UNIVERSITY MISCELLANY.

Last Saturday was registration day for the second term. At 6 o'clock in the morning there were a hundred men in line waiting for registration to begin at 8 o'clock. The man at the head of the line had gone direct from the Junior Promenade to Goldwin Smith at 2 a. m. Those who registered early had the preference in making out their schedules of hours for the term.

At its recent meeting in New York the intercollegiate football rules committee adopted the following resolution to express its feeling on the resignation of Professor Dennis, who had been a member for many years, most of the time as chairman: "Resolved, That the thanks of this committee be extended to Professor L. M. Dennis, of Cornell University, the retiring chairman of this committee. That this committee express to Professor Dennis its profound appreciation of the great services rendered to football by his wise counsel as a member of the committee for many years and by his equally signal services to the committee as its presiding officer. And further, that this committee tender to Professor Dennis its heartiest best wishes."

Professor Nathaniel Schmidt has been lecturing in the West. In St. Louis on February 4 he spoke on "What to do with our armies." Last Saturday the Cornell Club of St. Louis gave a luncheon at the American Hotel in honor of Professor Schmidt. About thirty-five members were present. He gave an interesting and witty talk. George J. Tanssey '88 made a short speech of thanks on behalf of the local alumni.

A volume commemorative of the seventieth birthday, November 2, 1909, of James Morgan Hart, emeritus professor of English, has come from the press. It contains eighteen articles, studies in language and literature, by Professor Hart's former pupils.

Harris J. Ryan '87, professor of electrical engineering at Stanford University, read a paper on "Open atmosphere and dry transformer oil as high voltage insulators" at a meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers in New York City on January 13. Professor Ryan has been making a study of atmospheric losses on transmission lines for the past eight months and his paper was the result of his investigation. He came from California to read it before the Institute. On his way to New York he stayed at Ithaca for a few days. Professor Ryan is now acting as consulting electrical engineer on the Los Angeles aqueduct project. This is one of the largest aqueducts ever planned.

In Science for February 10 is printed the address made by John F. Hayford, C. E. '89, as retiring vice-president of Section D (Mechanical Science and Engineering) of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, at Minneapolis on December 29. It is entitled "The relations of isostasy to geodesy, geophysics and geology." Professor Hayford is director of the college of engineering of Northwestern University.

The Junior Week Era is above the average in literary merit. It is unusual to find in a college magazine so well written a piece of fiction as "The Builder of Little Ships," a story by F. Dana Burnet '11. There is good verse in the number by Mr. Burnet and C. E. Simonson '12.

The sanitary science lecture Tuesday was by James Ewing, M. D., professor of pathology in the Cornell University Medical College at New York, on "Cancer and Its Relation to Public Health."

THE RECENT DISTURBANCE.The Facts About a Conflict Between Students and Police.

Newspapers have been giving space to accounts, some of them inaccurate, of a disturbance, caused by students of the University, which occurred in Ithaca on Saturday night, February 4. We tell below, as accurately as we can, what took place.

The trouble occurred at a time when midyear examinations were over for a large proportion of the undergraduates. With the restraint of University work removed and with time on their hands, hundreds of students were in high spirits and were looking for amusement. If nothing had occurred to cause a crowd to collect, there would probably have been no trouble. But a traveling stock company which had been playing at the Lyceum theatre during the week had billed a performance of "Three Weeks" for Saturday night. A report spread that "the students were going to break up the show." So large a crowd gathered that at 8 o'clock the theatre was filled and several hundred persons were on the street in front of the house. The manager then closed the doors. At his request Lieutenant Twesten, the University proctor, addressed the crowd outside, which was made up largely of students, and asked them to disperse, saying that the box office was closed and there was no chance of their getting into the theatre. The crowd moved away and a large number of the men went up the hill at once.

