THE stone age at Cornell continues, with no sign of abatement, as the walls of the Union rise, as roads are changed and relocated, and as plans for new structures are perfected. One of the most important structural improvements is the building of the road which circles the athletic fields along the north bank of Cascadilla Creek. When it is completed, a cement highway will replace a miry road which has been an eyesore and a nuisance. The improvement includes a new bridge over Cascadilla near East Ithaca.

CAMPAIGN arguments published in favor of Governor Smith at Ithaca called attention to the Governor's record favoring appropriations for, and the development of, the College of Agriculture.

MILDRED WILLIAMS, a freshman from Corning, is reported to have the record of winning every scholarship honor offered to students of New York State schools. She completed the list by winning the McGraw Scholarship.

WILLIAM A. CASTLE, lieutenant-colonel of the Tenth Infantry at Fort Hayes, Ohio, has been assigned to duty at Cornell as assistant professor of military science and tactics.

SIGMA DELTA CHI has invited the Eastern Interscholastic Publishers' Association, made up of editors and managers of high school papers, to meet at Cornell in the fourth annual affair of the sort which has been managed by this fraternity. The date is November 22, and the program will include an address by Harry G. Stutz '07, editor of The Ithaca Journal-News.

ELECTION RETURNS were received in the Drill Hall on Tuesday evening, with the Band playing during the interims. A small fee was charged for the benefit of the Band.

THE WINTER COURSES of the College of Agriculture show a distinct falling off in number of students this year. Registration began on November 6.

THE THUMBSTACK CLUB exhibit of sketches made by students and members of the Faculty during the summer has been postponed because the galleries in White Hall have been crowded with drawings made by the students of architecture for various design problems. The exhibit is to be held during the coming week.

IN THE RATING of the fraternities recently published from the office of the Registrar, only four were below seventy per cent, the low figure for the C grade.

BOXING instruction will be given to one hundred men in the University. According to a statement by Coach Fallon, this is less than half the number that were out for the sport last year. Possibly the reduced registration may be the result of the Faculty's refusal to give recognition to boxing as an intercollegiate sport.

CIVIL ENGINEERING won the University championship in the Intercollege Soccer League, with Agriculture, Electrical Engineering, and Mechanical Engineering tied for second place.

CORNELL has a place in the Intercollegiate Fencing League, which includes two groups. The first is made up of Columbia, Cornell, Hamilton, the Navy, and Pennsylvania. The second includes the Army, Dartmouth, Harvard, and Yale, with the possibility that Princeton and Syracuse may also be represented.

LEATHER BELTS, for pulleys—not trousers—should be put on the right way. Run them with the hair side inside, run them with the fur side inside, run them with the grain side inside, for the grain side is the fur side; run them with the flesh side outside. That is the burden of the report made to the Leather Belting Exchange as the result of tests made at Cornell.

THE MUSICAL CLUBS take a Southern trip this year, and will appear during the Christmas holidays in cities as far south as Alabama and Georgia. The itinerary as announced is as follows: December 26, Baltimore; December 27, Wilmington; December 29, Birmingham; December 30, Atlanta; December 31, Greenville. On the way back stops will be made at Washington, Trenton, and New York.

POLO has seventy men enrolled for practice.

MISS ALICE M. TITCHENER, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Edward B. Titchener, and Raymond R. Matchlett '23 of New York were married on November 1 at the home of the bride by the Rev. Percival L. Clark '20. The bride is a graduate of Wells and M.A. of Wisconsin, class of 1924. Matchlett is with the firm of E. H. Matchlett & Son of New York.

THE HON. SILAS STRAWN, of Chicago, speaking before the Law Association on November 1, vigorously defended the administration of the courts from the assaults of the radicals. "Demagogues and agitators we shall always have with us. That their specious arguments shall not attain momentum; that the foundations of our government shall stand unshaken by their assaults; that the people of the United States shall not become a mere aggregation of groups or individuals each going his own way and each distrustful of his neighbor, but that we shall remain a united nation, continuing to enjoy an abundance of prosperity and happiness in the future, as we have in the past, is the task for the accomplishment of which all loyal citizens, especially the lawyers, will enthusiastically enlist."

THE SAVAGE CLUB has elected the following officers for the year: president, William F. Slater '25 of Memphis, Tenn.; secretary, James E. Brown '26 of Atlanta, Georgia; treasurer, George B. Howell '17 of Ithaca; steward, Francis P. Roberts '27 of Washington, D. C.

THE SAGE CHAPEL Preacher for November 16 will be Dr. John R. Mott '88, chairman of the World Student Christian Federation, of New York.

KAPPA BETA PI, professional legal sorority, which has been inactive here for two years, has been revived and has initiated four students. It was founded at the Kent College of Law in Chicago in 1908.

THE FOLLOWING five men have been chosen by ballot to serve on the Arts Honor Committee: George E. Bliss '25 of Binghamton, Ralph L. Chappell '25 of Kalamazoo, Michigan, Edward M. Bull '26 of Monroe, N. Y., Charles B. Howland '26 of Philadelphia, Pa., and Howard B. Ware '27 of Montclair, N. J.

