VICTORY OVER PRINCETON.

Varsity Eleven Defeats the Tigers in a Brilliant Game—Score 6 to 5—Good Work by Every Cornell Player.

A determined and not too confident Cornell football team defeated Princeton on Percy Field last Saturday by a score of 6 to 5. The victory was well earned. Cornell's touchdown was the reward of a steady advance from the 42-yard line to the goal soon after the beginning of the second half. Princeton's score, made a few minutes afterward, was the result of a blocked punt; the ball rolled over the goal from a point near the 20-yard line, where the Tigers had been held for downs. At no other time during the game was Princeton within twenty yards of Cornell's goal. The Red and White was at one time only three yards from a second touchdown, but lost the opportunity through what seemed to be an error of judgment. There was an anxious minute at the very end of the game, when Princeton narrowly missed kicking a field goal after a fair catch on the 45-yard line.

It was a fighting team which represented Cornell—a team not cast down by its defeat at the hands of Pennsylvania State College a week earlier, but conscious of the weaknesses it had shown in that contest and determined to correct them. To make special mention of any one player would be unfair to the rest, for every man on the eleven was on his toes from start to finish. Every man seemed to be doing all that he was capable of, and all worked together with a dogged smoothness of which any university might be proud. When the goal was in any danger, Cornell's line was impenetrable; the ends and tackles played some of the most brilliant football seen on Percy Field in years; the backs had speed and were invariably clean in their handling of punts; the whole team was run with courage and precision. It began the game fighting, kept on fighting, and had to draw on a reserve of fighting spirit after it scored, for Princeton, in the face of apparent defeat, displayed a pluck which threatened to turn the scales.

The first half was about as closely drawn a battle as could be imagined. At no time did either team pass its opponent's 25-yard line. From this inability to gain there resulted a punting duel which kept the eight thousand spectators on their feet with excitement. Every punt was well kicked and cleanly handled, and the tide of combat swept back and forth across the field throughout the entire half.

The Princeton team spent Friday night in Owego and reached Ithaca only a short time before the game. It was accompanied by about three hundred students from Tigertown, who occupied the covered stand on the south side of the field and who, although outnumbered, were by no means overwhelmed in the cheering. The big new steel stand on the north side of the field was a mass of red and white. Around the ends of the gridiron spectators were massed three deep, and behind them were dozens of automobiles. The day was sunny and cool.

THE FIRST HALF.

The game began about three o'clock. Gardner and McCallie, both of whom had been injured in the Penn State game, were at quarterback and right halfback respectively for Cornell. Captain Cook won the toss and chose the west goal, gaining a slight advantage due to wind. Harlan kicked off to Walder at the goal line and the ball was run back twenty-five yards. McCallie gained two yards and Walder then punted to midfield. Harlan was downed in his tracks by Watson. Gardner intercepted a forward pass and took the ball away from Princeton on Cornell's 40-yard line. Earle tried an on-side kick, but Dillon got the ball and returned it to midfield. Cornell suffered two successive penalties of five yards for off-side play, but got the ball on an on-side kick. Cornell gained ten yards through an exchange of punts and punted yet again, after which Princeton tried to rush the ball. An on-side kick, however, soon gave it to Cornell on her 45-yard line. Fifteen yards was lost through the failure of the forward pass, but an exchange of punts enabled Cornell to recover the distance. Earle gained five yards and again Cornell failed with the on-side kick. The punting duel was renewed and Princeton soon had the ball on Cornell's 45-yard line. The forward pass penalty cost the Tigers fifteen yards and there was another exchange of punts. Princeton got the ball on her 25-yard line and began to tear things up. Harlan gained fifteen yards on a delayed pass and Read fifteen more. McCormick added five, and then Dillon fumbled and was tackled for a loss of six yards. Harlan was thrown with no gain and Princeton again punted. Exchanges of kicks went on, the scene of operation being almost continuously near the middle of the field. Captain Cook was taken out of the game and Lynch took his place. Cook was in poor condition because he had been out of practice for several days on account of an injured shoulder. Princeton got the ball on her 25-yard line and took another brace; McCormick and Read tore off five and seven yards respectively, but Lynch tackled Harlan for a loss, and Princeton punted poorly to midfield. Cornell was unable to gain, and Walder punted to Princeton's 12-yard line. Time was called for the half with the ball in Princeton's possession on her 15-yard line.

THE SECOND HALF.