Persons in the audience at the Lyceum kept up a continuous disturbance throughout the first two acts. Coins were thrown on the stage, and, soon after the third act began, an egg was thrown. The curtain was then rung down and the audience went out. Hundreds of students went up the hill immediately, but a part of the crowd went to the Happy Hour, a moving-picture theatre in the city library building at Seneca and Tioga Streets, opposite the police station, and it was there that the real trouble occurred. As the crowd entered the lobby of the building from Tioga street, several policemen entered from Seneca street and tried to force the crowd back. Blows were struck, the police using their clubs and fists. One student, a freshman, who resisted the efforts of Chief of Police Buck to make him move on, was arrested. Chief Buck was not in uniform. This freshman was afterward charged with inciting to riot, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to ten days' imprisonment in the county jail. He is now serving his sentence.

When this prisoner was taken across the street to the police station the crowd followed and gathered in front of the station. The police say they tried to make several arrests and that the crowd took their prisoners away from them. A stone was thrown through the glass door of the station house. The proctor, who had come to the spot as soon as he heard of the trouble, addressed the crowd and told them that the police would parole the prisoner in his custody as soon as the crowd dispersed. He led the way up Seneca street and most of the students went with him. As they were scattering, however, one of the police arrested a second student, also a freshman, for refusing to move on. This caused another rush to the neighborhood. The proctor again told the students to go home, and E. G. MacArthur, president of the Student Conference Committee, which was appointed to judge cases of student misconduct, also appealed to the crowd to disperse. Some of them went up the hill, and others hung about for two hours until the two prisoners were paroled in the proctor's custody, about midnight.

When the second prisoner was put on trial, his attorney entered a plea of guilty of disorderly conduct, having been assured that the police department would be satisfied with a small fine or a suspended sentence, because of his comparatively trivial infraction of the law, if he would plead guilty. When sentence of five days' imprisonment was imposed, however, the police refused to consent to a suspension of sentence. The mayor at that time was out of town. In view of these circumstances, a petition for the pardon of this student was prepared and sent to Governor Dix. It was signed by the mayor, the city attorney and police commissioner, and also by Ex-President White, Dean Irvine, Professor Woodruff and Professor Rowlee. The Governor granted the petition and pardoned the student, who was released from jail.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATIONS.Rochester.

The Cornell Club of Rochester held its annual meeting and banquet at the University Club on the evening of February 7. Among the speakers were Professor R. C. H. Catterall, Harry L. Taylor '88, County Judge of Erie; Clyde W. Knapp '98, County Judge of Wayne, and Eads Johnson '99, Secretary of the Cornellian Council. A goodly number of Cornellians in Rochester attended the banquet and all had a good time.

Before the dinner the regular annual meeting of the club was held and officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Philip Will '00; vice-president, Walter L. Todd '10; secretary, N. J. Weldgen '05; treasurer, Ralph H. Gorsline '89; governors for two years, William H. Lines '09, W. O. Boswell '99; E. L. Wilder '02; Leon Stern '89; D. A. Campbell '08; J. W. Vickery '95; William B. Zimmer '03.

Since the fire that destroyed the club rooms in the spring of 1909, the club has had no regular meeting place. A year ago the club was reorganized and during the past year it has met periodically for a dinner or other function. The club has been successful and is now in a flourishing condition.

Pittsburg.

The Cornell Club of Western Pennsylvania will hold a smoker at the University Club in Pittsburg on Saturday evening, February 18. At this smoker plans will be made for the annual banquet.

New York.

It looks as if the annual dinner of the Cornell University Club of New York would be short and snappy—and entertaining. Governor John A. Dix '83 will be there. He has not forgotten the days when he was a member of the Tom Hughes Boat Club at Cornell. Ira A. Place '81, president of the club, will preside, and Professor R. C. H. Catterall, the successor of H. Morse Stephens in the faculty, will be toastmaster. Professor Catterall can be solemn when occasion requires, but he does not enjoy it, and it is understood that he does not regard the coming New York dinner as an occasion for solemnity. Professor Jeremiah Whipple Jenks and Mr.

