THE WATERWAYS COMMISSION.

W. Edward Wilson, '01, Appointed as its Secretary.

The American section of the International Waterways Commission, of which Eugene E. Haskell, '79, director of the Cornell College of Civil Engineering, is a member, has recently chosen as its secretary another Cornell man—W. Edward Wilson, '01. In a recent issue the Buffalo Express published an article on this commission, from which the following facts are taken:

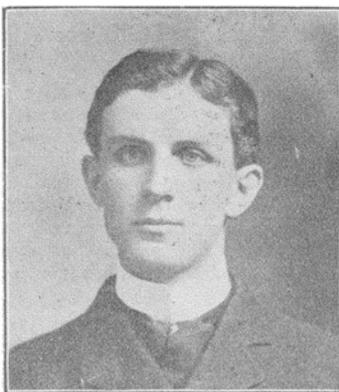

There is a great deal of interest in all the lake cities—Cleveland, Erie, Detroit and Buffalo—in the meetings of the International Waterways Commission. On October 16, the commission held a public meeting at Chicago, Ill., on Chicago's drainage canal problem. Barring the question of the diversion of water for power at Niagara Falls, over which the commissioners are still wrestling, the question of the drainage canal is perhaps the biggest thing the International Waterways Commission has yet had to tackle.

Ever since the commission was organized in 1905, Buffalo has been the headquarters of the American section.

The new secretary of the waterways commission, W. Edward Wilson, has been in Buffalo about two months. Upon the retirement of Louis C. Sabin from the secretaryship Mr. Wilson succeeded to the position. Mr. Sabin, who was the first man to hold the position of secretary to the American section, is now at Sault Sainte Marie acting as general superintendent of the Saint Mary's Falls canal. Secretary Wilson, though a comparatively young man, has had a lot of experience in engineering since he was graduated from Cornell University in 1901. He was on the lake survey for three years, then he went to take the chair of engineering at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City.

The new member of the commission, E. E. Haskell, who was appointed last spring to fill the place made vacant by the death of George Y. Wisner of Detroit, is another Cornell man. He recently moved from Detroit to Ithaca to take the position of director of the College of Civil Engineering at his alma mater. Mr. Haskell's name is widely known by reason of the success he achieved with an invention, a water meter which is in practical use all over this country. It is used for determining the current of streams and rivers. Commissioner Haskell has served on the Mississippi River Commission and the United States lake survey; he is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and of the National Geographical Society.

There are six members of the waterways commission, three Canadian and three American. The personnel at the present time is as follows: Representing Canada, the Honorable George C. Gibbons, chairman; Dr. W. F. King, and Louis E. Coste. The secretary of the Canadian section is not an engineer, but a former newspaper man. Representing the United States are Brigadier General O. H. Ernst, U. S. A., retired, chairman; George Clinton and E. E. Haskell.

The Buffalo office of the American section was opened on September 11, 1905 with Louis C. Sabin as secretary. It has been the custom ever since the waterways commission was organized to hold alternate sessions on American and Canadian soil. Ottawa is the headquarters of the Canadian commission, but a large percentage of the Canadian meetings has been held in Toronto. Public hearings, similar to that given at Niagara Falls early last summer, have, however, been held at Ottawa, Hamilton and Montreal.

The question as to the Lake Erie boundary between the United States and Canada has been referred to the waterways commission. This question involves the poaching mixup and it is thought if the boundary line can be definitely determined by this international commission, the fishing and poaching question will settle itself. This matter will be taken up very soon by the commission.

Broadly speaking, the work of the waterways commission is to keep track of the power companies. The commissioners investigate and report upon all diversions of water for power purposes, anywhere along the Great Lakes as far west as Duluth, and as far east as the upper Saint Lawrence river to the boundary line between this state and the province of Quebec. The act reads: "That the lake levels must be maintained and navigation must be protected."

That vexing question which has got on the nerves of quite a few people of late as to whether the further diversion of water at Niagara Falls will injure or totally destroy the falls as a spectacle—this problem if settled at all will be settled through the reports which the waterways commission has made and will make upon the subject to the two governments. The Chicago drainage question concerns chiefly the matter of lake levels. Engineers and business men in Buffalo have declared that if the city of Chicago is allowed to divert any more of the water from Lake Michigan, the present levels cannot be maintained.

