PRICE 10 CENTS

FEEES to the amount of $900 were received by the Treasurer of the University from students who had been dropped and who were reinstated at the beginning of the present term in February. The fee for reinstatement after being dropped for delinquency in scholarship or conduct is $25. It is payable under a resolution of the Board of Trustees, adopted last January on the Faculty's recommendation. Thirty-six students who were readmitted to the University this term were subject to the fee. They had all been suspended for at least one term. The fee is charged only to students who have actually been dropped from the university's rolls—not to such as fail and are allowed to remain on probation.

DR. JOHN G. WILLS (D.V.M., '06), chief veterinarian of the state department of agriculture at Albany, gave a lecture on the work of the veterinarian in that department before the veterinary students in James Law Hall on March 9. Dr. Wills has been chief veterinarian of this state for several years. He is now president of the state veterinary society, and last fall he was elected president of the U. S. Live Stock Sanitary Association. He is also chairman of the section of sanitary science in the American Veterinary Medical Association. In his lecture here he told the students that their profession would be an important part of any organization to meet an international crisis, and he reminded them of ways in which they might be of professional service in such an emergency.

THE AVIATION SECTION of the Signal Corps of the Army includes in its personnel a number of Cornell men. At the office of the chief signal officer in Washington are Major W. H. H. Hutton, jr., '91, of the Officers' Reserve Corps, who is an inspector and a member of the production committee; Charles B. King '91, aeronautic mechanical engineer, and C. D. McLaughlin '12, inspector of aeroplanes and motors. J. B. Johnson '12 is inspector of aeroplanes and motors with headquarters at the Bureau of Standards, Washington. Edward T. Jones '11 is another inspector of aeroplanes and motors; he is stationed at the plant of the Thomas Brothers Aeroplane Company in Ithaca. Alexander H. King '15 is an inspector at the factory of the Curtiss Aeroplane Company in Buffalo.

IN ITS MARCH NUMBER the Era publishes an article by David Starr Jordan '72 telling of the part played by Cornell University in the founding of Stanford; an account of the American ambulance work in France, written by Theodore Stanton '74, with several illustrations from photographs; and a biographical sketch and portrait of Joseph B. Foraker '69. Several pages are devoted to an assembling of evidence regarding the authorship of the song "Far Above Cayuga's Waters," and the Era concludes after weighing the evidence that Archibald C. Weeks '72 has the best claim to the authorship.

THE Sun announces the re-election of Alpheus W. Smith '19 to its board of editors. Smith is the son of Albert W. Smith '78, dean of Sibley College, and is a member of the Theta Delta Chi fraternity.

DEBATERS representing the Ohio State University won an argument with Cornell debaters at Columbus on March 10. The proposition was that the United States should adopt universal military service. Ohio had the affirmative side. Cornell's speakers were R. H. Blanchard, Henry Klauber, and D. T. Gilmartin, jr. On March 16, the day when the annual triangular debate would have been held but for Columbia's withdrawal, there will be a double argument on the same proposition between Pennsylvania and Cornell. The Cornell negative team will go to Philadelphia and Pennsylvania will send her negative team to Ithaca.

KAMEHAMEHA SCHOOL in the Territory of Hawaii has won the Cornell cross-country trophy for keeps. The runners of this school have led in the annual race three times. Mills School won the race one year. The contest which decided the possession of the trophy took place at the College of Hawaii on February 24. Three schools competed. Kamehameha was first with a score of 25; Mills was a close second with 30 points, and the McKinley High School was third. The five who scored for Kamehameha were Woolsey, captain, the individual winner; Uwelo, Eaton, Groves and Vierra. Second place at the finish was taken by Chun Lee Puck, captain of the Mills team. The trophy was offered by the Cornell Club of Hawaii, and the race this year was in charge of the president of the club, Arthur L. Andrews '93, and the secretary, H. A. R. Austin '13.

OFFICERS have been elected by the Era for next year, as follows: Editor-in-chief, W. H. Farnham '18, Buffalo; managing editor, P. D. Flanner '18, Blackwell, Wis.; business manager, Victor R. Kaufman '18, New York; assistant business manager, D. G. Douglas '19, Richmond Hill; photographic editor, A. S. Collins '18, Buffalo. E. L. Diven '20, of Elmira, has been elected to the board.

