council and was a University Trustee from 1948 until 1953. He joined the Engineering College Council in 1940, served as its chairman for 12 years, and still maintains his interest in it. Under his chairmanship, the council proposed establishment of the nuclear reactor laboratory which was dedicated in 1961, and renamed the J. Carlton Ward Jr. Laboratory of Nuclear Engineering in 1969.

He was influential in the development of the Engineering Quadrangle and assisted in fund raising for this and other Cornell needs. He also was a leader in the founding of the now defunct Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory and served as a director for it.

Long a proponent of nuclear energy, Ward established in 1977 a fund for the benefit of the Ward Laboratory and The Program of Nuclear Engineering. In 1978, he endowed the J. Carlton Ward Jr. Professorship of Nuclear Engineering. Ward worked with the Presidential Search Committee in 1976-77 and has given Cornell his library. He was honored at a testimonial dinner on campus in 1968, upon his retirement as chairman of the Engineering Council.

In the 1940s when he was president and chairman of Fairchild Engine and Airplane Co., Ward founded the Nuclear Energy Propulsion of Airplanes Project. During World War II, he was an adviser on aircraft production to the governments of the United States, Britain and France. He was chairman of the Board of Advisors of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces for nine years, and lectured there for nearly three decades.

He was a member of the first Hoover Commission which made recommendations on postwar national security. Ward is former vice president, general manager and director of Pratt and Whitney Aircraft Corp. (now United Technologies) and former chairman of Thompson Industries, Inc. At his retirement in 1961, he was chairman of the Board and President of Vitro Corp. of Norwalk, Conn.

'Empowerment' Topic of Parley

Brazilian educational philosopher Paulo Freire will be the featured speaker at a conference, "Empowerment; Strategies for Education and Action," Dec. 3 through 6 at the Ives Conference Center.

Sponsored by the Department of Education of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, the multidisciplinary conference will focus on applying Freire's philosophy of reflection and action to further the empowerment of all people.

Freire believes that individuals suffering from restrictive social and political structures can, by critically examining their world, move from being objects of oppression to being empowered subjects able to analyze and change oppressive institutions of society. Empowerment strategies such as those developed by Freire have had profound effects on illiterate Brazilian peasants as well as educators and political leaders.

Conference workshops with a practical orientation will range from cognitive development, small farm agriculture, rural health, literacy, women's empowerment, and racism to labor education, environmental action, youth, and influencing national policy.

Freire will participate in several sessions including a multidisciplinary panel discussion scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 5, in Ives 120. The topic for that discussion, which is free and open to the community, is "Who are the Oppressed? Themes for Political Empowerment."

Thursday's opening session, "Guiding Principles for Empowerment Programs," will consist of dialogue and discussion designed to elicit and clarify the theories upon which practical strategies may be built.

Panels will be led by people experienced in their fields, including Manning Marable, associate professor of Africana studies at Cornell; John Hatch, an authority on small farm agriculture with New York State Rural Development Services; Manfred Stanley, an expert on science and technology at Syracuse University; Wendy Luttrell, an advocate for women's rights and criminal justice at Lutherman Settlement House, Philadelphia; and Michael Caine, an environmentalist and community activist with the Citizens Training Project, Amherst, Mass.

Walk-ins are welcome to register for the conference on a space available basis from 1 to 5 p.m. today at the Ives Conference Center.

Rhodes Responds

disappointed candidates would resort to litigation.

"I should also like to point out that Cornell did not choose to enter this litigation. The university is being sued and must defend itself. Nothing would please us more than the prompt and unbiased resolution of this important case.

"We continue to work to enhance opportunities for women and minorities and to improve our procedures. The Faculty Council of Representatives has endorsed a new tenure review procedure which permits unsuccessful candidates to request a review of the decisions of departments and deans. In addition, the Provost has established a special fund to be used solely to identify and attract qualified women and minority scholars to the faculty.

"We have undertaken these programs and activities with enthusiasm, ever mindful that the university is committed to two complementary goals. All of us must strive to maintain the faculty's freedom and responsibility to make academic judgments, to assure that their decisions are made fairly and in a manner that leads to appointments and promotions of the very highest quality. We must also continue to pursue affirmative action goals with vigor and consistency.

"I am most grateful for your concern for Cornell's continuing excellence and well-being, and I share your desire to see the university's resources once again directed exclusively toward the fulfillment of its academic mission."

It is the policy of Cornell University actively to support equality of educational and employment opportunity. No person shall be denied admission to any educational program or activity or be denied employment on the basis of any legally prohibited discrimination involving, but not limited to, such factors as race, color, creed, religion, national or ethnic origin, sex, age or handicap. The university is committed to the maintenance of affirmative action programs which will assure the continuation of such equality of opportunity.

Comment

Letters for the Chronicle Comment section should deal with campus issues, be within an absolute limit of 300 words in length, not deal in person attacks, should be typewritten, double-spaced, and must be signed.

Editor:

In reference to previous notices regarding dormitory newspapers, I, too, would like to set the record straight. In addition to the other papers written by residents in North Campus dormitories, the Low Down can be added to the list. The Low Down, written and edited by residents in Low Rises 6, 7, and 9, appears bi-monthly; the paper which features campus-wide issues, interviews with faculty and administrators and social events, released its first publication in September, 1981.

Second Career Program Tuesday

The second in a series of Cornell Careers programs will be held from 12:15 to 1:15 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 8, in 202 Uris Hall.

