PRICE TEN CENTS.

THE YALE BI-CENTENNIAL.

The Great University Celebrates Its Two Hundredth Anniversary Magnificently—Gathering of Famous Men.

Not many American universities can count their lives by centuries. When Yale celebrates the second centennial of her existence, it is an event in which the entire educational world of America is interested. At this celebration, which took place last week, almost all the universities and many colleges, were represented. The intense enthusiasm and the words of praise spoken by prominent men from all parts of the country testified to the love in which Yale is held by her alumni and the respect with which her great educational work is regarded by the people at large.

Beside the American universities, many European and even Asiatic universities sent delegates. Tokio was represented by no less a person than Marquis Ito, former Prime Minister of Japan. Cornell's delegation was President Schurman, Ambassador Andrew D. White, and Professor C. M. Tyler. Suitable resolutions were adopted by the Faculty and engrossed by Instructor J. T. Parson, of the college of Civil Engineering. Professor James McMahon also attended as the representative of the University of Dublin, of which he is an alumnus.

At New Haven preparations had long been making to make the celebration equal to the demands of the occasion. A new dormitory and eating hall had been hastened to completion. The decorations were in charge of Tiffany. Around the Campus were forty beacons, eleven feet in height. All the university buildings and many of the town buildings, notably the city hall, were decorated with bunting and Japanese lanterns.

On Monday, October 22, President Hadley opened the celebration with an address of welcome to the representatives of other colleges. On this day was dedicated the gateway given by the class of '96, in honor of its members who fell in the Spanish war. Addresses on Yale and its Relation to Law and Medicine followed. At 5 p. m. the Fall regatta was held on Lake Whitney.

In the evening occurred the torch-light procession, which contained about 7,000 men and over twenty bands. The graduates wore the gown and mortar-board. With these the bright suits of the undergraduates contrasted strikingly. Each class was dressed to represent some American type. There were Indians, Puritans, Continentals, Veterans of 1812, Sailors and Rough Riders.

Tuesday morning President Northrup, of the University of Minnesota, spoke on "Yale in its Relation to the Development of the Country" and former President Gilman of Johns Hopkins on "Yale in its Relation to Science and Letters." In the afternoon the university football team lined up against the alumni, among whom were such stars as Camp, Haffelfinger, and Captain Brown of last year's team. The result was 12 to 0 in favor of the alumni. At 4:30 Professor Parker's oratorio, "Hora Novissima" was sung by the Gounod society chorus of 275 voices accompanied by the New Haven Symphony Orchestra.

In the evening a pantomime was given by the undergraduates on a stage erected on the Campus. About 9,000 alumni and invited guests witnessed it. The scenes delineated important happenings at Yale from the founding of the university to the final act which shows the interior of Battell chapel and the President pronouncing the benediction. Among other scenes were several relating to student life—an initiation to a freshman society, with Mephistopheles and the orthodox red fire, and a typical "rough house" in a student's room.

On Wednesday the ceremonies culminated with the address of Justice Brewer and the awarding of degrees, and closed with a farewell address by President Hadley. President Roosevelt arrived at 9:10 a. m., and received a tremendous ovation. He immediately proceeded to Dwight Hall, from which place the procession of distinguished guests proceeded to the Hyperion theatre. Here the crush was terrific; many invited guests were unable to get within 200 feet of the entrance.

The scene on the stage of the Hyperion theatre was notable for the number of illustrious men who were there gathered together. President Hadley sat in the center of the stage, President Roosevelt on his right, and Governor McLean on his left. About them were Justices of the United States Supreme Court, Senators, Admirals, men prominent in all the branches of learning and skill, and Presidents of the Universities.

President Hadley introduced Edmund Clarence Steadman, who read the commemorative poem which he had written. Associate Justice Brewer of the United States Supreme Court then delivered the address on "Yale's Relation to Public Service." He discussed Yale's relation to the great modern problems. In referring to her attitude on public men he remarked, "I thank God that Yale men can recognize a Washington, though his first name is not George." This reference to Booker T. Washington was greeted with great applause.

