SAVING

a portion of one's income or wage IS NECESSARY TO SUCCESS
The proper disposition of savings is as important as the act itself.

The saver should buy for cash only, in which case his success is a question of proper advice.

With proper advice he should not only secure income from investments but a gradual appreciation of principal—due first to a proper initial investment, and thereafter to the timely shifting of investments.

The question of what class of security to buy and when to buy is all important.

We have made a study of these questions and our experience is yours to take advantage of.

THE winter courses in agriculture have opened and a larger number of "shorthorns" than ever before is in Ithaca. The total number registered this winter is expected to be 600. Last year the number was 451, and in the first day of registration this week that number was exceeded by 120. The corridors of the college were crowded all day. It will be impossible to instruct all the short course students in the agricultural buildings, and some classes will be held in other halls.

Dr. Herbert J. Webber, head of the plant breeding department of the College of Agriculture, is considering going to the University of California to become director of the citrus experiment station and dean of the graduate school of tropical agriculture in connection with that institution. Professor Webber has received a call to California, and spent a week and a half recently making an inspection tour of the state in relation to the proposed work. Until he hears further from the board of the university, he will not be in a position to announce definitely his intention to go or remain. Dr. T. F. Hunt, formerly of Cornell, is dean of the California State College of Agriculture.

In his report the Treasurer of the University says that the capacity of the present University power plant, installed in 1905, has been reached, and during the coming year it will be necessary to purchase considerable power. The present plant has shown itself efficient and economical. Land has been purchased at a cost of about $38,000 for a dam and storage reservoir. The site is in the Fall Creek valley, about three miles east of Beebe Lake. It is hoped that funds for the construction of this storage plant may be found in the near future, the Treasurer says, as it will not be long before the University's expenditure for power will exceed the interest on the cost of such a plant.

The undergraduate section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers held an informal get-together and smoker last Thursday evening which was attended by about seventy men—members of the Ithaca section and students in electrical engineering being invited. This kind of entertainment was inaugurated by the society last spring. In the future probably the social affairs will be held in connection with the regular section meetings. Professor E. L. Nichols '75 spoke on the necessity of engineers having an outlook beyond their profession.

More than one thousand students had been approached for a subscription by the Christian Association competitors up to the first part of the week, and had either given or pledged a total of $1,450. By the end of the week, when the regular campaign closes, the association expects to have raised $2,500. Before the end of the college year, the association hopes to raise $3,000 from the undergraduates. The average contribution this year is $1.75 as against $1.25 last year. The freshmen are making by far the most generous gifts.

Efforts are being made to organize an interfraternity hockey league, similar to the interfraternity baseball league, and play a series of games this winter. Several of the fraternities have signified their interest. Some of the games will be played on the fraternity tennis courts, flooded and frozen, and it is hoped to secure the use of the rink on Beebe Lake for the semi-finals and finals.

The University Orchestra's annual free fall concert for the undergraduates Saturday was as usual attended by a crowd that jammed Sibley Dome to the doors. Thomas's Overture, "Raymond," and selections from "Aida" were the principal numbers, and were rendered with the smoothness and perfection characteristic of this organization. What perhaps delighted the audience even more was the appearance of J. S. Fassett '12 in several songs. His recitation of "The Three Trees," from the opera "The Spring Maid," accompanied by the orchestra, brought down the house.

Professors Ernest Merritt and W. F. Willcox have returned from the annual meeting of the Association of American Universities at the University of Pennsylvania. The primary purpose of this conference was to discuss graduate work.

One of the most important papers read, discussing the question whether too much help is not given in the way of scholarships, fellowships, etc., was presented by Dr. A. R. Hill, Ph.D., '95, president of the University of Missouri. President Hadley of Yale raised the question how the increasing cost of instruction in the colleges is to be met—whether by increasing tuition fees—but proposed no definite answer.

