SPRING DAY as Spring Day was the best ever; as an unbroken string of athletic victories it left much to be desired, though no one questions the fact that the best varsity crew won when Yale crossed the finish line ahead in the culminating event under weather conditions that could not have been better if they had been made to order.

CLEOPATRA'S CARNIVAL did not materialize. It was abandoned about the time the King Tut craze died out of everything but the museums and some belated fashions; for it was substituted a festival based largely upon the cut-down Fords that cut up around the Campus. The publicity for this was cleverly managed, even to an elimination race several days before, when these cars, at two-minute intervals, speeded up South Avenue from the men's dormitories to the Baseball Field. One of them even cast a tire at the last turn and finished on the rim, while another managed to get across the line with half its inwards dragging and the steering gear out of order.

SCHOELLKOPF SWEEPTAKES was next to the last event of the Spring Day circus features, with the aforementioned Fords—or such of them as were not rendered hors de combat by the eliminations—going around the track under conditions that made the race both safe and funny. All were lined up about forty feet apart. They were permitted to go on high on the straightway, but had to be in low on the turns. During one course they had to weave in and out around hurdles, and between each round had to stop at their respective pits, first to get a quart of water in the radiators; next, to permit driver and mechanic to drink a bottle of pop, one for each; next, to measure the gasoline and report the content to the judges stand. Under strict rules all of them would have been disqualified under one count or another, such as spilling half of the pop, pouring the water over the radiator instead of into it, and measuring the water in the radiator instead of the gasoline in the tank. Some even missed a loop or two in going around the hurdles. One was bumped off the track but got on, and finished within the money. The time for the mile was about the same as that of a fair runner.

TIN-TIN, the car that gave its name to the show, was then awarded to the person who held the lucky number, one of which, with duplicate, was printed on each admission ticket. Wilhelmina Barton, blindfolded, drew twenty-three numbers from the nail keg in which they had been dropped at the entrance, the final number being the lucky one. Tin-Tin was a runabout, with a delivery body, that had seen better days. It was bought in Elmira under the general instructions to "get the best car anywhere you can for fifty dollars." It had paraded the various avenues for some days before the show, with a Morris chair in the delivery section; though it was made plain that the chair did not go to the winner of the lucky number, but belonged to Beta Theta Pi.

THE FINAL NUMBER was announced in the midst of silence. No one claimed it. The suspense grew tense. Then Addonizio, the announcer, made it plain that if there were no claimant for 337, the number that won, the next one from the keg would get the car. Just then Cadwallader Evans stepped down from the stands and claimed the car, amid vociferations, and displayed the counterpart ticket. But the real truth was that Mrs. Romeyn Berry had been the real winner, but did not have the nerve to make the claim for the flivver, because she was afraid the award had been framed. Yet nothing could have been more straight, because she came to the show with her two small daughters, on regularly paid admission tickets; and Wilhelmina Barton had drawn the numbers while blindfolded. So Mr. Evans, the gallant pseudo-winner drove the car around the track, after the students let the hind wheels down to the ground. When he got around, he could stop the car, but not the engine, even after shutting off the gas and the spark. It finally ran down of its own accord. And now the Berry family has got to decide whether it will have another Berry crate, or try to sell the two relics and get a real Ford.

THE SHOWS were about as usual, with the best one contributed by senior societies in the College of Agriculture, ably aided by the Cornell Foresters in episodes on the Mexican Border, with the Salvation Army on the United States side and general deviltry on the other. The College of Architecture and the Cosmopolitan Club also had tent shows; and of course the police force was in evidence. It arrested and fined one professor and his wife for indecent dancing on a floor made of part of the board track, and immediately after arrested and fined one of President Farrand's daughters for dancing decently. Howard Cushman '23 of East Aurora was judge, jury, and prosecuting attorney. Nobody was acquitted of anything.

THE HORSE SHOW, postponed from the week before, because of rain, had an ideal day on Friday preceding Spring Day. First over the jumps in the ladies' class was Buck Shot, ridden by Beatrice Schurman '23, niece of former President Schurman. Mrs. Livingston Farrand, on Pollyanna, was among the last to be eliminated in the ladies' saddle class, won by Irene Castle Treman's Lightnin', with Eloise Warriner '23, up. Army officers, stationed at Cornell, were first in all the gentlemen's classes, but in their chukkers at polo were defeated by the Cornell varsity team.

THE NAVY HOP, with the Jan Garber orchestra, in the Drill Hall, was a most successful dance, lasting until dawn paled the lights, and the robins were hard at their matin carols. The gowns had more color than usual, and a general carnival spirit was generated and maintained by confetti and paper streamers.

THE SOFT BALL GAME between the editorial boards of the Widow and the Sun, played somewhere between the Lehigh Valley freight station and the observation train, afforded amusement to occupants of the train before it moved out. Both publications claim the victory, although nobody really cared who won. The costumes of the Widow players were orange and green of a somewhat Turkish character and those of the Sun were purple and gold with a tendency toward the Japanese.

SOPHOMORES are accused of causing a premature conflagration when the pyre erected for burning the freshmen caps blazed up on the night preceding the ceremony. An alarm about midnight brought crowds to the top of the Hill, some of them afraid that Roberts Hall was on fire and others afraid that it was not. The next day the freshmen were able to gather enough new combustibles, and the regular freshmen cap-burning went through according to schedule.

THE SAGE CHAPEL Preacher for May 17 will be the Rev. Dr. Karl Reiland, the rector of St. George's Episcopal Church, New York.