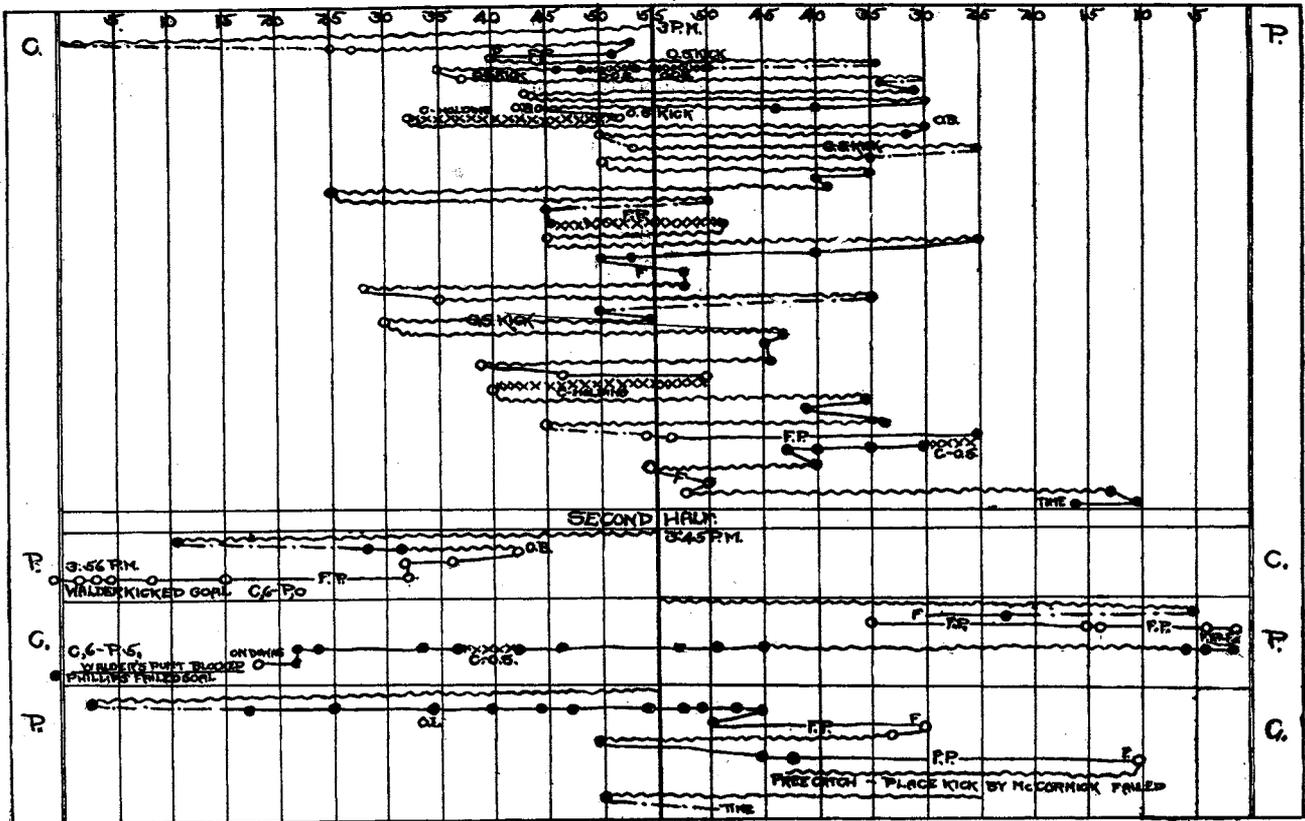

Cornell began the second half without a change in the line-up, but Princeton soon put in a fresh pair of halfbacks. Cosgrove kicked off to the 10-yard line and Read brought the ball back fifteen yards. Princeton failed to gain and McCormick punted out of bounds at Princeton's 42-yard line. It soon became evident that Cornell was playing with even greater determination than in the first half. The team began at this point a splendid series of offensive plays which resulted in a touchdown. Earle went around Wister's end for eight yards, and Walder made it first down through center. McCallie was tackled without gain. On the next play, a forward pass, Earle gained seventeen yards, placing the ball on Princeton's 15-yard line. Walder bucked right tackle for seven yards and McCallie made it first down on Princeton's 5-yard line. Dillon was urging his men to renewed efforts, but two more plunges put the ball on the 1-yard line. It was third down and Walder was called upon for the final effort. He was equal to the task, and when the ball was uncovered it was found to be a foot over the line. Gardner heeled the kick-out and Walder kicked the goal, making the score Cornell 6, Princeton 0.