Following is the roll of membership of Semaphore, the honorary Civil Engineering society: Charles Lee Crandall, Ora Miner Leland, Francis Joseph Seery, Charles Leopold Walker, Ernest C. White, Carl Crandall '12, Harry VanWinkle Berry '12, Paul Laurence Maher '12, Arthur William Beale '13, William Edwin Brooks '13, Arthur Bancroft Cozzens '13, Don Lee '13, Alexander Lyle, Jr., '13, Paul Macy '13, Jacob Warren McConnell '13, Harold Lynn Pitner '03, Roger William Parkhurst '13, Winthrop Tarbell Scarritt '13, Frank Sheldon Selby '13, Howard Halsey Snyder '13, Henry Ten Hagen '13, Butron Wells Brodt '14, Harry Guy Campbell '14, Otho Myron Clark '14, Thomas Fullager Danforth '14, Donald Power Denham '14, Austin Sprague Hart '14, Charles Strunk Hill, Jr., '14, George Gates Robinson '14, Thorpe Derickson Sawyer '14, Ralph Shannon Sollitt '14, Clifford Theodore Williams '14.

Mr. Courtney celebrated his sixty-third birthday anniversary Wednesday, November 13. He seemed as vigorous and active as ever when he met the men of last year's crews assembled for the first time this season in the crew room. In the evening the old crew men gathered at his house to congratulate him and present him with a little remembrance in the form of a barometer to use in his work. The twenty oarsmen and managers spent the evening hearing Mr. Courtney's stories of old days.

The furnishings of the Billiken, a moving-picture theatre at South Tioga and East Green Streets, where the old Star Theatre used to be, were destroyed by fire early last Thursday. The loss was estimated at $3,300. The theatre will be reopened as soon as possible.

Meeting of Alumni Held in New York City

Addresses Delivered by Representatives of Various Organizations

A meeting of the board of directors of the Associate Alumni of Cornell University was held at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York last Saturday, November 16. Webster, jr., '90, Bridgeport, delegate from the Cornell Association of Connecticut; John C. Westervelt '94, New York, Alumni Trustee; Rose Williams '12, Brooklyn.

The meeting was held in one of the assembly rooms on the Thirty-third Street side of the hotel. It began a little after ten o'clock in the morning and lasted through the afternoon, with an intermission for luncheon.

Mr. Himes, the president of the Associate Alumni, was the chairman. He stated the purpose of the meeting briefly, and called first upon Dr. DeForest, who gave a short account of the history of the Cornell Association of Class Secretaries.

Mr. Place then spoke on the purpose of the Cornellian Council. He said that it differed from all other Cornell alumni organizations in having a single purpose. The University's need, its one need, was more money, and the Council had been formed to obtain regular financial support for the University from the alumni. He contrasted Cornell's small endowment with the much larger productive funds of universities having no more students, and referred to the deficit which now confronts the Trustees. One obstacle to the work of the Council, he said, had been the lack of a fairly complete address list of the graduates. But Mr. Dugan, the Secretary of the University, and Mr. Johnson, the Secretary of the Council, were working on such a list. They expected soon to have a mailing list of 14,000 or 15,000 Cornellians, as compared with 8,000, which was all Mr. Johnson had been able to get up to the present time. Mr. Place said that the effective organization of the four classes last graduated had been an important factor in the success of the Alumni Fund. The subscribers to the fund now numbered 2,700, and they were giving $25,000 annually. Mr. Johnson, the secretary, had been employed to give all his time to the work of raising money, but recently he had been doing other work without impairing the effectiveness of his service to the Council, and this had reduced the cost of operation.

Mr. Sackett spoke for the Trustees. He said they would welcome some avenue of regular communication between the alumni and themselves. The voice of the alumni, whenever it could be heard clearly, he said, had always been a governing voice with the board. He spoke of the unprecedented action of the Trustees in giving fifty-seven acres of campus land for an athletic field, in response to alumni sentiment, and of the Trustees' subsequent refusal to let the needs of another department impair that gift. He urged that the alumni acquaint themselves more thoroughly with the condition and needs of the University, and promised them that whenever they came to the Trustees they would have a hearing.

