ATHLETIC COUNCIL MEETING.

Alumni Representation on Council—The Baseball Schedule.

The Athletic Council and a number of representatives of alumni associations held a conference Saturday afternoon, March 3, for the purpose of considering several topics connected with the athletic management of the University. The alumni representatives present were: Charles S. Francis, '77, of the Eastern New York Association, Daniel Upton, '90, of the Buffalo Association, F. O. Affeld, Jr., '97, of the New York Association, and Guy Gundaker, ex-'96, of the Philadelphia Association. The questions of the selection of a graduate manager of athletics, and of alumni representation on the council were discussed at length, and a plan agreed upon in the latter case to be presented to the council for consideration.

Following the conference a short meeting of the Athletic Council was held, at which the Basketball Club and the Gymnastic Club were recognized as authorized clubs.

Another meeting of the council was held Tuesday evening, March 6. At this meeting the recommendation of the conference as to the composition of the council was adopted. The provisions of the new arrangement are as follows:

The Athletic Council of Cornell University shall be composed of the following persons: (1) the six trustees of the Cornell University Athletic Association, to be chosen by the Council; (2) one representative from each Cornell alumni association, such representatives to have three votes in all, provided three or more be present, otherwise one vote each; (3) the manager and captain of each of the following branches of sport—navy, baseball, football, and athletic team; (4) the president of the Interscholastic League, to be elected by the Council; and (5) one additional undergraduate to be elected by the managers and captains of the authorized athletic clubs, subject to ratification by the Council. These clubs at present are the Cross Country Club, the Lacrosse Club, the Fencers' Club, the Basketball Club, and the Gymnastic Club.

It will be seen that this increases the council from fifteen members to nineteen. The local graduate members are reduced from seven to six, and the alumni associations are given three votes, making nine graduate votes in all. The undergraduate members are increased in number from eight to ten by the addition of the president of the Interscholastic Association and the representative of the clubs. The plan for a graduate athletic manager was considered, but nothing definite and final was agreed upon.

The baseball schedule was presented, and approved by the Council. It is as follows: March 27, Clemson College, Calhoun, S. C.; March 28, Mercer University, Macon, Ga.; March 29, University of Georgia, Athens, Ga.; March 30, University of Georgia, Atlanta, Ga.; March 31, University of Georgia, Atlanta, Ga.; April 2,

Sibley Test in Buffalo.

During the past week the experimental Department of Sibley College has been making one of the most extensive and important tests in its history. It is a complete test of the plant of the Buffalo Street Railroad Company. Forty Sibley students and several professors and instructors went to Buffalo to take part in the tests, which lasted about four days. Three tests in all were made, the first and second without Niagara power and with and without storage batteries, the third with Niagara power and ordinary conditions of running.

Professor Carpenter took charge of the test in person for part of the time and Professor Ryan for the remainder. Messrs. West and Burt, instructors in the college, had charge of the electrical and engine tests respectively, and Mr. Jones, fellow in the department, ran the boiler test.

The students who took part in the test were from the junior and senior classes and about twenty seniors expect to write theses on the test. Four seniors from the chemistry department also took part in the test.

Students Asphyxiated.

Irving L. Stedman, '00, of Homer, N. Y., and Edward L. Struven, special, of Baltimore, Md., members of the party which went to Buffalo last week to test the street railway system of that city, were overcome by gas in their room at the Leland House on the night of Monday, the 26th. Early Tuesday morning when the odor of gas was discovered, the door was broken down and both men were found unconscious. Struven recovered quickly and was able to be about on the same day, but Stedman remained in a critical condition for some time. The latter, however, gained slowly and on Thursday was also declared to be out of danger. A leaky gas heater was the cause of the accident.

DEPARTMENT OF POLITICAL SCIENCE.

The Development of the Work—What is being Accomplished Today.

