

English Professor Barry Adams Selected as New Vice Provost

Professor of English Barry Adams has been named a vice provost for a three-year renewable term.

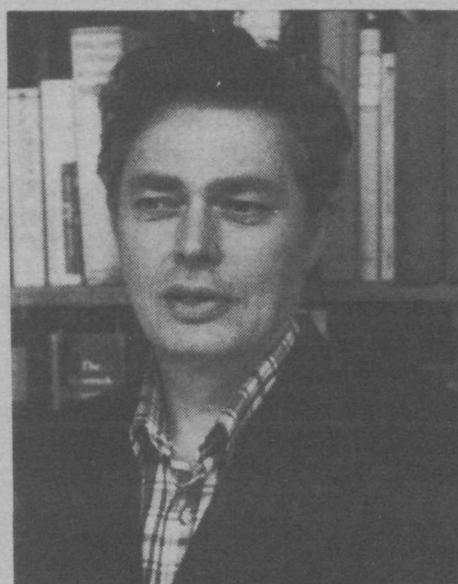

His appointment is pending approval by the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees.

Adams replaces Larry I. Palmer, who resigned his position in July to return to the study of law.

"I am delighted that Professor Adams has been persuaded to accept this post of vice provost," said Provost Robert Barker. "As a distinguished scholar of the humanities with a deep commitment to undergraduate education and as a superior administrator, he will well serve the Cornell community. Students and faculty alike will find him perceptive, helpful and effective in his new role."

As vice provost, Adams is the key administrative officer serving the needs of undergraduate education. His areas of responsibility include: the academic affairs committee of the Board of Trustees, minority education, the Cornell-in-Washington program, career services, the guidance and testing center, the program for science, technology and society, among others.

He will continue to teach an undergraduate seminar on Shakespeare and Elizabethan English, which is the subject of a book-length study he is completing. He is also a contributor to a volume titled, "Teaching Shakespeare."

Adams came to Cornell as an instructor in 1963, was promoted to assistant professor in 1965, to associate professor in 1969, and to full professor in 1975. He received his B.S. degree from Boston College and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of North Carolina.

As a specialist in Shakespeare and Renaissance literature, Adams' essays on medieval and renaissance drama have appeared in many professional journals. He has taught a variety of courses in early English literature, the history of the English language, and contemporary attitudes toward English.

On campus, he served as chairman of the English Department from 1970-76 and he has just begun a third term as chairman of the University Faculty Library Board. Adams has also served on a number of Arts College and University committees including, most recently, committees concerned with improving the Freshman Seminar Program and the quality of writing at Cornell. He is currently a member of the Faculty Council of Representatives, the Nominating Committee of the University Faculty, the Library Advisory Council, and the Commencement Committee.

In 1976, his alma mater, Boston College, awarded him a Presidential Bicentennial Award "for personal dedication, excellence and service."

Cornellians Alice H. Cook and Lucinda A. Noble Among First State Women of the Year Winners

Two Cornellians are among the 12 recipients of the first-ever "Governor's Empire State Women of the Year Awards," which were presented during the 1984 New York State Fair in Syracuse.

Alice H. Cook, professor emeritus of industrial and labor relations received the award in the education category, while Lucinda A. Noble, director of Cornell Cooperative Extension, was honored in the field of agriculture.

The awards recognized outstanding women in 10 other fields: law and justice; human services; religion; science, medicine, and nursing; journalism; government; sports; arts; business, and labor.

Professor Cook of Ithaca, who retired from Cornell in 1972, was a member of the faculty of the New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations for 20 years. She taught courses on collective bargaining, labor law, and labor movements, and wrote several books and articles on collective bargaining and labor relations while at Cornell.

One of her latest books, "Working Women in Japan: Discrimination, Resistance, and Reform," was published in 1982. She was editor of the 1984 book, "Women and Trade Unions in Eleven Industrialized Countries," is author of its introductory chapter and the chapter on Germany.

At age 80, she is actively involved in comparative studies of women in the work forces of several countries and is a consultant, researcher, and writer on problems of comparative worth and wage equity, considered to be the working women's issue of this decade. Currently, she is writing a new book about states and localities that have comparable worth programs in effect.

A friend and colleague of Frances Perkins, labor secretary under President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Cook was instrumental in persuading Perkins to teach in the School of Industrial and Labor Relations from 1957 to 1963. In 1983, Cook received the Tompkins County Human Rights Commission's award for outstanding contributions to human rights.

