AN ADJOURNED MEETING of the Associate Alumni of Cornell University has been called to take place at Ithaca on Friday, November 6, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The call has been issued by the president of the association, Roger Lewis '95, of New York. This session will be officially a part of the regular annual meeting of the association, which convened on June 13, 1914, but did not complete the work it had in hand. At the coming session amendments to the by-laws will be considered, together with such other business as may properly come before the association.

THE BARS which were put up by the senior societies against members of the so-called social clubs have been let down. That fact became public this week, when both societies, in their fall elections from the class of 1915, extended "bids" to men who were members of Majura, the odd-year club. It is reported that both societies have given up the attempt to starve out those clubs by denying election to their members. The action against the clubs was taken a year ago last spring, just before the societies' elections from the class of 1914. The societies then announced a joint agreement to outlaw nine clubs on the ground that they were "a detriment to the University community." Some of those nine have disappeared, but two at least of them, Beth L'Amed and Majura (formerly Mummy and Nalanda), have not only maintained their existence but are perhaps stronger to-day than they were two years ago. The contest had come to a deadlock and was causing bad feeling.

THE MEDICAL COLLEGE opened on Wednesday, September 30, with an enrollment as follows: For the degree of M.D.: first year, 55; second year, 28; third year, 32; fourth year, 20: special students (work not leading to the degree of M.D.), 12: for the degree of Pn.D., 5: making a total of 152. All students now registered, with the exception of those pursuing the combined seven years course leading to the degrees of A.B. and M.D., are graduates of Arts and Sciences, or Doctors of Medicine doing advanced work. Students in the combined course present the baccalaureate degree before they are admitted to the second year in medicine. The entering class this year is the largest the college has had since the entrance requirements were increased.

THE COMPETITION for the eighteen undergraduate University Scholarships this fall was the largest in the history of the University. Last year there were 120 competitors; this year the number increased to 137.

PROFESSOR FRANK IRVINE is giving the one-hour course in federal practice and procedure at the law school this year. He is on leave of absence from the University on account of his membership in the New York State Public Service Commission, but he is able to be in Ithaca for a day or two every week without interference with his public duties.

WHETHER Professor Artur Weese of the University of Berne will be able to give his promised course of lectures on the Schiff Foundation in February and March is still uncertain. In a letter to Professor Faust received about two weeks ago Professor Weese said he did not yet know whether he would be able to come to this country this winter.

THE PRESIDENT and Professor C. E. Bennett are in Providence this week attending the exercises of the 150th anniversary of Brown University. Professor Bennett was a member of the class of 1878 at Brown.