Nancy Scoones will discuss her career path from senior clerk in the College of Arts and Sciences to her current position as associate administrator of the Herbert F. Johnson Museum of Art.

The general position of executive staff assistant will be the focus of discussion at the brown bag lunch.

Future sessions in the Cornell Careers program will look at the following positions:

Accounts coordinator-GR21, secretary-GR18, administrative aide-GR21, staff writer/editor, student development specialist.

In her presentation, Scoones intends to emphasize the fact that she did not plan her own career path. "I never really focused on what

No Job List

Due to the Thanksgiving holiday, there will be no Job Opportunities List this week.

During the holiday season the list for posting will be published on the following schedule: Dec. 9 and Dec. 16 and Jan. 6, 1982. Requisitions received through noon Dec. 4 will be posted in the Dec. 9 list. Those received by noon Dec. 18 will be posted in the Jan. 6, 1982 list.

my current job would prepare me to do in the future," she said. "You could probably call it 'the liberal arts approach to on-the-job training.'

"I tried to learn as much as I could in each position and, looking back, I find that nothing I've learned has been wasted. So my 'career interest' has actually developed from the various jobs I've held at Cornell."

Alice Miller, assistant director of personnel for compensation and staffing, said "competition for the executive staff positions is keen, with numerous internal candidates as well as 50 to 100 outside applicants interested in each job."

The effects of months of continuous stress on reinforced concrete beams is measured electronically in a laboratory in the Engineering College's Thurston Hall. Checking the beams, which have 260-pound blocks hung from them every linear foot, are John Powers, left, a research associate, and Samuel Wheelis, laboratory manager. The test, which compares the deformation of concrete beams made with 4,000, 6,000 and 9,000 pound-per-square-inch concrete is being conducted under a National Science Foundation grant to professors Arthur H. Nilson and Floyd O. Slate. The information is being gathered to determine engineering design specifications for beams made with the newly developed 9,000 psi concrete as compared to the commonly used 4,000 psi mix.

South Africa Film Series Planned

An exiled South African poet and critic of apartheid will be here Sunday to join the Africana Studies and Research Center faculty and staff for the opening of a three-day film series on South Africa.

Dennis Brutus, a professor of English at Northwestern University and a visiting professor this year at Amherst College, will read from his poetry and lecture at 7 p.m. Sunday at the Andrew Dickson White House.

The films, which will be shown at 7 p.m. on Dec. 7, 8 and 9 in the Africana Center's main lounge, are "Crossroads/South Africa," "Generations of Resistance" and "Six Days in Soweto."

Brutus was born in Zimbabwe but spent most of his life in South Africa where he was a vocal critic of white minority rule. As president of the South African Non-Racial Olympic Committee, he played a major role in South Africa's exclusion from the Olympic Games.

He was banned from all political and social activity in South Africa because of his political campaigns, and he was arrested in 1963. His first collection of poems, "Sirens,

DENNIS BRUTUS

Knuckles, Boots," was published while he was in prison. Brutus's "Letters to Martha" are poems chiefly of experiences as a political prisoner.

Recently, he has been fighting efforts by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service to deport him. The service says Brutus's temporary visa has expired.

He left Zimbabwe in 1966, after signing an exit document that indicated he would be imprisoned if he ever returned to the country. He went first to Great Britain and came to the United States 10 years ago on a British passport. He renewed his temporary visa annually to remain here.

Brutus claims that last year, while waiting for his application for a Zimbabwean passport to be granted, his temporary visa expired. Attorneys and political leaders in Massachusetts and Illinois are now working in Brutus's defense.

Chimes Silenced for an Overhauling

As students, faculty and staff walk around campus they could be thinking, "Something is missing, but I'm not sure what it is." It is the familiar sounds coming from McGraw Tower.

The Cornell chimes mechanism and automatic hour bells system are being renovated, thanks to a gift of some $25,000 from Delta Sigma Phi, a now-defunct fraternity. The chimes are expected to be back in operation in time for the annual Sage Chapel Christmas program.

The present chimes playing system was installed in the late 1960s.

Change Parker, senior research associate of the New York State Assembly Subcommittee on Food, Farm and Nutrition Policy, will give a seminar on "The New York State Food Policy: Implications for Cornell" at 12:15 p.m. Friday in 32 Warren Hall. The seminar is free and open to the public and will be followed by an open discussion.

Parker's talk will be sponsored by the Center for Religion, Ethics and Social Policy; Rural Sociology and the Center for Local Food and Agriculture. The seminar is part of the Alternative Agriculture Series.

"The first proposal for a food policy for New York State has recently been released by the Subcommittee on Food, Farm and Nutrition Policy and calls for, among other things, the expansion and revitalization of New York's food production, processing and distribution systems," said Judy Green, coordinator, center for local food and agriculture.

Third Rape In Month Is Reported

The third reported rape of a female Cornell student in a month occurred early Saturday according to Ithaca City Police.

The incident occurred at knife-point about 6 a.m. in an apartment on Wyckoff Ave. The attacker, described as black, slender and about 5 foot 7 inches tall, meets the descriptions of the assailants in a rape incident near the suspension bridge on campus, Oct. 30 and near an apartment building on North Triphammer Road, Nov. 20, according to Public Safety Captain Daniel N. Murphy.

Because the incidents occurred in various jurisdictions the Oct. 20 attack is being investigated by Cornell's Public Safety, the Nov. 20 incident is being investigated by Cayuga Heights Police and the latest attack is under investigation by Ithaca City Police.