Mr. Boldt made an accurate and succinct diagnosis of one of Cornell University's ills. He said (but not in such blunt words as this) that he had noticed a lack of cohesiveness on the part of the alumni. They did not get together, and they did not always take the trouble to inform themselves accurately before they found fault. Come together in Ithaca more often, he said. Do not depend entirely on what you read. Come and see for yourselves. You cannot get to the heart of things by reading another man's writings, he said, and you cannot see clearly with another's eyes. There can be no real interchange of opinion without a sort of mouth-to-mouth conference, and a frank exchange of opinion beats all the literature in the world when it comes to getting somewhere. Mr. Boldt said that a hall for meetings and conferences of the University seemed to him to be one of our great needs, and he had hoped that somebody would provide one ere this. If the alumni thought that such an object was worth their effort to provide, he would give five dollars for every hundred that was contributed.

Professor Crane noted that when the University was opened the number of students was 425; now it was 4,605. The causes of all the problems of the University's administration were concentrated in that fact, he said. This growth had been a burden; "how heavy that burden has been you cannot know." He made a plea for the officers of administration and especially for the President of the University. "You must have confidence," he said, "in the men who bear these burdens." He pointed out how impossible it would be for the University to be governed in any large measure away from the place where the institution is. The vital purpose of this meeting, he thought, was the consideration of what it might be necessary to do to bring about a more united feeling among not only the alumni but also the undergraduates. He would like to see the alumni coming back oftener and in larger numbers.

In the afternoon the following resolutions were presented and adopted:

By Mr. Geer:

"Whereas, there is among the alumni a widespread and growing feeling of concern over University affairs and conditions, and

"Whereas, by education, experience, loyalty and geographical distribution they are pre-eminently fitted to be of valuable service in the councils of the University, and

"Whereas, the rapidly increasing student enrollment has thrown and is throwing ever enlarging burdens and demands upon the management and resources of the University, so that, among other things, it has become more and more difficult to provide adequate remuneration of and provisions for the faculty, and to meet the problems of properly developing throughout the undergraduate body those ideals which are productive of the highest type of citizenship and devotion to broad and democratic community principles, and

"Whereas, the alumni desire to evidence their obligation to the University and to assist the trustees, faculty and student body in the development of their larger and best interests; be it therefore

"Resolved, that it is the sense of this meeting that the Associate Alumni of Cornell University through its board of directors take a vital and active part in assisting the trustees, faculty and student body to shape and effect University policies and development to the end that the affairs of Cornell be guided not alone by trustees, faculty and students, but also by a united and influential alumni sentiment."

By Mr. Hargreaves:

"That it is the sense of this meeting that each of the Cornell alumni associations, where geographically practical, delegate a representative to attend the more important meetings of the Athletic Council, at Ithaca, each year, with the object of bringing alumni in closer touch with the faculty and students in the conduct of undergraduate affairs and to enable the alumni to exercise a beneficial influence in developing and effecting the business of administration of athletics and the fostering of comprehensive diplomatic policies for the University."

By Mr. Sailor:

"That it is the sense of this meeting that the alumni trustees and the board of directors of the Associate Alumni, each of whom is responsible to the alumni, henceforth co-operate with each other, in so far as possible, to foster the best interests of the University, and that the alumni trustees recognize the board of directors of the Associate Alumni as the medium through which each and all of them may learn the desires of and obtain the voice and assistance of the alumni, and the alumni may express their desires and make their recommendations to the alumni trustees."

"By Mr. Walter:

"That it is the sense of this meeting that each of the directors of the Associate Alumni exercise his best efforts to fully acquaint the members of the alumni association or associations with whom he is identified of the purposes and scope of the organization known as the Associate Alumni and the province of its board of directors; and that each of the associations of alumni, at some function each year, invite one or more of the board of directors to attend, that he or they may acquaint those present with the work undertaken and accomplished and the opportunities for constructive service through the Associate Alumni and its board of directors."

By Mrs. Coville:

"That every alumni club be advised to appoint a committee to supplement the work of the Cornellian Council."

By Mr. Mason:

"That it is the sense of this meeting that the board of directors of the Associate Alumni of Cornell University appoint a committee of not to exceed five members, at least one of whom shall be a resident of the city of Ithaca, to rearrange the reunion schedule under the plan adopted by the Board of Trustees of Cornell University at its meeting November 7, 1912."