President Hadley then awarded the honorary degrees. Among the recipients of the degree of Doctor of Laws was President Schurman. Others were President Roosevelt, President Wheeler, Secretary of State Hay, Archbishop Ireland, and Bishop Potter. The degree of Doctor of Letters was received by Thomas Bailey Aldrich, G. W. Cable, Samuel L. Clemens, R. W. Gilder, William Dean Howell, Brander Matthews, Thomas Nelson Page, and Woodrow Wilson.

Later in the afternoon President Hadley delivered the farewell address.

By evening the campus was dark and deserted; the guests had already begun to depart. Yale had entered upon her third century.

Interscholastic Football.

The first two rounds of the interscholastic series of foot-ball have been played. President Schoellkopf of the Interscholastic League, expresses himself as being far from satisfied with the results obtained so far. About half the games have been protested, the desire of the schools seeming to be, "win at all hazards." This is a very unfortunate state of affairs and must be remedied. The intention of the league is to have a series of good sportsmanlike games and not a lot of petty differences. Something radical must be done or the league will have to be broken up. President Schoellkopf thinks that, if the Cornell graduates at the different places where the members of the league are, could be induced to take a little interest and use their influence for good clean sport, much could be accomplished. He hopes in the spring to arrange an open meet at which not only the league but the larger boarding schools may be represented for the benefit of the high schools, and the rest of the league.

The following seventeen schools entered teams in the series: Buffalo Central, North Tonawanda, Buffalo Masten Park, Lockport, Jamestown, Utica, Clyde, Syracuse, Geneva, Cook academy, Elmira, Starkey, Ithaca, Binghamton, Cascadilla, and Stiles. In the western division the first round resulted as follows: Buffalo Central defeated North Tonawanda, Masten Park defeated Lockport, and Jamestown won from Bradford by default. In the central division Clyde defeated Utica, and Syracuse defeated Geneva. In the southern division, Elmira defeated Cook academy, drew a bye, Ithaca defeated Binghamton, and Cascadilla defeated Stiles.

In the second round Buffalo Masten defeated Buffalo Central, Elmira defeated Starkey, and Ithaca defeated Cascadilla. On November 2, Buffalo Masten will play Jamestown for the championship of the western division, Clyde will play Syracuse for the central division championship, and Elmira will play Ithaca for the southern division championship.

The winners of the central and western divisions will play on November 16, and on November 28 the successful team will play with the winner of the southern division for the championship of the league.

The place of holding the games is left to the managers of the various teams, except that the final game must be played in Ithaca. The managers are allowed to postpone games a week if the team's engagements demand it.

Texas students in the University have organized a Texas Club. The purpose of the club is expressly social. At the first meeting, Friday, October 25, E. J. Kyle, '01, was elected president.

CORNELL, 29 ; OBERLIN, 0,

The Varsity wins on Percy Field. Weak Points Shown Up in the Last Game Before the Battle with Princeton.

Cornell defeated Oberlin Saturday afternoon, Oct. 26, on Percy Field by the score of twenty-nine to nothing.

Cornell's play in the first half, especially the first part of the first half, was rather discouraging; but the second half was better played. No risks were taken on account of the game with Princeton next Saturday, and accordingly Taussig, Schoellkopf, Finucane and Purcell retired earlier than they ordinarily would have. Smith added strength to the line by replacing Hunt at right tackle at the end of the first half and a severe talk by the coaches no doubt added vim to Cornell's play in the latter half of the game. Oberlin's line did not appear to be very strong but her heavy ends and backs played a fine game.

Cornell won the toss and chose the east goal. Oberlin kicked nearly to the goal and the ball was returned to the 25 yard line. Brewster kicked to midfield, Holter punted to Cornell's 15-yard line, Brewster returning the punt on the next play. In the exchange of kicks Oberlin got the better of it and by a series of creditable end plays carried the ball to Cornell's 20-yard line where it was lost on a fumble. The ball then went to Oberlin on a fumble and by two end plays it was placed on Cornell's 10-yard line. Oberlin lost several yards on a false try for goal, Tydeman downing his man neatly. At this point Captain Bradley tried for a place kick but failed. Cornell got the ball but was forced to kick, the ball going 40 yards, Tydeman downing his man in his tracks. Oberlin punted to Cornell's 40-yard line and by line-bucking Cornell returned the ball to Oberlin's 55-yard line, when Purcell skirted Oberlin's left end for the first touchdown. Brewster kicked the goal. Cornell, 6; Oberlin, 0.