Orr and Tibbott took the places of Harlan and Read in the Princeton backfield. Cosgrove kicked off to the 5-yard line and Orr came back to the 23-yard line. A few moments later Princeton fumbled the ball and the ever-watchful McCallie fell on it. Cornell lined up on Princeton's 35-yard line and McCallie made twenty yards on a forward pass.

Walder gained two yards and then another forward pass was tried which resulted in a series of fumbles. The ball was recovered by Harris, who had just taken Van Orman's place, on Princeton's 4-yard line. Walder made a yard, and then, with only three yards to go in two downs, Cornell unwisely resorted to the forward pass. The ball was caught by Tibbott almost under the goal posts. This loss of advantage led indirectly to a touchdown by Princeton soon afterward. McCormick punted to Princeton's 45-yard line. Gardner was tackled the instant he caught the ball and it rolled out of his arms and was recovered by Princeton. The Tigers here began a desperate effort to score, carrying the ball to Cornell's 25-yard line, where the Red and White braced and held for downs. Walder's punt was blocked. The ball rolled over the line and Booth fell upon it for a touchdown. Phillips narrowly missed the goal, the ball hitting one of the posts, and the score was Cornell 6, Princeton 5.

The Tigers resumed play with desperation and, beginning at their 20-yard line, hammered their way steadily down the field to Cornell's 45-yard line, where they were again halted. A forward pass was attempted, but Gardner recovered the ball on the 30-yard line. Cornell's punt was good for only thirty yards and Princeton returned to the attack. Again the Tigers had to resort to the forward pass and again the ball was captured by Gardner, this time on Princeton's 10-yard line. There was only about three minutes to play, but, instead of retaining the ball, Cornell punted. Tibbott made a fair catch on the 45-yard line. Princeton's only chance of a victory was to kick a goal from this difficult point, and the big crowd became hushed while the Tigers prepared to make the attempt. Very deliberately Captain McCormick made his preparations, and then he stepped forward and booted the ball. It sailed straight toward the goal and then curved sharply to the left, while a great shout showed the relief which Cornell's supporters felt. Walder kicked out of bounds and time was called.

When the game ended the undergraduates swarmed off the stands and carried the members of the team from the field to the clubhouse on their shoulders. After some time spent in giving the yell for each player and coach, the undergraduates marched up town, headed by the cadet band, and began a jollification which lasted until after midnight. It was the first opportunity any student now in the University had had to help celebrate a big football victory. The last time Cornell had beaten Princeton was in 1900.

Several old football men of other universities who were on the field spoke in the highest terms of Cornell's work, especially of that of the tackles, O'Rourke and Lynch.

A large number of Cornell alumni saw the game, many coming by special train from nearby cities and others arriving by automobile.

The team had spent a strenuous week, after the Penn State game, in preparing for Princeton. "Tommy" Fennell, '96, of Elmira, the Penn State coach, spent the entire week on Percy Field, giving especial attention to the line men. Gardner was under the constant tutelage of C. R. Wyckoff, '96, of Buffalo. The regular coaching staff, consisting of Schoellkopf, Halliday, Lueder and Beacham, was also present throughout the week.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

Liberal Studies for Technical and Professional Men—Halls of Residence.

The fifteenth annual report of President Schurman, covering the period from September 30, 1906, to September 30, 1907, was presented to the Board of Trustees last Saturday. The dominant note of the report is educational efficiency, with recommendations for improving it both in the field of liberal culture and pure science and in the fields of professional and technical education. What President Schurman says on this subject is so important and interesting that its full presentation will be left for a separate article in a subsequent issue of this paper. In brief, President Schurman is of the opinion that Cornell University should in the near future require, in addition to high school graduation for admission to its law school, at least one year in the College of Arts, and for admission to its medical school either two years in liberal arts or the completion of a course with a bachelor's degree. With regard to technical education—civil, mechanical and electrical engineering and architecture—he recommends that in the near future at least one year and preferably two years of study in language, literature, history, etc., be required of candidates before admission to these courses.

In discussing halls of residence for the rapidly increasing student body, President Schurman says that at Cornell University there should never be a "rich man's" dormitory or a "poor man's" dormitory. All halls of residence should be plain, substantial and convenient. It is unnatural to disturb the free and generous intercourse of youth by reminders of artificial distinction; and it is little less than criminal for a university to encourage or permit the classification of students according to their money. The experience of American students, he says, seems to show that the fraternity house, accommodating two or three dozen students, presents, in the matter of size and arrangement, an ideal for the residential hall.