Political Science has always been considered important at Cornell. President White, in his inaugural address, laid down the principle that "There are two permeating ideas which must enter into the work of the University in all its parts. The first is the need of labor and sacrifice in developing the individual man in all his nature and in all his powers as a being intellectual, moral, and religious. The second of these permeating ideas is that of bringing the powers thus developed to bear upon society. We should provide ample instruction in history, in political and social science and in the modern literature. . . . We would give ample opportunity for those classes of study which give breadth to the mind, and which directly fit the student for dealing with state problems and world problems. In this view, historical studies and studies in political and social science will hold an honored place; but these studies will not be pursued in the interest of any party. On points where honest and earnest men differ, I trust we may have courses of lectures presenting both sides."

Instruction in this line consisted at first of a course of lectures in Political Economy given during one term of each year by Dr. William D. Wilson, professor of moral and intellectual philosophy. A few years later, Theodore Dwight began a series of lectures on constitutional law, and in 1875 this course was superseded by a series of lectures on the constitution of the United States and American jurisprudence.

The department was formally organized in 1881, when a four years' course in History and Political Science was established. Graduates from this course received the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy in History and Political Science. Courses in systematic politics, public finance, and practical economic questions were added to the curriculum year by year, and in 1887 the departments of History and Political Science were organized into the President White School of History and Political Science, and a fellowship in political and social science was established. While Professor Laughlin was in charge of the work in economics, in 1890, two fellowships in that field were founded.

In 1891, Professor Jeremiah W. Jenks was called to a chair of municipal, political, and social institutions. The next year, the departments of economics and finance and of political and social institutions were brought under one head. Professors Walter F. Willcox and Charles H. Hull were appointed, with Professor Jenks, to take charge of the work, which is being carried on as a unit, in so far as this is practicable.

Each professor, with his assistants, has charge of some special branch of the work. Professor Jenks gives his time chiefly to the work in politics, political science, and economic legislation; Professor Willcox to social science and statistics; and Professor Hull to political economy and finance. The assistants, Mr. Brooks and Mr. Weston, divide their time between advanced work in economic history and municipal government and the text-book work with the classes beginning the study of economics. In all branches the aim is to make the work of direct, practical value, while not neglecting economic and political theories. Andrew D. White's idea of presenting both sides of questions is carried out as far as possible. The political questions of the day are treated fully, and students are taught to think impartially and independently. For the last two years the department has invited the most eminent men in business and politics to give lectures before the University. John W. Foster, ex-Secretary of State,

PROFESSOR CHARLES H. HULL.

has lectured on "Diplomacy;" Charlton T. Lewis, counsel for the Mutual Life Insurance Company, on "Insurance;" W. H. Baldwin, Jr., president of the Long Island Railroad, on "Railroad Management;" and Edward Rosewater, editor of the Omaha Bee, on "Journalism." A course of lectures on the work of the State departments by prominent State officials has been provided for this year. The object of these lectures is to give the students more accurately the point of view of the business man and the politician.

The work the professors are doing outside of the department shows that the practical nature of their work is widely recognized. Professor Jenks is now the expert agent of the United States Industrial Commission in their investigation of trusts and monopolies undertaken with the view of recommending legislation on the subject to Congress and the several states. He has had special charge of selecting and examining the witnesses for and against the trusts and of editing the testimony. In this connection, he has collected in one volume the laws of the United States and the different states which concern trusts, with a digest of all the decisions under these statutes and leading common law decisions concerning trusts. A second volume will contain the testimony and the economic results of the study. He has, further, been assigned by the Commission the task of investigating the trusts of Europe during the coming summer. This investigation has also led Governor Roosevelt to call him into consultation several times this winter to aid in the preparation of his message and in proposing measures for state legislation concerning trusts and corporations.

The administration wished the national census department to come closely into touch with the universities of the country, and therefore appointed Professor Willcox one of the Chief Statisticians of the census. He is investigating "methods and results" and is planning the methods of taking the census and interpreting the results—the work which, more than any other, calls for breadth of statistical knowledge and soundness of judgment. To him has also been given the task, together with one of his colleagues on the Census, Mr. Gannett, of interpreting and writing up the results of our first Colonial Census, the one lately taken in Porto Rico and Cuba. His interest and experience in practical social questions is shown by his acting for years as a member of the local Board of Health, and by Governor Roosevelt's appointing him a year ago a member of the State Board of Health. While Professor Willcox is in Washington, his work is ably carried on by Professor Powers, formerly of Leland Stanford University.