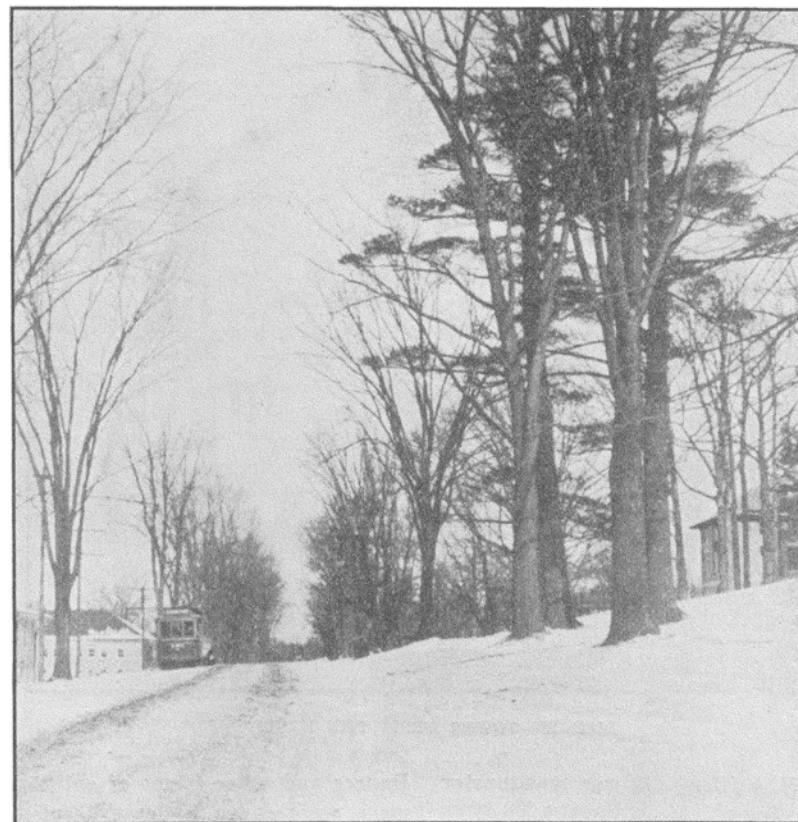

George A. Post, president of the Railway Business Men's Association, have accepted invitations to speak. There may be one more speaker, but not more than one more. So many Cornell men have gone into the railroad business that there will be a special table for them. Those not holding annual passes may, however, be seated at special tables also if they will inform the committee whether their inclinations lean toward Football, Baseball, Crew, Track, Sibley, C. E., Arts, Architecture, Agriculture or Law. Class groups will be arranged. Applications for special seating should be sent early (with check) to Antonio Lazo, jr., 43 Exchange Place, New York City. Cash will be accepted that evening and seats provided for those who fail to get their applications in, but it is urgently requested that applications reach the committee by February 18. There will be good music, with singing led by the Glee Club table. Some original songs have been written for the occasion. Dinner tickets are five dollars each, and seats in the boxes, to which ladies may be invited, one dollar each. The dinner will take place at the Waldorf-Astoria on Thursday evening, February 23, at 7:30 o'clock.

New England.

The annual dinner of the Cornell Club of New England was held on February 4. Warren G. Ogden, who has been a most efficient secretary of the club for several years, was elected president. Other officers elected were Frank C. Cosby '93, vice-president; Joseph B. Philips '06 (176 Federal street, Boston, Mass.), secretary; William E. Pierce '05, treasurer; Arthur P. Bryant '00, athletic councilor; governors, Barrett Smith '04, Bert Houghton '92, Charles W. Hunter '05 and Frederick M. Nellis '99.