Purcell also scored the second touchdown, which resulted mostly from line plunges, Brewster kicking goal. Cornell played weakly and Oberlin reached the 25-yard line but lost the ball on a poor try for goal from field. Time was called with the ball just in midfield, in Oberlin's possession. Cornell, 12; Oberlin, 0.

Cornell scored her third touchdown early in the second half, but Brewster failed at goal. After eight minutes of play, Shepherd replaced Purcell and showed up well. With ten minutes to play Oberlin fumbled twice in succession, Cornell securing the ball and a touchdown resulted from a succession of line plays. The final touchdown was scored by Coffin in the last two minutes of play. Score: Cornell, 29; Oberlin, 0.

Fall Athletics.

In response to a call issued two weeks ago by Captain Whinery and Coach Jennings, about thirty men are now practicing baseball daily at Percy Field. They are nearly all members of the two upper classes, as drill interferes with the practice work of the sophomores and freshmen. Outdoor work in hitting, fielding, and base running will be continued on the field as long as weather permits.

The following men of last year's 'Varsity have returned to the University: Whinery, Drake, Tydeman; Costello, Brown, Brewster and Harvey. This leaves first base uncare for, and Lyon's place in the box to be filled. It is Coach Jennings' intention to develop new men for the positions, possibly from the freshmen candidates.

The date of the fall track meet has been fixed for Friday, November 8. The entries made thus far, show that the various events will be well contested, although not much preliminary work has been done. Trainer Moakley is unable to devote much time to the track men this fall, on account of the large number of football candidates who need his attention, and the work of the candidates for the fall meet has suffered accordingly. The track team will in all probability be weaker that it was last year, if more men do not come out for the meet next month.

The underclass series of baseball contests resulted in favor of the sophomores. The first game was won by 1904 by a score of 15 to 11; the second was a tie, and the third was won by second year men, the score being 10 to 7. The sophomore's superior team work gave them the victory. The individual playing of the freshmen was excellent, and several likely candidates for the 'Varsity squad were picked by Coach Jennings.

The underclass track meet, the next event of the series that is to decide the supremacy of the two classes will occur on Monday, November 4. The football game will be played later in the month.

Lacrosse practice for the fall takes place on the Armory green, four afternoons a week. Twenty-two men are out, among them many who are new at the game. The throwing of the old men shows lack of practice, but is improving steadily.

Obituaries.

GRANT MITCHELL.

Grant Mitchell, a practising physician of Chicago, died in that city September 22. He had spent but one year at Cornell, entering in 1888 as a special student.

JACOB C. RIDALL.

On Friday, September 19, Jacob C. Ridall died at his home in Pittsburgh, Pa. Inflammatory rheumatism, which had affected the heart, was the cause of death. The young man was originally a member of the class of 1902, but frequent illness had interfered with his studies and obliged him to register with the class following. Though he had taken little active part in undergraduate affairs, he had made many friends in the University. He was a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

Weddings.

HAIGHT—BRIGGS.

A wedding of great interest to Cornellians occurred in Poughkeepsie, June 25, when Miss Anna V. Haight of that city and Frederick A. Briggs, B. L. '98, of Waterloo, Canada, were united in marriage. Mr. Briggs, it is hardly necessary to state, was stroke of the University crew for years. He first met Miss Haight, who was a leader in Poughkeepsie society, during the 1895 regatta, when he was a substitute. Their acquaintance was renewed at his subsequent visits, and culminated in the romance of their marriage.

The ceremony was performed at 5 o'clock in the Presbyterian church, the Rev. William P. Swartz officiating. Among the ushers were William A. Ansley, '98, and Isaac Platt, ex-'99. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the color arrangement being very handsome. After the wedding a supper was served at the home of the bride, which was decorated with red and white carnations and poppies. The Cornell crew which was in town but unable to attend, sent a magnificent basket of crimson ramblers and carnations, which was noticeable among the profusion of flowers.