Professor Hull has just published one of the most scholarly books produced in this field for a long time. This book, a collection of the works of Sir William Petty, with an introduction and critical annotations, has been very favorably reviewed in all the principle countries of Europe. Beside his accurate scholarship and his remarkable critical acumen, Professor Hull is well known also for his sound judgment and business sense. These qualities have been long recognized by his colleagues in the Faculty, of which he is Secretary. Upon earnest solicitation he has acted as President of the Cornell Coöperative Society from the beginning and is perhaps chiefly responsible for its success. For some years he has been Treasurer of the American Economic Association, and at its last meeting that body insisted on making him its Secretary also, thus putting practically all of its business—publishing included—into his hands. The joint committee of the Legislature on taxation submitted to him lately for criticism its new plan of taxation.

The department has been greatly aided in its work by having at its disposal excellent laboratory and library facilities. It has perhaps the best material in reports, apparatus, etc., for work in statistics possessed by any university in the country. It is unusually well equipped in periodical literature and rare books on the history of economics. The library of foreign statutes is also large and growing rapidly.

The Seminary, for graduate students only, is carried on jointly by the three professors in the department. Each professor takes special charge of the work of those men whose theses are in his special field, and of the Seminary on days when reports on these theses are in order. Besides the regular thesis work, the Seminary usually has on hand some special subject. This year Colonial governments have been studied, the relations of our government to its dependencies is being considered, in the light of our own history, legal and political, and in that of the leading colonial powers.

The most prominent characteristic of the department throughout is that it has always tried to keep closely in touch with practical work in politics, in government, and in business, in order to prepare its students especially for practical work in life. This does not involve neglect of theory or neglect of study of principles; but it does involve the effort to apply these principles to the solution of practical problems; while the experience of the teachers in aiding our public men to solve non-partisan questions enables them to judge more soundly regarding what is really practical.

University Song Book.

The continuance of the work on a University song book, inaugurated by the class of '98, has been taken up by the senior class. At the last class meeting a motion was made for the appointing of a committee from the undergraduates, to continue the work.

It was suggested that the song book contain only the seven or eight distinctively Cornell songs. The book is to be edited with an eye to artistic features, combining usefulness with attractiveness.

Every effort will be made to get the book out in the spring but in case circumstances are such that it cannot be completed, the senior president of next year can add to the present committee or appoint an entirely new one, to complete the work of publication.

President West of the senior class appoints the following committee: W. L. Niles, '00, chairman; A. E. Peterman, '00, G. S. Dresser, '00, W. H. Morrison, Jr., '01, H. E. Cavanaugh, '01, L. G. Price, '02, J. A. Smith, '02.

A Successful Meet—Boxing and Wrestling Contests in the Armory.

The annual indoor boxing and wrestling meet took place in the Armory on the last night in February. E. A. Kinsey, '01, carried off honors in the welter weight boxing in two rattling bouts with H. W. Riley, '01, and W. B. Kugler, '02, respectively. Kinsey's foot work was excellent—better than his head work at very close quarters. Riley put up so good a fight that a fourth round was required before the decision was rendered.

Archie Morrison, '01, of football fame, defeated N. O. Tiffany, '01, in a fast, game bout, by good use of a straight, hard left; and later defeated W. W. Wood, '03, winning the middle weight novice match. C. H. Greene, '02 L, received the decision over F. A. Pierce, '02 V, in the championship match for this class, and J. Abbott, '02, won the light weight match. W. J. Warner, '03, and R. Berry, '03, at 207 and 186 pounds, respectively, furnished considerable amusement in the heavy weight contest, which was won by Warner.