By Mr. Mason:

"That it is the sense of this meeting that the board of directors of the Associate Alumni of Cornell University make proper arrangements to secure the amendment of the Education Law of the State of New York so as to allow the holding of the annual meeting of that association at any date within the seven days prior to Commencement which may be fixed from time to time by the board of directors of the said association, and that this amendment be put through at the forthcoming session of the Legislature of the State of New York."

By Mr. Place:

"That to the same committee (to be appointed under Mr. Mason's second resolution) be referred the question whether the amendment to the statute should also include the changing of the date (from April 1st to March 1st) on or before which nominations for alumni trustee must be closed."

Mr. Hargreaves read a resolution from the Cornell Association of Michigan, reciting, in effect, that the alumni should be organized.

Mr. Ihlder, who is field secretary of the National Housing Association, urged that local alumni associations give some attention to community betterment in their respective towns.

Dr. Schenck read a short history of the Associate Alumni.

In the evening the board of directors held a meeting. They elected new directors to take the places of three who had resigned, as follows: F. S. Porter to succeed L. C. Fuller; W. C. Geer to succeed William Metcalf, Jr., and J. H. Edwards to succeed H. L. Taylor.

The board of directors instructed the secretary to acquaint the local associations with the proceedings of the board's meeting of November 16, and resolved that the individual members of the board should use every opportunity to make known to the local associations and to alumni generally the purpose of the board to bring within the Associate Alumni all scattered alumni groups and to make the board of directors the agency by which the interest of alumni may be made the basis of intelligent and concerted action.

Medical College Allied with Hospital

Generous Gift of George F. Baker Makes a Desirable Partnership Possible

A thing which the University authorities and the friends of the Medical College have long desired, namely, an alliance between the Medical College and a hospital, has been made possible by the liberality of George F. Baker, former president of the First National Bank of New York City. Mr. Baker has given a large sum to the New York Hospital for the purpose of effecting a partnership between that hospital and the Cornell University Medical College. The amount of his gift is not announced, but it is said to be ample for the purpose.

The arrangement which is contemplated was the one thing needed to enable the Cornell University Medical College to take a place among the foremost schools of the kind. The Johns Hopkins Medical School owns its own hospital, the Harvard Medical School has an agreement with the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, and the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University has recently made an alliance with the Presbyterian Hospital in New York.

The New York Hospital is one of the oldest institutions of its kind in the city. It was chartered in 1771, by grant from King George III. The present hospital building is on West Sixteenth Street. It is said that a part of Mr. Baker's gift will be used to erect a new hospital building as near as possible to the Cornell Medical College, which is at First Avenue and East Twenty-eighth Street.

Under the alliance the physicians and surgeons of the hospitals' staff will be appointed from the faculty of the college. The faculty of the college will have exclusive use of half of the hospital's wards, about 150 beds, for purposes of study and demonstration. The students of the college will attend the hospital's clinics as a part of the course. They will have opportunity for extended observation of all kinds of cases, and after graduation will be chosen by preference as internes for the main hospital and for its branch in Hudson Street. It is reported that when the hospital's new building is erected the capacity for patients will be increased from 300 to 600.

In his annual report a year ago President Schurman said:

"It is today recognized that a hospital is as essential to a medical school as a physiological, an anatomical, or a pathological laboratory. A medical school cannot be efficient unless its clinical instructors have positions in hospitals, and it cannot call to its staff eminent physicians and surgeons from any part of the country unless it can offer them along with its professorships clinical positions in a hospital. If, therefore, the Medical College of Cornell University is to remain a first-class institution, it must either own a hospital or enter into partnership with an independent hospital on terms which will assure to the Medical College the right to appoint or to nominate the clinical officers in the hospital."

By the courtesy of Bellevue Hospital some of the college's research work has been done there, and this will not be discontinued. For the last two years the college has carried forward particularly the study of cancer, and it is believed that the new affiliation will be of great benefit to this most important work.