Lucinda A. Noble manages Cooperative Extension's off-campus, informal education programs of three colleges through a network of 57 county offices, a New York City office, and other regional and statewide efforts. In New York State, agricultural extension activities involve more than 200 Cornell faculty and 150 agricultural agents and specialists in county offices of Cornell Cooperative Extension. The other program areas in the county-state-federal partnership are home economics, 4-H and youth development, community issues, and Sea Grant.

Noble interacts with the major agricultural organizations in the state and is recognized for influencing national legislative and program funding priorities.

Noble has also been involved in the development of science and education policies which strengthen the food and agriculture systems in the state and nation. She was instrumental in the formation of the Northeast Regional Council which continues to encourage strong agricultural, extension, research, and teaching in the land grant colleges in the northeastern states.

Currently, Noble represents all of the nation's directors of Cooperative Extension on the National Extension Advisory Council.

Noble was an extension home economist in Genesee County before joining the Cornell faculty in 1956 as an extension instructor and assistant state leader of home demonstration agents. She was appointed associate director of Cornell Cooperative Extension in 1974, and director in 1978.

Also at this year's State Fair, "Women of Distinction Awards" were presented to a number of other outstanding New Yorkers. Among them is Cornell graduate Barbara McClintock, recipient of the 1983 Nobel Prize in Medicine for her discovery that genes can move, in an unpredictable fashion, from one location to another on the chromosomes of plants.

SIR GORDON SLYNN

Gordon Slynn To Deliver Two Law Lectures

Sir Gordon Slynn, advocate general for the European Court of Justice, will deliver two public lectures here today and Friday on the Law and the European Economic Community, also known as the Common Market.

Both lectures will be at 4 p.m. in the Moot Court Room of Myron Taylor Hall. They are Cornell Law School's prestigious Irvine Lectures for the fall of 1984.

The first lecture will deal with aspects of the economic law of the European community which have been of importance before the Court of Justice, in particular the free movement of goods and capital; the common rules of competition (anti-trust) and state aids; the avoidance of discriminatory taxation.

The second lecture will consider those aspects of the law of the European Economic Community which most affect the individual citizen — the rights of the worker and the worker's family, of the professional and the business person; the extent to which human rights are recognized in European community law; the remedies available to the individual citizen before the European Court.

Slynn, who is 54, holds M.A. and LL.B. degrees from Cambridge University. He was a barrister at law in Cambridge from 1956 to 1976, after which he became a High Court judge, Queen's Bench Division, by appointment of Queen Elizabeth. He held that position until 1981, when he became advocate general for the European Court of Justice.

He was a visiting professor at the Cornell Law School during the fall of 1983, when he taught a course on the European Economic Community.

Eminent Scientists Plan To Honor E. E. Salpeter

"Highlights of Modern Astrophysics" will be the topic when 14 of the most eminent astronomers, physicists and astrophysicists from Europe and the United States help celebrate the 60th birthday of Edwin E. Salpeter, Cornell University's James Gilbert White Distinguished Professor in the Physical Sciences, with a three-day symposium beginning Oct. 1, 1984.

More than 200 scientists are expected to attend the symposium. All lectures are open to the general public.

Salpeter, who serves as a professor of physics, astronomy and nuclear studies and is director of the Center for Radiophysics and Space Research at Cornell, is a specialist in theoretical physics, astrophysics and radio astrophysics.

Speaking at the symposium on the topic of nuclear and particle physics will be William A. Fowler, professor of physics at California Institute of Technology and winner (with Subrahmanyan Chandrasekhar) of the 1983 Nobel Prize in physics, and Malvin A. Ruderman, professor of physics at Columbia University.

Stellar structure and evolution will be discussed in talks by Hans A. Bethe, Cornell University professor of physics emeritus and winner of the 1967 Nobel Prize in physics, and John N. Bahcall, professor of theoretical physics at the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton University.

Freeman Dyson, professor of physics at the Institute for Advanced Study, will deliver a public lecture on "Science and Space" at 8:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 1, in Statler Auditorium.

Speakers on relativistic astrophysics include Kip S. Thorne, professor of theoretical physics at California Institute of Technology; Martin J. Rees, professor of astronomy and experimental philosophy at University of Cambridge; and Robert V. Wagoner, professor of physics at Stanford University.