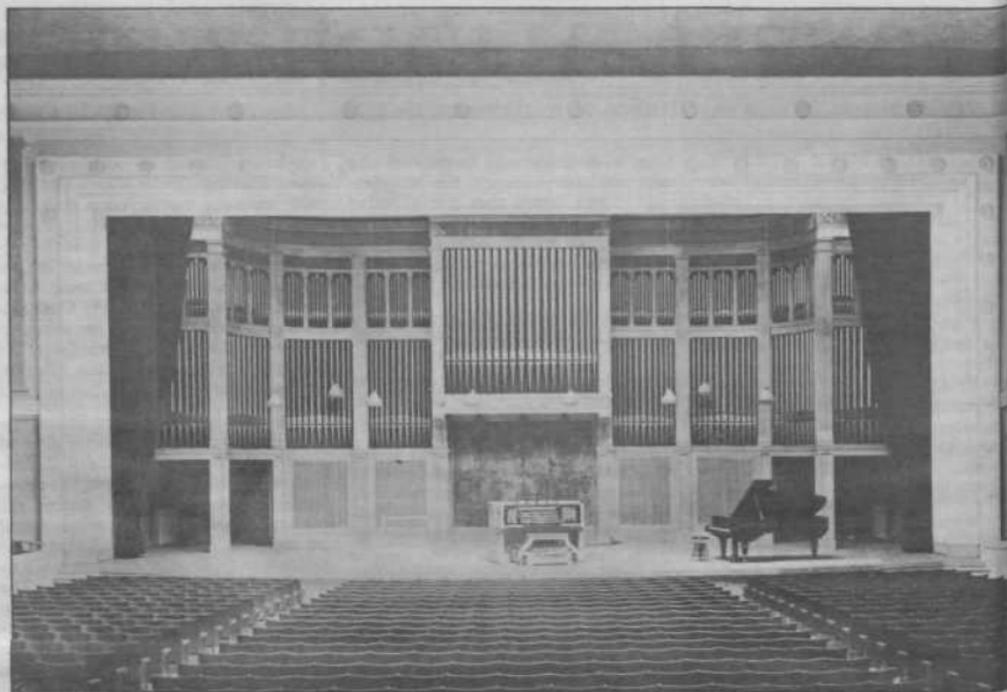

A PORTRAIT of the late Director Fuertes has been painted for the College of Civil Engineering by Miss Anna Milo Upjohn. It is a gift to the college from the alumni who were students during the thirty years (1873-1903) when Professor Fuertes was in the Faculty. A committee was appointed by them to obtain a portrait. It consisted of Clyde Potts '01, J. E. Wadsworth '90, and Professor Henry N. Ogden '89. The painter, Miss Upjohn, is a niece of the late Professor Charles Babcock. She painted a portrait of Professor Babcock which is owned by the College of Architecture, a gift from its alumni. That was an admirable likeness, and she has been not less successful in portraying Professor Fuertes. He is shown standing, with an elbow resting on a desk, and with the inevitable cigarette between his fingers. It is intended that the picture shall become the property of the University and that it shall hang in the auditorium of the College of Civil Engineering when the plans for enlarging Lincoln Hall have been carried out. At present it is hanging in the office of Director Haskell.

TWO EXHIBITIONS are now in progress at the College of Architecture. One of them is the work of students of the college, consisting of photographs, drawings, and sketches made during the summer in competition for prizes offered by alumni. The purpose of that competition is to develop and test the student's knowledge of composition. The exhibition is not so large as a similar one a year ago, but some of the work is better than any that was shown then. The other exhibition consists of plans and sketches of country houses by various architects, some of them graduates of the college. Its purpose is to illustrate the course in house planning which is taken by the junior class in the first term.

A PROGRAM laid out for the coming year by the Ethics Club reveals the keen interest which current events in Europe have aroused. At a meeting on October 20 the club will discuss "the present crisis and the ethics of nationality" and will hear a talk by Professor Schmidt. Two meetings in November will be devoted to a study of Nietzsche's philosophy. Other topics chosen for the fortnightly meetings of the year are: Shakespeare; honesty; the basis of morality; autocracy and democracy; marriage; medicine; nations and their colonies; the ethics of husbandry; group morality.

MEMBERS of the Faculty will continue this year the series of lectures on the history of civilization which has been running through the last two years. Professor Nathaniel Schmidt gave the opening lecture last Friday. His subject was "Mankind in the Stone Age."

THE ORGAN IN BAILEY HALL.

Dedication of the Organ in Bailey Hall

THE great organ in Bailey Hall was dedicated on October 8 with a recital in which several famous organists took part. Although Bailey Hall is the auditorium of the College of Agriculture, the organ is the property of the whole University. How it came to be acquired is told on a tablet affixed to it and reading as follows:

"This organ, built by the J. W. Steere & Son Organ Co., of Springfield, Mass., was given to Cornell University on the eightieth birthday of Andrew Dickson White by Andrew Carnegie, of New York; Frank H. Hiscock, Cornell, Class of 1874; Henry R. Ickelheimer, Cornell, Class of 1888; George E. Molleson, of New York; Ira A. Place, Cornell, Class of 1881; Charles S. Shepard, Yale, Class of 1878; Frederick C. Stevens, Cornell, Class of 1875; James G. White, Cornell, Class of 1885. It was first publicly used on Baccalaureate Sunday, June 14, 1914."