The secretary made a thorough report which showed the club to be very healthy and wide-awake. The present mailing list of the secretary carries 348 names and is about 50 per cent larger than at this time a year ago. The membership of the club (those who voluntarily pay annual dues) is now 136, an increase of 19 over last year. Of the club's weekly luncheons the secretary said:

"The luncheons on Thursday of each week have been held regularly from the first Thursday in October to the first Thursday in June. From 15 to 25 men have gathered each week about a large round table in a private dining room at the Boston City Club, read the college publications which are displayed at the luncheons, and discussed past and present life "on the hill." These luncheons afford an excellent opportunity to keep in touch with current happenings at the University. Much interest has been evinced in the discussion of present problems which face our Alma Mater. Cornell men, both residing in and visiting Boston, are urged to attend these club luncheons and learn how enjoyable they are."

During the year the club has notified all on its mailing list of nearby athletic events in which Cornell was represented. The board of governors has held ten meetings during the year and has been able to give material assistance to the graduate manager of athletics on his trips to Boston. Of the "New England Idea" the secretary said:

"This idea, as originally propounded by Mr. Henry F. Hurlburt '74, was intended to aid recent graduates who, having come to New England, were seeking to secure their first position. Experience of the past three years shows that practically no graduates come within our territory until some definite position has been secured. The work of Mr. Richard O. Walter '01, who has had charge of the New England Idea, has, therefore, been two-fold: first, correspondence with members of the current senior class to put them in touch with such openings as are available; and second, assistance to men already in New England who for any reason desire to change their positions. The past year has shown more help to older men changing their positions than to 1910 graduates. So far as Mr. Walter knows, none of the new men with whom he corresponded secured the positions suggested, but as such men seldom notify him when located, it may be some of them are here and working. Any Cornell man, who is an employer, can help this work by making his needs known to the secretary."

LIBRARY TOWER FROM THE EAST.

C. W. Furlong '99 was toastmaster at the dinner. E. J. Savage '98 gave a talk on the Cornell crews. Representatives of the New England alumni of Princeton, Pennsylvania and Dartmouth spoke, and courtesies were exchanged with the Georgetown alumni, who were dining at the same time at the same club. Professor Catterall spoke as the representative of the University, and Dr. Homer B. Sprague, who was Cornell's first professor of English, gave interesting reminiscences of the University's first years, the Founder, the first President and the group of learned lecturers gathered by him. This interest culminated in the suggestion of one of Dr. Sprague's former students, F. H. Jackson '73, that Professor Sprague draft a message of greetings from the club to Dr. Andrew D. White.

Junior Week.

Junior Week has been occupying the attention of the University community. Most of the fraternities had house parties and the number of guests was about as large as usual. The President and Mrs. Schurman gave a reception to the visiting chaperones Wednesday afternoon. The Widow breakfast was held at the Dutch Kitchen Wednesday morning.

Dances and other forms of entertainment were given by several of the fraternities.

The musical clubs' concert at the Lyceum Wednesday night drew the usual crowded house. The men had several new "stunts" on the program, including clog dancing and several timely limericks and parodies. The concert was followed by the 1913 sophomore cotillion at the Armory. The hall was decorated in pink and white. The Armory floor had been polished. The Masque presented "The Butterflies" at the Lyceum Thursday night. The play was followed by dances at fraternity houses. The Book and Bowl breakfast was held Thursday morning.

The week closed with the Junior Promenade at the Armory Friday night. The hall had been re-decorated, red and white being the color scheme. The lighting was especially beautiful, the ceiling being festooned with strings of frosted incandescents. Pocket flashlights were distributed to the men and several of the waltzes were danced with these as the only means of illumination.

Ithaca electric cars were brought into service for the week and fewer carriages were used.

ATHLETICS.

Hockey.

Cornell's hockey team virtually won the championship when it defeated the Columbia seven in the St. Nicholas rink, New York City, last Friday evening, by a score of 4 to 0. Cornell still heads the league with a clean score and there are two more games to play—the Harvard-Yale and Dartmouth-Cornell contests, both of which will take place next Saturday, the one in New York and the other in Boston. Even if Dartmouth defeats Cornell and Harvard beats Yale (which would give Cornell and Harvard the same percentage), Cornell would be virtually champion, having already defeated Harvard.