ROD AND BOB, civil engineering honorary society, has initiated the following: Walter J. Purcell '26 of Kingston, N. Y., Paul A. Borglum '26 of Norwalk, Conn., Herbert K. Browning '26 of Pittsburgh, James H. Coleman '26 of Greenwood, South Carolina, and William M. Stallman '26, of East Orange, N. J.

LECTURES for the week include "The Transmission of Photographs Over Telephone Wires," illustrated, by Dr. Herbert E. Ives, of the Western Electric Company, under the auspices of Sigma Xi, on November 10; "The Dalmatian Coast, Venice to Corfu" by Professor Eugene P. Andrews '95, the second of his series of popular illustrated talks on "A Journey from Venice to Crete," on November 13; and "Aus meiner deutschen Schulzeit: Heiteres und Ernstes" by Professor Albert W. Boesche before the Deutscher Verein on November 13.

THOMAS G. RICKERT '25 of Niagara Falls has been elected leader of the Banjo and Mandolin Clubs and John S. Livermore '26 of Gowanda, N. Y., has been chosen assistant leader.

THE MENORAH Society on November 9 heard Mrs. I. L. Lindheim of New York on the subject "Why Remain Jews?"

Cornellian Council Meets

Reports Show Substantial Gains in Alumni Fund for Past Year

The semi-annual meeting of the Cornellian Council was held in Ithaca on November 1. The Executive Committee reported that more than $15,000 had been received in new subscriptions to the Alumni Fund since July 1, the beginning of the present fiscal year. Practically all of these subscriptions have been received on an annual basis, and represent an actual increase in the amount of money to be expected this year.

The Council has received to date nearly $36,000 in cash, which is about $7,000 more than was received for the corresponding period last year. With the enlargement of the field staff of the Council and with a greatly increased activity on the part of the alumni clubs in their relation to the work of the Council, it is hoped that the Alumni Fund may reach $250,000 annually by June 30, 1925.

In order further to stimulate giving on the part of the alumni, the list of actual contributors to the Alumni Fund for the year 1923-24 will be published as a supplement to the December issue of the Cornellian Council Bulletin. This list will contain merely the names of the subscribers without any mention of the amounts contributed in each case. Similar lists are published by the Alumni Fund committees in other universities.

It was announced at this meeting that Edwin N. Sanderson, the 1911 class representative on the Council, had agreed to serve as chairman of a committee to conduct a campaign for the Alumni Fund among the Cornellians resident in foreign countries.

Charles Gardiner Bullis '08 of Los Angeles and Dr. Walter H. McNeill '10 of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., were elected at-large members of the Council.

The resignation of Weyland Pfeiffer, the 1916 class representative on the Council, was accepted and Richard J. Foster, Jr., '16 was elected to take his place.

President Farrand attended this meeting of the Council for a short time and congratulated the members heartily on the work this organization is doing. He explained how much the University was depending upon the alumni of Cornell through the organization of the Council to provide funds with which to meet Cornell's most urgent needs.

NATHAN KATZ '25 of Birmingham, Alabama, Ross E. Scanlan '25 of Buffalo, and D. W. Falconer '26 have been chosen to represent Cornell in the debate with McGill on November 22.

PENTHAMA will be the name of the women's honorary athletic society, made up of women who have earned at least four hundred points toward their letter. The badge will be a gold key.

SPORT STUFF

Few places excel Ithaca as a sporting center. Right on top of a Saturday replete with a varsity football match, a freshman ditto, an interscholastic cross country run, varsity and freshman soccer games, and a polo match, the Cayuga Hunt held its annual drag race.

Football games draw the crowds, but the drag race has the class. Every sincere fox hunter in Tompkins, Schuyler, Tioga, and Cortland Counties had at least one hound entered in the race and the whole country-side followed. Some rode horses, some drove throughbred hunting Fords, and still others rode horses part of the way and walked the rest. At a late hour in the evening they were still coming in—hounds that had fallen from virtue and had taken off after a rabbit midway, sore-footed ex-horsemen and damaged Ford owners.

Rosie, a lady hound owned by Mr. Wirt Dates of Ludlowville, took first place while Frank Blanchard of Cortland won second money with an earnest looking pup named Sam. Lou Smith acted both as starter and judge.

IN THE STATE LEGISLATURE

In a recent election the following alumni were elected to the New York Legislature. To the Senate: Ernest E. Cole, LL.B. '95, Corning; James Truman, Ph. B. '96, LL. B. '98, Owego; Henry D. Williams, LL. B. '14, Utica. To the Assembly: Simon L. Adler, B. L. '89, Rochester; James R. Robinson, LL. B. '10, Ithaca; Nelson W. Cheyney, A. B. '99, Eden; Adler has for a number of years been the Republican leader in the Assembly.