The gift was a response to the great desire of President White to have the largest auditorium on the Campus furnished with an organ. After the money was provided he made several journeys to hear famous instruments played. The contract was given to the Steere company, who completed the instrument early in the summer. It fills the whole width of the back of the stage, and has besides an echo attachment situated in the dome of the auditorium. The case of the organ was designed by Mr. William H. Miller '72, of Ithaca.

The dedicatory recital was made possible by the J. W. Steere & Son Company, who invited three famous players to come to Ithaca and take part. Mr. Carnegie was invited to be present. He accepted, and he and Mrs. Carnegie were guests of President and Mrs. White for several days. Besides Mr. Quarles, the Cornell organist, the musicians who took part were Clara Dickinson, organist and choirmaster of the Brick Presbyterian Church and Union Theological Seminary, New York City; William Churchill Hamm, professor of music at Mount Holy College and organist and choirmaster of the Second Congregational Church of the Skinner Memorial Chapel at Holy Mass, and T. Tertius Noble, organist and choirmaster of St. Thomas's Church, New York City, formerly of York, England.

A condensed description of the organ is taken from the program booklet:

"The organ has four manuals, seven and nine speaking stops and all the necessary couplers and accessories of the modern organ, affording unlimited possibilities in the hands of an accomplished organist. There are six different departments of organs. The Pedal and Great organs are located on the stage of the auditorium. The Solo organ is located in specially constructed cement swell-box elevated above the floor of the stage and overhanging the center of the organ. The Swell organ is located in a room on a level with the balcony at the east side of the stage. The Choir organ is located in a room similarly situated at the west side of the stage. The tone from the Swell and Choir organs reaches the auditorium through swell shades opening toward the center of the stage. The Echo organ is located in the dome of the building in a room especially constructed for it and opening into the auditorium through the sky-light. * * *

"A movable, detached console, connected by means of seventy-five feet of electric cable and flexible tubing, makes it possible to place the console at any desired location on the stage. The thirty-two foot Diapason is worthy of special mention. It is made of specially selected, three-inch California pine, and is of unusually large scale. Each pipe of this stop is built in one piece, thus eliminating the customary joints and resulting loss of sonority. An improved electro-pneumatic action, operating the swell shades, makes possible unusual, expressive effects. The organ contains upwards of four thousand speaking pipes. This includes neither the Cathedral Chimes in the Echo organ nor the Celesta in the Choir organ."

CLARENCE DICKINSON

Mr. Carnegie was ushered to the stage by President Schurman. He opened his talk with a short tribute to music, and then said :

"It is some years since we visited Cornell to take part in its activities. but today we are amply repaid for the deprivation, since Mrs. Carnegie and I are favored partakers in the ceremony of dedicating this great organ, the climax of musical harmony.

"We notice here an absence of a separate college for the study of foreign languages, upon which, pray, receive our cordial congratulations. This study, however, is embraced in that of arts and sciences, the greater including the lesser. The practical affairs of life do not absolutely in all fields require this accomplishment; it is for the few. The young men of Cornell, speaking generally, have work to do, and have to earn their fortunes by useful service, and if they learn to use good English all is well.

"We note that in Cornell the practical is never lost sight of—agriculture, chemistry, engineering; hence the success of so many Cornell students in the battle of life who, we may be certain, will never forget their university and the unpayable debt they owe her.

"I predict a long and illustrious history, copying true its past, lies in the future of Cornell, and such a record for your president emeritus as only the great and good can win, not forgetting as a worthy second your present president, Schurman, who has for many years stamped his career indelibly upon your triumphs.

"I congratulate this university and its people, and the residents of this charming district, upon the gift bestowed upon you by the present sage of Cornell, president emeritus, who has done so much in his long and elevated career to build the institution. The wish of Ezra Cornell, the founder of Cornell, who has passed beyond, in conjunction with your sage, who, happily, is still with us—long may he abide—was noble; he desired that instruction should be 'on such terms as the limited means of the most humble could afford.' It performs the function of a state university, giving free tuition to agricultural and veterinary students from New York State and to 114 students in other departments nominated by the state commissioner of education. It is preeminent in physical chemistry and in agricultural and engineering fields it is renowned. No wonder that Cornell has more than 7,000 students.