In the evening Mr. and Mr. Briggs left for a short trip, returning in time to witness the regatta. They now reside in Waterloo, where Mr. Briggs is assisting his father in his banking business.

TRESSEL—LATTING.

A pretty home wedding occurred in Terra Haute, Ind., September 12, when Miss Minnie E. Tressel and Benjamin F. Latting, C. E. '94, were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's parents. A profusion of ferns and palms and red and white roses adorned the rooms.

After the wedding breakfast had been served the bride and groom left on a trip to Cleveland and various points in the East. They are now residing in Mt. Vernon, O., where Mr. Latting is connected with the Mt. Vernon Bridge company.

THE YALE BICENTENNIAL.

The Yale Bicentennial was peculiarly a collegiate affair and must possess more or less interest for all college men, irrespective of their particular college affiliations. We are fortunate, therefore, in being able to present to our readers the following observations on that celebration by Professor Charles Mellen Tyler who, though a Yale man, has been so long and so intimately connected with Cornell that we feel we can almost claim him as one of our own alumni.

During the two hundred years of the existence of Yale, it is probable that four days of weather more fitting for a great festival have not passed. A large part of the jubilee was transacted sub jove.

A brilliant crescent of the moon hung aloft each night, somewhat dimmed by the myriad orange colored lanterns which illuminated the city of New Haven. Blue flags decorated public and private buildings. A hundred thousand people filled the avenues by day and late into the evening. The progress of the exercises from Sunday to Wednesday was of dramatic interest.

Sunday addresses were quietly enjoyed. On Tuesday, the great influx of graduates on every train and the eloquent speeches in Battell Chapel, quickened the general pulse. President Hadley on Monday afternoon, welcomed all guests, and was followed by the Mayor of the city and the Governor of the State who welcomed them in the name of the city and the commonwealth. Responses were made by representatives from foreign Universities and by distinguished citizens of our own Republic.

President Hadley received the guests of the University in the afternoon.

Perhaps the greatest feature of the jubilee was the torch-light procession on Monday evening, when 7000 graduates and students preceded by the military, defiled through Phelps gate and marched around the city square and back to the University Quadrangles. It was historic in its import. A large number of the students were disguised as Indian warriors; a second corps were dressed as colonials, wearing bell crowned beaver hats and coats and breeches of antique stripe; still another division represented soldiers and rough riders, and the naval contingent. The classes in chronological order, in motley costumes then followed, marching to the music of twenty bands. The Yale spirit revealed itself in all its power—the singing of class songs broke out at various points along the endless line and silenced the martial music. Harvard sent a band of fifteen or twenty representatives, and Princeton delegates were disguised with the heads of tigers; both corps were welcomed with enthusiasm. In this connection, I may mention the Dramatic performance in the Campus Amphitheatre on Tuesday evening. A large stage, resembling those of the middle ages on which miracle plays were exhibited, had been raised and here the history of the University was retraced in pantomime in successive acts. A student in cap and gown and gitted with a fine voice recited a prologue in verse before the curtain rose, and before each scene. This had the effect of carrying the imagination back to the times of classic drama in Attica. The first act represented the gift of a library by clergymen and the prayer of college foundation. The second, the struggle over the transfer of the seat of the College to New Haven. The third, the review of the College student continental soldiers by Washington under the college elms. The fourth, the execution of Nathan Hale a graduate of Yale. The fifth, the burial of Euclid. The college fence came next, and last, a scene in the old chapel and the vast audience were bidden farewell by old Elihu Yale himself who advanced to the proscenium.

In the interim, while the curtain was down, six or seven thousand voices sang the songs of Yale, sometime antiphonally and again in chorus, the effect being sublime and causing a lump to rise in the throat of many a graybeard like myself, and considerable mist in the eyes.

The readers of the ALUMNI NEWS will pardon the softness of an old Yale man who writes this, especially as he is a loyal lover and admirer of Cornell. Certainly the Yale esprit de corps is unique, and for one, I long for such a spirit for Cornell and confidently predict it. Dormitories, caps and gowns and honorary degrees would certainly give birth to it. I think Cornell ought not to stop with Ph. D. degrees, but be just to its distinguished alumni and not force them to receive D. D. and L. L. D. and L. H. D. from other universities. I frankly think our alumni in opposing honorary degrees have made a mistake.