THE FIRST SENIOR SINGING was held last Sunday night with about one hundred members of the graduating class present. From the large number at the start, it is assumed that later gatherings will exceed in numbers those of past years.

THE JOHNNY PARSON CLUB still remains closed pending the selection of a suitable cook.

THE OAR FAMINE which came about as the result of having stocks of spruce suitable for oars used up in war-time air-plane construction, seems to have been broken; and two thousand board feet of select spruce arrived in Ithaca recently to be shaped into sweeps for the crews.

Professor Quarles to Leave

Announces Resignation to Head Music Department at University of Missouri—Here This Summer

Professor James T. Quarles, after ten years at Cornell, has tendered his resignation as University organist and acting head of the Department of Music. When his resignation is acted upon by the Board of Trustees, Professor Quarles will accept a position as head of the Department of Music at the University of Missouri, where as professor of music he will have chairs in both the College of Arts and Sciences and of Education.

In Professor Quarles the University loses its second head of the Department of Music since October, 1920, when Professor Hollis Dann left to go to Pennsylvania. Since coming to Ithaca ten years ago, Professor Quarles has worked unceasingly for the development of the musical life of the community. He was largely responsible for the success of the concert season just passed, which was one of the most notable in the University's history. Both he and Mrs. Quarles, who is a contralto soloist, have taken an active part in the life of Cornell.

Professor Quarles came to Ithaca as University organist at the opening of the University in October, 1913, from St. Louis, where he had been organist and choirmaster of the Lindell Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church and dean of the Department of Arts at Lindenwood College for Women for thirteen years. He was also organist of the St. Louis Scottish Rite Cathedral during that time.

In 1915 he became assistant professor of music at Cornell and since Professor Dann left he has been acting head of the department, having charge of the Sage Chapel choirs and the University concerts. The three hundred seventy-five organ recitals which he has given in Sage Chapel and Bailey Hall have been well attended and thoroughly enjoyed by members of the University and town communities. The Carnegie organ in Bailey Hall was installed soon after he came to Ithaca, and his accompaniments to singing and concerts have rivaled the regular recitals in popularity. He is known as a composer of anthems, organ pieces, and songs.

He has been an active member of the Town and Gown Club, the Country Club, the Rotary Club, and many other local organizations, having served as House Committee of the first named, and on the musical committees of nearly every organization with which he has been connected. The announcement of his resignation has been received with regret by his many friends in both town and University.

James T. Quarles was born in St. Louis, Missouri, in 1877. He studied with Gallo-way, with Ernest Kroeger, and later in Paris with Widor. Besides his connection with the churches of the city, he was organist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra and conductor of the Choral Art Society. For two years he was president of the Missouri Music Teachers' Association.

James T. Quarles

During the summer session at Cornell Professor Quarles will give several courses and have charge of the Department of Music, leaving in the fall for Columbia, Mo. The Board of Trustees has not yet taken action on his resignation, and no successor has been appointed.

PLAN EUROPEAN REUNION

Plans for a Cornell European reunion scheduled for July 28 are announced in a cable received May 22 from Alphonse D. Weil '86 in Paris. These plans were formulated at the annual meeting of the Cornell Alumni Association of Paris. Mr. Weil's cable follows:

"Successful annual luncheon meeting of Paris Alumni Association held Wednesday, May 16, attended by Weil, president, Henry J. Patten '84, Walter W. Worack '05, Lawrence Arnold '06, Ray R. Powers '07, Kenneth L. Roberts '08, Albert B. Cudebec '08, German Larrabure '09, Marcel S. Levy '09, Walter R. Nanny '13.

"Unanimously endorsed overseas reunion, fixing date July 28. Propose morning excursion to Versailles, returning evening; banquet Paris. Later date not practical resident and traveling Cornell men being dispersed account of summer season. Register American University Union, 1 Rue de Fleurus. Notice posted at Union."

Cornellians who propose to be in Europe during the coming summer and who will be able to attend the reunion should address a card telling of their plans to A. D. Weil at the Cornell Alumni Association, 10 Rue Ste. Cecile, Paris.

Classes Start Campaign

Cornellian Council Representatives Predict Fifty Per cent Increase in Alumni Fund

A campaign by classes was launched by the Cornellian Council on May 1 to get the largest possible percentage of each class on the Alumni Fund subscription list.

Each class representative on the Council, and in some cases the class president and secretary, are sending out personally signed letters to the members of their respective classes, appealing for new and increased subscriptions to the Alumni Fund this month.

This is the first special effort made through the class organizations to obtain subscriptions to the Alumni Fund since the close of the Semi-Centennial Endowment Campaign. With the new interest in class activities and class reunions in the last three years, it is expected that pride in class affairs will stimulate a large participation in this campaign.

A new and increased interest in the work of the Cornellian Council is expected to make the Alumni Fund this year at least fifty per cent greater than in any year since the Council was founded.

At present the class of 1890 holds first place in amount of subscriptions for the year, and 1906 ranks first in the number of new participants.

The following from a recent letter to the Cornellian Council is typical:

"For a number of years I have wanted to join in the general giving to Cornell through the Council, but I have not been able to give what my pride demanded and so have given nothing.

"It has been my good fortune to hear Dr. Farrand on two occasions and my conviction is that in him Cornell has a leader who will make her even greater than ever. My desire to do something had led me to swallow my pride and give what I know I can give, rather than sit back and wish I could give more.

"Perhaps you will appreciate my position better when I tell you that my Government scientist's salary has to take care of eight persons, and even my puny subscription bulks large in my budget."