$1,000 Fellowship in Medicine

An anonymous benefactor has given a fund to endow a research fellowship in the Medical College. The fund will yield an annual income of $1,000. This gift will materially increase the benefit to be derived from the coalition of the college with the New York Hospital.

College Heating Plant

Work is progressing on the heating plant of the College of Agriculture. The structure is just across the Forest Home road from Beebe Lake, at the foot of the hill on which the Carnegie filtration plant stands. A concrete retaining wall is being erected against the face of the hill, and a tall chimney is rising. It will be necessary to install temporary heating plants in the home economics and poultry husbandry buildings this winter, for the new plant cannot be finished before zero weather.

The freshman cross-country team defeated the Penn freshmen at Philadelphia Saturday.

ITHACA, NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 20, 1912

ONE COMES AWAY from the meeting of alumni in New York last Saturday with a fear that the Associate Alumni's somewhat elaborate machinery of organization is designed less to help the University than to give opportunity for criticising the administration of the University. The messages that came from alumni associations around the country signified an eager desire to be of service. But there was no answering suggestion of ways to direct this energy into channels of real usefulness. It was rather pitiful to contrast the ardor on the one side with the barrenness on the other. One is impelled to feel that before the Associate Alumni organization will be able to serve Cornell University, it must give up its present notion of being a power in university councils, and cultivate a humble desire to work with the President and the Trustees.

ONE COULD NOT but regret that the meeting was held outside of Ithaca. Our alumni come back to the University so infrequently that the calling of this assembly in a hotel in New York was an opportunity thrown away. One hour's walk about the campus would satisfy any fair-minded person that the University is not going to the dogs. The delegates would have taken away a pride and an enthusiasm that were not communicated to them on Thirty-third Street. They would have seen that what they need is not alumni leaders who have mazed themselves in the intricacies of nominating committees and forums and rules of order, but leaders who know what the University's immediate wants are, leaders who can turn their faces "home, to the instant need of things."

ONE OF THE resolutions expressed the opinion that there is among the alumni a widespread and growing feeling of concern over the condition of the University. The effect of this and other resolutions upon the writer of this column was to give him a renewed feeling of loyalty to and sympathy with the President and the Trustees and the Faculty. They have a feeling of concern over the condition of the University, too. They are bearing the burden. They are meeting the University's problems without a great deal of help from any organization of alumni, and meeting them pretty well, considering everything. The conviction is growing upon the writer that if the alumni are ever going to serve the University in large measure, they must make a greater effort than they do to get first-hand knowledge of its affairs, they must choose their advisers wisely, and they must be willing to serve in the ranks instead of demanding seats at the council table.

Cuba

At a smoker held by Cornell men in Havana on November 4, the following resolution of greeting to General Mario Menocal '88, the president-elect of Cuba, was adopted:

Establishes a Loan Fund

Cornell Club of Rochester to Aid Deserving Students

The Cornell Club of Rochester has established a student loan fund. The fund has for its object the aiding of deserving students to finish their courses in the University; is open only to upper-classmen who have been at least one year in attendance in the University and who are eligible by reason of their residence in Rochester or vicinity to membership in the Cornell Club of Rochester. Account will be taken of the applicant's university record. This fund is to be administered by the Board of Governors of the Cornell Club of Rochester, and applications are to be sent to the secretary of the club. The loan is to be repaid by the student within two years after he leaves college, either in cash or by a note which may be renewed and reduced from time to time.

Your Reunion Committee Has Leased a Large House for Class Headquarters

The 35th year reunion of the Class of '78 promises to bring out an excellent attendance. To the query of your secretary whether each one would come to the reunion 31 have replied Yes without qualification; 5 "expect to come" and 23 "will come if at all possible."

Your committee, consisting of Dr. Eugene Baker, Dean A. W. Smith and Mr. R. H. Treman, at a meeting on November 7, authorized the leasing of the Rites house, at the corner of University Avenue and Lake Street, for the week of the reunion for headquarters. Rooms and board will be provided in this house or an adjoining house for the members and their families. The banquet will be held in the spacious dining room at headquarters.