WILLCOX ON IMMIGRATION.

Cornell Statistician Proves False Some Popular Notions.

In the current number of the Quarterly Journal of Economics there is a paper by Walter F. Willcox, professor of political economy and statistics and dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, on "The Distribution of Immigrants in the United States." Professor Willcox considers the evidence to support the general opinion that immigrants have a greater tendency to settle in cities than in rural districts. He, proves, however, by the statistics given in the United States census reports, that recent immigrants as well as immigrants of the past and illiterate as well as literate immigrants have a tendency to distribute themselves voluntarily throughout the country. He begins by saying:

"Within the last fifteen years the statement that recent immigrants, and above all illiterate immigrants, cling to the great cities, especially those of the Atlantic seaboard, and swarm in the clum districts of those cities, has been made and repeated until it has become accepted. The emphasis laid upon this aspect of the immigration question has increased rapidly, and is still increasing. Some writers believe that it is the most serious phase of our immigration problem, many that it is so serious as to demand the attention and even the intervention of the Federal government or of the State governments."

To demonstrate that this opinion has become almost universal, he quotes a number of passages from books on immigration, from magazine articles, from the Eleventh census report and from the President's messages to Congress. Fairly typical of these is a statement taken from the book of Prescott F. Hall, who says: "Some pressure must be brought to bear upon the immigrants to secure distribution, because under the present system they do not voluntarily distribute themselves." Finally, Professor Willcox cites the bill introduced in Congress last May authorizing the establishing of a special bureau of information at every port for the purpose of aiding and encouraging the distribution of immigrants throughout the country.

From the foregoing sources he frames the following statements of the prevalent opinion:

I. The foreign born population of the United States has a stronger tendency toward the cities than the native population.

II. This tendency is much stronger among recent immigrants than among those who entered the country a generation ago.

III. It is much stronger among illiterate immigrants than it is among those who are able to write some language.

IV. This tendency is disadvantageous to the immigrants and an economic and social danger to the United States.

V. The evil results of this tendency are so great as to necessitate the creation of agencies, Federal, State, or private, to counteract or correct it.

He points out that the basis many of the writers took for their reasoning was the census report of 1900, which showed that there were two and a half times as many foreign born persons in the cities as in the country districts. Cities, however, are the point of arrival of over nine-tenths of all the immigrants, whereas less than one-fourth of the native population of the United States is born in cities. The total foreign born in the country in 1900 was 10,341,276 and the foreign born in cities of over 100,000 was 4,008,085. He continues:

If nine-tenths of these ten million immigrants reached the United States at some city having at least 100,000 inhabitants and less than four-tenths were residing in such cities in 1900, then more than half of our immigrants must have dispersed from the ports where they landed. . . . It seems clear that at least 80.9 per cent. of all immigrants in the country had left the port of arrival.

The total reported immigration arriving at any known port in the United States between July 1, 1890, and June 30, 1900, was 3,562,382. Of this 2,812,345, or 78.9 per cent., entered at the port of New York. Of the total immigration reported and unreported (4,203,188), 66.8 per cent. landed at New York. Doubtless at least seven in ten of our immigrants arrive there, but only about one in fourteen of the children born in the North and West and one in twenty-two of the children born in the country are born in that city. Under such conditions the swarms of immigrants found at any time in New York are no more conclusive evidence of a tendency to remain there than the clouds hanging around a mountain are proof that there is no wind at the summit to blow it away.

Professor Willcox demonstrates that there is not even a special class of immigrants which tends to stagnate in cities to any alarming extent. The Italians are generally believed to have a marked preference for city life. Yet two-thirds of the number of Italian immigrants landing in New York between 1890 and 1900 left there for some other part of the country during the decade.

"With regard to the second point the evidence seems to warrant," he says, "the conclusion that neither recent immigrants as a class nor Italian immigrants, who were selected as the most available national type of recent immigrants, show any characteristic tendency towards or fondness for city life."

