PRICE 12 CENTS

ARMISTICE DAY was celebrated in Ithaca in the first University convocation of the year, at which students who were in the service had seats of honor on the stage and President Farrand talked to the undergraduates for the first time; by an unexpected University half-holiday; by memorial services at a temporary monument in DeWitt Park; and by a parade of civic and fraternal organizations and floats.

THE CORNELL DRAMATIC CLUB was represented at a meeting of the Intercollegiate Dramatic Association in New York on November 12 by Margaret H. Storey '22, of New York, and Edith L. Severance '23, of Buffalo.

CORNELL is one of four American institutions whose hockey team will meet that of McGill University this season. The others are Harvard, Boston, and Dartmouth.

LATIN-AMERICANS at Cornell organized the Spanish-American Club, a branch of the Federation of Latin-American students in the United States, at a meeting at the Cosmopolitan Club on November 12.

THE SAGE CHAPEL Preacher for November 20 will be the Right Rev. Dr. Charles Fiske, Episcopal Bishop of Central New York.

LECTURES for the week include "Les Universités du Midi" by Professor J. Cavalier, rector of the University of Toulouse and exchange professor from France; a reading from his poems by Vachel Lindsay; "Dante and Medieval Ethics" by Professor George L. Burr '81 before the Ethics Club; "Gibraltar, Tangier, and Algiers" by Professor Eugene P. Andrews '95 in the Museum of Casts, it being the second in his popular series in "The Mediterranean Cruise"; "The Holy Roman Empire" by Professor Burr in the course on the history of civilization; "Japan's Part in the Disarmament Conference" by Baron Kanda, official adviser to the Japanese delegation at the Conference, before the Current Events Forum of the Christian Association in Barnes Hall; and an address by Professor Charles H. Grandgent of Harvard in commemoration of the six hundredth anniversary of the death of Dante.

THE MEDICAL COLLEGE in New York was one of the cooperators with the American Legion in arranging an Armistice Day celebration in Madison Square Garden at which President Harding's address and the other ceremonies at Arlington Cemetery were transmitted to the audience by telephone, making use of huge amplifiers both at Arlington and New York.

THE NEWEST organized intercollegiate sport in which Cornell is to be represented is hockey. Besides Cornell, representatives of Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Columbia, and Dartmouth have formed the Intercollegiate Ice Hockey Association.

SEVENTEEN new members were lately initiated into Scabbard and Blade, honorary military society, the revival of which at Cornell was noted in a recent number. Eight of the seventeen were honorary members and nine were undergraduates. The honorary members are Albert W. Smith '78, and seven Army officers stationed at Cornell in connection with the R. O. T. C.

FOUR MEMBERS of the Faculty are giving a series of lectures on "Religion and Education" every Tuesday evening for three weeks in each of the three women's University dining-rooms under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A. The four, who alternate between Prudence Risley, Sage, and Cascadilla on successive nights, are Dr. Georgia L. White, adviser of women, Professor Arthur W. Browne, Professor James G. Needham, and Dean Dexter S. Kimball.

A FEATURE of the Sun last week was a series of articles by Faculty members on the Disarmament Conference at Washington. The authors were Professors Bristow Adams and Nathaniel Schmidt on Tuesday, and Charles H. Hull '86 and Walter F. Willcox on Wednesday, and Ralph H. Keniston on Thursday. All agreed that the conference is a step toward the abolition of war.

THE FLONZALEY QUARTET has been tentatively engaged by the Department of Music to give a chamber music concert in Sage Chapel on January 13 if enough seats are sold before November 21 to guarantee the expense.

DOUBLE CASTS will be a feature of future presentations by the Cornell Dramatic Club, according to a recent announcement. One cast will present the program one evening and another will present the same repertoire the second evening.

A PETITION to the railroads for an excursion rate to the Penn game is being circulated by undergraduates.

VARSIITY basketball practice for the year started with registration of candidates last Thursday.

FORTY-EIGHT undergraduates, among whom are three seniors, three juniors, fifteen sophomores, and twenty-nine freshmen, were elected members of the Cornell Cross Country Club on November 9.

IN ACCORDANCE with the recent repeal by the National Pan-Hellenic Association of the rule prohibiting national sororities from electing members of high school Greek letter societies, Cornell chapters of Delta Gamma, Kappa Alpha Theta, Alpha Phi, and Alpha Omicron Pi have elected one new member each.

LIBERTY HYDE BAILEY, formerly Dean of the College of Agriculture, spoke before the Agricultural Association in Roberts Hall on November 15.

AN ORGANIZATION of undergraduates similar to the Civil Engineering Association was formed in the Schools of Mechanical Engineering and Electrical Engineering of the College of Engineering on November 11. The new association will handle such matters of undergraduate interest as intercollege athletic schedules and social affairs in the two schools. The officers elected were: president, L. Stuart Vance '22, of Louisville, Kentucky; vice-president, Leslie N. Duryea '22 of Auburn; secretary and treasurer, Durward B. Kennedy, Jr., '22, of Flushing; assistant athletic director, Kenneth W. Cole '22, of Avon.

AWARDS to the winners of the women's archery contest held on November 5 were made to Doris T. Wadsworth '23 of Hastings, Edith J. Beasley '24 of Ithaca, and Ruth E. Clapp '25 of Ithaca. The highest score was 2,072, the distance shot was forty yards, and each contestant was allowed thirty arrows.