Interstellar matter will be discussed by Edward M. Purcell, professor of physics emeritus at Harvard University and winner (with Felix Bloch) of the 1952 Nobel Prize in physics; and George B. Field, professor of astronomy at Harvard.

Philip Morrison, professor of physics at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will give the banquet address at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 2.

Observational astronomy will be discussed in talks by Vera Rubin, staff member of the Carnegie Institute Department of Terrestrial Magnetism; Marshall H. Cohen, professor of radio astronomy at California Institute of Technology; and Riccardo Giacconi, director of the Space Telescope Science Institute.

Edwin Salpeter was born Dec. 3, 1924 in Vienna. He earned bachelor's and master's degrees from Sydney University and a Ph.D. in theoretical physics from Birmingham University before joining the Cornell staff as a research associate in 1949. He was appointed professor in 1957 and as director of Center for Radiophysics and Space Research in 1981.

He has served as a visiting professor at the Australian National Observatory, a research associate at the Mt. Wilson and Palomar Observatories, a visiting professor at Sydney University, an Overseas Fellow at Churchill College at Cambridge, and as a Fairchild Scholar at California Institute of Technology. In 1981 he was appointed by President Jimmy Carter as a member of the National Science Board.

Awards to Salpeter include the J.R. Oppenheimer Memorial Prize for his contributions to nuclear physics and relativistic astrophysics and the Royal Astronomical Society's Gold Medal for his contributions to theoretical astrophysics. The University of Chicago and Case Western Reserve University have awarded honorary doctor of science degrees to Salpeter.

Agriculture College 'Roundup' Day to Be Sept. 22

Graduates and friends of the State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences will gather here Saturday, Sept. 22, to take part in the 1984 "Autumn Roundup" and "Bailey Day."

More than 500 people from across the state are expected to attend events in the day-long program which will focus on the life and accomplishments of Liberty Hyde Bailey, first dean of the college.

During his 96 years, Bailey made his mark not only as a horticulturist, but as a teacher, educator, writer, administrator, scientist, poet, and philosopher. He came to Cornell in 1888, and in his first decade here had written 12 books on horticulture.

In 1904, Bailey became dean of the faculty, director of the then College of Agriculture and its experiment station, and professor of rural economy. Graduate studies in the field of agriculture were begun at that time; and Cornell University became the first institution to award a Ph.D. degree in agricultural subjects.

University archivist Gould P. Colman, author of the college's history, will present a multi-media program about Bailey at 10:45 a.m. in Bailey Hall on campus.

The keynote address during "Bailey Day" at Cornell will be given by President Frank Rhodes. He is scheduled to speak at 11:15 a.m.

Also scheduled to address the alumni that day is Kenneth E. Wing, acting dean of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, who will report on activities of the past year and the outlook for the future. Wing will speak at 10:30 a.m.

Other events during the day include a performance by the Cornell Hangovers and a chicken barbecue with entertainment by the Big Red Band and the Cornell Cheerleaders. During the afternoon, alumni and friends can choose among several other activities, such as the first home football game of the season, against Princeton, or tours of the Bailey Hortorium, Cornell Plantations, or the Laboratory of Ornithology.

A postgame wine and cheese party on the Ag Quadrangle will feature jazz of the 1920s.

Tickets are $15 per person for the entire day's events. Checks should be made payable to the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences Alumni Association; be sure to indicate your name, address, class year, and events you plan to attend. The deadline for reservations is Sept. 13. Tickets will not be mailed in advance.

Additional information about the Sept. 22 "Autumn Roundup" and "Bailey Day" activities can be obtained by contacting the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences Alumni Association, 242 Roberts Hall, Ithaca, N.Y., or by telephone at 256-7651.

The path through Wee Stinky Glen was serene and nearly unpopulated in August, before students returned.

Athletes Picked for Induction Into Red Key Honorary Society

Twenty-six athletes have been selected for induction into the Red Key Society, it was announced by Laing Kennedy, director of athletics. The new members will be formally inducted into the society during ceremonies at the University's Athletic Hall of Fame dinner on Sept. 21.

The Red Key Society, originated in 1924, was reactivated in February 1978 after a two-year absence from campus. The purpose of the society is to help promote athletics on the Cornell campus, and to advise and help review the courtesies extended to visiting athletic teams.