"Your president suggested that I should say a few words to the young men, and having referred to the organ and music, and the young women, it might seem most neglectful were I to ignore the young men, a most important element in any country, and especially in our republic, where one citizen's privilege is every citizen's right. Contrast your country, my young fellow-countrymen, with the other lands where some men are born to high hereditary positions—kings and emperors—and where there is an aristocracy born to privilege; a system which we may hope soon to see abolished by the old nations following our illustrious example. You have many privileges, especially as students of Cornell.

"When a young man, or an old man, either, can at night survey his acts of the day and receive this favorable verdict, 'I have done nothing this day which I need to conceal, nothing to regret, and I am glad I did something that helped my chum when help was needed and deserved: I have been of some use today in the world and now I can lay me down to sleep,' he has no cause for fear. Success to Cornell. May her future copy fair her past: we ask no more."

The audience demanded to hear from President White. Mr. George C. Boldt of the Board of Trustees escorted him to the stage and he said a few words. He began by noting the fact that the day was the forty-sixth anniversary of the day when Ezra Cornell formally opened the doors of Cornell University. The noble music heard to-night must be placed first, he said, of all the many beautiful tributes which Cornell had received in those forty-six years. To him it was the fulfillment of many dreams that this noble crown of music should be added to all the other trophies of the University. Mr. White characterized the organ as among the first three organs in America, and possibly one of the finest two.

No charge was made for admission to the recital. Tickets were distributed to applicants on the day before, and at a quarter past eight on the night of the recital the doors were thrown open to undergraduates, who, on showing their registration cards, were allowed to take any unoccupied seats. The hall, which has seats for about two thousand, was filled.

BAILEY HALL MUSIC PROGRAM

Use will be made of Bailey Hall, the large new auditorium, by the department of music this year for giving a series of concerts. The large size of the hall enables the department to arrange a more ambitious program than it has been able to do heretofore and at the same time to charge low prices for seats. Season tickets, at five dollars, will be placed on sale next Tuesday at the bookstores.

The first event of the series, on October 27, will be a recital by Mme. Alma Gluck of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Anna Pavlova is to come here on Tuesday, November 17, with her company of Russian dancers and symphony orchestra of twenty-five players. On Friday, December 4, a concert will be given by the Flonzaley Quartet, a famous string organization. A recital will be given on Tuesday, January 12, by Katharine Goodson, pianist, and Emilio de Gogorza, baritone. The last entertainment of the series will be a concert on Saturday, February 20, by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, Joseph Stransky, conductor, with Julia Culp, mezzo-soprano. The annual music festival will be held in Bailey Hall early in May.

PROFESSOR POPE will give a lecture on Richard Wagner to-night for the Deutscher Verein.

The University Scholarships

Honors Won by Boys' High School of Brooklyn and Ithaca High School

The eighteen University Scholarships have been awarded to members of the class of 1918. These scholarships continue for two years and have an annual value of $200 each. Fifteen schools are represented by the winners of these prizes this year. For the ninth time in ten years the honors in the competition have gone to the Boys' High School of Brooklyn, but much less decisively than last year, when no less than eight graduates of that school won scholarships. Only three were won by Brooklyn Boys' High graduates this year, and the Ithaca High School was a close second with two. No other school took more than one. Following are the names of the winners:

The Cornell Scholarships: Harold Meade Mott-Smith, jr., Arts (Chemistry), Schenectady High School; Paul Bradford, Arts, Ithaca High School.

The Fraser Scholarships in the College of Law, established in memory of Alexander Hugh Ross Fraser, late librarian of the Law Library, were awarded last week, the First Scholarship to Percy Wilson Phillips, of Southampton, and the Second Scholarship to Paul Anthony Rieser, of Poughkeepsie.