"The evidence on the third point," Professor Willcox continues, "that this tendency toward urban life is characteristic of illiterate immigrants, is so slight as to require little analysis." Investigation has shown that nearly as many illiterates as literates signify their intention on arrival of leaving the port of entry for some other part of the country. Furthermore, statistics show that in New York state, at least, there are more illiterates among the foreign born population in the country districts than in the cities.

"The first three positions," he concludes, "being found to lack evidence, the fourth and fifth, which assumed their truth, fall to the ground. If there is no evidence of a disadvantageous or dangerous tendency toward cities on the part of immigrants as a class, of recent immigrants, or of illiterate immigrants, the main argument in favor of the intervention by the government to distribute them properly falls to the ground."

Phi Beta Kappa Officers.

The Cornell chapter of Phi Beta Kappa met on Oct. 16 and elected the following officers: President, Dr. Schurman; vice-president, Professor R. C. H. Catterall; secretary, Professor C. S. Northrup; treasurer, Professor E. W. Kemmerer; registrar, H. C. Hasbrouck. Professors H. A. Sill and Ernest Albee were added by election to the executive committee.

"Henry the Candy Man" is again selling candy on the campus. Last year the Board of Trustees prohibited Henry from selling anything except papers and periodicals because the wrappers from the candy packages littered the quadrangle. Henry decided to petition. A large number of upper class men signed his petition. The trustees referred the matter to President Schurman and Treasurer Williams, who have decided to allow Henry to sell candy on the campus.

CORNELL 72, BOWDOIN 0.

Team Rolls Up Big Score in Last Game Before Princeton Contest.

The largest score rolled up on Percy Field in fourteen years was made against Bowdoin last Saturday, when the "Big Red Team" buried the eleven from Maine to the tune of 72-0. Bowdoin had held Harvard down to ten points and had played a 0-0 game with Wesleyan, and was expected to furnish a severe test for Cornell. Captain Cook's team started off with a snap and determination which seemed to dishearten the visitors, and played with a vigor which resulted in eleven touchdowns, nine goals from touchdowns and two field goals for the Carnelian and White. McCutcheon kicked one of the field goals from placement, and the other was a pretty drop kick by Sailor from the 38-yard line.

Pollak, who has been disabled most of the season by an injured knee, was not yet in the best of condition, and he did not go into the game until almost the end of the second half. Jamieson, however, did such admirable work at quarter that it is likely he will be chosen to give the signals in the Princeton game at New York next Saturday. Jamieson had hard luck in one or two of the early season games, and some critics said that he was deficient in generalship, at least in comparison with Pollak. No such criticism could be made of the manner in which he ran the team against Bowdoin, and, indeed, his work in the Bucknell game a week earlier had marked him as a quarterback who could be depended on. The team has learned to have confidence in his judgment. In case Pollak should not be in condition to play, Cornell has an excellent substitute for the quarterback position in Gardner. He played a part of the Bowdoin game and did not suffer even in comparison with Jamieson.

One of the interesting features of the game, from the Cornell point of view, was the large number of football alumni assembled on the sidelines to watch the work of the team. Besides Coach Warner and Assistant Coach Lueder, they included Mason, '94; Wyckoff, '95; Beacham, '97; Tausig, '97, and Tausig, '02; Young, '99, and "Bobby" Young, '00, and Alexander, '01. Some of them expressed regret that the team's defence had not been more thoroughly tested by its opponents, but they all agreed that Cornell this year has a well drilled and a fighting team, and that if the eleven goes into its future contests with the same spirit it showed against Bowdoin there is no doubt of its victory in every one of them.

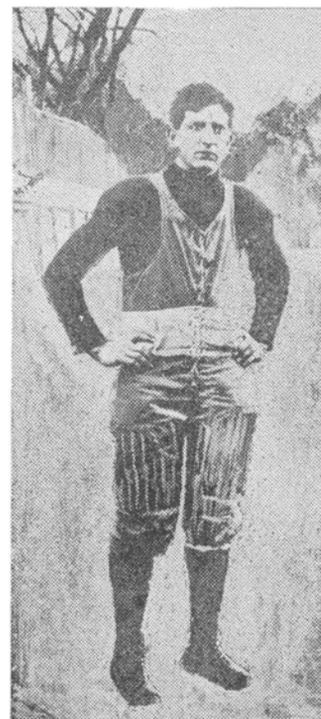

The backs showed the results of recent severe practice in handling the ball and getting under punts, and there was very little fumbling. Straight football was played throughout the game, trick plays being discarded. McCutcheon, Babcock, Sailor and Watson tore huge holes in the opposing line, and Gibson and Earle made some brilliant end runs. The interference for these plays was a beautiful thing to see, every man on the team doing his part.