ATHLETICS

Yale Wins on Cayuga

Yale's varsity crew, a powerful, soundly coached and skilfully handled boatload, made rowing history on Cayuga Lake Saturday evening, when it defeated Cornell by two lengths in the final event of the Spring Day Regatta, the varsity race for the Carnegie Cup. Princeton was third, finishing six boatlengths in the wake of Cornell.

Yale's triumph, won on merits by a superior crew—the best Yale eight Ithaca has ever seen—was the first time the Blue oars had ever flashed to victory on Cayuga; and the third in all the history of rowing that a Yale eight has won over Cornell. Also, it was Yale's second victory in the eight races rowed since this regatta was organized in 1911, a Blue crew having defeated Cornell and Princeton on Carnegie Lake in 1915.

Swinging along smoothly while first Princeton, then Cornell set the pace, keeping the stroke down to a 31-32, as against a 35-38 for both Cornell and the Tigers, apparently unconcerned when Cornell shot out a length in the lead at the three quarters of a mile mark, rowing strictly in conformity to schedule carefully determined well in advance, the powerful boatload from New Haven turned on more and more power after the mile mark, caught up with and then rowed down the Cornell varsity, showing open water a third of a mile from home, and crossing the line two lengths to the good.

The varsity race, last on the program, was rowed under perfect water conditions, starting about 7:20 o'clock, after one false start. Hearn, No. 5 in the Cornell shell caught a crab after the crew had gone about twenty strokes and Yale signaled for a new start, a gracious act of sportsmanship. On the next line up, Cornell again got the jump, and in Course No. 3, furthest out, jumped away at a high beat, closely followed by Princeton, in the inside course and Yale, in No. 2. For the first few hundred yards Cornell and Princeton fought for leadership, each hitting up from 36 to 38. Yale soon dropped to a 31-32 and kept the beat there for a mile or more.

Approaching the half-mile point Cornell moved out ahead until the Red and White shell had about a length to the good. The crew, however, kept on rowing at a high beat. Its oarsmanship was none too clean and a good deal of power was consumed in the unsuccessful effort to row the others down in the first mile. As it turned out these tactics proved costly. Princeton, true, was soon out of the race, but Yale hung on, and storing up reserve power, bided her time. At about the mile, Stroke Lindley began to put on more power and raise the beat. For a quarter mile or more the race was a bitter struggle, the crews rowing on practically even terms. Cornell fought gamely to meet the Yale challenge, but lacked the reserve strength and a third of a mile from the finish Yale shot well out ahead and soon had open water. Relentlessly applying more and more power Yale drove down the finish lane until at the line two good boat lengths separated her crew from Cornell, which in turn had a big lead over Princeton. Yale had outrowed and outgeneraled Cornell in as pretty a race as has been seen here in years.

Summed up, Yale had power, form, and excellent racing judgment; Cornell must have had about the same power, but blade work and form were not up to standard and racing judgement seemed to be faulty. The Yale crew played the role many Cornell crews have played in the past, employing a slower stroke, getting longer run on the boat, more reach, and a sharper leg drive.

As one old-timer put it, "Ed Leader has turned out a mighty good Cornell crew."

It was apparent that the varsity is not yet an average Cornell crew. A good deal of hard work lies ahead, but once weather conditions become normal, development should be rapid.

In the freshman race the Cornell yearlings won a decisive victory, giving a satisfactory exhibition of watermanship and judgment, and defeating the Yale yearlings by a little more than two boatlengths. Princeton's freshman eight was the same distance back of the Blue.

Intercollege honors went to the crew of the College of Agriculture, which finished two lengths ahead of Chemistry, with M.E. about half a length behind the latter. The summary:

Varsity Race (2 miles) Yale, 10:48; Cornell, 10:56; Princeton, 11:18.

Freshman Race (2 miles) Cornell, 10:46; Yale, 10:53 4-5; Princeton, 11:02 2-5.

Intercollege Race (1 5-16 miles) Agriculture, 7:37; Chemistry, 7:44 1-5; Mechanical Engineering 7:47 2-5; Electrical Engineering; Civil Engineering.

In the freshman race the crews were called back after they had rowed a few strokes, Buckman No. 5 in the Cornell boat having jumped his slide. On the second start, Cornell, on the outside, got the jump, closely followed by Yale and Princeton. All three were hitting a high stroke. For a quarter of a mile Princeton and Cornell were on even terms, but the Red and White youngsters then began driving their shell ahead. Approaching the mile they had a length and Yale was about even with Princeton. The Tiger yearlings then began slipping astern, while Cornell kept on gaining on the Blue. They gradually increased the lead until they had better than two lengths at the finish. It was a workmanlike exhibition, and not unexpected; the yearlings had several times beaten the varsity in trial matches.

As usual, the intercollege race was hotly contested, a ding-dong fight, with all the crews well together until half the distance, the Henley course of a mile and five-sixteenths had been rowed. Agriculture then began to draw ahead and had two lengths at the finish over Chemistry, which beat out M.E.

In refreshing contrast to last year's experience, weather conditions were perfect. The lake was calm, and there was just a suggestion of a breeze from the west. The Lehigh Valleys' observation train was handled with characteristic smoothness, and the fifteen thousand who watched the races from bank, boat, and train enjoyed one of the finest regattas in years.

The crews left Wednesday night for Cambridge, where they will row Harvard on Saturday.

Defeat Syracuse

The lacrosse team came back with a bang last Thursday defeating Syracuse, twice champion of the Northern Division of the Intercollegiate League, by a score of 3 to 1 before a large gallery on Alumni Field. The team played one of the best games of lacrosse seen here in years. It played over its head.