THE EARLY HISTORY of the department of physics at Cornell University is related by Professor George S. Moler '75 in an article in the March number of the Sibley Journal. The article deals particularly with the fifteen years of William A. Anthony's professorship here, when the department was doing pioneer work in the study and application of electricity. It is prefaced by a biographical sketch and portrait of Professor Moler, whose retirement from teaching next June has already been announced. His anonymous biographer says of him: "His contributions to science in the form of actual instruments greatly exceed in number the printed accounts which he has found time to prepare. He has expressed the hope and expectation that his retirement from active service will enable him to complete investigations which he has long had in mind but which have been held in abeyance on account of arduous routine duties."

THE MASQUE has elected its council for next year. The members are Charles H. Blood '88, Professor Durham, G. E. Kent '10, Professor Sampson, Harold Reynolds '18, of New York, and E. L. Howard '19, of St. Louis. L. I. Nichols '18, of Evanston, Ill., was elected president, and Eaton Cook '19, of Dover, N. H., vice-president.

The Inquiry About Scholarship

Mr. Hoy's Observations

The Faculty Committee on the Alumni Inquiry Regarding the Recognition of Scholarship has received from David F. Hoy '91 a letter in which he comments on the nine suggestions contained in the committee's circular letter, which was published in the NEWS of March 1. Mr. Hoy offers these comments, he says, not as Registrar of the University but personally, and they are mere notes, dictated and not revised. Some of them are given here even more briefly than Mr. Hoy dictated them:

(1) This (a public meeting for the recognition of scholarship) is a part of my suggestion to some professors some time ago.

(2) I do not believe that scholarships "without stipend" would help to improve the character of the work done in the University. It would be almost impossible to award such scholarships. It might be easy to award them in certain of the colleges where practically all the students do the same work in the same year. I can not conceive of scholarships being awarded, for example, in Agriculture with any degree of accuracy if the mark of one department were to put off against the mark of another. I can pick you professors who rarely give more than 75, and I can pick you other professors who rarely give less than 90. The awarding of the Fuertes Medal is comparatively easy. That award is made on the basis of standing for three years and a half during which competitors do the same work under the same professors.

(3) I am just a little afraid of the establishing of scholarships to be awarded on the basis of high class standing plus outside activities. You know how easy it is to forget the high class standing and give too much weight to outside activities. If the alumni who were to found such scholarships had anything to say I think most of the scholarships would go to football men or other men prominent in athletics, which, in my opinion, are encouraged already.

(4) The objections to this system (honor groups in each college) are stated under No. 2.

(5) If local alumni associations were to give luncheons in honor of students who had achieved a high grade of scholarship, when the students returned to their homes in some vacation period, I am afraid that the local alumni would be inclined to invite every student of Cornell University from that locality, and I do not believe that the man with a high grade of scholarship would be very prominent in such a luncheon.

(6) It seems to me that addresses to freshmen at the beginning of their college course, calling their attention to certain things, would be a splendid idea. I am sure that Dean Smith has followed this plan in Sibley College, and I think it would be well if the committee would call the attention of the Deans to the opportunity they have of telling the freshmen how to start aright. The first two weeks of a boy's college course may make or break him.

(7) I am not at all sure that lectures on methods of teaching would be of much value.

(8) I regret that it is proposed that the University should officially recognize Phi Beta Kappa and Tau Beta Pi. These societies have been recognized in some other institutions, but I have always been proud of the fact that they are not officially recognized at Cornell University and are able to elect their members without faculty control.

(9) I doubt very much whether the committee could get the senior societies to do very much in the way of recognition of scholarship. In the fraternities, however, something might be done in that way. A few years ago I was consulted in regard to a scholarship in a fraternity not my own, and we devised the scheme that there should be two prizes, one for the man having the highest standing in the chapter, and the other, of equal value, for the man who made the greatest improvement over the preceding term. I think the scheme has worked well in that fraternity. I have just started two prizes in my own fraternity and I had no trouble whatsoever in getting twice as much money from the alumni as I needed for the purpose.

You ask me whether I think the standards of scholarship among the undergraduates are deteriorating or improving, and I must frankly say that I have no decided opinion one way or the other. Some days I think one and the next day the other, depending on whether or not my attention is called to certain phases.

THE WOMEN STUDENTS are now planning to give a pageant on May 18 and 19 on the women's playground in Casca-dilla Ravine.