The inductees include 21 juniors and five seniors. The seniors who have been selected are Elise Lincoln (La Jolla, Ca.) of the women's volleyball team; Karen Walsh (Vestal, N.Y.), a member of the women's gymnastics squad; baseball infielder Dan Autiello (North Providence, R.I.); hockey wing Mark Hender (Mississauga, Ont.); and Robert Talley (Philadelphia, Pa), who competes in sabre on the men's fencing team.

Among the junior chosen are Dave Van Metre (Omaha, Neb.), a defensive tackle on the Big Red football team; male swimmers Randy Sprout (Everett, Wash.) and Bob Buche (Annandale, Va.); Jill Pechacek (Silver Spring, Md.), a member of the women's swimming team; John Cvetic (Rocky River, Ohio), who competes at 142 pounds on the Big Red wrestling squad; and men's ice hockey players Duanne Moeser (Waterloo, Ont.) and Mike Schafer (Durham, Ont.).

Three of the new inductees compete in two sports: field hockey and lacrosse players Jenny Graap (West Chester, Pa.) and Kate Howard-Johnson (Wellesley Hills, Mass.); and Molly Brown (Cape Vincent, N.Y.), who plays both women's soccer and ice hockey. Two of the athletes are all-around gymnasts — Dave Feeney (Runson, N.J.) and Julie Hamon (Tracyton, Wash.).

The other members are Drew Martin (Staten Island, N.Y.) of the men's basketball team; lacrosse midfielder Frank Kelly (Timonium, Md.); baseball outfielder Jim Durant (Massena, N.Y.) Grant Whitney (Penfield, N.Y.), who competes in both track and cross country; soccer midfielder Andrew Smith (Bloomfield, Conn.); field hockey performer Ellen Grant (Avon, Conn.); footballer linebacker Dan McMahon (Petersburg, N.Y.); women's volleyball player Jennifer Hoerup (Goshen, N.Y.); and Joseph Kirk (Chelsea, N.Y.), who competes in the foil weapon on the men's fencing team.

Sodium Has Other Sources than Salt, Starting with Water Softeners

"Sodium can turn up when you least expect it," the announcer states in a television commercial for a popular low sodium antacid tablet.

There are many sources of sodium which people may overlook, beginning with softened water used for cooking and drinking, according to an environmental analyst for Cornell Cooperative Extension.

"People who are concerned about the amount of salt they consume should be aware that some water softeners can add sodium to their diet," says Ann Lemley.

She explains that most home water softening systems operate by using cation exchange. Calcium and magnesium ions, which are the principal culprits in hard water, are exchanged for sodium ions.

Hard water leaves a lime deposit on hardware, pipes, and other fixtures, makes laundry detergent less efficient, and leaves soap scum and dirt rings around sinks and bathtubs. Thus, many homeowners have water softening equipment installed.

The amount of sodium added to water for softening depends on the hardness of the water. Hard water that has 5 grains per gallon (85 ppm) will end up with about 150 milligrams of sodium per gallon after water softening. If the water has 20 grains per gallon, it will have about 600 milligrams of sodium per gallon after softening.

An environmental chemist, Lemley is in the department of design and environmental analysis in the State College of Human Ecology.

India Association Picnic

SAGE CHAPEL

Local Psychiatrist Will Give Sermon

Howard Feinstein will speak at Sage Chapel at 11 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 9, on the topic, "In the Beginning."

Feinstein is a practicing psychiatrist in Ithaca and an adjunct professor of psychology at Cornell. He received his B.A. and M.D. degrees from Cornell and in 1977 completed his Ph.D. in American intellectual history, also at Cornell.

He has recently published a major psychobiography of William James "Becoming William James," (Cornell University Press, 1984). He will give courses this Spring term on "The Examined Self - A Psychohistorical View" and "American Madness."

Music for the service will be provided by the Sage Chapel Choir under the direction of Donald R.M. Paterson, university organist and Sage Chapel choirmaster.

Student Entrepreneurism: Growing Campus Activity

Cornell students William A. Gellert and Brian Bornstein figured to clear $2,500 each for five days' work with the students' return to campus for the fall term.

They are examples of a growing phenomenon on American campuses: the student entrepreneur. Gellert and Bornstein, established a moving service last year, which transports student belongings for a set fee. While they barely broke even in '83, they expect to make an impressive profit in '84, now that they have gained experience.

Haydn String Quartets Free Concerts Set Saturday and Sunday

Cornell music faculty and guest artists will play four Haydn string quartets in concerts scheduled on campus for 8:15 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 8, and 4 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 9, in Barnes Hall. Both concerts are free and open to the public.