THE Y. W. C. A. gave a membership banquet in Prudence Risley Hall on November 14. President and Mrs. Farrand were guests of honor.

THE SECOND of the All-Cornell dances to be held on the Hill on Saturday nights was given last Saturday in the Old Armory.

PRESIDENT FARRAND has not yet severed all contact with the Red Cross. He was the principal speaker at the mass meeting which opened the annual Red Cross roll-call in Tompkins County, on November 12.

A FEATURE of The Ithaca Journal-News which gives it quite a metropolitan air is a rotogravure section included for the first time in last Saturday's issue.

High School Editors Gather

Seventeen Secondary Schools Send Representatives to Conference Called by Sigma Delta Chi

Begun entirely as an experiment and a side line to the scholastic cross-country run last Saturday, the conference of editors and business managers of secondary school publications invited to Ithaca by the Cornell Chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity, was pronounced a success by both guests and hosts. Some of the most apparent results were the formation of an association of secondary school publications in New York and Pennsylvania, serious thought on journalistic problems by both parties, and incidentally, the development of an interest in Cornell in the minds of young people of the right type for future Cornellians.

The delegates began arriving Thursday evening, and continued to appear through Saturday morning, among them four young women who were entirely unexpected by the Cornell journalists. They were taken care of, however, with the timely assistance of women members of the Sun Board. The early arrivals heard President Farrand's Armistice Day address and spent their time seeing the Campus and visiting the offices of Cornell publications, guided by members of the fraternity.

At a general discussion and "experience meeting" Friday evening in Barnes Hall the interest centered in the competitive system of elections to Cornell publications and its application to each visitor's own paper. By this time twenty-eight guests had arrived, most of whom took part in the discussion which was led and contributed to by their hosts. The consensus of opinion in this meeting seemed to be that the improvement of their papers would do much toward solving their problems in making their publications a more popular part of school activities.

Saturday morning the conference attended an illustrated lecture on "Making a Newspaper" given by Professor Millard V. Atwood '10, as a part of the course in agricultural journalism in the College of Agriculture. At noon the delegates gathered for luncheon in the Coffee House in Barnes Hall, after which they were officially welcomed by the president of the Cornell Chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, John R. Fleming '22, of Brooklyn. In telling the visitors why they were asked to Cornell, Fleming said that the three watchwords of the fraternity were honesty, energy, and talent as the guards of good journalism, and reminded his hearers that President Farrand had cited the first two of these as requirements for success, in his address the day before. Hubert J. Roemer '22 of Toledo, editor of The Widow, then told something of competitions and Cornell publications in general, and Professor

Atwood announced the names of the winning papers in the competition which was a part of the conference and which they had all been invited to enter.

First prize was awarded to The Clarion, of East High School, Rochester; the red ribbon went to The Cherry and White of Williamsport (Pa.) High School; and the yellow to The Spirit of Sherrill (N. Y.) High School. The Tattler, of Waterloo (N. Y.) High School and The Occident of West High School, Rochester, received honorable mention. Beside the prize winners, twelve other schools in New York and Pennsylvania were represented at the conference. An association of high school publications was formed with the editors of the prize-winning papers as officers and Sigma Delta Chi as corresponding secretary.

The delegates were the guests of the Athletic Association at the Springfield football game, and most of them attended a second round-table meeting in Barnes Hall Saturday evening. They were entertained at various fraternity and sorority houses on the Hill, and many stayed over Sunday to see more of the Campus and Cornell.

CHICAGO DELEGATE TO PENN

L. Gustave (Gus) Hallberg, Jr., '09 is at least one Chicago Cornellian who will be in Philadelphia on Thanksgiving Day. At a record-breaking luncheon of the Cornell Club of Chicago, held at the Hamilton Club on November 10, the dollar bill put up by Gus proved to be the winner of the raffle. There were sixty men at the party.

BINGHAMTON PLANS EVENTS

Increasing attendance and enthusiasm are marking the fortnightly luncheon meetings of the Cornell Club of Binghamton. At the meeting on October 18, James T. Rogers, one of the national officers of the Improved Order of Red Men, gave an interesting talk on his impressions of President Harding, obtained last July when he formed one of a small party which initiated the President into that order. At the meeting on November 1, Dr. Frank M. Dyer '02, president of the club, reported as the official delegate to the inauguration of President Farrand.

Binghamton is planning three main events for the future. An intercollegiate "eat" for all university men in Binghamton, with the Cornell club as sponsors, will be held shortly after Thanksgiving Day. The annual meeting and election of officers will be held in December, followed by the annual banquet in January.

One of the recent activities of the club was the announcement, in the local papers, that the secretary, George B. Cummings '12, would act as clearing house for alumni of both Cornell and Dartmouth who wished to go the game in Ithaca or had room for passengers in their cars for the trip.

President Talks to Students

Dr. Farrand Gives Four Essentials for Success in Armistice Day Convocation Address

In the first University Convocation of the year, on Armistice Day, November 11, President Farrand asked the undergraduates to dedicate themselves to the ideal of service as the best way to regain and preserve the principles for which America fought in the war. The occasion was the first opportunity undergraduates had to welcome their new President, and many were turned away because of lack of room.