Gibson tore off one run of 75 yards, and runs of 20 yards by Gibson and Earle were common. Toward the end of the game an entirely new team was substituted, but even then the slaughter did not cease. The scrubs did nearly as well as the regulars. Bowdoin, on the other hand, made her distance but twice during the game, both times on end runs by Draper. The New Englanders could make no impression on the Cornell line, and most of their trick plays were stopped before the runner could get started.

Cornell scored so rapidly at times that it was almost impossible to follow the play. After the team had worked the ball to the fifteen-yard line on the first kickoff they were penalized and compelled to kick. McCutcheon dropped back and sent a place kick over the bar.

After Cornell had lost the ball on her only costly fumble on Bowdoin's 25-yard line, Draper made twenty yards on an end run, about the only big gain made by the visitors. The Cornell backs then began a determined onslaught on Bowdoin's line, and aided by a 22-yard run by Earle brought the ball to the five-yard line, where McCutcheon took it over.

The third touchdown followed soon after on a series of line plunges in which Babcock and McCutcheon figured prominently, aided by the big holes which Thompson made in the Bowdoin line. The next touchdown was made in five plays, one of which was a 55-yard run by Earle around Crowley, the interference brushing the opposing tacklers aside. In a few minutes another touchdown was added, this time the result of ten plays, one of which was Gibson's 75-yard run. Earle made another 40-yard run before time was called.

The second half was but a continuation of the first. The first touchdown was made by Gibson after a 30-yard run through the Bowdoin team. The next score was made on a series of line plunges by Babcock and McCutcheon. The latter, who played a brilliant game throughout, then got in some 60-yard punts, which gradually worked the ball down the field until a few line plunges carried it over.

Coach Warner then put in an entirely new team, but this did not stop the scoring. Cornwall and Sailor played almost as well as the regular back field, Gardner, who took Jamieson's place at quarter, used fine judgment in calling for punts until the team got within striking distance, when Sailor was shoved over. Soon thereafter Sailor distinguished himself by a pretty field goal. Two more touchdowns were added by Sailor and Cornwall.

The teams lined up as follows:

German Praise for Cornell.

Cornell University received high praise in a recent article written for a Vienna newspaper by Dr. Ludwig Fulda, the German dramatist. Dr. Fulda especially complimented the Cornell German Department. He pronounced Cornell the most beautifully situated of the fourteen universities he visited in this country.

Dr. Fulda expressed himself as especially pleased with the applause given him at Cornell, and with the success of the German instruction here. Every bit of humor in his lecture was recognized at once. The Cornell students were more than ordinarily quick to grasp all the significant points, and their attention was of a close and scholarly character.

Dr. Fulda's observation of American University life, compared with German University life is altogether in favor of the former. The morale of the students in this country is superior to that in Germany, according to Dr. Fulda.

Alumni in Ithaca.

Among the alumni from outside of Ithaca who saw the Bowdoin game on Percy Field Saturday were: William S. Brayton, '93, of New York; Charles P. Storrs, '95, of Owego, N. Y.; Robert Ryon, '03, of Syracuse, N. Y., and Newton C. Fassett, '04, of Tonopah, Nev.

ACTIVITY IN SPORTS.

Fall Baseball Practice Inaugurated—Work in Other Branches.

Fall baseball practice—something new at Cornell—was started last Wednesday on Percy field. As long as the weather permits, the candidates for the 'varsity team will be expected to report daily at 2:30 P. M. The management has made an appeal to all undergraduates who can play baseball and who are eligible for the nine to report for this preliminary tryout so that it may get a line on the material.