Philadelphians Enthusiastic Alumni Fund Campaign Has Started Work for a New Club House

That the Philadelphia campaign for the Alumni Fund has reacted favorably for the Cornell men of Philadelphia themselves is the assertion made by Edward H. Fitch '97, general chairman of the campaign, in a letter to Harold Flack, secretary of the Cornellian Council. Under date of March 12 Mr. Fitch says:

"My dear Mr. Flack: Before we started our campaign, as you know, we were all against it. We thought it impossible to stir up any enthusiasm in this section. Most of the Cornell men in and about Philadelphia are very young and have not really gotten started in a business way—there are very few men from the older classes.

"With your enthusiasm and encouragement, however, we did make the start, and on behalf of the Cornell men of Philadelphia and vicinity, we wish to thank you for your insistence, support and co-operation, as we feel that it has done us all a great deal of good. Have heard a great many expressions of the wonderful benefits that have accrued, in the way of new interest in Cornell and all thing pertaining to our alma mater. As an example, will state that we have at least $1,500 in sight already, to finance a new club house for the Cornell Club; and this new spirit, with a well organized club in a well located home, cannot help but bear fruit for the Cornellian Council.

"You told us that all of these things would transpire if we entered into this campaign, and this is merely to acknowledge and thank you kindly, for making possible that which we all believed impossible."

Northern New Jersey Cornell Club Is in Favor of Universal Military Service

The annual meeting of the Cornell University Club of Northern New Jersey was held in Newark on March 9. More than fifty members were present. The following resolutions were adopted:

"Whereas, our country, the United States of America, is facing one of the gravest crises in our history, and

"Whereas, President Woodrow Wilson and the Congress of these United States should have the united support in this crisis of every true American, whether of native or foreign birth, and

"Whereas, Cornell University, our

Alma Mater, has for years sanctioned and prescribed military training within the University and was one of the foremost educational institutions of our country to establish a unit of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at the University, in Ithaca in the State of New York, now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, that we, Alumni of Cornell University, here assembled at the annual meeting of the Cornell University Club of Northern New Jersey, pledge our fidelity and our undivided and loyal support to the President and Congress of these United States of America in any action they may take in defense of American rights on land and sea when menaced by any foreign power, and be it further

"Resolved, that we favor and urge the adoption of legislation providing for preparedness in every branch of the service and for compulsory universal military training and the enforcement thereof in the United States of America, for the purpose of proper defense, as a bulwark against foreign invasion of American rights and as a safeguard of our democratic ideals; and be it further

"Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be mailed to the President, to the Vice-President as President of the Senate, and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of these United States of America."

The foregoing resolutions are signed by Charles F. Landmesser, president, and attested by H. Ezra Eberhardt, secretary of the club.

MICHIGAN

The Cornell Michigan Association of Michigan held its annual banquet on February 21 at the Hotel Tuller in Detroit. Seventy-one members and guests were present. The guests of honor were Professor T. F. Crane, Walter S. Russell '75, and George G. Moody. The association's program for this week includes a meeting to be addressed by Major J. H. Poole, Officers' Reserve Corps, U. S. A., on the army engineers' reserve corps. A smoker will be held at the University Club on March 16, when Jack Moakley will be present. A large number of Detroit Cornell men are planning to go in a party to Ann Arbor on March 17 to attend the Michigan-Cornell track team.

ARTHUR WOODS, police commissioner of the City of New York, was a guest of the Cornell Club of New York on Saturday afternoon, March 10, and spoke on the work of the department.

240 Students Dropped

The Number Rejected for Failure Larger than Ever Before

Two hundred and forty students who failed in the work of the first term have been dropped from the University. The numbers dropped from the roll of each college this year and in the middle of each of the last four years preceding are here tabulated:

NUMBERS DROPPED AT THE END OF THE FIRST TERM

College	1917	1916	1915	1914	1913
Arts and Sciences.....	65	41	40	27	29
Law.....	17	11	9	7	8
Medicine (Ithaca).....	0	1	0	0	0
Veterinary.....	8	6	4	2	6
Agriculture.....	34	26	47	38	29
Architecture.....	1	0	2	0	0
Civil Engineering.....	20	21	17	11	17
Mechanical Engineer'g	95	24	23	25	14
Totals.....	240	130	142	110	103

A comparison of these figures will show that the most noticeable change this year is in Sibley College. The faculty of that college has this year adopted the policy of refusing to permit students whose work has been unsatisfactory and who are burdened with conditions to take on in addition the regular work of a new term. It is believed by the faculty that this plan is best not only for the college but also for the students themselves.

The number dropped from the College of Arts and Sciences is more than twice the average of the last ten years. But within that period the number of students enrolled in the college has increased from about seven hundred to about fourteen hundred.