The Rites house was once the Jaynes house. It is not far from the residence of R. H. Treman. It is near the Stewart Avenue car line and within walking distance of the McGraw building.

If you have not already said you will come, do so at once, addressing Willard Beahan, Secretary, 2213 Bellfield Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

The Co-op Dividing $5,707

The "Co-op" is now paying out $5,707 due in eight per cent dividends on last year's purchases. The number of persons who will share in this rebate is 4019, an increase of 114 over last year. To those who have left the University, money orders will be sent, but those remaining, or about 2800, must call for their money by November 23. Half of the money was paid out on the first day. Usually there is a shrinkage of about ten per cent for those who do not call for their money at all. The total amount actually paid out last year was $4,992.

An interesting fact is that about fifty per cent of the dividends returned is on purchases of small amounts like twenty-five cents or less.

A second "café chantant," on a larger scale than one which was successful last year, will be given by the women of Sage College in the Armory next Saturday evening. Each of the four classes will give an act, and after the program there will be dancing. The purpose of the entertainment is to raise money for the Sports and Pastimes Association.

Cornell Plays Real Football

The Cornell football team was defeated at Ann Arbor last Saturday by Michigan in one of the hardest fought contests within recall of the present generation of undergraduates of either of the universities. So hard fought was the battle, so well was the game played, that defeat, which came in the last quarter, was heart-breaking to the football squad, to the coaches and to the few hundred Cornell alumni and undergraduates who sat in a small section of the crowded stands on Ferry Field. The score was 20 to 7.

Even as the eleven appeared when it took the field that afternoon, one could note the determination which radiated from each of the players. They were there to win the game and they intended to do it. No word of criticism would be appropriate directed against the fighting spirit of these men who represented Cornell, and little comment can be made with regard to the quality of football they exhibited. Each one of them played hard, good football, the very kind which made every Cornell enthusiast confident that the team would win, even until the last few minutes of the final period.

Cornell Stronger in Rushing

A brief summary of the game shows Cornell's advantage in team work. In four periods Cornell gained 156 yards by rushing the ball as compared with Michigan's 77, and seven first downs by rushing alone, against two. Cornell made sixteen forward passes, gaining seventy-two yards. Michigan made four and gained eighty-four yards, and each of them had a direct bearing on her score. Michigan fumbled twice as often as did Cornell and had one more penalty chalked up against her when the game ended.

What is said in these paragraphs must not be taken as a hard-luck story. But, in view of the fact that this writing is primarily for Cornell alumni, we feel safe in saying that a lack of football knowledge or a lack of fighting spirit or a lack of "punch" had nothing to do with the defeat.

Permit a repetition here: this comment, which savors so strongly of attempting to excuse a defeat, is prompted, now that the Cornell men are fighting hard and playing good football, by the hope of displacing the impressions created by the press of the country, earlier in the season when the work was unsatisfactory. In the last two games the team has fought well and has demonstrated its increasing knowledge of the game. It is still fighting on the practice field. Not for one minute has it forgotten the promise to defeat Pennsylvania, and the hope of a fulfillment of this promise is not to be thought unreasonable.

Michigan, 20; Cornell, 7

Captain "Bottles" Thompson won the toss for Michigan and chose to defend the western goal and to play with the wind. Captain Butler kicked off to Craig, who ran the ball back twenty yards and was downed on the Michigan 40 yard mark. This performance of the Michigan half-back with its clever dodging was characteristic of his subsequent runbacks and in this department of the game Michigan stood out prominently, aggregating a total of double as much ground gained by running back punts as did Cornell. On the first down Captain Thompson punted to Captain Butler, whose seven yard runback carried the ball to the Cornell 28-yard line. Cornell was here forced to punt, against the wind, and Michigan was downed at midfield. The Wolverines eked out a first down on the 38-yard line, but in the next three attempts to advance only a like number of yards could be gained, and on the fourth, with seven yards to go, the first forward pass of the game, Torbett to Pontius, scored a touchdown and Patterson kicked the goal. Score: Cornell 0, Michigan 7.