Here is what President Schurman says about the student residence problem:

"For this student population, now numbering thousands, Cornell University has not a single hall of residence excepting the Sage College for women, which, with its annex, accommodates about half of the 411 women graduates and undergraduates enrolled in the University. While the intellectual and scholarly spirit and organization of the University are on a high plane, the social life leaves much to be desired. The great majority of the young men—all except those in fraternities—are scattered in boarding and lodging houses throughout the city, nor is it possible without halls of residence to organize them as social communities which shall foster and enjoy the habitual personal intercourse, the comradeship, the solidarity, the common consciousness which spring in the main from close and constant social contact due to living together under a common roof and sitting together at a common table. The experience of American students seems to show that the fraternity house, accommodating two or three dozen students, presents, in the matter of size and arrangement, an ideal for the residential hall; it is large enough for a community and not too large for intimate acquaintance and friendship; it provides studies, bedrooms, bathrooms, kitchen, dining room and common rooms (the size and number of which might perhaps be reduced in houses owned by the University.) Thirty of the houses would accommodate about one thousand young men. The cost of building them would undoubtedly be greater than the cost of ten larger halls each accommodating one hundred students, with a separate dining hall, like the dormitories and halls of Harvard and Yale. But in this age of mechanism and bigness it is especially desirable that the universities should possess the most favorable conditions for the development of manhood—for the moulding of man moral and social as well as of man intellectual. And such communities of twenty-five or thirty-five young men would, the President has come to believe, be more fruitful seed-plots of personality than the conventional dormitory with one or two hundred chambers, but no dining hall or common room. Either, however, would be a great improvement on the present condition at Cornell. But for either the University must await gifts from the friends of higher education. The experience of Harvard University shows that the endowments of the institution could not advantageously, or perhaps even safely, be invested in residential halls. And so the President repeats with new emphasis what he wrote a dozen years ago—in the Report for 1894-1895—when the University had only 1,689 students as against 4,225 in 1906-1907.

"After endowments for the establishment of chairs and departments, no gifts to the University could be more helpful than halls of residence or dormitories for students. This is a form of benefaction popular with philanthropists who have an honorable ambition to connect their names permanently with great institutions of learning. Nowhere in America is there such a grand field for the gratification of this ambition as at Cornell University, where the first hall of residence is still to be erected. Built upon the campus, with no outlay for grounds, such buildings would yield, at a moderate rental, a handsome income, which might be turned into the general revenues of the University or designated, wholly or in part, to such special objects—chairs for professors, scholarships for students, etc.—as the donor might be particularly desirous of promoting. The educational and social advantages to students living with their comrades under a common roof on the grounds of the University have been mentioned in previous Reports, and the effects of halls of residence in developing sentiments of loyalty and affection to the University have been demonstrated by universal experience. The University of Pennsylvania, which has hitherto been without them, recently adopted a scheme for dormitories. And the friends of Cornell earnestly hope that she is not, in this respect, to lag much longer in the rear. In the absence of halls of residence owned by the University, Greek letter fraternities have had a flourishing development at Cornell; but while in general they deserve encouragement, it must not be forgotten that they bring the University no income (though several of them are on the campus), and that, in the competition for superior buildings and furniture, which a watchful eye may now begin to discern, they are liable to introduce into the University an element foreign to its comprehensive and democratic spirit and dangerous to its simple, earnest and healthful life. Whatever tends to the establishment of distinctions—to the separation, locally or socially—of the rich and poor should be checked in its incipency. There is no more healthful and promising corrective to those undesirable effects which the fraternities, in spite of all their best efforts and along with all their great advantages, may produce than a system of halls of residence. To be sure there is one danger to be guarded against, or the very halls would themselves become an evil. At Cornell University there should never be a "rich man's" dormitory or a "poor man's" dormitory. All halls of residence should be plain, substantial and convenient buildings; and the students' rooms should not be further removed from the stringency of poverty than from the luxury of wealth. It is unnatural to disturb the free and generous intercourse of youth by reminders of artificial distinction; and it is little less than criminal for a university to encourage or permit the classification of students according to their money. In this matter Europe, with all its monarchies and aristocracies, furnishes an instructive object lesson to America. The uniform quadrangle of most of the Oxford and Cambridge colleges, wherein rich and poor dwell together—not the contrast of palatial and mean dormitories to be found nearer home—will serve as a moral, and it may be as an architectural, exemplar for the future halls of residence for Cornell.'