The figures of this year were published at the President's office. No announcement was made of the number of students whose work in the first term was unsatisfactory but who were permitted to remain, on probation. This number is as a rule larger than the number of those dropped.

Agricultural Editors' Meeting

Fifth Annual Conference to Be Held at Cornell Just After Commencement

The fifth annual conference of the American Association of Agricultural Editors will be held at Cornell on Thursday and Friday, June 28 and 29. This association is made up of the editors of the agricultural colleges and experiment stations, and meets annually to exchange ideas. Acting Dean Mann, who formerly edited the Cornell publications, and Professor Bristow Adams, the present editor, are members of the Association.

It was largely through Professor Adams's efforts that the coming meeting is to be held in Ithaca.

The first meeting was held at the University of Illinois in July, 1913, and others have been held at the University of Kentucky, at Madison, Wis., and at Manhattan, Kansas. The Cornell meeting, therefore, will be the first held in any of the Atlantic seaboard states.

Among the institutions represented in the organization are the state universities of Ohio, Wisconsin, Illinois, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Mississippi, and Minnesota; the state agricultural colleges of Iowa, Massachusetts, Maryland, Michigan, Georgia, Oklahoma, and Kansas; Clemson College, and Purdue and Cornell universities.

Cornell Unit Will Go to France

Volunteers for the American Ambulance Field Service Organizing Here

A public exhibition of motion pictures illustrating the work of the American Ambulance Field Service in France will be given in Bailey Hall on Monday night, March 19, by a local volunteer committee. The purpose of the committee is to effect the organization of a Cornell unit of twenty-two men for service as ambulance drivers. Several American universities and colleges have organized such units which are now serving in France. A Stanford unit sailed for France not long ago, and one from the University of California is planning to go in May. Men from eastern universities have composed a large part of the personnel of this service since it was organized, but only a few of them have gone from Cornell.

Another thing the local committee hopes to do is to raise money to buy several motor ambulances for the Field Service. A Ford ambulance with equipment, etc., costs about $1,000; it can be bought and maintained for one year for $1,600. The names of the donors of such cars are inscribed on a plate attached to the car, and the volunteers who drive the cars endeavor to communicate from time to time to the donors information as to the experiences through which the cars are passing. Cars have been given by students or alumni of Dartmouth, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Virginia, Wellesley, and Yale, and of Groton, Phillips Andover, and Pomfret Schools. In the first year of the war an ambulance was purchased by twenty-two Cornell alumni and was sent to France marked "Gift of Cornell Students."

Interest in the American Ambulance Field Service in France has been stimulated in Ithaca by the return to Cornell this term of Edward I. Tinkham of Upper Montclair, N. J., a member of the class of 1916, who left college a year ago and drove an ambulance in France for the larger part of a year. Since he returned it has been learned here from another source that the Croix de Guerre was conferred upon him by the Republic of France for "untiring devotion and coolness in transporting wounded under fire from the 22d of June to the 2d of July, 1916." That service he performed at Dead Man's Hill during some of the hottest of the fighting in the Verdun sector.

The Field Service needs thirty or forty volunteers a month to take the places of the men compelled to return to America at the expiration of their terms of enlistment.

Funston, Menocal, Osgood

They Fought Together in the Cuban Army of Liberation

When the late Major-General Frederick Funston was an officer in the Cuban army of liberation, he had close associations with two fellow officers who were both Cornell men. One of them, then holding the rank of colonel, was Mario Garcia Menocal, C.E., '88, now president of the Republic of Cuba. The other, who, like Funston, was a major, was the late Winchester Dana Osgood of the class of 1892. Osgood, the son of an American army officer, was an all-around athlete. He played football at Cornell for three years and shone as a halfback. He rowed on the eight in 1890 and in 1892 won the single scull championship of the University. He left Cornell in the fall of 1892 and went to the University of Pennsylvania.

Menocal, Osgood and Funston were all engaged in the fighting around Guaimaro in the fall of 1896, and Osgood was killed there on October 18 of that year.

Their relationship is referred to by The American Standard, a monthly publication devoted to the interest of Spanish War veterans, in a sketch of General Funston's life, as follows:

"Early in October, 1896, the Cuban Generals Gomez and Garcia joined forces and moved upon Guaimaro, which was strongly fortified and defended by a considerable force of Spaniards. Funston was second in command in charge of the artillery to W. Dana Osgood, who had won renown as an athlete and football player while at the University of Pennsylvania. The most formidable piece of artillery was a Hotchkiss rifle capable of hurling a 12-pound shell. Later dynamite guns were brought into service by Funston, to the great distress of the enemy.