These scholarships are annually awarded to seniors, the Boardman Scholar being ineligible. The Faculty selects a group of men on the basis of scholarship, six being chosen this year, and the senior class elects the two scholars from this group, basing its choice upon considerations of manliness and general character.

The Fraser Scholarships were established by William Metcalf, LL.B. '01, of Pittsburgh. The Boardman Scholarship is held this year by Lorenzo Hughes Utter, of Friendship.

THE UNIVERSITIES of this country have had a few weeks now to observe some immediate effects upon themselves of the war in Europe. They are beginning to speculate about some of the probable ultimate effects. Many of them have noted an increase in the number of students this fall. That may not be wholly a result of foreign war, and probably is not. Numerical growth has been the normal state of American universities for years past. Growth in numbers of students this fall has attracted attention chiefly because it occurred in spite of the war's unsettlement of business in America. Financial uncertainty deprives some students of the opportunity to begin or to continue a college course, but it also reduces opportunity for employment and for that reason has a tendency to cause some students to spend more time in college. We have noted a large registration in the Spanish courses here at Cornell this fall. The same thing is noted at the University of Illinois, where they attribute it to the opening of trade opportunities in South America. And on the same page of the Illinois Fortnightly Notes with that comment is printed the following forecast of war's probable effects: "The professor on leave of absence will be likely to study in America. Students who in times of peace would go to European universities must now either come to America or remain in America." These are intimations of coming events which may have a pervading influence in modifying the ideals and shaping the character of American universities. They are not extravagant prophecies.

DURING THIS WAR and for years after its end the attraction which Europe has had for graduate students will be suspended. Can American universities profit by that? Can they help but profit by it? Will not the presence of larger numbers of young scholars be a stimulus to our higher education, to our investigations, and to our thought? If the best young minds of the world come to America for instruction will not America be richer? But if there is going to be opportunity there is also going to be responsibility. Every institution worthy the name university will desire to attract a share of this immigration. What will attract it? Great investigators and teachers, first of all. Great libraries and laboratories. And that something which is a result of the presence of these and of sincere students, namely, the atmosphere of scholarship. In President Wilson's phrase, the main tent, not the side shows. Our universities must meet a new test of their singleness of purpose.

AT THE RISK of seeming to give too much space to the work of our department of military science, we are impelled to make another mention of it. A bulletin has just been received from the national board for the promotion of rifle practice, a protégé of the War Department at Washington. This bulletin says: "The college which made the best showing in the number of students qualified [in marksmanship] for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1914, was Cornell University." From Lieutenant Bull we have learned that the number of Cornell students so qualified in that year was 1,165, about 400 more than at any other institution. Some of these had qualified in 1913 after the annual inspection of that year and were not reported till 1914, but even with them omitted the number is about 1,000. An average of 60 per cent at the targets is required to qualify as a marksman. This showing deserves mention along with the good record made by the Cornell rifle team of ten men in the indoor intercollegiate competition last winter and the winning of a national trophy by Cornell's four-man team in camp last summer. The bulletin from which we have quoted says further: "As an evidence of the fact that the athletic authorities of a great many colleges and universities are recognizing marksmanship as a part of their athletic curriculum, many of them are giving the college letter to those students who make the rifle teams. A feature of this work which is worthy of mention is the fact that there have been no serious accidents of any kind on rifle ranges since the work was introduced, a claim that could hardly hold good in connection with other prominent school sports such as football and baseball. Furthermore, only a small percentage of students can take part in baseball and football matches, while the number of students who can enter the shooting competitions is only limited to the capacity of the range." Last winter the intercollegiate rifle championship was won by the team of the Michigan Agricultural College. Lieutenant DeLancey, the officer in charge there, has told how the men were trained. Thirty men selected after early competitions "were put through a course of setting-up exercise, paying particular attention to the muscles of the arms and shoulders, the muscles of the back and the muscles of the legs." "Another important thing not usually appreciated by college rifle teams," he says, "is that of narcotics and stimulants. When we started training I insisted that each man should abstain from all use of any narcotics or stimulants." Success in marksmanship seems to require as much self-sacrifice and training as in any form of athletic sport.