"The social life of the women students is much better cared for. They have a home in Sage College and Cottage, which are provided not only with a dining room but with common rooms as well; and large expenditures have already been incurred by the University—and much larger authorized for next summer—in making these buildings not only safe and convenient, but comfortable, agreeable and beautiful. Nevertheless Sage College and Cottage accommodate only about 200 women. And, apart from those who live at home, with relatives or in private families, there will probably remain about 50 or 100 women students who must next year live in lodging houses. For these Miss Putnam, the warden and other friends have secured lodging houses near the campus, one of which is to be conducted on the co-operative plan (each of the young women devoting about an hour a day to the lighter work of the establishment, such as washing dishes, sweeping, preparing vegetables, etc.). These houses are to be occupied exclusively by women. Furthermore, in accordance with a recent enactment of the Trustees, the Warden of Sage College is hereafter to have jurisdiction not only over the women in Sage but over all women students in the University. In this supervision she naturally counts on the co-operation of the women students themselves, more particularly by means of the extension of the self-government association which has greatly facilitated the administration of the affairs of Sage College and Cottage. The Warden of Sage has a difficult office to fill; and, now that its functions have been enlarged, Miss Loomis will need the hearty support of students, alumnae, and indeed of the entire University community. Her ideal of being a 'counselor and friend' to the young women is the way to success, and, the larger the number who can feel that personal influence the more marked her success will be."

There are other interesting portions of the report which will be set forth in subsequent articles. A long section is devoted to Cornell University and the farmer.

More space than usual is given to tables showing the financial condition of the University. The conclusion of the report is a statement of the University's need of endowments. President Schurman says:

"Cornell University needs millions for men. It is the faculty which makes a university. But able, well-trained and effective teachers and investigators cannot be retained permanently in subordinate positions. At the present time the situation of many of these men at Cornell is too truly described in the words of the Psalmist—'for promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south.' Yet, if such men are to be kept in the profession, they must receive promotions in due time to assistant professorships and full professorships. Endowments for this purpose are the greatest need of Cornell University to-day. And, after this augmentation of the intellectual forces which make and mould the University, the next need is of funds for buildings to accommodate the students who in ever-increasing numbers flock to Cornell. An auditorium for lectures and addresses to the student body and for social purposes; a gymnasium in proximity to the new playground and athletic field for the promotion of physical training of all students and not merely of athletes; a hall for class instruction and laboratory work to be used by the large classes in civil engineering; either new machine shops or a laboratory for the conduct of the experimental work in mechanical and electrical engineering; and dormitories or halls of residence or cottages and a dining hall on the campus—the best site in America—for the now scattered and poorly accommodated student population, who lose the inestimable advantage of social intercourse with fellow students and mutual education under a common roof and who pay increasingly high prices for their board and lodgings in private houses;—these are some of the most urgent objects in which wise, generous-hearted and public-spirited men of wealth might make splendid and enduring investments at Cornell University."

The freshman 'cross-country team defeated Mercersburg Academy at Mercersburg last Saturday by a score of 28 to 27.

Thomas Shean, of Hogsburg, N. Y., has been elected president of the sophomore class.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES MEETS.

Important Recommendation Approved—
J. T. Newman, '75, on the Board.

A meeting of the University Board of Trustees was held in Ithaca last Saturday. President Schurman's annual report was submitted to the Board at this meeting. One of his most important recommendations, namely, that in the near future matriculants at the University shall spend one or more years in the study of language, literature, history, economics, political science, etc., before admission to any professional courses of the University, was approved by the Board and referred by it to the faculties of the various colleges concerned for consideration. The report of the appropriation committee was received and accepted.

Jared T. Newman, '75, of Ithaca, was elected a member of the Board to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Samuel D. Halliday, '70, and Franklin C. Cornell, of Ithaca, was made a member of the finance committee to fill the vacancy resulting from the same cause. Roger B. Williams, of Ithaca, was made a member of this committee.

The subject of the proposed grill room in Barnes Hall was discussed and laid on the table.

The members of the Board present from out of town were Messrs. Barr, Dawley, Edwards, French, Hiscock, Kerr, Morris, Shepard, Sackett, Woodford and Warner and Miss Putnam.