In the wrestling, the heavy weight championship bout was between W. W. Follmer, '01, and C. A. Lueder, '02 V, which the former won by scoring one fall. The match was gamely contested, Follmer's quickness overmatching his adversary's superior weight. A good man was discovered in the middle weight champion, J. B. Harris, '01, who created some amusement by his trick of sitting bolt upright on the mat and by revolving on his axis, frustrating the attempts of his opponent, M. L. McKoon, '03, to overbalance him. The winner of the novice match in this class was J. B. Smallwood, '03, a cousin of Charley Smallwood the oarsman, who scored one fall against E. A. Burrows, '02. The welter weight championship went to W. W. Ellis, '01, after a plucky struggle by his lighter opponent, F. A. Klock, '02, for more aggressive work, there being no fall. Klock later won the light weight championship by scoring two falls against I. F. Westheimer, '02, who also lost in the novice bout in this class to J. Abbott, '02. W. S. Crandall, '01 L, defeated L. W. Boynton, '00 L, in the heavy weight contest for novices, and the feather weight championship went to S. C. Root, '01, in a slow bout with no falls.

The meet went off very smoothly, with no delays between the bouts, and reflected much credit on the management.

Fencers' Club Wins.

On last Friday night the Cornell Fencers' club won from Columbia at the Columbia Gymnasium, Morning-side Heights, after a very close contest. Although Columbia's team was considered the best among the colleges, the home team showed unexpected strength and defeated their opponents by a score of five bouts to four.

The individual scores were as follows: G. B. Viles, G., won 1, lost 2; N. L. Knipe, '00, won 2, lost 1; A. E. Wieland, '00, won 2, lost 1. The bouts between Ware of Columbia and Knipe and Wieland were especially interesting.

C. W. Davis, '03, substitute and Mr. Brigandi accompanied the team. After the contest the Cornell contingent were very pleasantly entertained by a dance given in the gymnasium in honor of the various competitors in both the fencing events and the gymnastic meet which took place at the same time.

Rochester Alumni Banquet.

The Cornell Association of Rochester held its sixth annual banquet on Tuesday evening, February 27. After the menu had been thoroughly tested, Leon Stern, '89, the president of the association, introduced the toastmaster, James R. Davy, '94.

The association was fortunate in having as its guest for the evening, Professor H. Morse Stephens, who responded to the "Cornell Faculty" and he was especially interesting in his remarks on athletics and the alumni hall. The next speaker was Mrs. W. J. Guthrie who gave a very interesting talk on the Nature Study Movement.

While waiting for the last speaker of the evening, impromptu remarks were made by Stanley Shepherd, '96, Simon Adler, '89, E. P. Allen, '92, and John Skinner, '90. The banquet was brought to a close by an eloquent address on "Our Duty to the Philippines" by Hon. O. F. Williams, '69.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 7, 1900.

NEW ENGLAND ALUMNI.

The second annual dinner of the New England Cornell Club will take place Friday evening, March 23 at the University Club, Boston Mass. President Schurman will be the guest of the evening. Louie Erville Ware, 108 Austin Street, Worcester, Mass. will furnish information. The largest Cornell gathering ever held in New England is anticipated.

A CORNELL SONG BOOK.

The class of 1900 has in its four years displayed much energy and public spirit. The latest benefit the University derives from the presence of this class is the definite initiation of a project for the long discussed Cornell Song Book. Cornell is peculiarly rich in the quantity and yet more in the quality of its songs. It is not every University that has the standard for its songs set by the author of "The Blue and The Gray." A handsome book of our best songs, old and new, will not go begging when it is ready. Cornellians again congratulate themselves on the class of 1900.

THE SOCIAL SPIRIT IN CORNELL.

The pleasing announcement was made at the Junior Smoker that the Junior Ball Committee, the Sophomore Smoker Committee and the Sophomore Cotillion Committee had respectively presented to the Navy the shell in which the 1900 Varsity is to row, the oars with which it is to pull and the trophy case in which to keep its memory green.

It is not difficult to recall a time when the surplus from class events was not dedicated to University uses. We are yearly advancing in public spirit, and we note with decided approval the disappearance of the narrow and selfish usage in accordance with which dance committees have been accustomed to pocket all the profits arising from their functions, while allowing the class to bear any losses.