The ensemble will include Prof. Sonya Monosoff and Nancy Wilson, violin; David Miller, viola, and Prof. John Hsu, cello. They will play Joseph Haydn's Quartets Opus 20, No. 3 in G minor; Opus 71, No. 1 in B flat; Opus 50, No. 4 in F sharp minor; and Opus 2, No. 2 in E on restored 18th century instruments, which permit music to emerge with a lightness not possible with their modern counterparts.

In addition to her teaching and appearances on the campus, Monosoff is active as a recitalist and chamber musician and has conducted master classes in baroque violin in this country, and in Italy and Israel.

Hsu is a player of the baryton and viola da gamba as well as the cello. He is a member of the Haydn Baryton Trio, the only ensemble in the United States specializing in the performance of the Diverimenti for baryton, viola and cello by Haydn.

Wilson holds degrees from Oberlin College and Juilliard. A member of the Classical Quartet, the Bach Ensemble, Badinage and the Smithsonian Chamber Players, she has also appeared as soloist with Concert Royal and the Ensemble for Early Music. She is on the faculty of Queens College.

Miller is also a graduate of Oberlin and Juilliard. He is a founding member of the Classical Quartet, Haydn Baryton Trio, Concert Royal and the Bach Ensemble.

All over the country students are returning to campus anticipating profits from businesses they have launched while still in school to help with, if not more than cover their college expenses.

Gellert, a student in Cornell's Graduate School of Management, says, "A college campus is absolutely the most exploitable market."

Students at Cornell sell cord-wood, book rock concerts, stage parties, sell birthday cakes, run laundromats, operate bus service to various cities at vacation and holiday time, sell carpets to incoming students, and store student belongings during vacation breaks. The list of varied student owned and operated businesses is continually growing.

This entrepreneurial spirit of students recently received its imprimatur with the publication of a book by several Harvard students titled: "The Harvard Entrepreneurs Society's Guide to Making Money or the Tycoon's Handbook."

But the Cantabs failed to mention they learned an early lesson from Cornell.

In the Cornell University archives there is a letter, dated Jan. 29, 1914, addressed to C.J. Benson, manager of "The Student's Laundry Agency." It reads in part:

"Dear Sir: A number of Harvard Students are trying to build up a laundry agency here in Cambridge. We have heard how successful the Student Laundry Agency is at Cornell, and we hope that you will be good enough to let us know how you do it...."

The student agency referred to is still running strong at Cornell. Founded in 1894 it is believed to be the oldest agency for student entrepreneurial efforts in the country. It is also believed to be the only student agency incorporated totally independent of its university's administration.

Student Agencies expects to involve more than 150 students in its various ventures this year. It is anticipated that total revenues this year will exceed last year's mark of $800,000. At least three students of the Agencies' management last year earned $10,000 or more.

Among its first student members were Frank Gannett, a 1898 graduate of Cornell and founder to the Gannett newspaper chain which publishes U.S.A. Today, and Willis Carrier, Cornell Class of 1901, founder of the Carrier Corp.

The industriousness and ingenuity shown by these business magnates are still thriving on campus today.

For example Richard Carpenter, a junior majoring in history at Cornell, had 120 T-shirts printed up this summer after seeing one of the hit movies of the season. He printed the logo from the movie on the shirts and had sold nearly all them by the end of July.

But before printing them he checked for copyrights and made some slight adjustments in the logo. These legal subtleties he learned as a manager in Cornell's Student Agencies. He earned nearly $4,500 with the agency during the 1983-84 academic year and expects to clear $5,000 this coming year.

Running with shoelaces tied together is tough, as these contestants found during the Freshman Offbeat Olympics.

Joyce Peterpaul Dedicated Service Award

Winner for September

Joyce Peterpaul

By S.M. COMBER

Joyce Peterpaul is retiring at the end of September after approximately 30 years of special contributions to Cornell. We hope this award will give her just some of the recognition she so richly deserves.

I first met Joyce in 1957 when she worked at the Statler Inn. She held several jobs at the Inn, including the preparation of all hourly payrolls. This was only the beginning of her career at Cornell.

In 1958, Joyce went to the Endowed Business Office where she handled Scholarships, Fellowships, the Travel Account, and the Bank Reconciliation (by hand). She also did the accounting for WHCU and such other (more or less) reasonable assignments as were given to her. She met all deadlines even when it meant overtime and work on Saturdays.