A RECENT GRADUATE WRITES: "I was in Ithaca last Sunday and saw the first day of 'rushing.' I think the present system is vastly unfair to both the freshmen and the fraternities. I do not think the average fellow can judge whether or not another fellow is going to be congenial in two visits of three hours each." He can't.

NEW BOOKS

The Middle Ages in Europe

There has just come from the press of The Century Company (New York) a volume of history which will assist many readers to form clearer notions of the deeper causes of the present situation in Europe. The volume is entitled "The Renaissance, the Protestant Revolution, and the Catholic Reformation in Continental Europe." It was written by Professor Edward Maslin Hulme, of the University of Idaho, a former pupil of our own Professor George Lincoln Burr, to whom the work is dedicated by the author. Professor Hulme is a Master of Arts of Cornell University in the class of 1902. In his study of events in the Middle Ages and down to the close of the sixteenth century, he observes principles and tendencies which belong to all history and to all peoples. His chapter on "The Revival of the Nation," for example, is full of suggestion of the origins of to-day's political theories. His pages on "The Spanish Supremacy" suggest comparisons with twentieth century militarism. But these are only examples to indicate the timeliness of the book. Students of history will find permanent value in it. The volume contains 558 pages and includes a good index. The list price is $2.50.

A Translation by Professor Comfort

One of the recently published volumes in "Everyman's Library" is a translation by Professor William Wister Comfort of the "Eric and Enid" of Chrétien de Troyes. Professor Comfort is the head of the department of Romance languages of Cornell University. The "Everyman's" series is published by J. M. Dent & Sons in London and E. P. Dutton & Company in New York. This book is a translation of the four Arthurian romances of Chrétien de Troyes, namely, Erec et Enide, Cliges, Lancelot, and Yvain. The translator says he has aimed at exactness, to tell the stories in modern English prose, without additions or omissions. He has succeeded in writing very good prose. His contributions as editor of the volume are a historical introduction, a dozen pages of notes, and five pages of bibliography.

Studies of Alaskan Glaciers

The National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C., has just announced the publication of "Alaskan Glacier Studies," by the late Professor Ralph S. Tarr of Cornell University and Professor Lawrence Martin of the University of Wisconsin. Professor Martin was a pupil of Professor Tarr here; he is a member of the class of 1904. The book deals with the results of the Alaskan expeditions of 1909, 1910, 1911, and 1913, made under the auspices of the research committee of the National Geographic Society. It describes (a) the glaciers and glaciation of Yakutat Bay and the Malaspina Glacier region, (b) the glaciers and glaciation of Prince William Sound and the Copper River Canyon, and (c) reviews the glaciation of Alaska. It gives a full exposition of the advance of glaciers in response to earthquake shaking, the nature of fiord topography below sea level, and the relations of Alaskan glaciers to railways. It contains 498 pages of text, nine colored maps, 184 plates of halftones, and 72 diagrams and maps in black and white. The book is seven by ten inches and is bound in red buckram. The price is $5 in America or $5.50, postpaid, in Europe.

Cornell, 21: Carlisle, 0

The winning of the Carlisle game last Saturday by the score of 21 to 0 has heartened the team, although the victory cannot be taken as evidence that very great progress has been made since the defeats by Pittsburgh and Colgate. It is admitted that Warner's team this year is a much weaker eleven than the one which defeated Cornell last year by a score of 7 to 0. It has a large proportion of green men. Their inability to stop the Cornell attack made the contest look one-sided, but did not demonstrate that Cornell has much power or is in process of acquiring much versatility. Such opportunities as they had to threaten the Cornell goal the Indians owed chiefly to poor tactics and wasted energy by their opponents. An example of this sort of thing was given when Barrett, with the ball in midfield and with three yards to go on the fourth down, tried a line play instead of punting. This poor judgment gave the Indians the ball and virtually presented them with thirty yards of ground. Cornell had better luck with some other long chances. Some praiseworthy features of the game were the work of the ends, Shelton and Lautz, and of Kleinert at fullback. The work of the line is also to be commended. Last year it was outplayed by Warner's men, but not this year. The game afforded indications also that some gaps in the backfield may be filled with capable substitutes.