Bailey Hall was filled to overflowing before 12 o'clock, at which time President Farrand read from the proclamation of President Harding recommending that as many people as possible spend the time between 12 and two minutes past 12 o'clock on Armistice Day in silent tribute to the American dead and in prayer and thanksgiving for the sacrifice they had made. The audience of nearly three thousand stood motionless and with bowed head, for two minutes, after which Professor James T. Quarles played patriotic airs on the organ.

At about 12:10, Daniel B. Strickler '22, of Columbia, Pennsylvania, president of the Senior Class, welcomed the new President for the undergraduates of Cornell University, and expressed the hope that President Farrand would take the students into his close confidence in any matter in which he desired their cooperation and help. In response, Dr. Farrand said:

"I am as proud as I can be of being a Cornellian. I have been greeted with such a welcome that I feel I am just as thoroughly a Cornellian as you are. I shall come to you freely and frankly, and as to a response, I am perfectly confident I shall get it.

"Let me tell you," the President continued, "I am the most embarrassed person in the Cornell community at this moment. I am perfectly well aware that I am being looked over. However, I welcome the opportunity because it may not come to me again. I am deeply impressed by the fact that the greatest opportunity I ever had, and the greatest opportunity you will ever have, is these four university years."

President Farrand said he did not wish to give advice, nor did he want to talk to the students as a father. He preferred, he said, to talk to them as an older brother. He then told of the attitude he would take if he were in the position of starting over again his four years in college.

"First," he said, "I would take those four years and my job more seriously than I did. But don't confuse taking your job more seriously with taking yourself too seriously."

The first quality which the new President recommended as an essential of success was honesty. "I don't mean personal integrity; I assume that; I assume you all have it. I mean straight thinking: intellectual honesty. The man who can and will think clearly and straight has the basis of a great personality. This type of honesty, however, is not incompatible with tact, which in itself is a necessity. Let me tell you right here: don't always be trying to set the world right. Even in honest thinking, there are honest differences of opinion. Critical thinking is necessary, but remember that it is not an easy thing to be always certain. This is not advice, but there is a place to get a lot of good advice, in a book which I think is far too little read these days: that's the Bible.

"The next important quality is energy. One of the greatest nuisances we have is the constant presence of those who have good intentions but who are without action. The road to success is not paved that way. You see, this is a general plea for the formation of good habits. Fortunately you are in those happy years when habits can be formed.

"Sound judgment, which is an essential for the well-rounded citizen, includes a vast view of life in general. It necessitates seeing all sides of the question. You can't do this unless you have a background, and there is no place to get that better than in these years of college. If I lived my undergraduate years over again, I would certainly try to realize that I had an opportunity to broaden my horizon."

Speaking of good sportsmanship, which he said was an essential to the make-up of a real successful citizen, President Farrand said: "I should be willing to take good sportsmanship as the text for discussing all the relationships of life. Yes, I even feel I should be willing to discuss the curriculum of the College of Arts and Sciences on the basis of good sportsmanship. This is a particularly good place to discuss student activities. I can't understand why there has always had to be so much discussion of student activities. I know they are a good thing. Of course they are worth while. I wish to Heaven that every student were interested in them. The only problem is to maintain a proper balance. The best way to do this is to remember that the primary object of being here is to get an education. The purpose of the University is education in its broad sense. I shall try not to forget that there is a perfectly sound education to be gained from such activities, and from rubbing up against fellow students in college life."

Another requirement in President Farrand's category of virtues is correct speech. He said that whenever he talked with men of affairs, the plea was for the young man who is able to use the English language with accuracy.

As a final requirement, President Farrand cited the need for having sound ideals. "There has never been a time more than these last few years when we have seen the ideal of service in such a high light. It is very fitting for us to-day to consider whether the ideals for which the men died whom we are commemorating here to-day are going to live. Let us not forget what the ideals were for which we entered the World War.

"America came into the war with the definite purpose of saving the ideals for which our fathers fought and on which this country was founded; with the knowledge that unless they were saved, our nation and those of western Europe were doomed. Now the war is fought, and for most of us there has been a period of profound disillusionment. A short time ago we saw what was the most hopeful sign of American democracy in 1917—that wonderful forth-giving of men and women in America. We had got slothful as a nation, and yet when civilization was brought to the crisis, not only young, but old as well, came out to ask what they could do.

"What is the result? Are we seeing democracy safe? No. We see again selfishness, national as well as personal, looming up on the horizon. We are not seeing those broad principles for which we fought, and as a result there has been no time in the history of the world when the situation was as serious as it is to-day. It is far more serious than during the war. We are now dealing with forces that cannot be defined, and there never has been a time when the need for service was as great as it is to-day, service to the country, service to the world.

"As we commemorate the lives and deaths of those who fought in the war, and particularly of those splendid lives that went out from this University, I appeal to you as members of the Cornell community to keep that ideal of service always before you. If that is done, you will fulfill your purpose in life. If it is not, you will fail. That it will be done, I have no doubt, but we must remember that there never was a day when the requirement was so great as it is now that you and I dedicate ourselves once more to the high ideals fought for by these men whose deaths we commemorate to-day."

THE PENN CONCERT

The annual joint concert and dance given by the Musical Clubs of Cornell and the University of Pennsylvania will be held the night before the Thanksgiving game, in the ballroom of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia. Appropriately for a joint appearance on the eve of a historic contest on the gridiron alternate numbers in the concert program will be played by the two clubs, making the program a competition which will be judged by the length and volume of the applause each contestant receives.