NEW REQUIREMENTS IN ARTS

At the last meeting of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences on November 4, the following resolutions dealing with the undergraduate scholarship requirements were adopted and will be put into effect next year:

First, that mathematics be taken from its present place in Group IV of the seven groups of prescribed studies, and be placed in a new group, an eighth group, to consist solely of mathematics; and that the requirements for graduation be so changed as to read that six hours in each of seven of the proposed eight groups must be completed before a student shall be recommended for graduation, provided however, that the completion of six hours in the first two groups and eighteen hours selected from the remaining six groups shall be needed to satisfy the underclass requirements.

Second, that the subject of Astronomy be included in Group IV of the group of prescribed studies on the condition that the present restrictions in that subject be retained.

The Landscape Department

Develops Against Difficulties in its Twenty Years of Life

About 1900 there were a number of students in the College of Agriculture, working under the inspiration of Dr. L. H. Bailey, some of whose interests were specific, others, and perhaps more, were interested generally and broadly in horticulture and similar things pertaining to country life. These men, with Dr. Bailey, Professor Craig, and the gardeners, Mr. Shore and Mr. Hunn, did considerable work of an informal nature centering about what was then called "The Lazy Club," a small building attached to the oldest greenhouses and next to which there were some outdoor gardens. Bryant Fleming '01 was one of this group. His course of study was outlined with some freedom, and courses of study in the College of Agriculture and in other colleges of the University were pursued with a view to obtaining some technical preparation for the practice of landscape architecture. In 1903-4 the announcement was made of a group of courses for juniors and seniors intending to practice gardening or even landscape architecture.

"OUTDOOR ART GROUP. This group is intended to afford a full course for the junior and senior years. It is to comprise special instruction in landscape art, aiming to train students for the profession of landscape gardening or landscape architecture in its broadest sense. The course will be reinforced by the necessary corollary subjects, as soil studies, horticulture, tree-growing, surveying, topography and charting, road making, architecture applications of sanitary engineering."

In the Register of 1904-5 a list of courses is given. Before this time Mr. Fleming had left the University, had several years of an apprenticeship with Warren H. Manning, of Boston, and returning was engaged by the College as a part-time professor in connection with this series of courses. The instruction given and the attitude toward it up to this time, had, in the main, emphasized horticulture and the natural sciences. Beginning with 1904 the list of courses, of a technical nature and pertaining directly to landscape architecture, included theory, design—in both elementary and advanced courses, and without the College of Agriculture,—elementary architectural design, surveying, courses in drawing, etc. Hence it is important to note that beginning with 1904 it was recognized that horticulture and the practice of gardening were recognized as but a part of a technical training, and instruction in design was essential.

In 1906 the courses were made to constitute a department, and the name was changed to Rural Art. From 1905 to 1910 natural science courses were not increased but the selection of them was bettered, and the Department added a course in the history of landscape design and the courses in engineering and architecture. In these years also instructors were added to the staff on half or full time, Fleming acting as head of the Department.

In 1910 an instructor in design, Professor Eugene D. Montillon, was added to the staff and at this time there was a full time instructor in plant materials. In 1911, Professor E. Gorton Davis and in 1912 Professor Ralph W. Curtis '01 were added as full-time professors. In 1912 the Trustees established the degree of Master of Landscape Design, which was to be given upon the completion of a satisfactory fifth year and following the four-year schedule. The degree was changed by the Trustees, in 1923, to Master of Landscape Architecture.

Scheduling Found Difficult

In the efforts made to improve the teaching schedule and to raise the standards of teaching from 1911 until 1921, the greatest difficulty lay in the fact that the instruction was intended to prepare students for a profession which involved an art of design, or an applied art. However important natural science was in the technical preparation of a landscape architect, it was but a part of a many-sided technical preparation, including engineering, building construction, Arts and Sciences cultural courses, and the like. Natural science courses and science in general, so important to an agriculturist, could not monopolize the student's schedule without being detrimental to other technical preparation and without lowering the standard of the teaching. Instruction in design could not be given in sufficient amount without a corresponding reduction in such courses as the College of Agriculture felt were necessary to protect a degree of the College of Agriculture. Several times the Faculty revised their list of required courses in such a manner as to give more freedom to our Department in the making up of its schedule of required work. Yet, while progress in the way of a better schedule of courses was made up to 1921, this conflict between the fundamental interests of a College of Agriculture and those of a department endeavoring to teach an art of design continued to exist.

In 1911, when Mr. Davis took charge, there were about twenty technical students in the four-year course; a few from other departments and Colleges attending lectures increased the total to thirty-five. The College of Architecture housed us, the students doing their design in a corner of the big drafting room on the top floor of White Hall. The following year all classes were held, and all drafting was done, on the first floor of Roberts Hall, where the Department office had been for several years. Architecture had furnished room for lectures and drafting and had done a great deal to encourage and to sustain this new line of instruction, with which it was naturally sympathetic.

However, it seemed to the staff that if a department belonged to the College of Agriculture, all work should be done in that College and that offices and class rooms in close connection would greatly facilitate the work of the teaching staff. In order to give us quarters in Roberts Hall, certain others had to vacate their offices, and as this caused some inconvenience; it was impossible to start instruction or to get space for a month or more after college opened, during which time the students walked the Campus in idleness.