Columbia's team was on the defensive most of the game and Washburn, at goal, made some good stops. In the first half Vincent shot two goals and Magner one, and Magner scored Cornell's fourth tally early in the second half.

Commenting upon the game, the New York Evening Post said:

"Unless Dartmouth shows a sudden reversal in form in the final game with the Ithacans, Cornell will be the college hockey champion, thereby gaining supremacy on frozen as well as open water, something perhaps not without its sentimental value. Winter sports have long flourished at Ithaca, in a more or less disorganized way, and the graduates of the institution are particularly pleased to find that organization has been achieved at last under the clever coaching of Hunter, the Canadian star."

"This Cornell hockey team is a curious one—it is practically without what is generally considered absolutely necessary weight, but has a world of speed. There is no 'tower of strength' on this team, for which let us be duly thankful. The men go in for fast skating and pretty dodging, and the checking is not of the kind that puts them off the ice. The seven is a good deal like the St. Michael's team that came down from Canada early in the season. The men check cleanly, without undue roughness, and they stay on the ice, which is a fundamental of good hockey that might well be learned by some of the amateur teams in this city."

"When the Ithacans met hard checking last night they frequently shot over the backs of the checker and along the ice for twenty feet or more, only to be up again, often still in command of the rubber disc. Another fundamental of the game in which the up-State men are proficient is the ability to shoot hard and accurately, and all the time from all positions.

"But for the splendid goal-keeping of Washburn of Columbia, the score would have been much larger. Throughout the season the Ithacans have been attacking steadily, and they have taken more shots at the net than any team they have met. This is good hockey—the only hockey—and if the Ithacans win the championship, as they probably will, they will have earned the honors that go to the aggressor."

The standing follows:

	P.	W.	L.	P.C.
Cornell	4	4	0	1.000
Harvard	4	3	1	.750
Yale	4	2	2	.500

Baseball Practice Begins.

Baseball practice in the Armory cage started Monday under the direction of Coach Coogan. The first call this year was for new men only, it being the coach's idea to look over all the new material before March 1, when the general call will be issued. The team suffered by graduation last year and an unusually hard schedule this season makes it necessary to develop new men. Of the men who played regularly last year Goodwillie, Williams, Watson, Matchneer and Owen graduated. Captain E. B. Magner '11, at shortstop, D. A. Howard '11 at third base, C. S. Abbott '12 and Octavio Carvajal '11, pitchers, and W. L. Dauenhauer '11 and E. L. Thompson '11, outfielders, are the only "C" men left on the team. Eugene Dugan '11, M. A. Gordon '12 and R. T. Isett '12 were on the squad last year and are available.

The 1913 freshman team last season made an excellent record. It is these men and others who are eligible to play on the varsity this season that Coach Coogan wishes particularly to look over. There are in the University a great number of men who have possibilities in the baseball line. This has been shown in the intercollege games and in the games in the fraternity league. The coach thinks that many of these men have been discouraged at the start of previous seasons by playing against the regular men early in the season. The first cut in the squad will be delayed until all the men have had a fair chance to show what they can do. The positions to be filled by new men are first and second bases, catcher and pitcher. Carvajal and Abbott are left from last year's pitching staff but it will be necessary to develop two more men.

Track Athletics.

In a 1,560-yard relay race at Boston Saturday the Cornell team composed of E. G. MacArthur '11, S. F. Nixon '11, H. W. Ford '11 and A. S. Elsenbast '12, defeated the Pennsylvania team in 3 minutes 9 seconds, coming within three-fifths of a second of the record for the distance. Pennsylvania had some of her best short distance men in the race—Brown, Minds, Haydock and Hough.

John Paul Jones '13, intercollegiate cross-country champion, with a five-yard start, was really scratch man in the 1,000-yard run. He finished third, the winner of the race having a start of 50 yards and the second man a start of 24 yards.

Tell S. Berna '12, who holds the intercollegiate record for the two-mile run, was scratch man in the mile run. He finished second, five yards behind the winner.