Twenty-five members of the Mandolin Club and thirty-two members of the Glee Club will be selected to make the trip from Ithaca. They will leave in special cars on November 22 and return Thanksgiving night.

PHILADELPHIA WOMEN COLLECT

The Cornell Women's Club of Philadelphia held a rummage sale on October 14 and 15 for the benefit of the French scholarship of the Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs, which netted $135. The regular monthly meeting of the club for November was held on the fifth at the home of Helen Weideman '13. The next meeting is to be held December 3 at the home of Mrs. Clifford Buck (Gertrude Nelson '95), 5025 Knox Street, Germantown. The club invites all Cornell women in and around Philadelphia to attend its meetings.

MILWAUKEE RAID SUCCESSFUL

That raid on the cider mill in Cedarburg, twenty miles north of Milwaukee, proved to be the most successful party that Milwaukee Cornell men have held since the famous "broil" last summer. Thirty-nine old grads participated.

John E. Ferriss '00, although not the official delegate of the club to the inauguration of President Farrand, was one of five Milwaukee men who were in Ithaca at the time, and he presented a most interesting resumé of the events.

CLEVELAND ENTERTAINS FARRAND

The Cornell Club of Cleveland gives a dinner in honor of President Livingston Farrand at the University Club of Cleveland on November 17. The Cleveland Club will be the first organization of Cornell alumni to entertain Cornell's new president at a dinner since his inauguration. The alumni of Columbus, Ohio, had an opportunity of meeting President Farrand before his inauguration, when they gave a dinner in his honor during the national convention of the American Red Cross over which Dr. Farrand presided. Ithaca and other New York State alumni had an opportunity to meet him at the annual New York State Alumni Day luncheon held in the Old Armory on the day of the Colgate football game.

The President speaks in Cleveland at noon of November 17 in behalf of the Cleveland community chest campaign.

Benn Carr, of The Cleveland News, famous for his connection with the Ford Peace Ship, talked on the Disarmament Conference and other things, at the weekly luncheon of the Cornell Club of Cleveland at the Hotel Statler on November 10. James A. Bailey '96, of Caledonia, N. Y., a charter member of the Savage Club, was a guest at the luncheon.

NEW YORK FOOTBALL SMOKER

More than three hundred Cornellians showed their appreciation of the football team at a smoker held at the Cornell Club of New York on November 4, the night before the Columbia game. President Neal D. Becker '05 presided, introducing an array of local and imported entertainers.

Moreyn Berry '04 constituted himself as a witness on the stand, and after he had answered a few questions asked by himself, spent the better part of an hour in intimate discussion of Cornell matters.

Short words of greeting were expressed by Creed W. Fulton '09, president of the Cornell Club of New England, Foster M. Coffin '12, Alumni Representative, and Willard I. Emerson '19, chairman of the club's entertainment committee.

Stunts were provided by John W. Ross '20, Edwin L. Howard '20, and an improvised quartette composed of William E. Hawke '11, Leroy P. Wood '11, Julius A. Fay '16, and Leonard F. Hicks '16.

A Mud Battle

The football team defeated Springfield College by a score of 14 to 0 in the last game of the home schedule Saturday. A high northwest wind drove a young blizzard across a gridiron covered with snow and mud, making good football impossible and converting the engagement into a slipping, sliding, diving contest plus the old-fashioned game of "Button, button, who's got the button?" said button in this case being a ball that simply would not stay put.

The team played without Captain Dodge, Kaw, and Lechler. The Cornell leader had been called home and Coach Dobie did not care to chance using left half and full back on the slippery, treacherous field. Davidson played right tackle, and Gould and Olney understudied in the back-field.

Springfield offered a stout resistance, presenting a line that was heavier than Cornell's, and effective defensively. The visitors also were fairly strong on the wings. They had nothing, however, in the way of an offense and failed to make a single first down. Play was in their territory nearly all the time.

Cornell found line-plunging unprofitable, and so turned to off-tackle drives for most of the ground-gaining. The first touchdown was made in three minutes of play after a drive from midfield with Pfann and Gould working the tackles effectively for several good gains. Ramsey went across on a five-yard plunge for the first touchdown and Hanson kicked goal.

Fumbles spoiled two good opportunities to score in the next two periods. In fact in the third period fumbling almost became the rule rather than the exception. A recovered fumble gave Springfield the ball on Cornell's four-yard line. The visitors tried a passing game, but it fizzled.

In the last period some pretty open field-running by Gould brought the ball to Springfield's twenty-five yard line. Springfield braced, but Post, who had substituted for Gould, tore off ten yards around right tackle and after three rushes had taken the oval to the two-yard line. Post went over for the score on the fourth down and Hanson kicked goal.

The game proved next to nothing because of the extraordinary conditions under which it was played. Certainly it did not prove that the team had slowed down. On a dry field the score would certainly have been higher. The backs simply couldn't hold on to the ball because their fingers were half frozen and the pigskin was—well, it isn't difficult to imagine what it was after the first few minutes of play. Cross County Wins Again

The cross country team seems to have acquired the perfect score habit. In the quadrangular meet with Dartmouth, Columbia, and Penn over the six-mile Van Cortlandt Park course in New York last Saturday the team duplicated its performance in the Syracuse meet of two weeks ago, five Cornell men crossing the finish line before the opposing teams could qualify a single runner. This victory on top of the earlier triumph at Syracuse and the one-sided win over Harvard establishes that Cornell will be a hot favorite in the intercollegiate championship race on November 21, which will be run over the same course as last Saturday's quadrangular affair.