The following men of last year's team are back: Captain E. S. Brown, '07, third base; F. L. Heilman, '08, shortstop; O. H. Bigelow, '07, left field; E. H. Hastings, '07, who played in the outfield but will probably be behind the bat this year, and J. J. Deshon, '07, and W. H. Lovejoy, '07, pitchers. S. C. Hollands, '08, a substitute last year, has not returned to the University, but expects to do so, and if he does he will be a candidate for second base. This leaves a number of important places to fill, and the problem of filling them is greatly complicated because no freshmen are eligible. An unusual effort is therefore being made to get members of the three upper classes to turn out and try for the team. It is hoped by the management that the splendid record made by last season's nine will be an incentive to them. Over twenty men have already reported.

'CROSS-COUNTRY PRACTICE.

The annual intercollegiate 'cross-country run will be held at Princeton this year, instead of Travers Island, and the day chosen for the race is Wednesday, Nov. 28, the day before Thanksgiving. The place and date were decided on at a meeting held in New York recently by representatives of the seven colleges in the 'cross-country league. These colleges are Cornell, Columbia, Harvard, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Pennsylvania, Princeton and Yale. This contest was first held in 1899, and Cornell has won it every year except in 1901, when the team finished behind Yale and Pennsylvania.

It is expected that the general average ability of the teams competing in this year's race will be much higher than in past years because of the increased interest in 'cross-country running at various colleges. In order to keep up the interest at Cornell and to stimulate competition, races will be held at short intervals throughout the year, open to members of the three upper classes. Prizes will be given to the first three men to finish in each race. A similar series of races for freshmen has already begun.

LACROSSE.

The success of last year's lacrosse team has stimulated interest in this sport, and the prospects for next season are bright. There is material this fall for complete freshman and sophomore teams, and it is possible that a series of interclass games will be played before winter sets in. A good number of veterans will form the nucleus of the 'varsity. Practically all the attack men have returned to the University, and there is an abundance of material for the defence, including Eritten, last year's goal keeper. The management is planning to inaugurate a system of graduate coaching next spring, bringing back several old players for two or three weeks at a time. The expense of this will be met by voluntary contributions from the 'varsity players and scrubs. The schedule is unsettled, owing to the uncertainty regarding athletics at Harvard and Columbia.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL.

Plans for the resumption of intercollegiate "soccer" football have been completed, and a schedule of ten games has been arranged by Cornell, Columbia, Harvard, Haverford and Pennsylvania. It is the purpose of the Intercollegiate Soccer League to make the game entirely a fall and early winter sport.

The Cornell schedule is as follows:

- Nov. 24—Columbia, at Ithaca.
- Dec. 3—Harvard, at Ithaca.
- Dec. 21—Haverford, at Haverford.
- Dec. 22—Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia.

The soccer candidates have begun practice. They are using the new playground on the hill every afternoon.

CRICKET.

There are already signs of activity in cricket, and officers for the ensuing year have been elected by the club. The new manager is J. P. Hurley, '07, of Dublin, Ireland, and the assistant manager is J. E. Mannocir, '08, of Memphis, Tenn. L. M. Macpherson, '07, of Balranald, New South Wales, was appointed temporary captain and director. Messrs.

Hurley, Macpherson and S. B. Carpenter, '07, of New Brunswick, N. J., were appointed a committee to take charge of practice.

The complete schedule of the Intercollegiate Cricket Association will not be made up till the meeting of the representatives in Philadelphia at Christmas. Cornell's schedule will include games with Pennsylvania at Philadelphia and with Haverford at Haverford. A home game with Harvard will be arranged, and there will also be games with teams from Canada or northern New York.

TENNIS.

The tennis club held a meeting last Friday evening in Barnes hall and elected Everett Drennen, '07, of Martins Ferry, O., captain of the team for the coming year. Plans for the fall tournament were discussed. It was decided that, in accordance with the custom at other universities, freshmen and graduates would not be allowed to represent Cornell in intercollegiate matches. The courts are being repaired, and practice will begin soon.

Cornell sent a team to compete in the intercollegiate golf tournament at Garden City last week. The team met Yale in the opening round and was defeated. Yale retained the championship of the association by defeating Princeton in the final round. In the qualifying round of eighteen holes, medal play, for the individual championship of the association, Cornell was shut out. Yale qualified six men and Harvard and Princeton five men each. T. McClaffin, of Harvard, won the low score medal. The final round was played on Saturday and was won by W. E. Clow, Jr., of Yale.