Several of the track men, including the mile relay team, are to be entered in the New York Athletic Club games Saturday. Harvard, Pennsylvania and a third university will be met in the relay race.

Basketball.

Cornell was no equal for Yale in the second half of the basketball game at the Armory Saturday and was defeated 26 to 16. Finnessey, the Yale center, shot baskets at will in this part of the game. He alone scored 18 points, sufficient to beat Cornell. The Cornell men showed lack of endurance.

Cornell plays at Princeton Friday and at Philadelphia Saturday. It will be the second game with Princeton and the first with Pennsylvania this season.

The Rev. Hugh Black, of the Union Theological Seminary, New York City, who occupied the Sage Chapel pulpit last Sunday, will preach there also on February 19 and 26. During the intervening weeks he will remain in Ithaca and will be at Barnes Hall from 12 to 1 daily for consultation with any students who may desire to speak with him.

NOT IN a good many years has there been so much prospective building activity on the campus as there is at the present time. Five new buildings are projected and, in addition, plans are being prepared for the construction of the varsity athletic field in the new location recently assigned to it by the Trustees. Three of the proposed new buildings are those of the College of Agriculture for which the legislature appropriated $357,000—an auditorium, home economics building and poultry building. No announcement has been made as to their location, though it has been intimated that the new auditorium, which will seat 3,000 persons, will be erected west of Garden avenue. It will be the largest amphitheatre on the campus. The location of Rand

Hall, the new Sibley shops, has been practically determined, as stated in this paper last week, and an architect is now working on the plans. Prudence Risley Hall, the new women's dormitory, will be built somewhere near Sage College, but just where has not been determined.

IT IS not a pleasure to chronicle the disorder that occurred in Ithaca on the night of February 4. Ordinarily the ALUMNI NEWS does not treat Ithaca police court news as matter of University interest, because disorderly conduct downtown is not characteristic of the mass of Cornell students. The account printed on another page is given in response to requests from alumni for a true story of what happened. The authorities of the city were justified in treating the disorder as a serious offense, and University sentiment agrees with them. No criticism was heard of the sentence of ten days in jail inflicted upon one of the culprits. It is unfortunate that, through a tactical error on the part of the police, public attention was centered, not upon this man's case, but upon the case of the second man, for whom sympathy was aroused on account of what looked like a breach of faith.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.Co-operation Needed in Football.

Editor of the Cornell Alumni News: Having played football and having followed closely the work of the Cornell teams since 1890, I have been reading with interest the letters published in the last few issues regarding the football situation. It seems to me that the criticism of our coaching system opened by the letter of Mr. Heimann is decidedly ill timed, coming as it does after a season which proved conclusively to football men that the coaching was most efficient. A system which can train a green team, a majority of whose members are playing varsity football for the first time, so well that they beat Chicago in a brilliant game and outplay Penn at Philadelphia even though beaten through lack of experience, needs no criticism. It takes time to train coaches as well as players and each year will add strength to the system, as it has already shown us our "Grand Old Man" Dan Reed.

Under the present rules a football team cannot be properly coached by one man, so why experiment with a coach from another university whose object would be to turn out a winning team during his régime rather than to build up a winning system for Cornell? Of course our system needs a head, but it seems to me we have already found the right man in Dan Reed.

What Cornell football needs now of all times is co-operation—co-operation on the part of students, alumni and faculty. The game has come to stay and we are on the right track to bring our standing up to the level of our crews and track teams. Let the faculty play fair with the football men without being driven to it and let the alumni and students play fair with the teams and coaches and results are bound to come which will be satisfactory to all of us.

I am not one of those who measure the success of the season by the result of the Penn game because that will never be a fair test as long as we must play the game every year in Philadelphia. However, we must win a majority of our important games and be "contenders" all the time before we will be satisfied that Cornell is taking the place it should take in this particular sport. I am heartily in accord with the suggestions of Ralph Kent '02, as they mean a continuation of the system inaugurated last fall.

EDWIN P. YOUNG '94.

The Eleven's Need of Training.