Yale gathered ambassadors like Choate, Reid, Marquis Ito and others; ecclesiastics like Potter, Archbishop Ireland, the Chief Justice of the United States, President Roosevelt; literateurs like Cable Howells, Thomas Nelson Page Stedman and men like Admiral Sampson to receive degrees, and this function on Wednesday afternoon was one of quite overwhelming dignity and eloquence. Why should Cornell deprive herself of all these contributions to her fame and honor? Why should she not deem her alumni worthy of her decorations and herself great enough to bestow them? Let some one tell me why.

I rejoice in the free atmosphere of Cornell; its broad scholarship, its freedom from provincialism, but I think we lack solidarity, sentiment, loyal enthusiasm.

Without question, with the passing of the suns, we shall gain these. The time will come when every vane on our towers, every archway, every rite and custom will be dear, even as Yale men refused to accept from the corporation the abolishment of prayers in the chapel, not because they were so fond of going to prayers, but because prayers are a part of Yale life.

CHARLES MELLEN TYLER.

THE PRINCETON GAME.

Cornell's victory of 29 to 0 over Oberlin last Saturday makes it possible for her to meet Princeton with a clean record. No opponent has crossed her goal line this year. But the same thing is true of Princeton, and both teams are bent upon maintaining this good record throughout the entire season. Neither team has met very strong antagonists thus far this season and the game on Saturday will be the first real test of their strength.

The players on each team are taking more of an individual interest in this game than in any previous Cornell-Princeton game. They seem to be fairly evenly matched and a battle royal may confidently be expected.

Smarting under the defeats of the past two years, Princeton is leaving no stone unturned to win. Almost the entire week will be given up by them to the preparation for this game. Players and coaches expect to arrive in Geneva to-day. They will spend from to-day until Saturday morning in secret practice at Geneva, and will then come to Ithaca.

Cornell is equally determined to win. Our team will also hold secret practice this week, but upon our own athletic field. The most encouraging sign is the spirit with which the men are preparing for the contest. In former years it was too often our wont to go into our big games with a feeling that while we would do our best, of course we really couldn't expect to win. We went into our big games with rather a hopeless feeling. For the past two years that has all been changed. We are gaining that confidence in our own powers which is absolutely essential to success. While realizing that perhaps the odds are against them in the Princeton game, our players have nothing of that old hopelessness, but are full of courage and anxious for the struggle. They have played consistently good football thus far this season, and if they can enter the game on Saturday in good condition they will prove themselves worthy opponents for any team. Whether they win or lose they are going to acquit themselves in a creditable manner. Of this we are sure. We shall be delighted over a victory, but not very much surprised. That shows the change that has taken place in our athletics of late years.

Brief Review of the Work of the Individual Player—Good Array of Coaches.

By the time the NEWS reaches its readers, the hour for the Princeton game will be near, but even though this may be too late to give the Alumni an idea of the condition of the team prior to the contest, it may nevertheless serve to explain the outcome, whether it be favorable or otherwise. The work of the team throughout the season has been fairly consistent, and the men are playing in better form now than they have at any time, although there are still some minor points which have retarded them from the first and which need correction.

At the beginning of the season it was seen that the greatest drawback toward turning out a first-class eleven would be the lack of weight. Until the past week, not only has the regular line been light, but substitutes of sufficient weight and ability could not be found. However, the appeal of Coach Reed at the mass meeting a few weeks ago had its effect in the appearance on the field of some more beefy material than had hitherto been seen. Chief among these were Cooper, '04, Wand, '05, and Furman, '05.

The development of the team during the last two weeks has been somewhat slow but fairly steady. In the Oberlin game last Saturday, the defense was weak at first, but, after the middle of the first half, Oberlin could make no consistent gain. The center trio this year is undoubtedly the strongest point in the team. Kent at center has improved wonderfully, and although he has a partial cause of the universal complaint—lack of weight—he has more than held his own against all his opponents.