All three departments are coordinating their investigations, Murphy said.

State's Food Policies To Be Topic of Seminar

The plan also calls for improved energy conservation and use of renewable resources within the food system, protection of the agricultural resource base and greater public awareness of the economic and social impacts of our food system, according to Green.

The policy, according to Green, makes several explicit recommendations for Cornell including research on "biological" or "organic" farming methods, alternative energy on farms, inland aquaculture and regional marketing.

"Although some of these ideas are beginning to be addressed in some departments at Cornell," Green said, "many would consider them a radical departure from the mainstream of agricultural research. In a sense, they represent a questioning on the part of the State Legislature of the sustainability of many aspects of our food system," she continued.

The concert is being given in partial fulfillment of the requirements for Simon's Doctor of Musical Arts degree at Cornell, where he is a composition student under Professor Karel Husa. He will be clarinet soloist in his own Pseudonym (1981) and conductor of Second Dance in American Rhythm (1976-80) for small ensemble. Also on the program are Pleasure Dome (1980) with bassoonist Ron Bukoff and pianist Konomi Takashita, Between Dreams (1980) for electronic tape, and Sonata for Cello and Piano played by Sera Williams and Paul Horsley. Simon, a 1976 graduate of Florida State University, received a Master's degree at Ithaca College before enrolling at Cornell.

Symphonic Band Plans Concert

Marches and overtures will highlight the 4 p.m. Bailey Hall concert of the Cornell Symphonic Band Sunday Dec. 6. The program, under the direction of Professor Marice Stith, is open to the public without charge.

Ithaca cellist Carey Beth Hockett will appear as soloist with the ensemble in a Concertino composed for cello and band by her father, Cornell anthropology professor Charles F. Hockett. Carey Hockett is a graduate of the Eastman School of Music where she played the premiere of the Concertino with the Eastman Wind Ensemble under Donald Hunsberger. Sunday's performance will be the first in Ithaca. She is principal cellist of the Cayuga Chamber Orchestra and a teacher in Ithaca Talent Education.

The Cornell Symphonic Band will play two marches: Frank Erickson's edition of The Purple Carnival by Harry Alford and Charles Hockett's On the Commons, written by the Cornell professor for the downtown Ithaca Commons.

Two familiar overtures are included on the program: Donald Hunsberger's arrangement of the Overture to Kabalevsky's "Colas Breugnon" and Walter Beeler's arrangement of the Overture to Bernstein's "Candide." The latter will be conducted by Thomas Duffy, graduate assistant conductor of the band.

The Cornell Symphonic Band is made up of over 100 student instrumentalists, both graduate and undergraduate, who represent nearly every division and college within the university. Stith has been a member of the music faculty and director of bands since 1966.

Graduate Bulletin

Graduate students are reminded that the working schedule is somewhat limited during the holidays. Any Admission to Candidacy Examinations or Final Examinations to be held during the week of January 4 should be scheduled by 4:00 p.m. Friday December 18 to allow ample notification of the field concerned.

The deadline for completion of all requirements for a January degree is January 15, 1982. There will be no extensions granted.

Applications for 1982-83 Cornell Graduate Fellowships for continuing graduate students are available at the Fellowship Office and at the office of your graduate faculty representative. All Cornell students matriculated in the Graduate School are eligible to apply. Recipients must be registered full-time with the Graduate School throughout their fellowship tenure. Graduate School Fellowships for continuing students are usually awarded for one academic year. This application should be used for consideration for all fellowships awarded by the Graduate School (Sage Graduate Fellowships, Cornell Graduate Fellowships, Three-year Teaching Fellowships, fellowships from restricted income accounts). To insure consideration by your field for one of these awards, completed applications and letters of reference should be submitted to your graduate faculty representative by January 29, 1982.

Applications for 1982-83 Higher Education Act-Title VI/National Resource Fellowships are available at the Fellowship Office. The NRF program is to train personnel in modern foreign languages and related area studies.

Applicants must be citizens or permanent residents of the U.S. who have earned a baccalaureate or comparable degree prior to the start of the fellowship and who plan to pursue full-time graduate study during the entire award period. People may apply to Cornell for advanced language training and related area studies training in the following world areas: East Asia, East Europe and Russia, Latin America, South Asia, and Southeast Asia. The deadline to submit completed applications is January 29, 1982.

BRITISH PETROLEUM

British Petroleum announces that a new Venture Research has been set up to support new concepts in science and engineering which may eventually lead to major commercial opportunities. Dr. D.W. Braben of British Petroleum visited Cornell on October 12, 1981, and has sent information to the Vice President for research indicating an interest in BP's attracting new research from Cornell.

The Venture Research Unit's approach is intended to be complementary to other sources of funding; it is to provide individuals or small groups with the support to enable them to work on novel and fundamental scientific or engiyour graduate faculty representative's office for information on the awards whose deadlines are listed below. Unless otherwise stated, applications must be obtained directly from the sponsoring organization.

Dec 4: Washington Center for Learning Alternatives — deadline for the June-December 1982 program.

Dec 5: Inter-American Foundation Pre- and Post-Doctoral Fellowships — for students in the social sciences and other fields concerned with Latin America and the Caribbean.

Dec 11: Belgian-American Educational Foundation Fellowships — applications are available at and must be submitted to the Fellowship Office. Only one nomination may be made by Cornell.

Dec 15: American Psychological Association Minority Fellowship Program.