The score of that meet: Cornell 15; Dartmouth 61, Penn 81, and Columbia 83.

R. E. Brown finished first, in the good time of 33 minutes and 9 seconds. N. P. Brown finished seven seconds behind his team-mate and then came Carter, Miske, and Irish of Cornell. Order of finish by Cornell:

- 1—R. E. Brown..... 33.09
- 2—N. P. Brown..... 33.16
- 3—C. C. Carter..... 33.17
- 4—George Milke..... 33.18

Coakley and Young of Dartmouth followed the five Cornellians; Richman of Cornell was eighth and Gordon of Cornell thirteenth.

Although the field started off in a bunch the two Browns pulled to the fore in the first few minutes and alternated in setting the pace. They were closely pressed during the first swing around the course by some of the Cornell harriers, but increased their lead as the end of the run drew near. Just as the finish line hove in sight R. E. Brown sprinted away from his running mate and finished seven seconds ahead of him.

Captain Carter who had been holding back in order to pace the remaining members of his team, pulled ahead as the men swung around for the second lap, and finished one second behind N. P. Brown. Ere the watches had ticked off another second, Miske, also of Cornell, came across the line in fourth place. Irish, the last man to score for the Ithacans, came in nineteen seconds later.

The intercollegiate will be held next Monday, November 21, at Van Cortlandt Park. The freshman teams will run three miles, the varsity teams six. The course has been modified to eliminate some of the steep hills. It includes a number of obstacles and some open field running.

Soccer Team Defeats Harvard

The soccer team had no trouble in defeating Harvard last Saturday, winning by a score of 7 to 1 under conditions similar to those experienced by the football teams on Schoellkopf Field. The driving storm and muddy field apparently did not worry Coach Bawlf's men very much for they launched a fast offensive from the outset and had the ball in Harvard territory most of the time. The line-up and summary:

Cornell (7)	Harvard (1)
Molinet.....G.....	Brigham
O'Connor.....R.F.....	Hartley
Leonard.....L.F.....	Heizer
Thompson.....R.H.....	Begg
Cilloniz.....C.H.....	Murray
Kwong.....L.H.....	Heath
Righter.....O.R.....	Tuttle
Smith.....I.R.....	Pallo
Elli.....C.....	Byington
Rosseau.....I.L.....	Lamont
Cook.....O.L.....	Phillips

Goals: Cornell, Elli 6, Cook; Harvard, Lamont. Substitutions: Cornell, Crabtree for Smith; Harvard, Keyes for Heath, Heath for Keyes. Referee: James Smith of the Unites States Referees' Association. Time of halves: 45 minutes.

Freshmen Tie Wyoming

The freshman football team and Wyoming Seminary played half of a football game on Alumni Field Saturday and then decide to quit because of the storm. Neither team scored.

Hutchinson Wins Meet

Hutchinson High School of Buffalo won the annual Cornell interscholastic cross country meet last Saturday with 38 points. Ithaca High School was second with 46. Cox of Rochester won individual honors. The course was for three miles. The summary: Hutchinson High, 38; Ithaca High, 46; Masten Park High of Buffalo, 93; Technical High of Buffalo, 116; Lafayette High of Buffalo, 130; West High of Rochester, 138; Cascadilla School, 164.

A SPECIAL CAR brought fourteen members of the Medical Faculty from New York for the Cornell inauguration.

SPORT STUFF

The manners and the customs?

The dances—so much discussed last spring—have become quite decent and happy. The word was passed by the boys who were giving the parties that the general spirit of joyous welcome did not extend to uninvited souses whose silly grins did not focus and who smelled badly.

This seems to have been enough.

The trouble last year was not so much that the people who went to the dance got tight as that most everyone who happened to be tight went to the dance. Now when Ethelbert rolls up with five shots of synthetic gin and no invitation, he is met at the door by a hardboiled brother with a cold eye. The people inside never learn the sad story of Ethelbert—they remain ignorant of the fact that he ever tried to arrive.

I wish there might be reported some abatement of the saxophone and jazz band nuisance, but apparently both are still going strong. I thought that public toleration of these abominations was due entirely to alcoholic distortion of musical taste. It seems, however, that youth really likes 'em.

WANTED—A NAME

The Buildings and Grounds Committee of the Board of Trustees has requested the Cornellian Council to suggest a name for Unit E of the new residential halls, which will be constructed in the near future. The Trustees have appropriated $10,000 from the Alumni Fund toward the cost of this building. The total will be defrayed by annual appropriations from the Alumni Fund and by income from the building. This is the second dormitory to be given to the University by Cornell alumni through the Cornellian Council.

Upon the completion of Founders' Hall, the Trustees requested the Cornellian Council to propose a name for that building and it was upon the Council's recommendation that its name was adopted. The plural form is used to honor not only the memory of Ezra Cornell and Andrew D. White, but of all the men associated with them in the founding of Cornell University.

The Cornellian Council hopes to select a name for the new dormitory which may be the basis for uniformity of names with other units of the dormitory group as they are built. The secretary of the Council, Harold Flack '12, wishes to receive suggestions from alumni for such a name at his office in Morrill Hall.