Editor of the Cornell Alumni News: Like many others, I have read with much interest the articles in the ALUMNI NEWS on the football situation. Viewing the subject from the standpoint of an old player, it seems to me that the real reason of Cornell's poor and erratic showing in football has not been touched upon. I am convinced that it is the poor physical condition of the men: due, first, to the lack of proper training; secondly, to the location of Percy Field; thirdly, to the time of practice and lastly, in the case of Pennsylvania, to the custom of playing all the games in Philadelphia.

With the exception of 1910's, our teams have invariably started out well at the beginning of the season, played erratically until the last game and then lost that, with one exception: this in face of the fact that several of our teams were considered stronger than Penn's earlier in the season. To any football player this condition of affairs indicates a decreasing physical fitness. To remedy this let us have a trainer, responsible for our good condition and empowered to maintain it. Penn has her Murphy; Princeton her Fitzpatrick; whom has Cornell? She has Courtney and Moakley, both equal to her needs, but up to date she has not taken advantage of their ability except spasmodically.

It is impossible to overestimate the importance of a trainer to the success of the team. He should be a person able and authorized to regulate the men's exercise, diet and habits. Not even the head coach should encroach upon his authority. In '93 when Charley Courtney was supposed to be training the team, several men were played throughout the game directly contrary to his orders; indeed, to my personal knowledge no Cornell team was truly "trained" during the period '93 to '01. For all I know, no more consistent method is being followed today.

Next to our lack of proper training was the unsatisfactory location of Percy Field. It is hard for an outsider to realize how that damp, malarial hollow affected the football players whose use of it came in the early darkness of late fall days. In the past, our players have all suffered from malaria gradually accumulated on this field. In addition, the field is so far distant from the University that our men wasted valuable daylight in getting there.

This matter of the late practice hours has always been a handicap to the players, but the use of Alumni Field, because of its nearness, will add from one-half to three-quarters of an hour more daylight to the training period.

Lastly, the fact that we always play Penn in Philadelphia accounts in no small measure for some of our lost games. There is no question that one of two evenly matched teams will play a much better game on its own grounds where the surroundings are familiar, living conditions unchanged and an enthusiastic crowd is rooting for it. Surely we need not every year sell to Penn, for a few paltry dollars, our chance to win a big game, of which every Cornellian would be proud.

We have played under different conditions this year; have trained on Alumni Field; and the team while not the best we have had, has played very consistent ball; its last game was its best and the last part of that game, as well as every other game this year, was as good as the first part. The fact is the men were in condition last fall and played a better game considering their inexperience. (This much for a better field.)

I for one have every confidence in our present graduate football system and in the football men who are making it. Give them another year on Alumni Field, more daylight to practice in, add a training house where the men can eat together and spend more time together, and a good trainer to look after their physical condition, and a head coach like Dan Reed or Pop Warner, and Cornell will turn out a team that will win consistently.

There seems to be a sentiment in favor of having a foreign coach. I feel that this would be a serious mistake. We have tried several outside coaches in the past with no better results than with our own coaches. In '93 we had Johanson (Harvard); in '94 and '95 Marshall Newell (Harvard); in '96 Foster Sanford (Yale); in 1900 and '01 Percy Haughton (Harvard); all not only excellent coaches, but also famous players. The fact is that they, like our own coaches, were hampered by the unfortunate conditions above mentioned.

Cornell now ranks with the great universities; in numbers she has many men to select from, therefore as good material to start with; she has a new field ideally located to practice on; she is about to have the needed training house and, let us hope, the necessary trainer. In short she is more nearly armed for victory than ever before. Why at this juncture bring in a coach from a rival institution to share her coming laurels? Would Princeton hire a Yale or Harvard coach even if she thought that by so doing she could beat Yale 40 to 0? No! She would rather win once from Yale with a Princeton coach than twenty times with a Yale or Harvard coach.

The other great universities are giving their teams every aid to success. Let us be as generous with ours and it will undoubtedly win its full quota of victories.