Since 1968, Joyce has been exhibiting her good nature, excellent work and willingness to help others at the State Business Office. During this time she has been responsible for the College Funds of each Dean and for explaining the differences between the State and Endowed systems. She handled most of the financial and employee day-to-day problems in the State Business Office and usually settled them amiably and on the spot. She was always cheerful on the telephone, made plausible excuses for the Director and arranged all his meetings. She is a loyal employee and puts the job near the top of her priorities.

Joyce has also been known to feed auditors "hot" chocolate cake, enliven dull get-togethers and save retirement parties from disaster.

All of us believe that Joyce Peterpaul is most worthy of this award.

Get Set

For Employee Day September 29

Since its inception in 1975, Cornell Employee Day honors University employees each year for their service to Cornell, and has grown tremendously. Last year, however, marked the first time that the chicken barbecue was held after the football game rather than before it. The arrangement was so successful that this year's Employee Day, scheduled for September 29, will continue this format. The Big Red varsity football team will face Colgate that afternoon, beginning at 1:30 p.m. on Schoellkopf field and the barbecue will take place in Barton Hall from 4:00-6:00 p.m. The largest turnout ever is expected for the 10th annual Cornell Employee Day. In addition to all regular full-time and regular part-time employees on campus, retired employees from the Ithaca area, members of the University's Cooperative Extension offices and employees on the staff at the Cornell Medical School in New York City are invited. Football tickets for Employee Day are discounted to $2.00 each for all regular full-time and part-time employees. Tickets for the chicken barbecue are also $2.00 each, and employees can purchase up to four tickets for both the football game and barbecue. They will be on sale on a first-come, first-served basis at the athletic ticket office in the Grumman Squash Courts during the week of September 17-21. Employees must purchase the tickets during this period in order to receive the discount. In addition to the football game other activities are planned, including a photo exhibit inside Barton to provide a broader perspective of Cornell employees' shared missions in teaching, research and public service. Once again, the Cornell varsity cheerleaders and the Big Red marching band will be present at the barbecue to entertain.

There will be a free campus bus shuttle service on Employee Day, which will run from the A and B parking lots to the Barton Hall-Schoellkopf field area. The time schedule of the bus service will be announced in the near future.

This year's Employee Day features one of the strongest rivalries in the state, as the Big Red football team will take on Colgate. The Red Raiders figure to be one of Cornell's toughest opponents this season, having earned a berth to the Division I-AA playoffs each of the past two years. Twenty-two lettermen are back from last season's team, which had an 8-4 record and was rated seventh in the final Division I-AA rankings.

The Big Red with second-year coach Maxie Baughan hopes to build on the momentum generated by three consecutive wins at the end of last season. Baughan has six starters returning on offense and five on defense.

For Big Red sports fans, there is a full menu of Cornell athletic events on campus during Employee Day. The action begins that morning with the women's field hockey team playing Dartmouth at 11:00 a.m. on Schoellkopf field. After the football game, the Big Red men's soccer team takes on Colgate at 6:30 p.m., which will also take place on the Schoellkopf field.

The purpose of Employee Day is to pay tribute to Cornell employees and to recognize the importance of each individual to the Cornell mission; Employee Day helps strengthen the concept that the University is "one community" in which all constituencies perform a vital role and allows employees to share in a social event by supporting the Big Red football team. In keeping the spirit of Employee Day, distribution of literature of any kind will not be permitted, and there will be no distribution of written materials inside Barton Hall.

Cornell Careers

Exploring Career Possibilities Within the University

Contributed by University Personnel Services

If you are curious about career growth—what it is and how you can make it happen at Cornell—come to the Cornell Careers sessions this fall. The first session, "Job Possibilities for Your Future," will be held Thursday, September 27 at 12:15 to 1:15 p.m. in Room 202 Uris Hall. David Yeh, manager of Compensation, University Personnel Services, will provide employees with helpful insight into questions concerning job and career changes.

David will address employee concerns about which skills one should be acquiring now for future job development and what kinds of training are most beneficial for preparing to be a more promotable candidate on a career path.

Cornell Careers seminars support the understanding that your advancement opportunities need not be limited because you lack a clearly defined career path. This session will help you set goals and identify the skills you need to achieve your goals. Issues to be discussed include: learning through formal course work, accepting extra responsibility, taking aptitude and interest tests, and seeking information from individuals who hold jobs that require specific skills. Special attention will be given to changes in technology and the use of computers. Participants will also have the opportunity to ask questions.