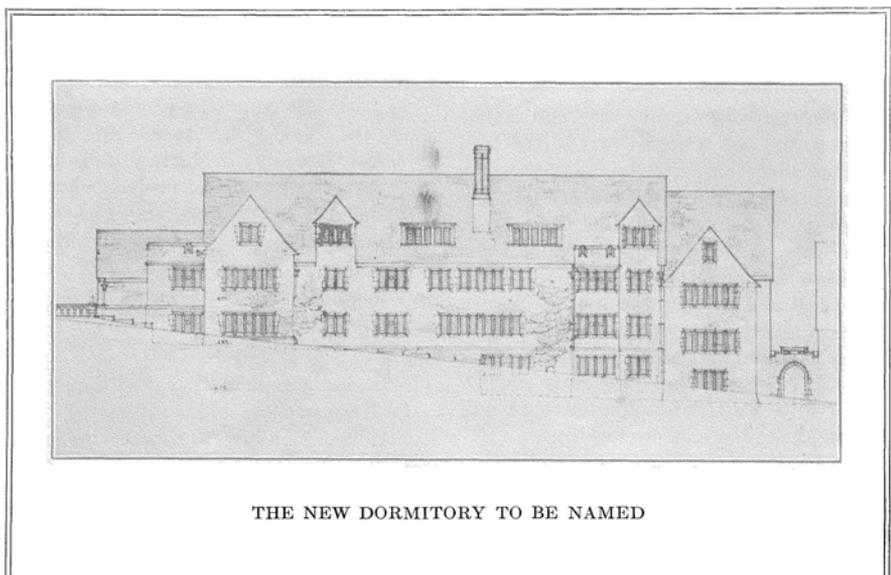

INTERCOLLEGIATE NOTES

MICHIGAN women are planning a campaign for a million-dollar women's building, which is to have committee and dining rooms and a ball room to accomodate six to seven hundred couples.

PRINCETON up to October 26 had secured $8,586,135.06 of the fourteen millions she is raising for endowment. There were 11,527 subscribers, of whom 9,435 were Princeton men. The total payments had reached $4,783,267.39, considerably more than half of the total.

AT MICHIGAN a Students' Press Club has been formed, about eighty men joining at the first meeting. Luncheon meetings will be held every two weeks, and speakers will be brought from among the editors of the State to address the club.

MOUNT HOLYOKE COLLEGE recently made public the results of a census which show that although less than four per cent of the entire male population of the United States are professional men, yet more than thirty-eight per cent of the students registered there are the children of professional men—the figures showing that professional men, more than any other single group, are believers in higher education.

SCHOLARSHIP AND FRATERNITY

The fraternities are in the midst of initiations. Many "old grads"—we are all old to the undergraduates—are returning for the ceremonies.

Fraternities have problems peculiar to themselves, and in principle they should be able to conduct their own affairs without interference. Yet fraternities are such a large part of Cornell life that their problems become the problem of the University and the alumni.

The principal fraternity problem is that they do not get settled down to the business of education until the fall of the year is well advanced. It is doubtful if they settle very determinedly to their tasks even then. Rushing is a business, and this business occupies their entire attention and most of their time well into the month of November, a loss of six precious weeks when the fundamentals of new courses should be mastered and the early prelims hit with a cold determination that will make the finals a matter of routine.

It is an occasion worthy of note when an undergraduate from a Cornell chapter enters the Graduate School or joins the teaching staff of Cornell University. Chapter alumni lists are composed largely of Faculty members who graduated in the late nineteenth century, of University officers in non-teaching occupations, brothers from out west, and fratres in urbe.

When President Schurman used to publish relative scholastic standings it was rare that any fraternity stood higher than the average of the student body. Any athletic team, in spite of obvious distractions, could surpass the fraternity average, and the crews and other persistent groups could excel the best of them. There is no reason to believe that conditions have since changed for the better.

The rushing hocus pocus cannot be charged with the entire burden of this condition. It is a symptom only of an inverted perspective in which rushing can be permitted to occupy the entire foreground for six weeks. Each year the seniors of the fraternity association "improve" the rules and graduate with great self-confidence before they see the results.

If these old grads who are now returning want to do some constructive work for Cornell and for their own fraternities, they can do nothing better than to put the horse before the cart, where it belongs, for the younger brothers of their group.

OBITUARY

Rayner M. Bedell '02

Raynor Monroe Bedell died in the Mountainside Hospital, Montclair, N. J., on November 5, of tetanus. Three weeks before his death, while pushing a canoe into the Passaic River, he cut his foot on a sharp blade of grass, causing a wound which developed blood poisoning.

Bedell was born on September 1, 1880, and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edwin F. Bedell of Montclair, N. J. He prepared at the Montclair High school, entering Sibley College in 1898 and receiving the degree of M.E. (E.E.) in 1902.

He was engaged in scientific and experimental work in New York with Peter Cooper Hewitt, the inventor, as electrical expert, until the death of Mr. Hewitt in Paris last August, and was a candidate on the Single Tax ticket for the New Jersey Assembly in the recent election.

He was a brother of Professor Frederick Bedell '91, of the Department of Physics; he leaves also three sisters, Miss Helen L. Bedell and Mrs. George W. Harris of Montclair, and Mrs. Franklin Zeiger of Medfield, Mass.

James J. Whitty '11

James Joseph Whitty died in a hospital in Kansas City, Mo., on August 2. He had been standing on a ladder to repair a fuse and the screw-driver which he was using came in contact with a live fuse, the shock throwing him from the ladder to the cement floor below, fracturing his skull.