Dec 15: International Foundation of Employee Benefit Plans Grants-in-Aid Program.

Dec 31: Arctic Institute of North America Student Grants-in-Aid — for people in the social sciences, arts and humanities whose focus is on northern research; maximum award is $2500.

Dec 31: UCLA Postdoctoral Fellowships — Postdoctoral support is available through the following programs at UCLA: American Indian Studies Center (humanities and social sciences), Asian-American Studies Center (Asian studies), Center for Afro-American Studies (Afro-American studies), and Chicano Studies Research Center (humanities and social sciences). Applicants must have recently completed the Ph.D. Awards range from $18,500 to $21,500.

Dec 31: Alan T. Waterman Award — This postdoctoral grant provides up to $50,000 for up to 3 years for scientific research or advanced study. Candidates nominated for this award must be U.S. citizens who are 35 years of age or younger or not more than 5 years beyond receipt of the Ph.D as of December 31.

Nominees should have completed sufficient research in the biological, mathematical, medical, engineering, physical, social or other sciences to have demonstrated outstanding capability and promise for significant future achievement.

neering problems of their own choice free from constraints on scientific discipline subject to the proviso that the research should stand a reasonable chance of leading to possible major commercial opportunities.

A wide range of administrative arrangements is available for supporting approved research. Researchers may be supported directly or indirectly through the provision of expert assistance; leave of absence or replacement staff may also be supported and indeed in general for approved research, the Unit will provide the most reasonable and efficient support in the circumstances. The period of support is restricted initially to three years but it may be extended, and awards are made to the University to cover the cost of the work including salaries, consumables, travel (if appropriate), services (such as analysis or computing) and identifiable overheads. In addition, capital items necessary to carry out the agreed research programme are paid for by the Unit and a further allowance for non-identifiable overhead charges may be made. There is freedom to allocate funds within the agreed total subject to reasonable controls, and provision is made for inflation.

The Unit is looking for proposals from individuals or small groups whose ideas can only be brought to full fruition by allowing their expression and exploration to be pursued without artificial constraints on the scientific disciplines involved or any other administrative impediments, and it will probably involve research programmes that are "project seeking" rather than "mission oriented." However, to give some less abstract guidance, it is likely that proposals will fall naturally within one of three broadly defined areas of interest, briefly described in the following paragraphs.

PROCESSES: these include phenomena in physical and/or biological systems and in general their understanding at the atomic or molecular level.

COMPLEXITY: the broadest definition would include such subjects as decision-making and economics. However, at present, it is probably too difficult to frame fundamental problems in those subject areas where social factors make a significant contribution but otherwise we would wish to support a number of approaches to understanding some of the many types of complexity. One field where the problems seem to be more readily defined is computing science and we are interested in supporting novel ideas which may help to build up a better theoretical understanding. Computer scientists, of course, will have contributions to make in this case, but there may be others in the fields of mathematics or science generally who can help to evolve better ways of dealing with complexity, which may lead to more efficient or reliable use of the increasing potential offered by computers and other developments in electronics, or enable the better control of large systems or projects.

ENGINEERING: fundamental approaches will include those that draw on understanding of both of the above categories. For example, a rigorous approach (as opposed to a pragmatic one) to the design of chemical plant or electronic circuits requires understanding of the relevant physical processes together with an understanding of the appropriate complexity.

However, there can be no precise description of the sort of research BP would like to support and proposals that do not fit into the above framework are not excluded.

OPERATION

The Unit's operation is guided by the Venture Research Advisory Council under the chairmanship of Sir James Menter, FRS, with membership drawn from inside and outside the BP Group.

CONFIDENTIALITY AND CONTRACTS
In general, research programmes are supported by the Unit for their innovative potential in unspecified fields and provided that commercial opportunities have not been identified, research programmes are not subjected to constraints on confidentiality; i.e., researchers are free to discuss their work and to publish their results.

Application may be made by letter of inquiry outlining the research ideas in brief, with projected costs, addressed to Dr. D.W. Braben, Venture Research Unit, Britannic House, Moor Lane, London, EC 2Y 9BU, ENGLAND.

NSF SUSTAINED DEVELOPMENT AWARDS

The Sustained Development Award (SDA) program is jointly funded by NSF's Ethics and Values in Science and Technology (EVIST) and NEH's Science, Technology and Human Values (STHV) program. The two programs share the purpose of promoting research and discussion on contemporary ethical issues in science, technology and clinical research. To this end, the programs seek to support projects that delineate and analyze the issue in need of study, examine the value assumptions underlying alternative courses of action with respect to such issues, or propose ways of resolving them. The SDA program has two specific goals: (1) to provide long-term support for research on ethical questions in science and technology to individuals with a substantial record of achievement in the field; and (2) to encourage institutions that do not currently have programs in science and ethics to develop programs of research, teaching or application and dissemination of knowledge in the field.

Award total $30,000 per year. Up to five SDA awards will be made. The deadline date on proposals is February 1, 1982. Further information is available at the Office of Sponsored Programs.

FIPSE COMPREHENSIVE PROGRAM

The Fund for the Improvement of Post Secondary Education (FIPSE) announced recently in the Federal Register that the closing date for pre-applications to the Comprehensive Program for fiscal year 1982 has been extended from December 1 to December 14. Although applications may now be postmarked as late as December 14, FIPSE strongly encourages pre-applications to be submitted as soon as possible.

For additional information on this program, please contact the Office of Sponsored Programs.