"After much hard fighting and a brilliant charge led by Col. Menocal, a graduate of Cornell, the largest fortification was taken. The Hotchkiss gun was planted in this position of vantage, and a destructive fire opened on other fortifications. Unfortunately the brave Osgood exposed himself to the Spanish fire and was killed.

"Col. Funston then took command of the artillery, a position to which he was appointed by Gen. Gomez. A few days later he and Col. Estrampes, a New Orleans boy of high position, led a charge against the enemy, each carrying a dynamite bomb in his hand, to hurl at close quarters. Before this could be done a white flag was hoisted and Guimaro surrendered."

BOOKS BY CORNELLIANS

The Genus Phoradendron. By William Trelease '80, professor of botany in the University of Illinois. Published by the University of Illinois.

Dr. Trelease's investigations have added very much to the stock of knowledge of the kind of plant to which the name mistletoe is commonly given. This book is the record of his work. It contains 224 pages of text and a large number of plates. Until 1916 botanists generally recognized about one hundred species of Phoradendron. Dr. Trelease has found, on an average, nearly two new named forms for each one that had already been admitted to our northern flora. The fact that his book is published by the University of Illinois is worthy of note.

Trees at Leisure. By Anna Botsford Comstock '85. Comstock Publishing Company, Ithaca. 50 cents.

This essay is reprinted from Country Life in America in the form of a 56-page booklet with twenty-four full page photographic illustrations. To Mrs. Comstock the tree reveals its character most gracefully in winter, in "the beauty of bare branches laced across changing skies." She tells of the individual traits of the trees with a sympathy which is contagious. An observing youngster with this book and a camera might get some interesting pictures of trees "at leisure."

Souls Resurgent. By Marion Hamilton Carter '98. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

Miss Carter has written a story of American life. The book would scarcely be called a novel, and one is sure that it was not written to be entertaining merely. It has no affected graces, no love-story, no plot devised to sustain the reader's interest up to a climactic and happy ending. The theme is simple and the author's materials are homely. A young woman, educated on the Atlantic coast, goes back to her home on a ranch in Wyoming and there tries to bend her life and the lives of others to an ideal. The fatal conflict of motives and wills develops with the grimness of Attic tragedy. The author of "Souls Resurgent" has the power to see under the surface of human conduct and the persons of this drama are true to life. If the author's detachment from the drama is not sufficient to make this book a true work of art, that is a fault which can be outgrown.

The Golden Book of the Dutch Navigators. By Hendrik Willem van Loon '05. The Century Company, New York.

These are stories of adventure, all the more curious for being true. We Americans learned in our school histories of America about the navigators who sailed from Europe to these shores, but we forget that the lure of the Indies drew adventurers to the discovery of other islands and continents. Of these voyagers the Dutch were not the least bold. Dr. van Loon has collected the chronicles of hardy sailors who, in the sixteenth and seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, put forth from Netherland ports and explored the oceans of the world. He tells in lively narrative form how they defied the Spaniards and Portuguese, weathered storms, fought savages, and suffered from scurvy, how some of them failed, and how others of them laid the foundations of the Dutch East Indian empire.

EMERITUS PROFESSOR W. T. HEWETT was recorded by the London Morning Post as among those present at the funeral of the Earl of Cromer at Bourne-mouth on February 3.

DR. JAMES SULLIVAN, the State Historian, former principal of the Boys' High School of Brooklyn, has been re-appointed teacher of history in the 1917 Summer Session.

Large Delegation for Convention Cornell Meeting at Chicago in May Stirs Interest in Many Cities

A very large attendance is already assured at the Cornell Convention to be held in Chicago on Friday and Saturday, May 11 and 12. N. H. Noyes '06, of Indianapolis, the chairman of the general committee of arrangements, reports the receipt of information from many cities that large delegations will go.

George L. Fielder '89, the convention committeeman in New York City, has written Noyes as follows: "Your letter regarding the Chicago convention is just at hand and I shall put the whole of it on the bulletin board at the Cornell Club. If you want to have us do it we can organize a committee here and arrange for a special train to go out to Chicago for the 11th and 12th of May. Please send a lot of circulars regarding the golf and tennis." He was asked to go ahead and arrange for the special train.