Whitty was born in Ithaca on August

22, 1886. He attended the Parochial and the Ithaca High School, entering the University in 1907, and graduating in 1911 with the degree of M.E.

He was employed for some time by the New York Edison Company, later going into business for himself in Brooklyn. When the war broke out, he sold his business and entered the service, winning a lieutenant's commission. After the war he returned to New York where he worked for the New York Central Railroad, living in Yonkers. He went last fall to Kansas City, where he worked for the Kansas City Light and Power Company.

He is survived by a brother, John Whitty, of Ithaca.

Curtis H. Turnbull '12

Curtis Hussey Turnbull died in France on October 13 of influenza.

He was born on March 4, 1898, a son of Thomas Turnbull, Jr., '87 and Mrs. Turnbull of Pittsburgh, Pa., and a brother of Thomas Turnbull, 3d, '20. He prepared at the Salisbury School, Salisbury, Conn., and entered Cornell in 1917, receiving the degree of B.S. in 1921. He was a member of Phi Kappa Sigma.

He and his brother had spent the summer in South Africa, and were touring in France when he contracted the disease which caused his death. He was buried in Pittsburgh on November 9.

LITERARY REVIEW

Yankee Sons of Crispin

The Organization of the Boot and Shoe Industry in Massachusetts Before 1875. By Blanche Evans Hazard. Cambridge, Mass. Harvard University Press. 1921. 8vo. pp. x, 293. Harvard Economic Studies 23. Price, $3.50 net.

Professor Hazard has produced a readable, well proportioned, and apparently trustworthy account of a great and vital industry. It is in fact a notable contribution to American industrial history. The book is the more important from the fact that in the boot and shoe trade the history of the evolution of industrial organization finds an unusually complete illustration.

To-day one hundred or more separate operations are required to make a shoe; of these more than half may be performed on machines; and there are seven distinct departments of the business. Prior to about 1830, however, there were no machines and no factories. Our forefathers in those early days made their own shoes, often from hides that had clothed their own animals, working in the winter and on rainy days with the eight necessary tools (knife, awl, needle, pincers, last, hammer, lapstone, and stirrup—"St. Hugh's Bones").

Then came the itinerant cobbler with his kit of tools and a few lasts in a leather apron over his back or trundled in a wheelbarrow along with his bench. "Every community had its bark house and tanning pits, where either hemlock or oak bark was thrown in to cover and to cure the hides."

Following this Home Stage came gradually the Handicraft Stage, in which work was done for a market on the specific demand of a definite customer; it was known as "bespoke work." "While this stage lasted in the isolated back water country even beyond 1850, in Lynn, the Weymouths, and other eastern Massachusetts towns it came in soon after 1650 and went out soon after 1750. The second phase of this stage came in when extra sale shoes began to be made to fill out time at custom work.

As early as 1760, in Lynn at any rate, appeared the Domestic Stage; in its first phase the worker still made the complete shoe; but a capitalist entrepreneur furnished all or nearly all of the tools and materials and marketed the product at his own risk and profit. The second phase of this stage (1810-37) is characterized by specialization in processes and the rise of the central shop; the third phase (1837-55), by the growth of distinct boot and shoe centers and by the appearance of the entrepreneur who made this his sole business. By 1855 Boston had become the largest shoe market in the world; in the State 80,000 persons were employed in the manufacture of boots, shoes, and leather and the business amounted to about $62,000,000 a year.

Then came the Factory Stage. In its first phase (1855-75), there came to be more direct control and supervision of the workers, all of whom now worked under one roof; and expensive machinery gradually appeared. In the second phase, lasting to the present time, the characteristic elements have been the development of the United Shoe Machinery Company and the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union.

The "human element" appears here and there throughout the book. Shoemakers have always been an unusually intelligent class. This has probably come about through their use of the leisure which the mechanical occupation has given their minds; also through their contact with people of all classes for whom they worked. A third and more debatable reason is thought by Miss Hazard to be the influence upon their imaginations and acts of the legends about St. Crispinanus and his brother Crispin, those two picturesque young princes of Kent, and of St. Hugh, the martyred patron saint of all who follow the gentle craft.

There is an excellent index by Karl W. Bigelow, instructor in economics.

Books and Magazine Articles

The Literary Digest for November 12 contains a portrait of President M. Carey Thomas '77, of Bryn Mawr, apropos of a discussion of the point made by her in her Mt. Holyoke address, that history is not being taught today in a vital manner.

In The Journal of Educational Research for October Professor Riverda H. Jordan writes on "The Variation of Marking Systems as Diagnosed by Objective Tests."

Professor Hendrik van Loon '05, of Antioch College, is contributing to The Independent and Weekly Review a series of cartoons. Thus far they have appeared in the issues of October 1, October 15, and November 5. His theme is what "History Teaches." The last one had to do with the limitation of armament.

President Lowell's address at the inauguration of Dr. Farrand is printed in full in The Harvard Alumni Bulletin for October 27.

A very interesting article in The Bryn Mawr Alumnae Bulletin for November is "Four Weeks' Experience in the Bryn Mawr Summer School for Labor," by Mrs. Louise Brownell Saunders, Bryn Mawr '93, of Clinton, N. Y., formerly warden of women at Cornell.

John K. Stotz '16 contributes to the October issue of The Electrical Journal an article on "Some Mechanical Causes of Railway Motor Flashing."