Subsequent Cornell Careers programs will focus on aiding employees in examining their career development skills: how to be a successful interviewee in a job interview, how to grow in your present position, and how to increase your potential for advancement by establishing a network of professional relationships.

After the September session, Cornell Careers will be presented the second Thursday of each month from 12:15 to 1:15, 202 Uris Hall. As always, coffee and tea will be provided. Bring a lunch if you wish.

These four fall Cornell Career programs begin the 1984-85 series "Exploring Career Possibilities at Cornell." Cornell Careers was launched in November of 1981 to aid employee understanding about career possibilities at the University. Past programs have provided a forum for employees to share information crucial to individuals making career decisions at Cornell.

Cornell Careers' speakers include University administrators involved in hiring, job classification, and career and organizational development decisions, counselors, and Cornell employees. For further information about Cornell Careers, contact the Training and Development section of University Personnel Services, 256-7400.

to the professor who donated $1,000 to the twenty librarians in the Mann Library. It seems the professor, whose identity is being kept a secret, had brought the library staff many problems, each of which they solved. He specified that the gift should be spent on something they use professionally, or for books. The recipients have several ideas about what library material to buy with the donation, and they will make their choice soon.

Cornell Recreation Club News

As the new school year begins, the Cornell Recreation Club (CRC) has much to report about past and future events. The Toronto trip on the weekend of August 11 was a great success. Thirty-nine participants made the excursion and were about evenly divided between those who attended the Toronto-Baltimore baseball game and those who enjoyed a day of shopping. A visit to Niagara Falls graced the return trip. Also a huge success was the Springside Theater trip to Auburn on August 16 which included a dinner and show. The show, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," received high praise from the participants.

The election for CRC board members for the coming year was won by Al Reed, George Peter and Daryl Dunn. We are sorry to report that Ann Argetsinger has resigned her board position with one year left on her term; other major commitments necessitated the resignation. The vacancy will be filled by either Dom Versage or Judy Bower who tied for fourth in the current election. A run-off election will be held to determine the winner.

The Nashville trip is fast approaching. It will be October 10-15, and the $385 per person charge will include transportation, double occupancy, visits to the Grand Ole Opry and Opryland, two breakfasts, one dinner, an evening show, and sightseeing. For further details or reservations call either Becky Cofer at 6-7565 or Swarthout and Ferris at 257-2277. A $50 deposit by mid-September will hold your reservation.

Arrangements are currently underway to make available to CRC members discounts and specials from selected local merchants who deal in recreational goods. Additional information will be forthcoming.

The design on the CRC membership "smile" buttons has been adopted as the official club logo. The board members are open to other suggestions for the logo and encourage your input on this matter. However, until a better idea surfaces, the button design will serve as the club logo.

Just a reminder, the CRC golf outing is Saturday, September 8 (rain date Sunday, September 9) for those who have signed up. The event has been a great success in the past and promises to be even better this year.

Getting a Handle On Problem Drinking

Contributed by EAP Staff Members

Often employees have asked the Employee Assistance Program (EAP) staff the question, "How do you know when someone crosses the line from social drinking into problem drinking?"

The question is an important one and requires knowledge about the signs and symptoms of alcohol's effect on the body and the problems its use creates for a person's life.

The social drinker can be a heavy drinker, but not have difficulties with family life, work performance, health, finances, and individual functioning. The problem drinker, however, has enormous difficulties in these areas, and yet despite this, continues to drink and risk all aspects of his or her life. Two of the most dramatic indicators of problem drinking are a defensive denial that a problem exists and the loss of control over the drinking.

Following is a set of questions to ask yourself regarding the use of alcohol. An answer of Yes to any one of these questions may indicate that a problem with alcohol is developing. Certainly more than one yes increases the need to seek more information and an assessment by a professional.

- When angry, do you often handle your feelings by having a drink?
- Do you regularly drink to be comfortable with certain people or in social situations?
- Do you have a regular time during the day in which you drink?
- Do you sometimes drink to calm a feeling of nervousness?
- Do you ever drink secretly?
- Have you ever had to go to the doctor or hospital because you were in such bad shape after drinking?
- Have you found yourself continuing to drink more than you had originally wanted, after having taken one or two drinks?
- Do you sometimes find that you have done something important while drinking and couldn't remember?
- After a period without alcohol, such as awakening after sleep or at the end of a work day, do you sometimes experience the following: hands trembling, feeling nauseous, agitated or nervous, sweating?