To those who compare the present with the not distant past there will be evident a constant and even rapid growth of social solidarity, of University spirit, and of loyalty to Alma Mater. The undergraduate body and the President of the University have united in saying that the social life of the University is today most important. The Cornell of today is a unit in its call for dormitories, commons, Alumni Hall and undergraduate club house. How earnest this feeling is, and how universal, is, we believe, not yet at all realized by those older Cornellians upon whose backing the new order of things must depend. Their attention cannot be called to it too often, or too emphatically.

IMPORTANT CHANGES.

The attention of those among our alumni who are interested in athletics is called to the article published elsewhere in this issue setting forth the important changes which have just been made in the composition of our Athletic Council.

The most important change is that our alumni have been given direct representation on the Council with full voting powers. Each alumni association is asked to designate one representative to attend each meeting of the Council. If more than three representatives are present at any meeting, they shall have three votes among them; if three or less than three appear, each representative shall have one vote. It seems necessary to work through the alumni association and not through the alumni individually, and, therefore, any alumnus who is not connected with some one of our alumni association cannot receive the benefit of this change. This fact may, and it is hoped, will, lead to the strengthening of the present alumni associations and to the creation of new alumni associations. Ample provision has been made for effective alumni representation on the Council. It is now left for the alumni themselves to take advantage of it. Surely they will do so.

It appears to be conceded by all that the management of athletic affairs should be left in the hands of undergraduates as far as possible. In accordance with this general opinion the Council has always been so constituted as to give the undergraduates a majority vote. The allowance of three votes to the alumni has made it necessary, in order to preserve this undergraduate majority, to increase the undergraduate representation on the Council by two votes. Advantage has been taken of this necessity to add to the Council two members whose need has become strongly felt, especially of late. The desirability of having the president of the Interscholastic League on the Council and of having the minor branches of sport represented by an undergraduate of their own choosing cannot be questioned and this change also will doubtless meet with hearty commendation.

CORNELL AND AMERICAN CITIZENSHIP.

Close adaptation to American needs is the key note of every department of Cornell,—not least in political and social science. Cornell has never forgotten the importance of the study of theory and ultimate principle in any field. But it is true that great emphasis is here put upon the actual workings of the political and social institutions of this country; upon the original study and solution of American social and political problems. It is this which made Professor Willcox's paper on negro criminality in North and South the most important utterance on the subject. It is this careful mastering of American problems which has made state and national governments equally anxious to utilize the services of Professor Jenks, now recognized as the first authority on the subject of trusts.

Professor Jenks is, indeed, in almost as much demand by the public as President Schurman. We know how constant are his labors for Albany and Washington. But now that Cornell is approaching a spring recess, Professor Jenks has been summoned to give a course of four lectures on "Trusts" at Harvard, one at Mt. Holyoke College, and another at the University of Michigan during the short ten days that his presence will not be demanded here.

The United States and the particular commonwealth in which we live are the greatest gainers by Cornell's constant and costly application of scientific method and trained scholarship to the special difficulties of our civilization, whether they be the pacification and Americanization of the Philippines, the bridling and harnessing to the public welfare of the trusts, or plain matters of engineering, state medicine, economic zoology, or forestry. Nevertheless, Cornellians reap their own reward. They have always the benefit of instruction by national experts. In return for devotion to the actual needs of the country, they receive an unmatched training for the duties of American citizenship, both in the wider and in the narrower, political, sense of the word.

The National Herbart Society, of which Professor DeGarmo is president, held a "Round Table" discussion at Chicago, February 28th, in conjunction with the annual meeting of the school superintendents of the country. The subject was the organization of business training as a part of American education. The paper was read by Dr. Herrick, of Philadelphia, who recently lectured here on the subject, and among those leading the discussion was Professor Charles H. Thurber, '86.

THE UNIVERSITY SMOKER.

A Successful Event given by the Junior Class.

The Junior Smoker held in the Armory the night of March 2 was probably the most successful ever given here. The enthusiasm was strong from start to finish, the speeches were good and to the point, and the other features of the entertainment were on an equally high level.

At eight o'clock President Ogden, of the Junior class, introduced the toastmaster, Col. Chas. S. Francis, who met with a hearty greeting. Col. Francis announced that he had come with good news from the sickroom of the "Old Man," who was rapidly recovering strength and would soon be able to resume his duties in the crew room. When the enthusiasm roused by the toastmaster's feeling references to Mr. Courtney had subsided, the Glee Club rendered "Alma Mater," in which the audience joined.