Building While Teaching

In 1912-13, a little frame building, standing where Caldwell Hall now stands, and built by Professor Rice and his students as a slaughter-house for chickens, was condemned. Mr. Davis and Mr. Montillon asked if this building could be given them and moved to another site. We ourselves drew plans for its remodeling, upon a site not far away on the edge of the hillside and woodland. Bids were received, but the responsible bidders were rejected and the work was assigned to a somewhat incompetent man who made a low estimate. We were told to boss our own job and do it for $10,000 less than the lowest competent bidder! As the work was carried on during the fall of 1913 and the workmen were inefficient, it was necessary to lecture with one eye on the class and one eye across the quadrangle on the building and frequently to excuse oneself from a class and to run out and give short directions to workmen.

While schedule difficulties marked the succeeding years up to 1921, the small group of enthusiastic students worked in close touch with the instructing staff in such a manner as to mark these years as never-to-be-forgotten; for hampered and limited as was the teaching opportunity, the spirit of those students was such as to make up, in a large measure, for weaknesses in the instructional scheme. All of the students to date, who have won the Rome Academy fellowships, and triumphed over students in other schools, especially Harvard, were the product of the little frame building on the edge of the Campus.

On November 12, 1920, on the proposal of the Dean, the Agricultural College Council recommended to the Trustees that the Department be transferred to the College of Architecture. The Trustees accepted this recommendation, and the date for the transfer was set for the following year. Since the establishment of the master's degree in 1912, the Department had the unique record of having fifty per cent of its graduating class remain for graduate work. Therefore, the staff of the Department felt that it was safe to lay out a five-year schedule for the bachelor's degree, in which the Faculty of Architecture concurred.

The situation of the department in its early years in Agriculture made it a "mark" for those students living in New York State who wished to attend Cornell without paying tuition, and still did not like agriculture. A considerable proportion of our yearly enrollment professed an interest in landscape architecture which at the time was apparently false and this resulted in a good many of our alumni deflecting from the ranks and going into business. However, a sufficient number of students were interested to give us to-day a small but strong group of alumni, some still poor but faithful, several of whom are now well established and well known among the practitioners of this profession. We are proud to say that the type of their work and their standards are high, and considerably higher than those of many older men who, for the time perhaps, may be better off.

Win All Rome Fellowships

Much has been made of the three alumni who have won successively the fellowships offered by the American Academy in Rome. This foundation has established several fellowships in architecture, painting, sculpture, and music. The only fellowship so far endowed in landscape architecture was first offered in 1916. This was won by Edward G. Lawson '13, who for the past two years has been assistant professor of landscape architecture. When the United States entered the war, Lawson entered the Red Cross and did not complete his fellowship until after the close of the War. The fellowship was then again opened and this time Ralph Griswold '16 won it. In 1923 it was won by Norman T. Newton '19, who is beginning his second year and will return in 1926. The first two Fellows had to compete mainly with Harvard men but in the case of Newton the competition was mainly with those who had obtained their experience in offices, the other schools in the country seemingly not entering the list with any gusto. All three of these men had served their apprenticeship with Bryant Fleming. The instructing staff has always felt that the success of these men, and in fact of other alumni of their type, who have done well, was in a large measure due, not so much to the instruction given, which they knew was very imperfect at the time, but largely to the enthusiasm and loyalty of the students during that period of struggle against so many adverse conditions.

E. GORTON DAVIS

THE COSMOPOLITAN Club on November 8 gave the first of a series of four concerts arranged in cooperation with the Ithaca Conservatory of Music.

THE SOPHOMORE women have decided that warnings to freshmen for this year will be: (1) Keep off the grass; (2) wear no high school jewelry; (3) show respect to sophomores, juniors, and seniors; (4) carry no compacts; (5) wear no headband of any sort before 7:30 o'clock in the evening; and (6) wear galoshes buckled.

LITERARY REVIEW

The Early English Drama

Chief Pre-Shakespearean Dramas: a Selection of Plays Illustrating the History of the English Drama from Its Origin Down to Shakespeare. Edited by Joseph Quincy Adams, Ph.D. '06, Professor of English, Cornell. Boston. Houghton Mifflin Co. 1924. 21 cm., pp. viii, 712. Facsimiles. Price, $3.75.

This book is admirably adapted to supply a need that has become increasingly felt in recent years as the drama has come to be more intensively studied and utilized in our common life, both by professional play-wrights and by laymen. Up to the present time, for the study of early English drama the two volumes of Manly's Specimens of the Pre-Shakespearean Drama has been the only work easily accessible, and that does not provide any adequate apparatus for the study of the early Latin liturgical drama in English. Adams has given us exactly what we want: some Latin plays, with a translation, a first-rate selection from the vernacular mystery plays, and some of the best of the older plays which Shakespeare knew in his youth, and of the kind which he tried his hand at improving; in all, sixty-four different items. Hard words are glossed in footnotes, and there are also some explanatory notes of a more general nature. The lines are numbered. The typography is of the sort we expect from the Riverside Press.