The issue of The Christian Science Monitor for October 14 contains a well written article on "Cornell's Dante Collection." The article, which is illustrated, is anonymous; it may be the work of Miss Agnes G. Smith '02, who has been for some years connected with the Monitor.

Musical America for October 22 includes an article by Edna Stebbins on "Ithaca's Musical Progress" describing at length the work in music on the Hill and illustrated by a portrait of Professor Quarles at the Bailey Hall organ.

In The Elmira Telegram for November 6 Louise Snow writes most entertainingly on the French refugee settlement made in 1793 at Asylum, Pennsylvania, near where Towanda now stands. In the days of the Terror some seventy thousand refugees were driven from their homes to find shelter in various other lands. Many were received and helped in Philadelphia, but as the number increased, the necessity of finding a permanent home for them was evident, and this tract of 24,000 acres was chosen. It was too late to complete many of the houses, and the suffering of the first winter was intense. But the colonists persisted and presently the village flourished. In 1795 Tallyrand made an extended visit there, and other notables were also among the guests. After ten years came Napoleon's proclamation to all émigrés of full pardon and restoration of estates, and in consequence most of the exiles returned to France. Only three families remained, and from one of these are descended the late Charles d'Autremont, Jr., '72 and his sons Charles Maurice and Hubert Hart d'Autremont '11. The elder Charles d'Autremont and John W. Mix recently erected on a large sandstone boulder a memorial tablet bearing the following inscription: "This monument is erected to commemorate and perpetuate the memory and deeds of the French royalist refugees, who, escaping from France and the horrors of the revolution, and from the horrors of the revolution in San Domingo, settled here in 1793, and located and laid out the town of Asylum, under the auspices of the Viscount de Noailles and Marquis Antoine Omer Talon. In 1796, Louis Philippe, Duke of Orleans, afterwards king of France, visited here. The Prince de Tallyrand, the Duke de Montpensier, Count de Bennjoils, the Duke la Rochefoucauld de Liancourt, and many other distinguished Frenchmen were visitors or residents for a short time at Asylum. Erected by John W. Mix and Charles d'Autremont, Jr., descendants of French refugee settlers."

The India Rubber Review for August 15 includes an interesting article by William C. Geer '02, vice-president in charge of development of the B. F. Goodrich Company of Akron, Ohio, on "Impressions of England and France in June, 1921." His visit was made primarily for the purpose of attending the International Rubber Exhibition, of which he gives a detailed account.

In The Mount Holyoke Alumnae Quarterly for October Professor Ellen Bliss Talbot, Ph.D. '98, of Mount Holyoke, writes on "Expenses of a College Course." She finds expenses at Mt. Holyoke to amount to $650-$750; at Bryn Mawr, to $750-1,250; at Goucher, to $650; at Smith, to $650-850; at Vassar and Wellesley, to $800; at Barnard, to $649-831; at the Women's College of Brown, to $625-635; at Radcliffe, to $700-898.

The invocation offered by President Murray Bartlett, of Hobart, at the installation of President Farrand is printed in full in The Hobart Herald for October 28.

The Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce Bulletin for August 13 contains an article on "Capital and Labor and the Penal Law" by Ralph E. Hemstreet '00, assistant district attorney of Kings County.

In The University of California Chronicle for July Professor Isaac Flagg, formerly of Cornell, now professor emeritus in the University of California, publishes a ballad version of some parts of the Odyssey under the title, "A Tale of Wanderings."

Ralph C. Willard, A.M. '05, in The Hobart Herald for August 15 writes on "Modern Education," making a plea for the small college. He is a graduate of Hobart, class of '04.

In The Cornell Civil Engineer for November Howard S. Rappleye '15, now a computer on the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, writes on "The Work of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey in the Philippine Islands." Lieut. Commander Lyle F. Bellinger '87, C.E.C., U. S. Navy, discusses "Small Sewage Plant Operation."

"The Location, Grading, and Drainage of Highways," by Wilson G. Harger '05, is reviewed in Engineering and Contracting for October 5. This is the first of a series of four volumes which Harger expects to publish. He is also joint author with A. E. Bonney of "The Highway Engineer's Handbook," a new edition of which appeared recently.

According to an article which appeared in a recent issue of The Engineering News Record, Cornell now stands fourth in numbers among the engineering colleges in the United States. The following is the correct order, according to the data collected: first, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, with 2,747 students; second, Michigan, with 2,212 students; third, Purdue, with 1,845; fourth, Cornell, with 1,825; fifth, Illinois, 1,818; sixth, Ohio State University, 1,473; seventh, 1,323; eighth, Georgia School of Technology, 1,307; ninth, Minnesota, 1,284; tenth, Pennsylvania State College, 1,233; eleventh, Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College, 1,169; twelfth, Wisconsin, 1,150; thirteenth, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, 1,039; fourteenth, Iowa State College, 1,011.

NEW CLINIC IS POPULAR

The opening of the new pay clinic in New York by the Medical College, which was mentioned in THE ALUMNI NEWS of November 3, has attracted wide attention from editorial writers. It is said to be the first institution of general scope in the United States at which expert medical attention can be obtained for as little as one dollar. More than three hundred persons registered for treatment the first day, when seventy-six physicians were in attendance, and more than six hundred applied for later appointments. Dean Walter L. Niles has invited medical societies and individual physicians to avail themselves of the clinic's facilities and to give it their support.