- Do you sometimes have to take a drink to fall asleep or stay asleep?

(The previous list was adapted from Johns Hopkins Hospital alcoholism evaluation questionnaire.)

Alcoholism always gets worse, sometimes resulting in death. If you've said to yourself, "I can quit any time I want to," yet continue to use alcohol to deal with your feelings, and drinking is creating or aggravating problems in your life, then it is time to seek professional help.

There are resources in the community for help with questions and treatment for problem drinking:

- EAP: 273-1129.
- Alcoholics Anonymous, 24-hour switchboard, 273-1541.
- Alcoholism Council: 273-5422.

In addition, if someone in your family has a problem with drinking, you can seek help through Al-Anon at 273-1541.

The EAP staff would like to answer other questions that employees have, in future Networking articles. Please send any questions you have regarding family life stress, work related stress or alcohol or substance abuse to Employee Assistance Program, Family & Children's Service, 204 North Cayuga Street, Ithaca, New York. (Please send your questions anonymously.)

Computer Services Offers Walk-In Transparency Service

For transparencies with high-quality lettering and in several colors, WITS (Walk-in Transparency Service) is now available through the department of Cornell Computer Services. These transparencies are available for use with overhead projectors. The procedures for getting transparencies prepared are simple:

1. The following forms can be picked up in Uris G-26.
  - RPA-07 sets up a real money account if departments do not already have one.
  - CCS-46 provides instructions for filling out CCS-47.
  - CCS-47 is the form that must accompany each request for making a transparency.
2. Departments that do not yet have a real money account should fill out RPA-07 and bring it to G26 Uris between noon and 5:00 p.m. Mondays through Fridays to obtain a 10-digit processing number which identifies the department's real money account.
3. One CCS-47 form for each transparency needs to be completed, including the respective 10-digit processing number.
4. Individuals who want transparencies done while they watch can call 256-4981 and ask for someone from WITS. Otherwise, the forms can be left with the Uris operator and the completed transparencies can be picked up in the laser output box later.

5. The $3.00 charge per transparency includes materials, equipment use and the staff time spent making the transparencies.

It should be added that this service is best suited to fairly short messages and texts. If you have any questions, please contact Margie Wilson or Donna Bergmark at 256-4981.

Registrar's Office Welcomes Back Cornell Students

By DONNA UPDIKE

Each fall the arrival of students on campus signals a return to normalcy (or craziness) for staff whose job it is to help these students deal with the necessary bureaucracy while not disrupting the educational process. One office—that of the Registrar—interacts continuously with students throughout their entire stay at Cornell to ensure they have an accurate record of their academic achievements to carry with them throughout their careers. It is a fact of life that all students must register. Consequently, every fall and spring the Registrar's office gears up to make this process as painless as possible.

I asked Gloria Howell, Assistant University Registrar, how her staff prepares for registration and how they are involved in helping students. Gloria explained that, although each college has its own registrar who is responsible for pre-course enrollment, students are still required to register in Barton Hall to make their enrollment official. During the two-day registration in Barton each fall and spring, 7,500 students register per day. It seems this would put a strain on the staff. In fact, Gloria hires 65 students and five hourly people to help with registration. In addition to this, she has six permanent staff members.

To minimize the agony of registration, Gloria coordinates procedures with the individual college registrars and their staff. In this way, everyone knows in advance what needs to be done before moving to Barton.

In addition to registration, the University Registrar is the "keeper" of all official student records including transcripts, enrollment figures and student I.D.s. Counseling the students is an ongoing activity, and they are also responsible for the exam schedule and course rosters.

Within the last few years, an on-line computer system has aided the Registrar's office, enabling staff to update student records quickly and providing immediate feedback to students with questions about their records as well as producing transcripts within a few seconds (if all systems are working properly!).

There is a staff of four full-time employees who are in charge of inputting student records and grades plus generating the many course files and registration figures that departments use campus-wide for course and room scheduling. Helping students and making sure their records are as complete and accurate as possible is not always an easy task. But knowing how much the students rely on the Registrar's office throughout their academic progress, and for their future in the job world, makes the job of welcoming the Class of '88—and all others—a very satisfying one again this year.