As one browses through this handsome volume, one is reminded of how much the drama, for its beginning, like the sister arts of dancing, painting, and sculpture, owes to the cause of religion. Nearly half of the earlier material in this volume is of a distinctly religious or moral nature; and with regard to the St. George folk-plays, not included in this first half mentioned above, we must not forget that they also are the products of the folk-mind working in the cause of religion. After the long period dominated by Puritan aversion to the theatre and its arts there is discernible to-day a tendency to return to this fascinating form of art, both in schools, in colleges, and in churches. Amateur plays are being written and staged in larger numbers than ever before; and this bodes well for the cause of art in general, since it makes for the education of popular taste. The general reader interested in this movement who wants to see how dramatic art began in the English-speaking world will get much from the present volume, and with the aid of the notes will make his way without much difficulty; while for college classes in the development of the drama it will at once take its place as indispensable. Editor and publishers are to be congratulated on the completion of this highly important undertaking.

Books and Magazine Articles

In The American Journal of Psychology for October John P. Nafe, of the Graduate School, writes on "An Experimental Study of the Affective Qualities." John G. Jenkins, Grad., and Professor Karl M. Dallenbach, Ph. D. '13, contribute a study of "Obliviscence During Sleep and Waking." Professor Robert M. Ogden '01 reviews "Conflict and Dream" and "Psychology and Politics" by the late W. H. R. Rivers. Professor Harry P. Weld reviews "L'Année Psychologique," 23e Année, 1922, edited by H. Piéron.

In Industrial and Engineering Chemistry for October Professor George W. Cavanaugh '93, R. A. Dutcher, of Pennsylvania State College, and J. S. Hall, of the Department of Agricultural Chemistry, write on "Antiscorbatic Potency of Whole-Milk Powder." Louis Kahlenberg writes on Professor Emeritus Stephen Moulton Babcock, '73-5 Grad., of the University of Wisconsin, inventor of the famous Babcock Test for butter fat. Professor Babcock was an instructor here in 1875-7. There is a good portrait with the article. Professor Fred H. Rhodes, Ph. D. '14, and Thomas T. Ling, Grad., write on "Chinese Wood Oil."

Dr. Daniel C. Knowlton '98, of the Lincoln School, New York, is one of the authors of the European History Maps published by A. J. Nystrom and Company of Chicago. There are eighteen ancient history maps published at $36.75 and twenty-six medieval and modern history maps at $50.75.

In The Pedagogical Seminary for September Hermann Hilmer, '17-18 Grad., of the University of California, writes on "The Outlook for Civilization."

In The Survey for October 1 the frontispiece is a cartoon by Hendrik W. Van Loon '05. In the issue for October 15 Florence Kelley '82 has an article entitled "The Child Labor Amendment: Ten Answers to Ten Questions." "Political Parties and Electoral Problems" by Professor Robert C. Brooks, Ph. D. '03, of Swarthmore, is reviewed by G. S.

"Beginnings in French" by Charles Holzworth and William R. Price '98 has just been published by Heath of Boston, in a volume of 374 pages.

In The Journal of Forestry for October Professor Arthur B. Recknagel reviews "Practical Forestry Management" by C. C. Trevor and E. A. Smythies.

Professor William C. Bagley, Ph. D. '00, of Teachers College, has written an introduction for "The Improvement of Teaching" by George L. Freeland, a book published by the Macmillan Company.

In The Cornell Sun for October 27 Professor J. F. Mountford, of the Department of Classics, discusses the issues at stake in the British elections of October 29. In the issue of October 28 Professor Charles K. Burdick explains the possible outcomes of the election of November 4.

ATHLETICS

The Football Schedule

- Cornell 56, St. Bonaventure 0.
- Cornell 27, Niagara 0.
- Cornell 7, Williams 14.
- Cornell 0, Rutgers 10.
- Cornell 14, Columbia 0
- Cornell 91, Susquehanna 0.
- November 15—Dartmouth at New York.
- November 27—Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.

Susquehanna Defeated

The Susquehanna game Saturday, which Cornell won by a score of 91 to 0, was so much of a set up as to prove valueless as far as showing how much the team had improved since the Columbia game, and its possibilities in the Dartmouth game next Saturday. The opposing team offered no more effective opposition than it did last year. The varsity rolled up 49 points in the first two periods and the second team 42 in the second and third periods, for a total of 13 touchdowns. A placement goal after each touchdown provided 13 points. Susquehanna made one first down, aided by a penalty.

Long runs of course were frequent, Whetstone, Hoekelman, Wester, Isaly, Molinet and others taking turns at reeling them off. There was more dash to the varsity's play than before; the line and backs snapped into formations with greater zest and with more precision. The game was a demonstration how the plays ought to work, but it was worthless as a test of any sort.

The regular varsity, with two exceptions, was in the line up when the whistle blew. Patterson, left halfback, and Morris, left guard, were kept out because they had suffered slight injuries in the week's drill. Rosenberg, a substitute, started at left halfback and proved a fast and aggressive youngster. Carey was shifted from right to left guard and Munns started at right guard. In the second period Affeld suffered a gash over the left eye and retired in favor of Reed.