Robert E. Friend '09, in Milwaukee, wrote: "I took advantage of the annual banquet of the Cornell Alumni Association of Milwaukee to tell the fellows all about this great event. We had an enthusiastic gathering of over fifty, and I see no reason why we should not be able to bring approximately this number to Chicago. I hope to be able to increase it. We shall certainly arrange for a private car and undoubtedly will have several automobile parties in addition."

J. R. Marvin, secretary of the Cornell University Association of Michigan, writes from Detroit that the association has appointed an On-to-Chicago Committee of three. They are Charles R. Cross '01, Morris D. Sample '94, and George B. Walbridge '00. Marvin expects that the delegation from Detroit will be large.

H. D. North '07 says it looks now as if thirty or forty men would go from Cleveland. E. C. Zeller '99 reports that St. Louis will send a large contingent. Donald R. Cotton '05 says that six or eight men have already told him they were going from Minneapolis and that many others there are considering the matter. Noyes says that fifteen or twenty are planning to go from Indianapolis.

This will be a new kind of convention for Cornellians. There will be morning sessions to transact business of the General Alumni Association, afternoons of recreation including a golf tournament, and social meetings in the evenings of the two days, May 11 and 12.

Published for the Associate Alumni of Cornell University by the Cornell Alumni News Publishing Company, Incorporated.

THE large number of the students who were dropped from the University for failure in the work of the first term, two hundred and forty, is obviously food for thought. Did these students, or a considerable proportion of their number, fail because of deficient preparation for their college work? Could the failure of some be traced to incapacity for the work demanded of them? If the answer to either of these questions is yes, then the fact suggests an inquiry into the Faculty's methods of testing the fitness of applicants for admission to the University.

IT WOULD BE FAIRER to an unfit student to deny him admittance than to accept him and drop him after a term. It would also be economy for the University. The University at present provides one teacher, on an average, for every nine students. Of course instructors are not added to the staff or subtracted from it on the basis of any such calculation as that. But it is easy to see that some energy might have been saved somewhere if the unfitness of these two hundred and forty students could have been discovered before they were admitted to the University instead of after they had been here for a term or more. It is conceivable that in Sibley College, for example, where all underclassmen take practically the same courses of instruction, a hundred more or less students at the beginning of the academic year would make some difference in the number of instructors to be employed; and Sibley College found it necessary this year to drop ninety-five students at the end of the first term. The requirements for admission and the methods of their application are determined by the University Faculty, not by the college faculties.

IN THIS INQUIRY about the condition of scholarship in the University, which is now in progress, it is easy to single out defects and to be over-emphatic in pointing them out. It is not so easy to collect the names of all the ills we are suffering from and make a diagnosis. If you gather a number of persons together in a room and ask them what is the matter with the University you will get almost as many different answers as there are persons in the room. The inquiry has already brought out a variety of opinions. One opinion seems to be generally held—that things could be improved. If we are patient and forbearing we may arrive at a general agreement what to do about it.

OBITUARY

Mrs. A. Ross Hill

Agnes Baxter Hill, the wife of Albert Ross Hill, president of the University of Missouri, died at her home in Columbia on March 9. Mrs. Hill and her husband were fellow students at Dalhousie College and at Cornell University, where they both received the degree of Ph.D. in 1895. They were married in 1896.

James G. Gregg '98

James Gregory Gregg, LL.B., '98, died on February 27 at his home in New York City, after an illness of two weeks of pneumonia. Mr. Gregg was born in Trumansburg forty years ago. After he graduated from the Cornell law school he began the practice of law in the office of Frayer & Stotesbury in New York, and was not long afterward admitted to membership in the firm. In 1910 he formed a law partnership with John T. McGovern of the Class of 1900, and this partnership continued until his death. Besides a law practice he developed a large interest in the improvement of real estate in New York City. His wife, who was Miss Florence Ayers, of Keokuk, Iowa, survives him. He was a member of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity and the Cornell Club of New York.

OPINION AND COMMENT

Board Representation for Women

EDITOR, CORNELL ALUMNI NEWS:

Please permit me to express to you my sincere appreciation for the editorial upon the matter of the representation of the women of Cornell by a woman trustee on the Board of Trustees.

I am quite confident that the men on the Board of Trustees give the affairs of women equal consideration with the affairs of men in all the larger relations to the University. Also, I believe it to be the duty of every Trustee, man or woman, to consider all points brought before their body as a matter relating to the University or the student body of the University, without emphasis or privilege to any class or body of students.