Butler kicked off to Craig, who got no opportunity to start with the ball this time, for O'Hearn downed him in his tracks. Captain Thompson outdistanced Butler in his punting on the exchange by ten yards. Three penalties in rapid succession, the last one being against Michigan, gave Cornell the ball on her own 20-yard line. O'Hearn circled left end for eight yards. O'Connor hit the left side of the line for six yards more and on the next play he again found a hole and carried the ball to midfield. With a clear path ahead of him and a score in sight, he slipped and fell. Two line bucks and a forward pass netted only five yards, and Cornell punted out of bounds at the Michigan 29-yard line. The Wolverines here attempted a trick which was nipped in the bud by fine tackling. With the wind still behind them, Captain Thompson punted fifty yards, which gain Butler was able to cut down by his fourteen-yard runback. At about the 35-yard mark two line bucks and a forward pass again netted but five yards and Jess Whyte followed the ball as it sped through the air and downed Craig before he moved. Michigan failed to make first down in three attempts and the period ended with the oval at midfield. Cornell 0, Michigan 7.

The downs remaining the same at the opening of the second quarter, Michigan punted to Butler on his own 15-yard line, whence he returned to the thirty-first parallel. Butler punted to Huebel, who was downed on Michigan's 35-yard line, and Michigan's two halfbacks made three unsuccessful attempts to hit the Cornell line. An exchange of punts gave the ball to Cornell at midfield and Captain Butler punted over the goal line. Michigan put the ball into play on their own 20-yard line and their first play was fruitless. They then went through center for three yards, which they immediately lost when O'Hearn threw Hughitt for a loss. Their punt went out of bounds on their own 40-yard line. Butler and Bennett gained seven yards in two tries and O'Connor on a cross buck got as far as the 20-yard line on his way to the goal, when he was called back and Cornell suffered a penalty for holding. With eighteen yards to gain in two downs, Captain Butler and O'Connor executed a clean forward pass for seven yards and the latter then broke through the Michigan line for nine more. Here, on the Michigan 33-yard line, Cornell lost the ball on downs and also a possible chance to score. Michigan's onslaught netted only two or three yards and she punted. Taber fumbled the ball on his own 48-yard line and a flying Wolverine recovered it out of bounds. Michigan made a first down after resorting to a species of the old tandem play, only to lose the ball within the next ten yards. Cornell punted to Huebel, who was downed on his own 35-yard line. On the next play Eyrich halted Thompson without gain and O'Hearn threw Craig for a loss. Michigan again failed to gain and fumbled, Cornell recovering. Cornell's backfield made first down on the 20-yard line and then Butler went around left end for five yards. Butler passed the ball to O'Hearn for thirteen yards and a short gain by Butler placed the oval on the one yard line, with thirty seconds to play. Taber tripped over the line for a touchdown and Butler tied the score by kicking goal. Score Cornell 7, Michigan 7.

Tied Through Third Period

This long, hard fight, finally rewarded by a tally, had a strengthening effect on the Cornell team, and the third period was a marvel of strength and heady playing. Michigan was kept a good twenty-five yards away from the borderline of the Cornell territory and only gained a total of twenty-six yards by rushing and no first downs. She punted three times for a total of about sixty yards and averaged only four yards running back each of Cornell's three punts, which averaged thirty-eight yards. In short, Michigan, outclassed in the first half of the game, was completely at a standstill in the third quarter. O'Connor received Captain Thompson's kick-off and ran it back eighteen yards, stopping on his own 39-yard line. Butler elected to punt and sent the ball through the air to the Michigan 25-yard line, where Guyer downed the Michigan runner in his tracks. Michigan gained a yard and then fumbled. They recovered, but Captain Thompson repeated the performance unsuccessfully and Cornell obtained the ball on Michigan's 26-yard mark. Bennett and O'Connor each made a small gain and then the two quarterbacks figured in a forward pass which gave Michigan the ball on her own 15-yard line.