The line-up and summary:

Cornell (91)	Susquehanna (0)
Kneen..... R.E.....	Gimmie
Evans..... R.T.....	Hartman
Munns..... R.G.....	Weaver
Affeld..... C..... (Capt.)	Gordon
Carey..... L.G.....	Nipple

Soccer Team Loses

The soccer team found Haverford too strong and skilful an opponent in an Intercollegiate League game here Saturday and went down to defeat by a 7 to 0 score. Haverford scored four goals in the first half and three in the second, Hoag, Richie, and Baker making two each and Borton one. Marshall's fine work at goal nullified several gallant Cornell efforts while Richie and Garrett, All American soccer stars, performed brilliantly. For Cornell Cook and Rossomondo stood out.

Freshmen Lose to Pennsylvania

The Pennsylvania freshman eleven won its annual game from the Cornell freshman team on lower Alumni Field Saturday by a score of 17 to 6. The Quaker yearlings showed more speed and finesse, and distinctly outplayed the Cornell youngsters in the first two periods. The balance of the game was more evenly contested.

In the first period a pass from Sanford to Scull, which the latter received on Cornell's fifteen-yard line, resulted in a touchdown, Scull crossing the line without interference. Sanford kicked goal. In the second period Shore, substituted for Stau, made a drop kick from Cornell's twenty-five-yard line and in the third period, after a run by Stau of twenty-two yards had put the ball on Cornell's ten-yard line, Wascalonis went over in three rushes.

Cornell's score, made in the third period, came after Pennsylvania had fumbled Schlossbach's kicks twice. The last fumble was recovered by Keller of Cornell on the Pennsylvania fifteen-yard line and Schlossbach then threw a forward pass to Schumaker, who scored.

Schenectady Wins Prep Race

The Schenectady High School cross country team won first place in both the first annual New York State Public High School championship cross country race, and the Cornell Interscholastic cross country race, run off last Saturday under the auspices of the Cornell Athletic Association. One hundred and twenty youthful harriers took part in the race, over a three-mile course.

Schillke of the Hutchinson High School of Buffalo won individual honors, coming in about one hundred yards ahead of Ritchie of Schenectady High School. Gregorie of Ithaca High was third.

Schenectady won by bunching five men well up front.

For each meet, gold medals were presented to the individual winner and to the members of the winning team. In addition, the Schenectady team carried home the cup trophy given by the Cornell Athletic Association, to retain it for one year.

Members of the Hutchinson team, placing second, received silver medals, while those of the Masten Park and Ithaca teams received bronze medals from both the Cornell and State athletic associations. The Schenectady High School harriers, by virtue of their victory, acquire, for the first time, the New York State cross country championship, as well as the Cornell Interscholastic championship, and Schillke gained both individual titles.

The results:

STATE MEET

1 Schenectady 47, 2 Hutchinson 32, 3 Masten Park 73, 4 Ithaca 111, 5 Yonkers 154, 6 Elmira 158, 7 Cortland 171, 8 Pulaski 179, 9 Mexico 183, 10 East High, Rochester 203, 11 Binghamton 226, 12 Owego 252.

CORNELL MEET

CLUB ACTIVITIES

New York

Cornell men of the downtown section of New York are continuing their custom of meeting every Wednesday at the Machinery Club, 50 Church Street. Luncheon starts at 12.30, at a large round table in the northwest corner of the room. All Cornell men are welcome.

Wyoming Valley

At a recent meeting of the Wyoming Valley Cornell Club, held at the Westmoreland Club, Wilkes-Barre, it was decided to invite the Musical Clubs to that city for some time in December. Henry T. Buckman '24, former president of the Clubs, Robert C. Trethaway '16 and George P. Hefferman '17 were named as a committee. The Musical Clubs gave a successful concert in Irem Temple at Wilkes-Barre, last December.

South Carolina

The Cornell Club of South Carolina entertained the Cornellians of that State at the second annual meeting on October 22, at the Jefferson Hotel in Columbia. About thirty were present. Dr. H. D. Phillips, rector of Trinity Church, Columbia, was the principal speaker. Anthony F. McKissick '95, the retiring president, extended a personal invitation to all members to be his house guests at Greenville on December 31, to receive and help entertain the Musical Clubs. He announced that the Greenville members were planning an afternoon tea dance for the Clubs. James H. Dingle '92 was appointed chairman of a committee to arrange a spring meeting in Charleston in April. President Farrand sent telegraphic greeting.

The following officers were elected: president, Ellsworth L. Filby '17; secretary-treasurer, Professor Julian D. Corrington '13.

Rochester Women

The usual form of meeting for the Rochester women was abandoned this month in favor of a dinner held by the local branch of the American Association of University Women on November 2. This was the regular date for the meeting of the Cornell women. Dr. Aurelia Henry Reinhardt, president of Mills College, California, and also national president of the American Association of University Women, was the guest of honor. The dinner was held in the Chamber of Commerce and was attended by more than one-hundred college women of the city.

The Cornell women held a business meeting at the Chamber of Commerce an hour previous to the dinner and adjourned to the function in honor of Dr. Reinhardt. It was voted by the club at the short business session to pay a portion of the expenses of a delegate to the coming convention of the Alumni Corporation in New York City. Elizabeth Keiper '21 was elected delegate, with Mrs. William F. Donoghue '02 alternate.