There are, however, details in which a woman can present questions relating to women from a point of view which differs from the angle at which men would view them, and which, for that reason, ought to assist in the consideration of such questions.

In many questions relating to men this would also be the case. Proportionate representation seems of less importance.

The by-laws of our Federation of Women's Clubs prescribe a procedure for the nomination of a candidate for Trustees. What the decision will be this year I do not know. I do know, however, that the co-operation of alumni will be most gladly welcomed whenever a candidate is presented.

ATHLETICS

Cornell's Rowing Schedule

Why There Is No Race with Harvard— Relations with Yale and Princeton

The following, from the Philadelphia Public Ledger, is a sample of misinformation which has been printed in newspapers in Boston and New York as well as in Philadelphia:

"It does not require a keen mind to understand that Cornell had no desire to meet Harvard in a dual race on the water this spring. The Ithacans could come to no agreement with the Crimson on a date. Cornell informed Harvard that it would be inconvenient to meet the Cambridge crew in a two-mile varsity race over the Lake Cayuga course on May 19. It is not known whether Harvard offered to entertain the Ithacan crews on the same date on the Charles, but the fact remains that subsequent to notifying the Crimson that May 19 was an objectionable date to her, Cornell entered into an agreement with Yale to compete in a two-mile varsity race over the Housatonic course for the same day. Can it be possible that Cornell is assuming a dictatorial attitude in rowing because of Harvard's position on the question of scheduling a football game between the two universities?"

The foregoing comment is unjust because the writer of it ignores some of the factors which determined the result of the Harvard-Cornell negotiations. One of these factors was the Cornell Spring Day. Another was Cornell's relations with Princeton and Yale in rowing.

Spring Day, when Cornell expects to have an intercollegiate regatta in Ithaca, is a day fixed in the University's calendar. This fixture is an obstacle to the adjustment of Cornell's rowing schedule with the schedules of other crews, and it was the chief one of obstacles which made such an adjustment with Harvard this year impossible. Spring Day this year will be May 26. Under the dual arrangement of the last several years it was the turn of the Harvard crew to come to Ithaca this spring, and the Cornell rowing committee extended the invitation for May 26. The committee felt it must provide an intercollegiate race for that day. But the Harvard committee expressed unwillingness to send the Crimson crew to Ithaca for a two-mile race on a day so late in the season—so near the time of the chief event of the Harvard season, the four-mile race with Yale. The Harvard suggestion was that the race be rowed in Ithaca on May 19, a week earlier. Harvard showed entire willingness to row Cornell in Ithaca this year and objected only to the lateness of the date which Cornell offered.

In reply to the Harvard suggestion of May 19 the Cornell committee replied in effect that it felt bound to provide an intercollegiate regatta for May 26, Spring Day, if it could do so; that it was under obligation to the Princeton and Yale crews for rowing in Ithaca on Spring Day last year; that it had relations with those two as well as with Harvard which it must consider; that to give Harvard May 19 would leave Spring Day without a race unless Yale or Princeton would provide it; that May 26 would be open to the same objection from Yale as from Harvard; and that Cornell was reluctant to ask Princeton to send a crew to Ithaca two years in succession just to make a Cornell holiday. The committee asked if the Harvard crew would row a race of three miles, instead of two miles, on Cayuga Lake May 26, but the Harvard committee was not willing to commit its crew to that sort of experiment.

When it had become evident that there was no hope of a race with Harvard on Spring Day, an arrangement was made by Princeton and Yale which solved Cornell's problem with respect to Spring Day this year. On Cornell's rowing schedule there have been for several years two early season events—the race with Harvard, held alternately at Cambridge and at Ithaca, and the triangular regatta with Yale and Princeton, which has been rowed twice at Princeton—1911 and 1915—and twice at Ithaca—1914 and 1916. In 1912 Princeton joined the Harvard-Cornell regatta on the Charles. In 1913 she entertained Columbia and the Naval Academy eights at Princeton. Thus a Yale-Princeton-Cornell regatta has been held four times in the last six years, twice at Princeton and twice at Ithaca but never on Yale waters. Now Yale has just completed an excellent course on the Housatonic and has suggested that she be allowed to be the host of Princeton and Cornell every third year for this triangular regatta. That would be an ideal arrangement for all concerned and would establish this very pleasant athletic event. Cornell is hindered from accepting Yale's proposal by the same old snag which wrecked the Harvard arrangements—Spring Day, which has to have a boat race on a certain Saturday in Ithaca every year. Princeton would accept the Yale suggestion in a minute if Cornell would, but Princeton is hesitating because she understands the Cornell predicament and because, she says, she likes to row with Cornell. And Princeton would like to win a race with Cornell.