Another concert has been added to the program of the holiday trip of the musical clubs. This will be at Cleveland on the evening of Friday, January 3. The clubs will be in Pittsburg on the previous evening, and from Cleveland they will return to Ithaca.

Professor Otto Pfeiderer, an eminent German theologian, gave two lectures before the University last week.

The October issue of the Uran appeared last week.

SUBSCRIPTION—$3.00 Per Year.

Published weekly during the college year and monthly in July and August; forty issues annually. Issue No. 1 is published the first Wednesday of the college year, in October, and weekly publication (numbered consecutively) continues through Commencement week. Issue No. 40, the final one of the year, is published the last Wednesday in August and contains a complete index of the entire volume.

Single copies, ten cents each. Foreign postage, 40 cents per year. Subscriptions payable in advance.

Should a subscriber desire to discontinue his subscription, notice to that effect should be sent before its expiration. Otherwise it is assumed that a continuance of the subscription is desired.

Checks, drafts and orders should be made payable to the Cornell Alumni News.

MAKE YOUR PLANS NOW.

Last year five alumni associations in the middle west held their annual dinners at such times that President Schurman was able to address them all in the course of a single trip. Such an arrangement might well be made every year, and it might be possible for the University to send a representative on an even longer tour. If this is to be accomplished it is necessary for the various associations in any general section of the country to act in concert with one another in fixing the dates of their dinners. The making of such an arrangement will, of course, involve a great deal of correspondence, and it should not be left until the last moment. If the work is begun now it may be easy to arrange a series of dates agreeable to the alumni of several cities. The dinners should be held at such times that a speaker from the Faculty may go from one to the other at the least possible cost in time and railway fare. We venture to recommend that alumni associations appoint their dinner committees at once, if this has not already been done, and that these committees find out as soon as possible at what time it will be convenient for the University to send a representative and make their plans accordingly. There is no need to dwell on the value both to the University and the alumni of the interchange of ideas and enthusiasms which these yearly meetings afford.

The Thurston Memorial.

Preliminary work on the Thurston Memorial has been completed. The final clay model has been criticised and accepted by a committee consisting of Mrs. R. H. Thurston, Professor A. W. Smith, '78, and Mr. John H. Barr, '89. The memorial, when completed, will consist of a bronze high-relief bust mounted on a bronze tablet measuring five feet six inches by four feet. The work is to be cast in one piece by the Gorham Company of New York, and the clay model has already been turned over to them. It is to be finished by January 1, 1908, when it will be placed in the east wall of the Sibley reading room. The dedication ceremonies will not be held until June, for at that time the representatives of all the classes interested in the movement will be in Ithaca. The memorial will cost $1,700, which has been entirely collected. A half-tone picture of the bust will soon be mailed to every subscriber.

Instruction in wrestling is given at the University this year by E. J. O'Connell, recently at Yale.

NEED OF BETTER SALARIES.

Resolution Adopted by California Alumni—A School of Forestry.

The regular fall meeting of the Cornell University Club of Northern California was held at Tait's restaurant in San Francisco on Saturday evening, October 5, with thirty-one men present. Dr. David Starr Jordan, '72, described the early college days at Ithaca, and traced the influence of President Andrew D. White in the work of American colleges.

The following resolutions were adopted and committees were appointed to obtain further information:

"Since it is a fact that the salaries of professors at Cornell University are lower than at any other institution of similar rank in the United States,

Resolved, That this condition demands the attention of every graduate, and that efforts should be made by the alumni to provide more funds and adequate salaries;

Resolved, That the forestry problems both east and west are of such importance that the Empire State should maintain a School of Forestry at Cornell University."

The next meeting will probably be held at Stanford University on the day of the Stanford-University of California football game.

Alumni Dramatic Society.

Brooklyn Cornellians of the younger classes are preparing to present an amateur play this winter for the benefit of the Fall Creek Gorge fund. It is planned to organize a dramatic society and give a play each winter, the proceeds each time to be devoted to some University object. All Cornellians living in Brooklyn who had any experience while undergraduates with the Masque or the Sage Dramatic Society, or who would like to try amateur acting, and all who are willing to help in the preparations for the plays, are invited to enroll in the new society. The first meeting will be held at the Pouch Mansion, on Clinton avenue, Friday evening, November 15. All interested are invited to be present. Further particulars may be obtained of Salmon Whitcomb, '05, 230 Clermont avenue, who should be notified by any who wish to participate but are unable to attend the first meeting.