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE ARTS

The National Endowment for the Arts announces a postmark deadline of all categories for Design Arts of December 10, 1981. Grants for organizations include: Design Demonstration, Design Exploration/Research, Design Communication, and General Services to the field. Fellowships for Senior Clerical Individuals, project fellowships, and Design Student Project Fellowships.

Please contact the Office of Sponsored Programs for more information.

Her doctoral research on time use by full-time and part-time homemakers in relation to home management was published by the Cornell University Agricultural Experiment Station. Wiegand's research bulletin on the fatigue of homemakers with young children was published by the Michigan State Agricultural Experiment Station.

Yong H. Kim and Susan S. Lang of the News and Feature Service have been cited by the State University of New York (SUNY) for "excellence in news writing." The honor, announced last month by the SUNY College and University Relations Council, is for feature stories they prepared for the State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences and the State College of Human Ecology. Also cited were four publications produced by the Printed and Visual Communications Group of Media Services at Cornell.

Robert McGinnis, professor of sociology and director of Social Analyses of Science Systems, has been elected director of the Cornell Institute for Social and Economic Research (CISER) for a three-year term. Before coming to Cornell in 1961, McGinnis was an associate professor at the University of Wisconsin and an acting assistant professor at Florida State University.

J. Murray Elliot is serving as acting chairman of the department of animal science in the State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences. His appointment is effective while Robert J. Young is on sabbatic leave through January 31, 1982. Elliot is a professor of animal sciences. Before coming to Cornell in 1960, he was on the faculty of the University of Massachusetts for 10 years.

James B. Bays, a public affairs officer in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at the past year, has been named director of Cornell's new Midwest Regional Office in Chicago. The opening of the Midwest Regional Office brings to 10 the number of offices Cornell operates to coordinate the university's public affairs activities in areas having large alumni concentrations. In the new position Bays provides staff support for Cornell public affairs activity such as alumni relations and fund raising in seven states: Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Wisconsin. He also heads student recruitment efforts for Cornell admissions in Illinois. He is a 1974 Cornell graduate.

Davydd J. Greenwood, a member of the faculty here since 1970, has been promoted to the rank of professor in the Department of Anthropology. The author of three books, Greenwood is one of the few American anthropologists studying the Spanish Basque region. His current research centers on the social uses of theories of biological and economic determinism. Currently chairman of the biology and society major, Greenwood was instrumental in the establishment of the major and also in the development of a new introductory curriculum in anthropology. At present, he has a joint appointment between the Department of Anthropology and the Program on Science, Technology and Society.

A. Reeve Parker, professor and chairman of the Department of English, has been re-elected chairman of the department for a second three-year term. Currently on leave, he will resume his duties in 1982-83. Parker is internationally recognized as a scholar in the field of English literature, in particular for his work in the area of English Romantic poetry.

Mary L. Jacobus, associate professor in the Department of English since 1980, has been granted indefinite tenure. Jacobus is known for her analyses of 19th century literature, particularly the works of Wordsworth and Hardy. She has also done work in the field of feminist literary criticism where she has been concerned with writing both by and about women.

Robert W. Selfe, M.D., has been elected to indefinite tenure as professor of clinical otorhinolaryngology (the study of the ear, nose and throat) in the Cornell University Medical College. Dr. Selfe is the newly appointed chairman of the Department of Otorhinolaryngology, and for the past two years has directed the Residency Training Program. He has taught otolaryngology at Columbia University, the University of California's San Francisco Medical School and at Cornell Medical College.

Barry K. Carpenter has been elected associate professor of chemistry. Carpenter's specialty is physical organic chemistry where he is considered to be at the forefront in applying the kinetic and stereochemical tests of organic mechanism work to the areas of metal-promoted reactions. Before coming to Cornell in 1975, Carpenter was a NATO postdoctoral associate at Yale University.

Review Board Releases 'Day Hall 16' Decision

Majority and Dissenting Opinions in Two Hearings

The members of the Cornell University Review Board met on October 13, 1981 to hear an appeal raised by the 'Day Hall 16'. Appellants alleged that 'C', the Administrative Chairperson of the University Hearing Board, as well as a member of the panel which heard their case, was biased and sought to have the University Hearing Board's decision set aside.

Appellants raised two grounds of support of their charge. First, they pointed to 'C's' questioning of witnesses during the hearing. Second, they pointed to two conversations between 'C' and the editor-in-chief of the Cornell Daily SUN.

In connection with 'C's' questioning of witnesses, appellants have pointed our attention to five excerpts from the record of the hearing. These set forth the questions asked by 'C' of witnesses and the associated answers. We have searched for an indication of bias in these questions. In our view, the questions reflect an earnest and effective inquiry by 'C' into what happened during the takeover of Day Hall. They evidence an attempt by 'C' to more fully comprehend the factual basis of the situation. We note that several of the questions are not relevant. However, irrelevancy is not the equivalent of bias. Bias means prejudice or partiality - a mental leaning in favor of, or against something. We find no evidence in the record relating to 'C's' questioning of witnesses to support the allegation of bias on her part.

Appellants seem to be arguing that questioning of witnesses be more limited. They seem to be urging that members of the University Hearing Board should remain quiet during the proceeding and rely solely on the evidence offered by the Judicial Administrator and the defending parties. However, the proceedings before the University Hearing Board are not the equivalent of a trial. There is no provision, for example, for pre-trial discovery and accordingly, the parties do not know beforehand, what evidence will be presented during the hearing. Therefore, the parties have comparatively little opportunity to fully prepare their cases sufficiently to flesh out all the possible questions that may emerge. In such an instance, justice demands that questions be asked to resolve ambiguity or to fill in gaps in the proffered evidence.