The weakness of the Indians probably gave the Cornell attack a deceptive appearance of smoothness. As a matter of fact the team has not been able to acquire any degree of smoothness. It has no open play as yet, although it did succeed last Saturday in gaining considerable ground with the forward pass. But in practice the forward pass has been little used except as a weapon of offense in the hands of the scrub, to give the varsity some defence against it.

The Loss of Lahr

There has been little opportunity thus far to develop any but the simplest formations. Accidents to players have caused recurring changes in the line-up, and a team has yet to be organized. A few days after Taber was taken out of the Colgate game with a broken leg, a similar accident occurred to Lahr in a practice scrimmage. These two mishaps deprived the team of a pair of backs on whom much dependence had been placed. Taber had seemed just about to realize all the brilliancy as a halfback of which his play had shown flashes in the last two years. Lahr had been last year the main standby at fullback. He had been substitute in early games last fall till Murray Shelton was shifted to the end, when he became the regular fullback, late in the season, and played that position in the Pennsylvania game. A minor injury early this season interrupted his playing. His place was taken by Eddie Hill, who returned to the University this fall, after a year's absence. Lahr was looked on as first substitute and likely to be on the varsity soon.

Lahr's loss would be more serious but for the meteoric appearance, in the Carlisle game, of a new fullback, Kleinert. Two years ago Kleinert was the fullback of his freshman team, which finished a successful season with a victory over the Pennsylvania freshmen. Last year scholastic circumstances deprived the varsity of his services. This fall the coaches tried him at center until the loss of Lahr. He seems now to be a natural backfield man, and there is no doubt that he likes to play there rather than in the line. He has weight and speed. He was the heavyweight on the varsity wrestling team last winter. While he shone in advancing the ball last Saturday, it happened that he did not get much opportunity to show what he could do in defensive work. Hill, the regular fullback, is particularly valuable in the backfield on account of ability to stop plays through the line.

Possible Backfield Selections

Despite the loss of two good men, the Carlisle game showed that the backfield still has promising material to draw on. Perhaps Shuler is entitled to first mention. He is a senior who came here three years ago with some reputation as a player. He made the varsity last year, being tried both at quarterback and at halfback. He is more at home at the latter position. This fall he has been running the scrub team. He celebrated his return as a varsity halfback by making two touchdowns against the Indians, one by catching a forward pass and the other with an end run from the 20-yard line. The other substitute for Taber is Philippi, also a senior. Philippi hits the line harder than any other Cornell back, but he is not so skilful in picking holes, and he runs rather high.

Both last year and this the coaches have at times shown a disposition to take Barrett out of the quarterback position and let him play halfback. His generalship has not been above criticism, but there is no better man on the team at carrying the ball. If Barrett is shifted, it would not be surprising to see his place taken by Collins, who was quarterback and captain of the freshman team two years ago, but who did not play last year. That very shift was made for a time in the Carlisle game, when Barrett went to right half in place of Collyer. Collyer is a veteran of last year's Pennsylvania game. Slowness has been his chief fault, but he is a hard man to tackle. There are two sophomore substitutes, Mueller and Whitney, who are working as backs. An injury has kept Mueller from playing much of the time, and Whitney's chief handicap at present is lack of weight.

VanOrman Developing Ends

The good work of the ends has been mentioned, and that in spite of the fact that Captain O'Hearn did not play. He had not fully recovered from a hurt he received in the Pittsburgh game. He might have entered the game if Lautz had not given such a good account of himself. VanOrman is schooling Lautz, Eckley, Mehaffey and Zeman, besides Murray Shelton, who is playing his second season as varsity left end.