A meeting of the Intercollegiate Basketball Association was held recently at Columbia University to provide a schedule for the coming season. No new members were added to the "Big Six" universities which are now in the league. Referees were selected for the big games. The referee for Ithaca is L. Stafford, director of the Auburn Y. M. C. A. The season will begin on Dec. 15 and will last till March 9. Each college will, as usual, have a home game and a return game with each of the others. A number of candidates for this year's team have turned out and are practicing daily in the gymnasium.

FOR THE BEAHAN CUP.

Interclass Football Series Will Be Commenced Soon.

Active preparations will soon be commenced for the organization of teams to contest for the Beahan interclass football cup. This cup was given last spring by Willard Beahan, '78, to encourage athletic competition among the students of the University and is to be contested for annually by football teams representing the four classes.

The rules governing the contest require that the sophomores and freshmen and the juniors and seniors shall play the preliminary contests, the two winning teams playing for the championship.

The first game will be played on Wednesday, Oct. 31, between the freshmen and sophomores. The former already have a team organized and in playing condition. This game will be a part of the series of events which are to decide the underclass supremacy.

Courses in Bible Study.

The Christian Association offers this year seven courses in Bible study, as follows:

I. For freshmen. The Life of Christ. This course is introductory to the other courses.

II. For sophomores. The Life of Paul. A study of the principal events in the life of Paul and of early church history down to his death.

III. Junior course. Old Testament Characters. A study of the Old Testament history by the biographical method.

IV. Senior course. The Political and Social Significance of the Life and Teachings of Jesus. There will be used in this course a syllabus prepared by Professor Jenks.

V. Normal course in the Life of Christ. This course is intended for the leaders in Course I.

VI. Readings in the Greek New Testament.

VII. Lecture course. After the Easter recess it is hoped to unite all classes for a general lecture course, to be later arranged.

Besides the above courses, Professor C. V. P. Young will lead a course in Lessons from the Teachings of Jesus.

THE LITTLE GRAY CAP.

Complaint has been made that some of the freshmen are not wearing the gray cap with black button, prescribed for first-year men at Cornell, and the Sun calls on all observers of such delinquency to report the offenders to the Vigilance Committee. This committee, with its watchfulness over the conduct and the costume of freshmen, is one of the things which strike most curiously the old-timer returning to the University, and one in which, as he observes its operation, he finds much to commend. He remembers a dark age when "the freshest freshman" could make himself as conspicuous as he liked anywhere in Ithaca, and find plenty of persons to applaud his "student" pranks. The little gray cap is an extinguisher on such gay spirits, and to the self-respecting freshman it is merely the badge of an honorable novice.

The Vigilance Committee has only one legitimate weapon with which to enforce its decrees, and that is the power of student opinion. That power is strong enough to awe the most refractory freshman, and the committee will weaken itself if it ever resorts to physical force. It may be the germ of organized self-government at Cornell, and it will be encouraged unless it becomes a tyranny.

SUCCESS TO THE TEAM.

Thousands of Cornell men will gather in the stands at the Polo Grounds in New York next Saturday to cheer the football team when it meets Princeton. Other thousands will watch for the score on tickers and newspaper bulletin boards. For years Cornell has been an uncertain quantity in football, and since the last season many alumni have applied themselves seriously and unselfishly to finding out what has been the matter. They have found faults and have corrected them. They have demanded that more graduates return to teach the players what they know of football and to infuse into the team all the earnestness they are capable of communicating. They have demanded more of the team. Coaches, players and scrubs have worked hard this fall to bring Cornell victory in football. The team has learned the game and every Cornell man wants to see it win.

ATHLETICS FOR ALL.

The article on activity in sports published this week shows a wide range of choice for the athletic student, and some opportunities still open for the alumnus who wishes to offer an inter-class or intercollege cup. It indicates, too, that athletics of all sorts is going to flourish at Cornell, whether more prizes are offered or not. The victories of various 'varsity teams have no doubt stimulated the interest of some students who might otherwise not have sought the field, and the throwing open of part of the new playground on the hill has probably had as much to do with increasing the number of participants in various sports. When that playground is all available, and when the Alumni Field is completed, there will be no university in the country that will have better facilities for out-of-door sport than Cornell.