The victory put Cornell back into the championship running, and by defeating Harvard Monday, 15 to 2, the team tied Syracuse for the championship.

Fighting spirit, skill, and fine lacrosse won for Cornell. They were opposing a team which had outclassed the league in stick work, and which on Thursday exhibited flashes of brilliance, but the Syracuse attack broke down before a superb defense.

Although Cornell forced the issue from the outset, there was no scoring until after about twelve minutes of play, when Bridgen accepted an accurate pass and tossed the ball into the net. Syracuse threatened to tie when French shot a goal, but the referee's whistle had blown for a penalty. Just before the half ended the Orange did tie the score, Bertenshaw making a pretty goal.

In the second half a brilliant coup, by Bridgen and Meyer, the latter making the score, put Cornell ahead and a little bit later Bridgen made another swift pass to Meyer, and the captain made a long throw into the net.

Baseball Team Beats Dartmouth

A ninth inning rally gave Cornell victory over Dartmouth in the Spring Day baseball game, by a score of 5 to 4, thus contributing materially toward the enjoyment of the day, and giving new courage to the team after a disastrous season to date. About seven thousand persons saw the game.

In Cornell's half of the ninth the score was tied, 4 to 4. With two out Frantz singled to left and scampered home on a smashing three-base hit by Capron to center field.

Henderson, who allowed Dartmouth but six hits all told, was in fine form except in the seventh inning, when the Green batters bunched three hits, bringing in two runs and tying the game. The south-paw tightened, however, and kept Dartmouth in check for the rest of the game. Captain Woodin played a fine game at second base, accepting seven chances cleanly, and making one double play unassisted.

Cornell broke the ice in the first inning, scoring two runs. Woodin walked, stole second, and came home on Bickley's single over second. The latter scored on Frantz's hit to right. In the fourth Telfer walked, went to second on Tone's single, and came home when the ball was fielded loosely.

Dartmouth came back in the fifth scoring two runs on errors. Heep was safe when Smythe let a high fly get away from him. Shapleigh's drive through third brought the Dartmouth catcher home. A wild throw to first by Bickley to catch Caseel allowed Shapleigh to score. Cornell made it 4 to 2 in her half of the inning, when Capron hit safely, stole second, and scored on Thurston's error. Dartmouth tied the score in the seventh on hits by Heep, Shapleigh, and Dagostino.

Barber, who started to pitch for Dartmouth, was replaced by Lyons in the fifth.

All members of the class in and near New York are invited to be present. A. Parry Keasbey of the Robert A. Keasbey Company, West and Bank Streets, New York, is chairman of the committee in charge.

THE '93 REUNION

Do you remember the story of how the crews started for Lake Minnetonka in the spring of '93? In order that nobody might be left behind, the oarsmen all stayed with Sandy Patten on the night before the early start was to be made. The room in which the captain was quartered was very small, and he stuck his feet out of the window. In the morning he found a rooster proudly reposing on his shins and regularly emitting its glad welcome to Aurora.

The writer does not vouch for the truth of this story, but wants to discuss it with you when you come back for the reunion. For the program of reunion events, see another column of this issue. Responses indicate that there will be a good crowd back. Wells Gilbert is coming from the Pacific Coast, and Kinney Hoxie and his wife will motor from Duluth.

This week you will receive another letter from the Committee. Please make your replies prompt and favorable.

OBITUARY

John L. Ludwig '88

John Laurence Ludwig died in New York City in March, 1923.

He was born in Richmond, Va., on August 9, 1861, and came to Cornell from the Virginia Polytechnic Institute in 1884, taking the optional course, and remaining one year. He was a member of Kappa Sigma.

George E. Parsons '96

Lieut. Col. George Edmund Parsons, prominent in military and architectural circles, died suddenly on May 8 at his home, 62 Brooksdale Road, Brighton, Mass., following a two-weeks' illness.

He was born in Northampton, Mass., on August 8, 1874, and came to Cornell in 1892, receiving the degree of B. S. in Arch. in 1896. He was a member of the C.U.C.A. the Architectural Club, the Glee Club, and the Lotus Club, having served as vice-president of the latter.

On March 11, 1904 he enlisted in Company D, First Corps of Cadets, First Regiment of Massachusetts Engineers. In August, 1917, he became captain and supply officer of that regiment, which later became the 101st Engineers, and with it he went to France. He was discharged at Camp Devens, Mass., on June 6, 1919, and on May 31, 1922, he was made lieutenant colonel of the 211th Machine Gun Battalion, Anti-Aircraft Artillery, in the formation of which he had been very active.

At the time of his death Col. Parsons was a member of the firm of Ritchie, Parsons, and Taylor, architects, with offices at 15 Ashburton Place, Boston. He was a member of the Boston Architectural Club, the Military Order of the World War, the American Legion, the Military Order of Foreign Wars of the United States, and the Cornell Club of New England, of which he had once been treasurer.

A military funeral was held in Trinity Church, Boston, on May 11.

Surviving him are his widow and a daughter, Eleanor.

William A. Fay '15

William Aloysius Fay died at the Lenox Hill Hospital, New York, on April 24, of carcinoma of the liver and stomach. Funeral services were held at the family home, 112 St. James Place, Brooklyn on April 26.

Fay was born on June 21, 1894, and prepared for college at the Boys' High School, Brooklyn, entering Cornell in 1911 and receiving the degree of A. B. in 1915. He was a member of Delta Chi and Phi Delta Kappa.