When the Harvard race was lost to Spring Day this year, Princeton came to the rescue and offered to send her crews here in order to provide Cornell with a regatta on that holiday. The offer was promptly accepted. Yale gave up her hope of opening the new Housatonic course with a triangular regatta on May 19 and instead asked Cornell to row there in a dual regatta on that day. That invitation was accepted. Harvard, who could not get a race with Cornell on the 19th, invited Columbia to row on the Charles on that day, and Columbia accepted. Spring Day had done all that. The Cornell athletic association cannot give up Spring Day without a struggle, because the day is an institution, and because the receipts from the sports are an important part of the association's annual income. But this fixture in the calendar threatens to make perpetual trouble in the arrangement of rowing schedules. Cornell would like to resume the arrangement with Harvard, meet Princeton and Yale every year, and retain Spring Day. That could not be done this year. Whether it can be done in future years is doubtful.

Efforts to arrange for a race between Harvard and Cornell this year were made with perfect good nature by both sides. Motives were mutually understood and respected.

Wrestling

Cornell 21, Lehigh 8
Navy 18, Cornell 8

The wrestling team last week won a match with Lehigh at South Bethlehem and lost to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

The Lehigh match, although won by a score of 21 to 8, was contested closely, for every bout except one lasted at least nine minutes and was ended by the referee's decision. The exception was the 125 pound class, in which Wigsten of Cornell threw McCullough of Lehigh with a half-nelson and forearm hold after 8 minutes and 43 seconds. Lehigh won the decision in two bouts when Kirk defeated Kephart in the 115 pound class and Ripa prevailed over Reynolds after fifteen minutes of wrestling in the 135 pound class. The remaining four bouts were won by Cornell men: Post, 145 pounds, defeated Neubert; Sager, 158 pounds, defeated Parrish; Zepp, 175 pounds, defeated Henderson (15 minutes), and Bard, heavyweight, defeated Pons. Bard was outweighed by forty pounds.

Reynolds injured an arm in the Lehigh match and was unable to take part at Annapolis, so the 135 pound match was omitted there. The Naval Academy won by a score of 18 to 8. The match was notable for the brilliant work of Ward of the Navy, who competed in the 175 pound and heavyweight bouts and won them both. He threw Zepp in 4 minutes 20 seconds and Bard in 7 minutes 17 seconds. These were the only falls. Of the other four bouts the Navy won two (Grant vs. Kephart and Wyatt vs. Wigsten) and Cornell two (Post vs. Rogers and Sager vs. Redmon).

The intercollegiate matches will take place at Ithaca on March 16 and 17.

In the intercollegiate meet teams will be entered from Columbia, Princeton, Lehigh, Pennsylvania and Cornell. Cornell has won half of the intercollegiate championships in wrestling since 1905. Yale, which no longer is represented in the league, stands next in number of victories. Since 1910, when Cornell won her first championship, the only other team to capture the title was Princeton in 1911. Since 1912 the Cornell wrestlers, coached by Walter O'Connell, have won the title every year.

Basketball

Yale defeated Dartmouth at Hanover on March 10 by the score of 37 to 26, and on the same night at Philadelphia Princeton won from Pennsylvania by the score of 18 to 16. These results continued the tie between Princeton and Yale for leadership in the intercollegiate league. The tie, therefore, was destined to be broken and the championship decided by the final game on the league schedule, between Princeton and Yale, at New Haven, on March 14.

The Cornell team will be intact next season, when a much better showing in the intercollegiate league is confidently expected. When the basketball season opened not a single C man of last year's team was in college and Coach Sharpe had to build an entirely new combination. After various experiments he determined to dismiss from the squad all seniors so that he might begin building a team for next year.

Track

Several Cornell men competed at Philadelphia last Saturday night in games held by the Meadowbrook Athletic Association. There was a one-mile relay race, which Harvard won; Holy Cross was second, Princeton third, Cornell fourth, Pennsylvania fifth and Penn State sixth. It had been agreed that this race should decide a contest between Pennsylvania and Cornell, taking the place of a special dual event usually run at these games; so Cornell was declared

Spend a dollar
for a Pencil Sharpener

Many students are spending one dollar for pencil sharpeners and save their pencils, patience, and time. A dollar is what you would ordinarily pay for a knife. Send us a dollar and we will mail one of these to you.