Dan Reed is giving a lot of attention to the task of developing a pair of tackles from material which looked far from hopeful at the beginning of the season. Among the recruits are Gallogly, the captain of the wrestling team, and Bailey, a junior. Thus far these men have been the first selections. Both of them have much to learn about the game. Another aspirant is Butts, who has been a member of the varsity crew.

Cool is the only veteran in the center trio owing to McCutcheon's injury in the first game of the season. Cool is likely to keep his place. His understudies are Brown and Tilley, both sophomores. Munsick has been playing regularly at left guard. He is about twenty pounds lighter than Snyder, who is his nearest competitor. Anderson, the right guard, is a sophomore who is the heaviest man on the squad, weighing about 210 pounds.

Cornell's Three Touchdowns

The Carlisle team found the tackles the weakest spots in the Cornell eleven. Most of their gains were made by attacks at those points. They carried the ball once to Cornell's 25-yard line, and they made one other long advance when they got within the Cornell five-yard line. In attempts to get around the ends they had no success at all. Their open game was much less developed than the Cornell team had been led to expect.

Cornell scored three touchdowns. The first was made by Barrett when he broke through the center seventeen yards from the Indians' goal and eluded their secondary defence long enough to reach the goal line. The second touchdown Shuler scored in the third period when Barrett threw him a forward pass from the 35-yard line. This score was a lucky one, for Shuler caught the ball over his shoulder when he was on a dead run. Shuler also made the third touchdown, which was obtained near the end of the last quarter. This play was a wide end run from the 20-yard line. It was gained by more creditable football than in either of the other two cases, for Shuler's interference put every man on the Carlisle secondary defence out of play. Indeed, the smoothness and efficiency of the interference was one of the encouraging things about the team's game. It owed a lot of its effectiveness to the work of the ends. And the ends were the strongest factor in the defence.

RELLER SLIGHTLY BETTER

An Infirmary bulletin on Tuesday of this week said that Oliver A. Reller, of St. Louis, the captain of the track team, had made slight improvement since he was injured in a motorcycle accident on October 4. He was still in a serious condition. V. H. Anneke, of Duluth, the other injured student, was said to be out of danger.

BIG TRACK MEET MARCH 6

At a recent meeting of the I. C. A. A. A. A., held in New York, Allen C. Minnix, of Washington, D. C., manager of the Cornell track team, was elected president of the organization to fill the unexpired term of T. B. Crews '14. The association appointed Gustavus T. Kirby of Columbia to act as referee of the intercollegiate cross-country run to be held at New Haven on November 21.

It was decided to hold a track meet at the Madison Square Garden on March 6. The meet is to be a team affair, to consist of relays and three field events, in which only five-man teams may be entered. The total number of points made by the five men will constitute the team score. No team championship of the entire meet will be awarded. The purpose of the meet is to encourage all the competition possible by a large number of athletes of average ability, rather than individual competition among a few stars.

CROSS-COUNTRY PRACTICE

In preparation for the dual meets the cross country squad has been running daily in trial races. Sixteen men are at the training table. They are : Captain A. G. Cadiz '15, E. P. Corwith '15, A. M. Grimes '15, G. G. Inglehart '15, J. C. Jacqua '15, Winthrop Kent '15, W. L. Maxon '15, J. Silbert '15, C. L. Speiden '15, A. R. Eldred '16, J. S. Hoffmire '16, D. F. Potter, jr., '16, E. J. Tinkham '16, F. D. Boynton, jr. '17, R. A. Wheeler '17, L. V. Windnagle '17.

Only two of these men, Hoffmire and Speiden, scored for Cornell in the intercollegiate run a year ago. Two of the winning five last year, Frederiksen and McGolrick, were lost by graduation, and the fifth, F. T. Burke '16, is on probation. Potter was kept out of the later races last fall on account of injuries. He has been finishing well up this fall in the practice runs. Windnagle shows promise. The rest of the squad is composed of men who have all had at least a year's experience.