Soon after leaving college he took a position in the foreign sales department of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey in Newark. Then he entered the service, and after thirteen months' active service with the Medical Department, he received his discharge on August 11, 1919, with the rank of sergeant, first class. He returned his position with the Standard Oil Company, and remained in the service of that company until his death.

Surviving him are his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth C. Fay, and a sister, Miss Elizabeth M. Fay.

Juanita Bates '17

Miss Juanita Bates was killed on May 14 in the wreck of a passenger airplane on the Paris-London route near the village of Monsures, France. Five other persons, one of whom was an American, were also victims of the disaster.

Miss Bates was born on December 26, 1894, the only daughter of the late Frederick E. Bates and Mrs. Bates of Ithaca. She was educated in the schools of Ithaca, and entered the University in 1913, receiving the degree of A. B. in 1917. She was a member of Delta Delta Delta, Alpha Tau Alpha, and the Dramatic Club, of which she was vice-president in her senior year, and had served as Student Government representative. She was particularly interested in dramatics, and had given much time to entertainments of various kinds given for charity. While in the University she was much interested in the cause of suffrage, and an article on the subject written by her appears in the April, 1918, issue of The Cornell Review. During the war she served for several months in helping to make out questionnaires for eligible service men, and she was instrumental in organizing the Women's Motor Corps as a part of the Home Defense Corps in Ithaca; she was a sergeant in that organization.

Among Miss Bates's many interests were the Women's Community Building, the City Hospital, the Girl Scouts, and all sorts of public service. She was president of the Young Women's Hospital Aid, and had served on the Charity Ball committee for many years. She was captain of Troop 1 of the Girl Scouts for about two years, and was a member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Young Women's Foreign Missionary Society, and a teacher in the primary department of the Sunday School.

For two years, Miss Bates was an assistant in the administrative office of the Summer Session. Since the death of her father on December 25, 1921, she had assisted her mother in the management of the farms which he owned, and in other business affairs. She gave up her position last September, and on January 9 she sailed with the Raymond Whitcomb Company for a cruise around the world. Miss Julia Melotte '92 of Ithaca was one of the hostesses on the boat and two other Ithacans joined the party at San Francisco. The official tour broke up on May 5, but the passengers had the option of remaining longer on the Continent and returning by any one of a number of boats. Miss Bates had planned to sail for home on May 16.

She had been most enthusiastic concerning her first airplane ride. The machine, which was one of the huge twin-six engine type with seats for twelve passengers, left Lebourget for the Paris airport shortly after noon on May 14. Within a few miles of Amiens it was noticed that the engines were misfiring badly, and in a few seconds fire was seen to break out aboard the plane and it crashed to earth in a mass of flames, one of the wings becoming detached and throwing the plane completely off its balance.

She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Juanita B. Bates, and a brother, Abraham.

EDGAR GETS THE D.S.M.

In recognition of his "exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services as officer in charge of the construction division, Signal Corps, Aviation Section," the War Department has conferred upon Brigadier General C. Goodloe Edgar '97 the Distinguished Service Medal. The citation accompanying the award reads:

"Clinton G. Edgar, Brigadier General, Officers' Reserve Corps, then Colonel, Signal Corps, United States Army. For exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services as officer in charge of the construction division, Signal Corps, Aviation Section.

"Being a trained engineer with exceptional capacity for organization and execution, he was placed in charge of the construction division, Signal Corps, and had complete charge and responsibility for all buildings constructed by the Air Service, which consisted of twenty-seven aviation fields, nine depots, and two experimental stations, as well as many minor activities.

"He originated and installed the system of securing lands for all aviation fields, securing grants and gifts of all facilities, including water and electric lights. He was responsible for the conception, design, and production of the all-steel demountable standard hanger adopted by the Air Service.

"By his untiring energy, sound judgment, and large grasp of construction problems, he has rendered service of inestimable value to the Government in a position of great responsibility."

General Edgar received the degree of B. S. in 1897, and is a member of Kappa Alpha. He offered his services at the beginning of the war, and on May 1, 1917, he was appointed officer in charge of the Construction Division. In this capacity he constructed two training fields, three aviator repair depots, six aviation supply depots, two balloon schools, three acceptance parks, and other stations involving an expenditure of over $75,000,000. In addition to the work performed under his direction, his division supervised traffic and transportation operations of the Air Service, handling more than 72,000 carloads of freight. Construction and labor squadrons and companies with a total personnel of 12,416 enlisted men and 274 officers were organized under his

SPORT STUFF

It seems to be the general feeling that the Spring Day of 1923 rather touched the high point in Spring Days. There were a great many well bred, well behaved sportsmen here. The undergraduates shaped up splendidly. The weather was perfect. The place never looked better and the general atmosphere was one of good nature and spontaneous gaiety.

Of course John Doe '16 was present parading his usual disgusting souse. Willie and Freddy of the Sophomore Class again had to wobble around and be sick for the edification of the multitude. Once more those sterling sportsmen, Pinky '10 and Ed '15 had to have money and try to insult guests into bets they were not interested in. However, this unlovely fringe was relatively inconspicuous this year and got mighty little encouragement from the crowd. The little false notes were effectually drowned in the general harmony.

Spring Day is a unique and delightful Cornell institution. Two years ago it looked as if it had outlived its usefulness. The experience of the last two years, however, shows that it can be straightened out and ought to survive. R. B.

direction. Supply depots were operated, schools for the training of officers were established, real estate was purchased and leased, and innovations and improvements, both mechanical and supervisory, were introduced and developed.

In May, 1921, he was cited for his services during the war when he was in charge of the distribution of supplies to the Air Service of the Allies, and was decorated as a Commander of the Order of the Crown of Italy.