The first speaker of the evening was Hugh Jennings, whose appearance was the signal for a hearty demonstration. He expressed himself as well pleased with the work of the baseball squad, but thought it ought to be at least 150 strong, instead of 65, in an institution the size of Cornell. He deplored the attitude of the students in becoming discouraged when not successful in making a team, and suggested that a way to keep up interest among men who can play, as well as to insure the good second team which is essential to the success of the 'Varsity, would be to give an emblem of some kind to all men who work faithfully throughout the season. In conclusion, Mr. Jennings said he would probably remain at Cornell until the middle of April, and urged all baseball men to turn out to help the 'Varsity.

After two selections by the Mandolin Club, Col. Francis said, "Mr. Fay, the chairman of the Junior Ball committee, will please come forward and present the Navy with an eight-oared shell." Fay said he had not brought it with him, but the Prom. committee placed $400 at Mr. Courtney's disposal "to build a winning shell." R. K. Fernow then presented to the Athletic Council a trophy case from the Sophomore Cotillion committee, to be put in the new trophy room in Barnes Hall, and R. H. Whitbeck presented the Navy with a set of oars on behalf of the Sophomore Smoker committee.

The toastmaster's remark that we had thus apparently settled the "race question" brought forth much applause, and "Freddy" Colson received another round when he came forward to acknowledge the gifts. In a very interesting speech he related several facts in the history of the Navy, among them how the '89 crew had made Mr. Courtney adopt a launch in place of a single shell from which to do his coaching. He also spoke of how we were coming gradually to build not only our own boats, but all the material necessary for the crews, here in Ithaca under Mr. Courtney's personal supervision, and said that Cornell possessed in John Hoyle not only one of the best boat builders in the country, but a most enthusiastic Cornellian, who had rendered most efficient service in the crew room since Mr. Courtney's illness. The boat used by the freshmen last year was built at the boathouse—was the most satisfactory a Cornell crew has ever had; and the Prom. committee might rest assured that the best eight-oared shell in this country would be turned out for the 'Varsity this spring. In closing, Mr. Colson said that the students of the Medical College in New York had given to the Navy a fund they had started for the purpose of buying a Cornell flag for their building, and proposed that the students here present them with a flag.

After the long yell had been given with a will for "Freddy," E. A. Kinsey, '01, did some sleight of hand tricks, and was followed by a trombone and cornet duet by S. C. Hulse, '01, and L. Boecker, '01, which was twice encored.

Manager Porter then presented the men of the football team with last season's trophies, in the shape of little gold footballs suitably inscribed, after which the hall was darkened and Professors Nichols and Moler exhibited some very interesting animoscope pictures, four of which, representing the crews rowing, were taken from the launch last May. The Glee Club then rendered "'75," and responded to encores with "Katie" and "The Mulligan Musketeers."

The next speaker was "Bob" Deming, '00, who "talked track." He said the team should be better this year than last in the high hurdles, dashes, weights and all other runs. This is the first time the relay team has done so much so early, or been so successful, the seven men on the team having taken in various events, in the three contests they entered, 16 prizes from outside athletes. The work in the Armory this winter, which is the inauguration of a new system, has been very successful. The principal gain of the team this year is a good trainer—John Moakley—who has the confidence of every man on it. Deming then outlined the meets which Cornell's team will enter this spring, and said that no team would be sent to Paris next year unless material is developed that will do honor to Cornell there.

The distribution of 'Varsity "C" shingles followed. Professor Huffcut after his presentation speech referred to Saturday's conference between the Alumni and the Athletic Council, to elect a Graduate Manager of Athletics and settle the question of alumni representation on the Council. He also proposed that the undergraduates form themselves into an Athletic Association and elect members to seats in the Athletic Council, those students paying the dues of such association being entitled to admittance to all games, with choice of seats at the field and on the observation train.