Indeed, the enabling legislation explicitly provides for the asking of questions by members of the University Hearing Board. The Judicial Reform and Restructuring Act of 1972, VII, C, 3 states: "Members of the Board may question witnesses and adduce evidence." Likewise, in the Procedures of the University Hearing Board, revised rules effective July 13, 1974, II, E, it is stated: "Panel members may direct questions to the complainant, witnesses, and defendant at any time, subject only to the panel chairman's responsibility of maintaining an orderly hearing."

It should be noted that the University Hearing Board, which lacks power to require the swearing of an oath for truthfulness or specific penalties for perjury, very much needs and relies upon their ability to exclude witnesses from the hearings prior to their testimony, and to closely question them to test their truthfulness, their attitudes and their powers of observation. Since panelists cannot know the answers to all the questions, some seemingly pointless and irrelevant exchanges will occur. In the case here reviewed, we do not find 'C's' questioning to be excessive or to indicate bias.

Appellants second ground in support of their charge of bias relates to two conversations held between 'C' and the SUN editor ('B'). Both conversations occurred prior to the hearing. The first conversation occurred in connection with an article written in the SUN about the controversy. 'C' approached 'B' in a class that they mutually attended, and suggested that he oversee more carefully, the writing of articles on the matter. She indicated that in her view, the reporting was not accurate, and urged that greater attention be placed on further reporting. According to 'B', she ('C') did not indicate whether she thought members of the 'Day Hall 16' were innocent or guilty, nor did she express a view on the ultimate outcome of the hearing.

The second conversation occurred in connection with an editorial written by 'B'. In that conversation, 'C' expressed disagreement with a point made by him that the community should not distinguish among the individual members of the 'Day Hall 16', but rather, should treat them as a group. 'C' expressed the view that it might be in reference to the fact that different charges had been leveled against different members of the group. 'C' also objected to the use of the word 'crucify'. Again, according to 'B', 'C' expressed no views about their innocence or guilt. The comments apparently were made in connection with her role as Administrative Chairperson of the University Hearing Board and her perception that, as Chairperson, she had a responsibility to provide a liaison with the community.

We note that under "General Rules and Guidelines" from the 'Procedures of the University Hearing Board,' Section D specifically sets aside the requirement for strict confidentiality in the case of a public hearing: "Members of the Hearing Board shall consider all information and material coming before the Board or panel thereof, to be of a confidential nature and shall in no way, divulge the proceedings of a hearing - public hearings excepted. All deliberations of the Board, or panel thereof, shall be held in closed session and shall at all times be strictly confidential." We also note that extensive media coverage including discussion of how the case should be handled had made the matter common knowledge throughout the area prior to the hearing. Yet, we do not condone 'C's' conversations with the SUN prior to sitting with the panel that heard the case. We believe, however, that her remarks were essentially an appeal for fairness, and hence, the mistake - if mistake there be - was of such minor nature that it did not effect the hearing's outcome. More explicit guidelines for statements prior to and following public hearings are needed.

We have carefully examined the record of the hearing: we have listened to the taped recordings of 'C's' questioning of the witnesses; we have heard oral testimony from 'C' and the editor 'B' as to the nature of their conversations; we have taken note of the severity as well as the differentiation of the penalties assigned to the different defendants and we conclude that there was no grounding in fact for the charge that 'C' was biased.

THEREFORE, we dismiss that portion of the appeal which alleges bias.

SEPARATE OPINION

I concur wholeheartedly with the logic and result of the majority's opinion.

On one point, however, I fear the majority failed to perform adequately in its role as an appellate tribunal: the decision does not criticize 'C' for her pre-hearing conversations with the SUN editor 'B'.

The majority merely acknowledges that "we do not condone 'C's' conversations with the SUN editor prior to sitting with the panel that heard the case," and then calls for "more explicit guidelines..."

I am of the firm opinion that 'C's' conversations with 'B' were inappropriate, ill-advised, and indiscreet. Those conversations reflect poorly on the important office she held, because a Hearing Board member should only comment on a particular case in an official manner. 'C' did hold the post as Administrative Chairperson of the UHB, and as such, she was entitled individually to explain to the press, routine matters of scheduling and procedure. But, she was wrong to discuss out of court, the charges filed in a particular case.

The reluctance of the majority to reprimand 'C' and clearly advise against similar behavior is dangerous. The majority has left wide open the possibility that members of future hearing panels will feel free to render private opinions and prognostications to the public about cases which they later will decide.

Nevertheless, I agree that the facts of this case do not support the inference that 'C' was biased. For that simple reason, I cannot vote to reverse. I am, however, troubled by the dissent's correct observation that justice now appears not to have been done. The majority's failure to prevent recurrences of this sort of behavior will further erode community confidence in the campus judicial system.

Dissenting Opinion

The seven members present were unanimously convinced that the University Hearing Board panel member 'C' was not biased against the appellants. The Board members appeared individually to have reached that conclusion prior to their private deliberations after hearing all of the evidence. No member needed to be persuaded by any other to reach that result. As we reviewed the facts presented, our views rapidly coalesced. On the other hand, we also seemed to be of one mind that her pre-trial conduct was at the very least improper. In addition, we developed a consensus that her searching questions during the hearing were generally proper except for several irrelevant questions. (I personally note that much of what was alleged to have been irrelevant answer that the potential power of persuasion by one biased fact-finder in private deliberations is sufficient evidence of a due process violation.