He is president of W. H. Edgar and Son, the Edgar Sugar House, Inc., and the Continental Sugar Company, and a director of the First National Bank of Detroit. His business address is 866 Iroquois Avenue.

MEDICS HOLD GET-TOGETHER

On Saturday, May 12, the students and Faculty of the Medical College in New York celebrated their annual Get-Together Day, a custom believed to be unique among medical institutions.

The afternoon was occupied with races, ball games, and other field events on the estate of Felix Warburg, at White Plains. A ball game between teams composed of Faculty members and a team composed of students resulted in a score 47-46 in favor of the Faculty.

In the evening the Faculty and other guests were entertained at the College building by a vaudeville show put on by members of the various classes. Between the acts a student orchestra furnished the music. The entertainment was followed by refreshments and dancing in the Cornell Clinic.

Arrangements were in the hands of a student committee, the executive officers of which were the following seniors: Jerome Glaser, chairman; Louis L. Perkel, entertainment; Margaret S. Witter, finance; Lionel S. Auster, field events; and Charles S. Byron, publicity.

EXCAVATIONS have begun for Lyon Hall, the newest dormitory unit.

ITHACA, N. Y., MAY 24, 1923

MUCH loose conversation and several strong, or at least vigorous, editorials have made their appearance on the Campus, inspired by the announcement of the resignation of several members of the teaching staff. In the expression of regret over the departure of popular figures from the Faculty everyone can heartily concur. It is a pity that friends must leave; that they can find some other place that is able to offer them attractions in the way of prestige, facilities, or surroundings that Cornell can not. Fortunately they will no longer be leaving primarily because Cornell can not pay them as much as some other college, thanks to the increasing generosity of the alumni and the farsighted policy of the president in relying on its continuation.

There is one distinct gain in this agitation. If the students will write, talk, and generate heat about the loss of Faculty members, they may eventually come to discussion and editorials about the teachings of the Faculty. They may be getting into a state of mind where a little leadership can bring them to a point of view where intellectual discussion will be more widespread than it has been in many years. This in itself will have a reaction on the teaching staff that may serve to attract, or retain, the services of good men who otherwise find the dead load of intellectual inertia too much for them to budge. The student agitation will then have served its University nobly.

The danger of loose arguments on the decline of the Cornell Faculty should be apparent. Reputations depend to a considerable extent on the verbal and written expression of the well-wishers. A constant effort to improve a condition implies that the condition exists and needs improvement. The constant reiteration of the decline of Cornell's Faculty, therefore, will eventually tend to produce the reputation of having a weak Faculty.

In fairness to the University a comparison of Faculties should be based on some sound standard. To state that the present Faculty is not what it used to be when Hern W. Jones, Richard J. Brown, Tom G. Smith, and so on, were teaching, is an injustice to the University if Messrs. Jones, Brown, and Smith were never on the Faculty at the same time. It is akin to deploring the decline of the Federal Government because Washington and Lincoln, the standard high lights in our political history, are no longer with us.

We offer as a suggestion that anyone who wishes to evaluate the present Cornell Faculty compare the list in the University Register of some given year in the alleged hey-day of our history with the current list. We believe that the present Faculty can afford to await the results of the test with comparative equanimity.

To compare the teaching staff of today with the choice of the names of the past fifty years is an injustice committed through ignorance. No alumnus, nor student, would permit himself such latitude in any matter pertaining to student life and activities, or in any other field in which he has a speaking acquaintance. Before being a party to spreading an idea that might injure the fundamental reputation of Cornell University one owes it to himself and the University to gather with the greatest deliberation every fact bearing on the question. If our present performance is not up to the standard of our meritorious past, as is intimated, the time is ripe for someone to present an orderly indictment of the present.

SECTION 18. Duties of the Secretary. The secretary shall give notice of all meetings and conventions of the corporation and of all meetings of the board of directors. He shall conduct the general correspondence and keep the records and papers of the corporation. He shall notify directors, officers, and committeemen of their election or appointment. He shall keep a list of the clubs entitled to representation by delegates as herein provided, together with the delegates, alternates, and substitutes from time to time appointed by them. He shall act as secretary of the board of directors and of all meetings and conventions of the corporation, and shall keep accurate minutes of such meetings and conventions, including a record of all votes, resolutions, and other proceedings of the same. He shall prepare and, after approval by the board of directors, present to the Annual Convention of the corporation the annual written report of the board, and shall furnish a copy to any member of the corporation upon request. He shall perform such other duties as may pertain to his office or may be required by the president. He shall have charge of the nominations for district directors and present the list of such nominations to the Annual Convention.

SECTION 19. Duties of the Treasurer. The treasurer shall have charge of the finances of the corporation under the direction of the board of directors, and shall cause accurate accounts to be kept in books of the corporation of all receipts and disbursements and shall make reports thereof at the Annual Convention of the corporation and at the annual and regular meetings of the board of directors.

ARTICLE V

Committees

SECTION 20. Committee on Elections. A committee on elections consisting of three members, no more than one of whom may be a director, shall be appointed annually by the president. This committee shall conduct the elections, and canvass the vote for alumni trustees.

SECTION 21. Auditing Committee. The directors shall appoint an auditing committee of three members, one from the board to be chairman, and the others not to be directors. This committee shall audit the treasurer's accounts and report its audit at the Annual Convention.