Harry Taylor, '88, was enthusiastically greeted, and spoke on the meaning of the 'Varsity "C." He also pronounced a eulogy on the Young family, the five brothers of which have been so prominently identified with Cornell Athletics for many years past.

The last speaker was Professor Morse Stephens, whose subject was intra-collegiate athletics. He strongly urged that there be organized here a series of athletic contests between the different colleges, for the purpose of bringing out more athletic material and developing the esprit de corps in each college, thus making a stronger University spirit. He pledged himself to regularly and systematically "bother" the Athletic Council until some such system was adopted, unless the wisdom of it should be disproved. His allusions to our quondam Professor Wheeler were greeted with enthusiastic applause, especially when he announced that he already had an engagement with Professor Wheeler to "celebrate" at Poughkeepsie next June.

At the close of this speech the crowd left the Armory singing the "Evening Song."

Gymnastic Association.

An organization to be known as the "Cornell Gymnastic Association," was formed Friday afternoon at a meeting of students interested in gymnastics. The officers of the new association are: President, E. L. Walker, '02; secretary-treasurer, E. V. Berg, '02; manager, J. C. Moyer, '00.

This organization was brought into being on account of the recently formed Intercollegiate Gymnastic Association, which was organized in New York during the Christmas holidays, mainly through the efforts of Columbia University. The principal object of the Intercollegiate is the holding of an annual meet at which teams from various universities and colleges will compete in several gymnastic exercises for the intercollegiate championship.

The work which will count toward the championship will be in club swinging, tumbling, side horse, parallel bars, horizontal bars, and flying rings. Three medals will be given in each event, and a banner to the university or college scoring the most points. Any team may also give a special exhibition, and for the best of these a cup will be awarded.

Cornell was not represented at the first meeting, but was soon afterwards invited to join. As a result of this the Cornell Association was formed to represent the University. It was recognized by the Athletic Council Saturday, and sanction was given for the sending of a team to the first annual meet. This meet will be held in New York City, March 29.

Important Meeting of the Inter-scholastic Association.

At the meeting of the representatives of the schools in the Inter-scholastic League, held on Saturday morning, eight schools were represented; Central and Masten Park, of Buffalo, Cascadilla, Stiles', Elmira Free Academy, Ithaca High, Binghamton High and Syracuse High. It was decided that the annual track meet be held in Ithaca on May 26. Lockport High School and Bradford (Pa.) High School were elected to membership in the league, and forty other schools applied for admission to the league and will be admitted on filing a formal application with President Young of the league.

It was then decided to drop the mile bicycle race from the list of track events and to substitute for it a two mile running race. The question of adding the discus to the lists of events was then discussed. Favorable action was taken by the members present and when one more school expresses its willingness to the addition, it will become a feature of the meet. The question of arranging hockey and baseball schedules for the coming year was then discussed, and it was decided that if our schools express their intention to enter such contests, schedules will be arranged. The league was then divided into two divisions for the baseball season. Banners will be awarded to the teams winning the series in both the Southeastern and Western divisions, and the '93 Cup will go to the team winning the championship game between the winners of the division banners. Binghamton, Elmira, Cascadilla, Stiles' and Ithaca will play in the Eastern division; with Tonawanda, Starkey, Rochester, Syracuse, Masten Park, Bradford, Buffalo Central and Lockport in the Western.

Baseball Work.

The baseball squad have been making rapid improvement during the past week and Coach Jennings expresses himself as more than satisfied. While in one respect the material is not as promising as that of last year, there is a healthy tendency to hard work and the result will surely be that Cornell will have a representative team on the diamond this spring. Harry Taylor and Howard Cobb are assisting Mr. Jennings in coaching the pitchers and catchers.

The final cut has been in the list of candidates and from the following list of men the team to be taken on the Southern trip will be made up: Pitchers, Lyon, Bole, Saunders, Bushong and Brooks; catchers, H. H. Smith, Whinery; 1st base, Blount and Warner; 2d base, Robertson and Chase; short stop, Brown, Howland and Ferguson; 3d base, Costello, Mueller and Winters; left field, Newton and Chase; center field, George Young and White; right field, Bole, Lyon and Wagner.