The South Atlantic Quarterly.

The South Atlantic Quarterly, which is published at Durham, N. C., and is edited by two Cornellians, Edwin Mims, Ph. D., '00, and William H. Glasson, Ph. B., '96, is taking high rank among magazines and reviews. Its editors are both members of the faculty of Trinity College at Durham, and the Quarterly was founded by them in 1902.

The October number, which closes the fifth year of the magazine's publication, contains a group of articles on the lynching problem, one of which is contributed by Professor Glasson. In this he brings together the most recent and trustworthy "Statistics of Lynching" in a way to show the facts with regard to the prevalence of lynching in various parts of the country and to its causes. The leading article in the number is written by Albert Shaw, editor of the Review of Reviews. Under the title "Our Legacy from a Century of Pioneers," he discusses the transition from a pioneering to a mature state of society through which the country is now passing.

Of the South Atlantic Quarterly the New York Times recently said that it "should be in the hands of every Northern man who wishes anything like a clear and trustworthy impression of the movement of opinion among the educated class in the South."

College Rowing Supremacy.

The New York Herald's proposal to establish an all-American college rowing regatta and to create an American university cup, which would occupy in the world of oarsmanship the position the America's cup holds in the yachting world, has been the subject of various comment in other newspapers. The Cleveland Plain Dealer, while commending the idea, says, in an editorial on Oct. 15, that the project is impracticable on account of "the ineradicable sentiment existing at Harvard and Yale that these two colleges are the natural rivals in college athletics, and that victories over other universities are of small importance." The editorial continues:

Harvard and Yale, in refusing to row with Cornell and in shutting out all the other eastern colleges from their rowing contests, do not assume the position that they are better than all others. In fact, the men of both Harvard and Yale freely have acknowledged the supremacy of Cornell. But in spite of this spirit of fairness, this open recognition of a worthy foeman, Harvard and Yale men cannot be aroused to enthusiasm over a contest with the men from Ithaca. It is no great pleasure to vanquish these "outsiders," and no great sorrow follows a defeat. Even though Yale recognizes that Cornell could distance Harvard with the greatest ease the glory of defeating the Cornell crew would be as nothing in the estimation of the sons of Eli in comparison with the splendor of each of the oft repeated victories over Harvard.

In time Harvard and Yale may outlive this somewhat narrowing tradition, and an American regatta may be established that will truly demonstrate which institution is entitled to the honor of rowing supremacy. Just at present, however, efforts to this end will be futile. Not because of conceit or priggishness, but merely in obedience to strong tradition, Harvard and Yale will continue to flock happily by themselves, blissfully oblivious to the fact that higher honors might be sought in broader fields.

A large attendance of students at the Princeton-Cornell game in New York next Saturday is indicated by the advance sale of seats. On the first day of the sale in Ithaca more than 800 tickets were disposed of.

Death of H. G. Nutt.

Harry Garfield Nutt, who was a fellow in political economy at Cornell last year, died of typhoid fever in the hospital at Altoona, Pa., on Oct. 7. He had been ill for several weeks and was on the road to recovery when he was attacked by diphtheria. In his enfeebled condition he was unable to resist the disease. He was a graduate of Dartmouth and had been at Cornell only one year, but in that time he had made many friends. He was a scholar of much promise.

Leonard Whitney Gavett, of Plainfield, N. J., is the newly elected president of the junior class.

ON JUDICIARY TICKET.

Sketch of John Frankenheimer, Nominated in New York.

A pamphlet just issued by the "Judiciary Nominators," of New York city, contains portraits and brief biographies of the men whom they chose as independent candidates for the State Supreme Court. The purpose of these nominators was to put in the field an ideal judiciary ticket and have it accepted by one or both of the regular parties. They have succeeded in having all but one of their candidates indorsed by the Republican party. One of the men so nominated and indorsed is John Frankenheimer, '73. This is what is said of him:

Born July 15, 1853, in the City of New York, of Jewish parents. He attended the German-American Institute and Columbia Grammar School in this city, and entered Cornell University in 1870. He graduated in 1873 with the degree of Ph. B. While at college he was awarded the English Literature Prize and the Woodford Prize for the best oration.