ARTICLE VI

Representation of Clubs

SECTION 22. Delegates from Clubs. Any club may elect or appoint one or more delegates who must be members of said club and residents of such district to represent it at any meeting or convention of the corporation,—provided, however, that no such club shall be authorized to elect or appoint a delegate until the expiration of 30 days after it has filed with the secretary of this corporation a copy of its constitution and by-laws and a copy of its roll of membership—and, provided further that college fraternities, clubs, and associations (other than local alumni clubs), are not intended to be included within the provisions of this section. And provided further that no club shall be entitled to delegates on a basis of membership greater than that on which the club has paid its current assessments to the corporation. The delegate or delegates for each such club shall at all meetings of the corporation be entitled to cast one vote for each five members of said club in good standing. The corporation by its members and delegates present at any meeting shall be the sole judge of the qualification of delegates and representatives and its decision by a majority of votes shall be final.

SECTION 23. Continuance of Delegation. A delegate once elected or appointed shall continue to serve until his successor shall be elected or appointed or until he is otherwise disqualified.

SECTION 24. Alternates and Substitutes. Alternates or substitutes may be elected or appointed by clubs to serve in case the regular delegates be not present, who must be members of the club appointing them, and residents of its district.

SECTION 25. Voting by Members and Delegates. The delegates representing any club shall be entitled as such delegates to one vote for each five members of said club in good standing on any question coming to a vote at a meeting of the corporation except on the election of alumni trustees. Each member not a member of a club represented at any meeting shall be entitled to one vote at such meeting, which vote must be cast in person and not by proxy. The fact that a club is represented at any meeting by its duly accredited delegate or delegates shall not deprive a member of that club the privileges of the floor or the right to take part in discussion.

ARTICLE VII Budget and Dues

SECTION 26. Budget. The treasurer shall present to the board of directors at their meeting prior to the Convention, or, in case the Convention is not held before June of any year, at the June meeting of the board, a tentative budget of the corporation for the ensuing fiscal year. The board shall adopt a final budget, which may include an item covering any deficit of a previous year, and assess the constituent clubs for such ensuing year the amounts necessary to meet such budget.

SECTION 27. Quorum for Adopting Budget. A quorum of the board shall be necessary at any meeting which adopts a budget or assesses the constituent clubs, and an affirmative vote of two-thirds of those present shall be necessary for such action.

SECTION 28. Assessments against Clubs. The assessment against each constituent club shall be determined by the board of directors at a per capita amount not exceeding one dollar in respect of its membership as certified to the secretary by its secretary, or, if not so certified, then as determined by the board from the best available information. The per capita amount shall be the same for all constituent clubs, except that the board may vary it as to those located outside of the United States. No constituent club maintaining a club house shall be assessed in respect of non-resident members.

SECTION 29. Individual dues. Each alumnus not a member of any constituent club by which current assessment for him has been paid, who attends the Annual Convention or the annual meeting shall pay such sum not exceeding one dollar as shall be fixed and determined by the board of directors.

ARTICLE VIII Meetings of the Corporation

SECTION 30. Regular Meetings. The corporation shall hold two regular meetings in each year, namely,

A. The Annual Convention of the corporation shall be held in the fall of each year at such time and place as shall be fixed by the preceding convention or by the board of directors for the purpose of, (1) electing district directors and, in the contingency herein provided for, a director-at-large; (2) for considering and taking action upon such subjects as the directors may deem wise to present to the convention; (3) for receiving and acting upon the reports of the directors and the report of the retiring alumni trustees; (4) for carrying out such other program of social activities as the directors may present; (5) for the transaction of such other business as may be brought before the meeting.

B. The annual June meeting to be held in Ithaca at such time and place as the directors may fix, for the purpose of (1) canvassing the vote for alumni trustees; (2) considering and acting upon such subjects as the directors may present; (3) the carrying out of such social programs as the directors may arrange; and (4) the transaction of such other business as may be brought before the meeting.

SECTION 31. Special Meetings. Special meetings of the corporation may be held at any time on the call of the majority of the directors fixing the time and place of such a meeting.

SECTION 32. Notice of Meetings. Notice of the Annual Convention and the annual June meeting shall be given by mail at least 60 days in advance of the day fixed for such meetings by the secretary to each delegate and to the secretaries of clubs entitled to delegates under the provision of these by-laws, which notice shall contain also a request for the suggestion on the part of delegates and clubs for subjects to be proposed and discussed at such meetings. Notice for such convention and annual June meeting shall be published in the CORNELL ALUMNI NEWS together with a statement of some of the subjects which will be discussed at such meeting at least twice before the date of such meeting.

Notice of any special meeting stating briefly the object thereof shall be mailed at least 20 days in advance to each delegate and to the secretary of each club entitled to representation and published at least twice before such meeting in the ALUMNI NEWS.

ARTICLE IX Alumni Trustees

SECTION 33. Reports by Alumni Trustees. Each trustee representing the alumni shall make a written report to this corporation at the end of his term of office. The retiring trustees may make either a joint or a separate report.

ARTICLE X Order of Business

SECTION 34. Order of Business. The order of business at the annual June meeting shall be arranged by the president subject to the approval of the directors. The order of business at the Annual Convention shall be arranged by the president subject to the approval of his directors in co-operation with the officers or authorized committees of the local club at which the convention is to be held.

ARTICLE XI Quorum and Rules of Order

SECTION 25. Quorums at Meetings of the Corporation. One hundred votes shall constitute a quorum at any meeting of the corporation, except the Annual Convention.

SECTION 36. Quorums at Convention. Two hundred votes shall constitute a quorum at any convention.

SECTION 37. Rules of Order. Roberts' Rules of Order shall be the parliamentary authority at all meetings or conventions of the corporation.