From the Blue 40-yard line, where Butler received Thompson's punt, Cornell made short consistent gains through the Michigan line, and finally Captain Butler, hoping to break the tie, fell back to the 32-yard line to kick from placement. The ball sped straight until a gust of wind steered it just to the south of the posts. The plays which followed, after Michigan had put the ball into play on her 20-yard line, were practically the same as those which led up to Butler's last try for goal. This time, however, the ball was taken to the eight-yard line before Butler tried for a goal. Unfortunately it was from a bad angle that he was forced to kick. The ball missed the goal by inches. Michigan was again forced to punt from her own 28-yard line and Cornell received the ball at midfield. A forward pass failed. A triple pass, Butler to O'Connor to Bennett, gained seven yards and a line buck two more. Butler then fell back to the 50-yard line for a field goal. This attempt was wide of its mark and for the third time Michigan put the ball into scrimmage on her own 20-yard line. And also, for the third time, she was forced to punt within the coveted ten yards. The period ended, however, before this necessity arose and the score remained, Cornell 7, Michigan 7.

The Final Quarter

As Captain Thompson punted to O'Hearn at midfield, Craig, who had been taken out of the game in the third period, was sent on the field, to relieve Collette, his understudy. Having twelve men on the field during play at once started a discussion among the officials which was terminated by Captain Butler intervening and allowing Craig to enter the game again. Cornell was forced to punt and Michigan did likewise from her own 42-yard line. O'Connor, receiving, ran the ball back ten yards, and then bucked the line for five. Butler made a quarterback run which netted eight yards, carrying the ball to the Cornell forty-five yard line for a first down. Cornell was held at about this point for six downs and punted to Craig on his own 18-yard line. Craig got back seven yards before he was downed, but the Blue team was forced to punt. Taber, receiving the ball at midfield, fumbled again and Michigan recovered. Copying the Cornell triple pass, Michigan gained twenty-three yards, which took the ball to the Cornell 25-yard line. Captain Thompson made a forward pass to Pontius, the same play as that on which the Michiganders scored their first tally, and the fast right end went over the goal line for a score which broke the tie. The Michigan enthusiasts went wild. Every known kind of noise-making apparatus, kept in hiding heretofore, was simultaneously let loose. The Rocky Mountain Club of Michigan, said to have a membership of nine hundred, all supplied with blank cartridges, began a fusillade which continued until the last round was fired. No goal was kicked on this touchdown and the score stood: Cornell 7, Michigan 13.

About five minutes remained to be played and Cornell had a good prospect of turning the tables. Butler made a splendid kick-off against the wind which Craig returned ten yards, to the 25-yard line. There Michigan was forced to punt, Taber receiving the ball on his own 25-yard line. Forward passes were now the rule, seven being made in quick succession. Two were successful, and gained thirty-two yards, but Butler was finally thrown for a loss as he attempted another pass and Cornell was forced to kick. Huebel caught the ball at midfield and sped down toward the goal, dodging tackles, with Butler gaining on him, until he crossed the line for the final touchdown of the game. It was at this point that the Cornell tackles were, if not exactly weak, inaccurate. Patterson kicked goal and it remained but for Cornell to execute one more forward pass after Michigan's kick-off. And though it was the last play of the game, and with but seconds to play and defeated, O'Connor's forward pass to Eyrich netted twenty yards. Final score: Cornell 7. Michigan 20.

Intercollege Cross-Country

Agriculture again won the intercollege cross-country race Saturday, with Sibley second and Arts third. More than 200 men started. Once the race was fairly under way, there was no doubt about the outcome, and at the finish seven out of the first twelve men to cross the line wore the blue sash of the winning college.

Individual honors were taken by J. E. McGolrick '14, of the College of Agriculture, who breasted the tape a hundred yards ahead of the second man, W. H. Chapman '13, M.E.

The first seven men to cross the line for each college were counted, and will receive shingles as members of the college team. The team scores follow: Agriculture, 40; Sibley, 136; Arts, 223; C. E., 292; Chemistry, 350; Architecture, 452; Veterinary, 472; Law, 571.

The freshman eleven defeated the Mansfield Normal School team at Percy Field Saturday, 14 to 0. They will meet the Pennsylvania freshmen next Saturday at Philadelphia.