In 1875 he graduated from Columbia Law School, and was admitted to the Bar the same year. For the last fifteen years he has been a member of the firm of Kurzman & Frankenheimer, attending to the firm's trial and appeal cases. He has argued a large number of appeals in the Court of Appeals and in the intermediate appellate courts, and has tried many cases, mainly mercantile and real estate cases.

In politics Mr. Frankenheimer has been a Democrat with independent tendencies. He was a member of the Anti-Maynard Bar Association Committee, and was also a member of the Conference Committee of the State Democracy, and as such advocated the nomination of Mr. Strong for Mayor in 1893. He was a member of the Executive Committee of the Citizens Union during the Low campaign of 1897, and has been an active member of the Citizens Union ever since.

Mr. Frankenheimer is the Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Society for Ethical Culture, a member of the Harmonie Club, and was a director and its vice-president for a number of years. He is also a member of the Century Country Club, Civil Service Reform Association, Reform Club, Legal Aid Society, Cornell University Club, Educational Alliance, Hudson Guild, and all of the important Hebrew charitable institutions of the City of New York, in which he takes an active interest.

BRIEF UNIVERSITY NEWS.

The committee appointed to raise money to buy a testimonial for Coach Moakley has reported progress. About $2,000 was pledged by the students just before college closed last spring. Of this amount $400 has been collected, although no general canvass has been made. As soon as the new Student List is issued, a thorough personal canvass of all the students will be made. The committee says: "The alumni have not been solicited for subscriptions and will not be, although any subscriptions from that source will be gladly received by the committee. A few alumni have contributed very generously."

The University directory of officers and students, commonly known as the Student List, was issued last week. It contains the names of 3,103 students.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale, of Boston, has occupied the pulpit of Sage chapel on the past two Sundays. He spent the intervening week in Ithaca, and was at Barnes hall every day at noon to talk with students on spiritual matters.

The College of Agriculture has made the Cornell Countryman a present of 1,000 paid-up subscriptions, the money to come from the general funds of the college. The subscriptions are for all the school commissioners of New York State, the higher rural schools and many of the public libraries.

Sophomores Win on Track.

The underclass track and field competition was held on Percy Field after the football game last Saturday, and resulted in a victory for the class of 1909. The sophomores scored 59 points and the freshmen 40. Half of the freshmen's points were made by one man, E. T. Cook, Jr., of Chillicothe, O., who entered four events and won first place in every one of them. These events were the 100-yard dash, the high and broad jumps and the pole vault. Cook won the "hundred" easily in 10.2-5 seconds, and cleared 10 feet in the pole vault, 5 feet 8 inches in the high jump and 21 feet 6 inches in the broad jump.

CORNELL ALUMNI NOTES.

'87, B. L.—Harrison W. Coley is practicing law in Oneida, N. Y.

'88, C. E.—Gen. Mario Garcia Menocal has taken a prominent part in the recent Cuban revolution. After leaving Cornell he was one of the leaders in the revolt against Spain. The story is told that on one occasion an attacking party was unable to dislodge a number of Spaniards who had taken shelter in a hut. Menocal succeeded in approaching the hut unseen. He placed a charge of dynamite under it and retreated. A Cuban sharpshooter exploded this charge by firing into it. The explosion blew the hut to pieces. For his bravery on this and other occasions, Menocal was made a general. During the present revolution he took sides with the government. He was so thoroughly trusted by both parties that he was one of the men selected to negotiate peace. Menocal is the owner and manager of a large sugar plantation at Schaparra, Cuba.

WATERPORT

Permit until first evening gunfire

CHIEF OF POLICE

SO READS the traveler's permit when he lands at Gibraltar. With the sound of the sunset gun he passes out. He knows the hour, and he prepares to go. When the sunset gun sounds for you, at an hour that you cannot know, what preparation will you have made to protect your family?

A sinister note is in the sound of the sunset gun for the man who has thought his life permit would not be retired so soon,—and who has waited for the time when he could "afford" life insurance.

To-day is that time. We would like to tell you how little it costs—what liberal terms are offered by this life insurance company. Send for particulars and rates of policies, Dept. 124.