ARTICLE XII Amendments

SECTION 38. Amendments to the By-Laws. These by-laws may be amended, altered or repealed at any annual or special meeting of the corporation or at any convention, provided that notice of the intended amendment shall have been placed in the CORNELL ALUMNI NEWS once a week for two successive weeks prior to the date of such meeting or convention, and if the amendment be at a special meeting or at a convention, it must also be specified in the call and notice thereof.

And notice is also given that at said meeting a resolution will be presented authorizing the board of directors to change the name of the corporation from "Associate Alumni of Cornell University" to "Cornell Alumni Corporation."

ASSOCIATE ALUMNI NOMINATIONS

The nominating committee, through its chairman, Karl W. Gass '12 of Pittsburgh, has presented the nominations given below for consideration at the annual meeting of the Associate Alumni in Ithaca on June 16. Because of the proposed reorganization of the association at the Buffalo Convention in October, which involves the election of the directors for separate election districts it has been considered advisable to renominate all officers whose terms expire this June rather than to elect new incumbents for a term that is merely nominal.

The nominations of the committee are therefore as follow:

For president, Thomas Fleming, Jr., '05, Pittsburgh, Pa.; vice-presidents, Dr. Mary Crawford '04, New York, N. Y., and W. J. Weldgen '05, Rochester, N. Y.; treasurer, W. W. Macon '98, New York, N. Y.; secretary, F. M. Coffin '12, Ithaca, N. Y.; directors (terms ending in 1926), Miss Eleanor Gleason '03, Rochester, N. Y., J. P. Harris '01, Cleveland, Ohio, Barrett Smith '04, Boston, Mass., Winthrop Taylor '07, New York, N. Y., and Ezra B. Whitman '01, Baltimore, Md.; members of the nominating committee (terms ending in 1926), C. W. Fulton '09, Seneca Falls, N. Y., K. W. Gass '12, Pittsburgh, Pa., and C. A. Taussig '02, Searsdale, N. Y.

LITERARY REVIEW

The Friendly Cow

The Cow. By Jared van Wagenen, Jr., '91. New York. Macmillan. 1923. 19.3 cm., pp. x, 153. Price, $1.50. Illustrated.

The third number of the Open Country Books is a worthy monograph, free from pedantry on the one hand and the ultra-practical on the other. When van Wagenen talks of cows he should know whereof he speaks. He lives on a dairy farm which his family began running almost a century and a quarter ago. With a university training in agriculture and all the world before him where to choose, he selected to carry on the family tradition and continue the operations of a dairy on a hill farm. The call of the home group may have been strong, but there was evidently a certain philosophy which confirmed him in his choice. The business is stable and secure, it enriches rather than impoverishes the soil, it makes for agricultural and community stability, it demands high intelligence, constant alertness, and a certain humanitarian attitude.

The book is suggestive of many points of view. One of these is the antiquarian. The cattle upon a thousand hills may have included sheep and goats; but in a very early period the wild cow and bull were drafted into the service of man. Yet, ancient as that time was, the veneer of civilization is no thicker on the young cow or heifer than upon man, and they quickly revert to the wild state.

The life history of the cow is a valuable study in natural history. "She is an ancient of the earth, and her career is linked with the forgotten men of the Old Stone Age who pictured her in rude outlines scratched upon the walls of their cavern homes. Her minor characteristics, her size, color, conformation and function have been modified almost beyond belief. Her very instincts no longer profit her, yet she still responds and acts on the suggestions of dim far-off hereditary memories."

Hundreds of Miles of Welded Pipe Line

A striking example of the tremendous growth of the oxy-acetylene process in all phases of industry is the adoption of the gas welded joint in pipe lines by many of the large natural gas and oil companies. Hundreds of miles of welded pipe line are used daily with complete satisfaction.

Linde Service Engineers working with Linde users have played an important part in establishing standard practices for welding joints on all kinds of piping. The result of this practical experience in the development of gas welded pipe joints is placed within convenient reach of every Linde user through Linde Service.

Linde Service goes beyond the mere supplying of its products through its thirty-one producing plants and fifty-eight warehouses. It includes a carefully planned method of bringing engineering advice and assistance into close touch in the field with the individual user's problems and needs. Linde offers its patrons every facility and service in the use of Linde Products.

This policy and the growing demand for Linde products and service require the highest type of personnel in manufacture, sales, engineering, research and other activities, and offer more than the usual opportunities to young men who are seeking a field where ability and hard work will bring rewards.

*Weird sounds were wakened by the breeze
When men wore whiskers such as these.*

In grandfather's halcyon days it was customary for men to have their countenances so cluttered with umbrageous scenery that it was impossible frequently to tell whether an adult male member of the genus homo possessed a face, or had as a substitute a mere framework upon which to hang ragged bunches of alfalfa.

It would be unfair, however, to assume that those who constituted the flower of manhood 40 years ago were either deficient in those attributes which constitute the physiognomy, or that they were burdened by grotesque ideas concerning masculine pulchritude.

Their practice of shunning the razor or of shaving only in spots was based upon solid logic.

They were unable to get shaving soap or shaving cream that would make such lather as is made by Colgate's Rapid-Shave Cream.

This wonderful new cream makes a moist, copious lather that softens each hair of the beard at the base, where the razor's work is done.

Colgate's Rapid-Shave Cream makes shaving easier; it needs no mussy rubbing in with the fingers; it leaves the face feeling like velvet; it takes the smart out of shaving, and puts it in your appearance.

Cut out and mail this paragraph, with your name and address, and we will send you a free trial tube containing enough cream for 12 easier shaves than you can have with anything else that makes lather.