Meeting in Rochester.

The Cornell Club of Rochester held its first meeting of the season on Wednesday evening of last week in its rooms in the East Side Savings Bank building. About fifty members of the club were present. The billiard and pool room was opened for the first time. An interesting and instructive feature of the entertainment was a series of experiments by Professor J. E. Woodland, of the Mechanics' Institute, in the course of a lecture on "Zero Absolute." The experiments consisted of the liquifying and solidifying of gases.

Dr. Willis E. Bowen, '02, was chairman of the entertainment committee, and the others on the committee were J. F. Skinner, '90, E. B. Nell, '03, H. J. O'Brien, '95, Walter Will and Willis Van Demark, '94.

L. Henry Junior President.

Lewis Henry, of Elmira, N. Y., was elected president of the junior class last Wednesday, receiving a majority of all votes cast. The other candidates were B. J. O'Rourke, of Syracuse, N. Y., and J. V. Colpitts, of Mount Pleasant, Del. R. W. Weed, jr., of Brooklyn, was elected vice-president. Henry is managing editor of the Sun and treasurer of the Christian Association. He sang on the glee club in his freshman year. He is a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity, of Aleph Samach and Nalanda.

Professor J. W. Jenks, of the department of political science, is giving a series of lectures in the George Blumenthal Foundation at Columbia University. The subject of the course is "The Principles of Politics from the Viewpoint of the American Citizen."

OBITUARY.

LOUISA FITTS, '99.

Miss Louisa Fitts died at her home in Moravia, N. Y., on July 15. Miss Fitts was a graduate of Cornell with the degree of Bachelor of Science in the class of 1899. Her preliminary education was obtained at the Moravia Union School and at St. Lawrence University, Canton, N. Y. She was interested in educational matters and was for several years a trustee of the Powers Library at Moravia. A twin brother, William Fitts, of that village, survives her.

JOHN A. MADDEN, '04.

Dr. John A. Madden died after a short illness at Bozeman, Mont., on September 18. He was a graduate in the class of 1904 of the Veterinary College. He obtained his preparatory education at Mount Hermon, Mass. After leaving college, Dr. Madden entered the federal meat inspection service and soon became chief inspector at Portland, Ore. He resigned his position there in 1906 to go into practice with Dr. H. C. Gardiner in Bozeman.

Our Princeton Guests.

A joint concert of the Cornell and Princeton musical clubs was given in the Lyceum theater on Friday evening, the night before the game. After the concert the Savage Club entertained the members of both musical organizations with a smoker at the Ithaca Hotel. Earlier in the evening the Widow board entertained the Tiger board at dinner. The Princeton party, consisting of the team, the musical clubs and about three hundred other students, came to Ithaca by special train on Friday. The team stopped in Owego and spent the night there. While they were in Ithaca the members of the musical clubs were guests at fraternity houses. The team left Ithaca immediately after the game, and the rest of the party returned by special train on Sunday.

The West Point Game.

Tickets for the Cornell stands at the West Point football game on November 9 will be distributed by the Cornell University Athletic Association at Ithaca. Applications for seats will be received by mail and will be filled, so far as possible, in the order of receipt. No charge is made, but applicants for tickets to be sent by mail should remit twelve cents to cover postage and registry. The stands at West Point are comparatively small, and as there is likely to be a large demand from undergraduates, alumni who expect to attend the game are advised to make early application for tickets.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad will give a special rate of $7.85 from Ithaca to West Point via Jersey City and return, good going on November 8 and returning till November 11.

A subscription is to be taken up among the undergraduates for a fund with which to place in Sage Chapel a memorial window to the men who lost their lives in the fire which destroyed the Chi Psi fraternity house last winter. This window will be a companion to the one for which the class of 1907 last year made provision as a class memorial. The 1907 window has been completed, but its installation in the Chapel may be deferred until the second one is finished, when both will be formally unveiled.

The Cornell chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa Society has elected the following officers for this year: president, Professor R. C. H. Catterall; vice-president, Professor G. P. Bristol; secretary, Professor C. S. Northup; treasurer, Professor E. W. Kemmerer; executive committee, Professor F. Thilly and Miss Isabel Stone.

Charles H. Tuck, '06, supervisor of the farmers' reading course in the College of Agriculture, has been appointed assistant professor of extension teaching in the same college.