Miss Florence Freer, retiring president of the local branch of the American Association of University Women, presided at the dinner and introduced Dr. Reinhardt, who gave an enthusiastic and inspiring address on the history and ideals of the national association. Miss Freer is a former instructor in the Department of Home Economics and is now head of the Rochester Home Bureau. Ina W. Hall '17 gave the piano accompaniment for group singing during the dinner.

INTERCOLLEGIATE NOTES

THE FIVE largest summer schools of last summer were Columbia, 12,900, California, 5,215, Wisconsin, 4,724, Minnesota, 3,382, and Michigan, 3,153.

THE LATE Lawrence E. Sexton, Harvard '84, it will be remembered, left a bequest of $1,000 with which to purchase a suitable cup to be competed for annually by Harvard and Yale eight-oared crews, with other college crews added, preferably Cornell, if it seemed wise to increase the number of contestants. The Harvard Alumni Bulletin for October 9 publishes a portrait of Mr. Sexton and a picture of the cup, which was made from a design by Mrs. Bartlett Harwood of Boston. The Bulletin says that for the present at least the cup will be awarded annually to the winner of the Harvard-Yale four-mile race at New London. In accordance with this plan it has been turned over to the victorious Yale crew of 1924.

THE AFTERNOON SCHEDULE

RUMOR has it that Cornell is harder to get into, stay in, and graduate from than it was a generation ago. Principal broadcasters of the nation are those maturing alumni who have tried to engineer a son, daughter, or nephew through the processes of education only to face cruel and unusual applications of requirements that have been writ into the code since the Spanish-American War.

The recently published fraternity averages seem to bear them out. All but four are higher than those that the fraternity of that early period aimed at. The fraternities average higher than the sororities. Apparently the devotees of the incorporated activities stand higher than those of unincorporated.

There is little question that leisure time is scarcer than it was in the late Nineteenth Century. Crowds come off the Hill between five and six o'clock where formerly walked the straggling few. Simultaneously the schedule with a solid block of morning hours is becoming increasingly rare. The schedule that left the afternoon and evening free for study and play is a thing of the past. The practice hours of the athletic teams serve to emphasize this, along with other general signs of afternoon activity.

It is thought by one astute observer at least that the shift to afternoon hours is the result of the desire on the part of the professor to utilize the early hours for research, the periods when the mind is keen and fresh. Where true it is perhaps worth the sacrifice.

The schedules are made out by the individual professor or department. They relate principally to his own requirements and desires. We are convinced that the professors are not beyond hope of co-operation, and that the difference between schedules is not really material to them, once they feel that, by slight individual concessions, a real good can be assured, and that their slight sacrifices will be justified.

We hope before another announcement of academic schedules is made a conference will be held that will include at least one expert on production engineering. With this help, and with a will to cooperate among the Faculty, schedules should be devised that will condense the student working hours and permit an entire community to call a few precious moments their own at the end of the day, for relaxation, exercise, and play. Mathematically it is possible. Modern business methods testify to its effectiveness in increasing production. Possibly it may take the drudgery out of both teaching and studying.

A GIFT TO THE LIBRARY

On his recent visit to Ithaca Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, minister to China, presented a beautiful book, written in Chinese, to the Library as the gift of the President of China to the University.

The book is one of three given to Dr. Schurman by the Chinese President to deliver in America. One of the books was for the President of the United States, another for the Congressional Library, and the third for the Library of Cornell University. Cornell was thus favored as being the University where Dr. Schurman held the office of president for twenty-eight years, and also because it is the alma mater of so many citizens of the Chinese Republic.

The book is a life of Confucius, done largely in pictures, in four volumes which are encased in a magnificent silk box. The work is elaborately got up in Chinese fashion. The separate volumes are not bound, but each consists of one very long sheet of fine rice paper folded many times, and printed only on one side. The work is superbly illustrated with many remarkable pictures all done by hand. It is attractive principally not from the fame of the author, but from the beauty of the art.

CONVICTED by a secret jury of upperclassmen in the College of Architecture, T. R. Bacher '28, W. M. Cordes '28, H. C. Frinke '28 and Eugene W. Gerbereux '26 underwent the extreme penalty of tanking in the drafting room of White Hall on November 4. Miss Katherine Bauer '28 was charged as being a conspirator in the case and was sentenced to clean the T-squares and triangles of the upperclassmen in the College.

OBITUARY

Alson Rogers '72

Alson Rogers died at his home in Warren, Pa., on October 25 after a lingering illness of several months.

He was born in Mead Township, Pa., on November 20, 1850, the son of Alson and Kezia Sill Rogers. He received his early education there, at Jamestown, and at Warren, Pa., then came to Cornell in 1868 as a student of civil engineering. In 1872 he was graduated with the degree of B.C.E.

After his graduation he went back to Warren, where he began to practice his profession. On October 26, 1876 he was married to Miss Mary Davis Palmer, who survives him with two children, Mrs. George H. Miller and Carl W. Rogers of Warren.