The principle involved was enunciated best in its most quoted form in the British case, Rex v. Sussex Justices, ex parte McCarthy (1924) 1 K.B. 256, 259: "It is not merely of some importance but is of fundamental importance that justice should not only be done, but should manifestly and undoubtedly be seen to be done." "The answer to that question depends not upon what actually was done, but upon what might appear to be done." That case has been favorably cited by twelve American state courts, including the courts of last resort of Iowa, Louisiana, New Jersey (twice), New York and Pennsylvania. Justices Frankfurter and Black, writing for majorities, applied the same principle, without quoting Sussex Justices: "Justice must satisfy the appearance of justice." 348 U.S. 11, 14 and 349 U.S. 133, 136.

The courts will not lightly overturn a decision on the above cited principle. They do not employ a public opinion firm to see which way to swing; they do not make a count of editorials on a case. They do, however, look at 'facts' available to the public at large to determine whether one, not at the center of the process, could reasonably conclude that bias had been present.

Let me make clear what is at stake here. It is totally irrelevant whether the community likes the decision; it is of was legitimate in view of the nexus of actions taken by the group as a whole; one sitting to fix penalty needed to know the whole picture to properly determine individual penalties.

It is at this point that I depart from the consensus. I felt that the Board should have remanded the case to a 'newly composed hearing panel in appeals of procedural violations'. I am told that if I find that there is no bias, then there is no violation of due process. Absent such a violation, then a remand is not a legitimate course of action. I conclude that there is indeed a basic due process violation inherent in this situation. In my opinion, 'C's' urging of the SUN editor to present the University's side of the case has irreparably tainted her participation in it. I feel that she acted out of a sense of fairplay, commendable in an 'ordinary citizen' but she was not such. She not only served on the University Hearing Board, but was its Administrative Chairperson. Where there was criticism of the University Hearing Board, she could have asked the Board as a whole, to respond if needed. Where she felt the SUN had not presented the other side fully, she should have used great restraint by remaining silent. I conclude that a majority of reasonable persons in the Cornell community could have found her conduct highly suspect even though it was a naive indiscretion based ironically on a personal sense of fairness.

Some of my colleagues have said that community opinion concerning whether there may have been bias is totally irrelevant and indeed, consideration of it highly improper, but the courts refute that. If a court concludes that a majority of persons in that 'community' might reasonably suspect that due process was not done (even though it be done) then the court may overturn the conviction. The New Jersey Supreme Court threw out a murder conviction in such an instance. One could argue in rebuttal that in capital cases where a unanimous verdict is required, such an action is mandated, but not in a campus administrative hearing where only a majority vote is necessary to convict. I would surpassing importance that they feel it was arrived at in accordance with principles of fairness. The first consideration is political. The second is not so in the generally understood sense; it is fundamentally judicial. Aspects of the administration of justice can be relevant issues before a judicial body, even though not directly pleaded or appealed as such. The 'appearance of justice' issue is inextricably joined in the issue of bias under appeal. Although I feel the Board should have applied the Sussex Justices rule, I acknowledge that others might not have reached the same factual conclusion which triggers its use, namely, that a majority of the Cornell community could have reasonably concluded that bias had been present by her dealings with the SUN editor.

There are public policy issues that must be balanced. The University in theory would still have an opportunity to re-try the case after remand; it is not as though we would be saying that the Judicial Administrator's case is finished. I realize, in practice however, it may be very difficult for the prosecution with so many witnesses involved no longer in the University. Still, it seems that in the balance, the greater weight must be given to the due process aspects when in doubt.

So much for dissent. Here I would like to emphasize my concurrence with the majority re the legal capacity of members of either judicial board to actively involve themselves in the questioning of parties. This is not based merely on how the Review Board members feel about it, nor only on the Hearing Board rules, nor even on what successive campus legislative bodies fall.

In the appeal heard October 23, in which the contention was that the penalties were unjust and should be rescinded, here is the opinion of the Cornell University Review Board:

Appellants occupied the office of President Frank Rhodes on March 25, 1981 for approximately three hours to protest a proposed increase in tuition. They were subsequently charged with violating Article 1, §2(a)(iii) and (b) of the Campus Code of Conduct, and they pled guilty to this charge. In addition, three of the appellants were charged with violating Article 1, §2(a)(i) and (a)(ii). They contested this charge. On May 9, 1981, the University Hearing Board found them guilty of violating these provisions, too. The Hearing Board imposed a penalty of $50 or the equivalent in community service for violation of the first set of charges, and a penalty of an additional $50 - which was suspended - for violation of the second set of charges.

Appellants argue that, while they have violated the Campus Code of Conduct, no penalty should be imposed in this instance. They argue that their behavior was an instance of "non-violent civil disobedience."

During the hearing before this Appeal Board, they elaborated that they were not arguing for general exemptions from a penalty for cases of "non-violent civil disobedience," but asserted that this particular instance of "non-violent civil disobedience" warrants no penalty.

Appellants ask us, in essence, to carve out an exemption from the Campus Code of Conduct for their particular behavior. They do not contest that they violated the Code of Conduct; rather, they simply seek to avoid punishment.

We find no basis for such an exception.

Respectfully, I dissent.