Coach Reed has been trying to turn Cooper's physique to advantage by making out of him a substitute for Kent; thus far he has succeeded fairly well, although Kent is in no danger of losing his place. The guards, Warner and Hunt, need no comment. The former has improved steadily since he appeared for the first time on Percy Field, and is one of the greatest guards playing in the country to-day. Hunt, although a green man last year, is very nearly equal to Warner now. These three men are able to take care of themselves with any opponents. The tackles, Lueder and Smith, are good, although the latter is by no means the equal of Alexander, whose place he is filling. The presence of Wand and Furman on the field has opened a competition for these places and it is not unlikely that one or both of the regulars may be displaced. Taussig and Tydeman at end are very light but fairly fast. In the minor games of the season thus far, they have done well. How they will behave against a team as strong as Princeton is a question. The backfield presents the most interesting complications. Brewster has now recovered from the injury to his side and is playing at quarter, as well as doing most of the punting, in which direction he is showing up admirably. He runs back punts on the defense better than any man on the team. Finucane, who has been alternating with Brewster in this position, has been moved back to half, where it is thought his fighting qualities may be more effectual. The addition of Finucane to the squad of halfbacks makes five men available for this position, all of them good, some excelling others in various points and between whom it is hard to pick the winners. Purcell, Finucane, Coffin, Snyder and Shepard are the five. Purcell and Coffin have been doing the bulk of the work this fall, and while satisfactory, they are not above criticism. Shepard and Snyder are coming along fast and Finucane in the few times he has been played in the position has shown promise. The only disadvantage in this arrangement is that it leaves the team without a good substitute quarter.

Princeton's team is reported to be weak in about the same places Cornell is, their chief fault being disastrous fumbling. Every game the Tigers have played this season has been characterized by more or less fumbling, which the coaches this week are making every effort to correct. The Cornell team has erred in this respect considerably, it being painfully noticeable last Saturday in the Oberlin game, but it has not existed to as great a degree as at Princeton.

Cornell men will be gratified to read the list of graduate coaches who have been here for the past week and will stay until after the game on Saturday. Beside Starbuck, Reed and Duvall, the regular resident coaches, Wyckoff, '96, Dyer, '95, Taussig, '97, and Fennell, '97, have been on the field. The first attempt at a resumption of the graduate coaching system has been a decided success thus far.

The Princeton Game.

At the present writing only about two hundred seats for the Princeton game on Saturday remain unsold, and in all probability the crowd will far exceed the seating capacity of Percy Field. In view of the large delegations expected from Rochester, Syracuse, Geneva, Buffalo, New York and other cities, the Lehigh Valley has offered a special round trip rate of one fare from all points on its lines in this state. An attempt was made at Princeton to secure a sufficient number of students pledging themselves to come to Ithaca to induce the Lehigh Valley to run a special train, but the Princetonian has announced that the attempt has been abandoned. Instead an effort is be-

An interesting musical lecture was delivered on Monday evening before the students by Mr. N. J. Corey. The subject was "The Great Man in Art." The lecturer detailed the various characteristics in man which incline him toward art and then enumerated the requirements for a great artist. The climax of the lecture showed that musicians are the truly great men in art. Mr Corey rendered as musical illustrations to his talk the Vorspiel to "Parsifal," Valhalla music from the "Rheingold," Liebestod from "Tristana and Solde," Magic Fire Scene from the "Walkure."

Maryland Club.

At the first regular meeting for the present term of the Maryland Club of Cornell held Oct. 21, Charles Hunter, William W. Cushing and N. Noolf were elected to membership.

The club now has a membership of but fourteen, eleven men having been lost last year by graduation and one member having died this past summer. However, as there are many new Cornell men from Maryland this year, the membership will be increased to at least twenty-five within the next month.

A Maryland oyster supper will probably be given soon in honor of the new men.

Harvard has a system of athletic season tickets similar to that in use at Cornell this year. The price of the Harvard ticket is five dollars, admitting to all baseball and track games in Cambridge and all football games except that with Yale. It gives also a membership in either the Newell or Weld boat club, and the privilege of purchase of two tickets to the Harvard-Yale game before the general sale, as well as the preference in the choice of seats on the observation train for the Harvard-Yale boat race at New London.

The underclass flag rush will take place Hallowe'en night, October 31, on the armory green.