For many years he was interested in civic affairs and for the last twenty-five years had been city engineer in Warren as well as in Kane, Pa., a neighboring borough.

Thomas A. Sullivan '91

Thomas Allen Sullivan died at the Millard Fillmore Hospital in Buffalo, N. Y., on October 26 following a brief illness of septic pneumonia.

He was born at Fishers, N. Y. and received his early education there, then came to Cornell in 1889 as student of law. As an undergraduate he was active in student affairs, and helped to found the Cornell Chapter of Delta Chi. He was also a member of the Buffalo Club. In 1891 he graduated with the degree of LL.B.

Upon leaving Cornell, he went to Buffalo and formed a partnership with Willis Spaulding for the practice of law. About twenty years ago, he formed a new partnership with Frederick G. Bagley '91 and later they added two other members to the firm.

As an attorney, Sullivan ranked high and won much praise for his ability as the result of numerous legal victories which he won for his clients. For six years he served as district attorney for Erie County and became widely known in legal circles.

In 1895 he was married to Miss Mary M. Van Ness of Fairport, N. Y., who died about eighteen years ago. He is survived by a daughter, Katherine, and a son, Kreag Sullivan, both of Buffalo.

Joseph K. Cole '03

Word has just been received of the death on December 9, 1915, of Joseph Kinsey Cole.

He was born on February 12, 1880 in Cincinnati, Ohio, the son of Charles W. and Rebekah Fisher Cole. He received his early education in that city, then went to Washington and Jefferson from which he came to Cornell in 1902. In 1903 he was graduated with the degree of A.B.

Good news for all lovers of graphic pie

Graphic pie enough to satisfy the hunger of a life-time; no end of graphic mountains to scale and toboggan down. That's what the man who loves to analyze graphs and statistical symbols can look forward to when he comes with the electrical industry.

Economic study is one of many branches in this broad field. If you have thought of electricity as limited to engineers, this other side of the picture will interest you.

The commercial organization with its problems of distributing, selling, advertising; the manufacturing end with its opportunity for trained technical men; the legal and accounting branches—all this and more totals electrical industry.

It may pay you to keep this in mind against graduation.

Alfred H. Bannister, Sp.

Alfred Hennen Bannister died at Peekskill, N. Y., on January 23, 1923.

He was born on February 7, 1885 at Hawesville, Ky., the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bannister. He obtained his early training there, then went to Ober Realschule, Potsdam, Germany. In 1908 he came to Cornell as a special student of mechanical engineering and remained a year.

Innokenty I. Wassilieff '13

The death of Innokenty Ivan Wassilieff, who was killed during the early stages of the World War, has just been learned.

He was born on September 26, 1885 in Vladivostok, Russia. He secured his early education there and at the Emperor Paul Military School, then came to Cornell in 1908 as a student of agriculture. In 1913 he was graduated with the degree of B.S., and returned to Russia. There he became connected with the Horticultural and Agricultural Experiment Station at Sukum, and was also a private in the Second Siberian Reserve Corps. When war was declared, he was called and soon after was killed in action.

REGISTRATION FIGURES

Registration figures indicate an enrollment of 5,000 students in Ithaca and a total of 5,332 in Cornell. This total includes some duplicate registration and 232 students in the Medical College. The present enrollment is 79 more than last year.

An analysis of the figures shows 980 seniors, 1,133 juniors, 1,400 sophomores, and 1310 freshmen. Graduate students number 484, and special students 25; and 22 of these are in Agriculture. The men students number 4,146, and women students 1,186. The Arts College has 573 women or more than all the rest of the University put together, not counting 70 women graduate students. The College of Agriculture has 467 women students, almost all of whom are in the courses in home economics.

Last year the total enrollment in Ithaca and New York was 5,253. There is a decrease in the number of new students but an increase of 124 in the number of students previously registered.

Twelve more women are at Cornell this year as compared with last year, and they remain about twenty-two per cent of the whole number.

The College of Law reports an increase of 50, made up of 48 men and two women; Architecture reports an aggregate increase of 15.

The order of the colleges in respect to size remains as it has been for several years. Arts first, with 1827, Engineering second, with 1,207, Agriculture third, with 1,141; Graduate School 484, Medical 262, Architecture, 183, Law, 152, and Veterinary Science, 76.

The Wisdom of Solomon

PERSONAL SURETY

TWO thousand years ago, Solomon said:
 "If thou be surety for thy friend, thou art ensnared with the words of thy mouth. Do what I say and deliver thyself because thou art fallen into the hands of thy neighbor. Give not sleep to thine eyes, deliver thyself as a bird from the hand of the fowler."

And again:
 "He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it; and he that hateth suretyship is sure."

The old sage doesn't explain what happened but it is evident that when he wrote those particular proverbs, he, or a close friend, had just had a painful experience of some sort.

Solomon's advice is just as sound today as it was two thousand years ago. The history of Personal Surety is full of painful experiences.

Personal Surety wanes. Corporate Suretyship waxes great: it is founded on the wisdom of the ages.