The majority opinion is incorrect when it states: "appellants ask us, in essence, to carve out an exemption from the Campus Code of Conduct for their particular behavior."

Appellants do not deny their guilt; they ask for no exception. They challenged the sentences imposed by the UHB on the ground that the penalties were unjust. This ground of appeal is allowed under Section VII (D)(2)(c) of the Judicial Reform and Restructuring Act of 1972, as amended:

"Appeals may be based upon:

c. The defendant's belief that the penalty and/or remedy imposed upon him is unjust."

Appellants went to great pains at the Review Board hearing to show the depth of the political frustration that motivated them to violate the Code of Conduct. They successfully distinguished their actions from typical anti-social violations committed for personal aggrandizement and without regard for the interest of the University community. The appellants acted to further what they sincerely felt were the best interests of the University.

No monetary penalty that the UHB can impose could possibly dissuade these appellants from committing similar acts. Imposition of a $50 fine would be purely retributive. It would serve no other function. For this reason the penalty imposed is unjust. Our obligation under the judicial act is to reverse the imposition of unjust penalties. I would have done so.

United
of Tompkins County

Pledges to the Cornell portion of the 1981 United Way of Tompkins County Campaign now total $266,000 and are approaching the goal of $270,000. Cornell Campaign Chairman Jerome M. Ziegler announced Wednesday. Noting that the "cleanup" is always the hardest part of a fund-raising campaign, Ziegler said United Way volunteers are now attempting to contact Cornell staff members who have not returned their pledge cards, including faculty members on sabbatic leave in other countries.

'People and the Poor' Topic for Lecture

English historian Christopher Hill will lecture on "The People and the Poor in 17th Century England" at 3:30 p.m. Monday, Dec. 7, at the Kaufmann Auditorium in Goldwin Smith Hall, Cornell University.

Hill was a professor of history and a master at Baliol College at Oxford University in England. He is now retired and serves as a consultant with the Open University there.

Using a Marxist account to make connections between ideology and social class, Hill has published nine major studies of early modern England using both primary and secondary sources.

Hill's fiercest critic, J.H. Hexter, acknowledges that Hill's "productivity and his erudition are monumental."

Even Hill's critics "allow that (he) has enormously enriched the understanding of early modern English society," according to Clive A. Holmes, associate professor of English history at Cornell.

The lecture is sponsored by the Committee on University Lectures.

A One-Woman Show By Tulis McCall

Actress Tulis McCall, described as a female Hal Holbrook, will give a performance of her one-woman show "Women I Have Known," at 8 p.m. Friday, Dec. 4, in Kaufmann Auditorium of Goldwin Smith Hall.

Sponsored by the Cornell Women's Studies Program, McCall will feature encounters with such personages as Nelly Bly, Calamity Jane Hickok and Katherine Hepburn Sr. Admission of $3 and $3.50 will be charged. Tickets will be available at the door or may be purchased at the Women's Studies office in 334 Uris Hall and at Smedley's Bookshop in downtown Ithaca.

McCall, who gave her first performance of "Women I Have Known," eight years ago, says, "All the women I talk about are women I have known and the reason I do this is because I discovered that history was written by men, for men, about men — amen. Now I don't mean to discount that history or those gentle men, I just mean to add to the picture a little bit. I tell it like it is because I was there when it was. I suppose you could call me Everywoman."

The Week in Sports

Three Invitational Meets Saturday

Three Big Red varsity teams will be hosts for invitational meets on Saturday, highlighting the Cornell winter sports home schedule this week.

The men's and women's track teams and the women's gymnastics squad are sponsors of two invitational meets, both of them at Barton Hall. The Big Red track program will hold the fifth annual Cornell Relays on Saturday beginning at 7 p.m., while the women's gymnastics team will be the host school for the Cornell Invitational, starting at 11 a.m. the same day.

The Cornell Relays will feature some of the top men's and women's teams in the state. Most events in the meet, including the field events, will be scored in relay fashion. The Cornell Relays will also signal the beginning of the indoor season for both the Big Red men's and women's teams.

Varsity teams from such schools as Ithaca College, Cortland State and Clarion make up the field for the Cornell Invitational. The meet is the opener for Coach Betsy East's gymnastics team, which had a 3-6 record and finished third at the Ivy League championships last year.

In addition to the two invitationals, three other Big Red teams will be in action at home on Saturday. The men's swimming team, under first-year coach Peter Orschiedt, takes on Army at the Teagle Pool at 2 p.m., while the women's hockey team entertains Clarkson at 2 p.m. in Lynah Rink. The Big Red men's polo team has a two-game series with Culver Military Academy scheduled for Friday and Saturday evenings, starting at 7:30 and 8:15 p.m., respectively.

Later in the week, two of the men's teams, the hockey and wrestling squads will be at home against traditional state rivals. The Big Red hockey team returns to Lynah Rink after a road game with Boston University to face St. Lawrence on Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. Prior to the game with BU, Cornell had played its first five contests of the season at home, including games with three of the top teams in the country this year—Providence, New Hampshire and Colgate. Wednesday's game will be the Red's final home contest until Jan. 6 when Cornell is host to Yale.

The wrestling team opens the home portion of its dual-meet schedule against Syracuse at 7:30 p.m. in Barton Hall. Syracuse has been an Eastern power for the last few years and this season should be no exception, as the meet figures to be one of the Big Red's toughest this season. Cornell was 10-4-1 last year, including a 4-1 mark against Ivy League competition, and came in ninth at the Eastern championships
