Honorary Societies Elect

Phi Beta Kappa Chooses Forty-one and Sigma Xi Seventy-two

FORTY-ONE persons were named to membership in Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic society, by the Cornell section at the annual spring election meeting held on Wednesday, May 2. They include one faculty member, Professor Alexander M. Drummond, five graduate students, twenty-two seniors, and thirteen juniors.

It was pointed out by the committee that there were a great many students whose scholastic averages were sufficiently high to warrant election to membership in the Society, but that they had not completed enough work in the humanities to make them eligible for membership.

Alpha chapter of Sigma Xi, honorary research society, elected six to associate membership, three of whom are graduate students, and three seniors. Three faculty members, one alumnus, and sixty-two graduate students were elected to membership in the organization.

About Athletics

Rowing

Cornell's varsity and freshman crews swept to victory over the boats of Syracuse University on Saturday in the first regatta of the year held on Onondaga Lake before a crowd of 15,000 spectators.

Getting off to a bad start, the varsity trailed the Orange by a few feet, when Williams at No. 6 in the Cornell boat caught a crab which put Cornell over a length behind. The crew quickly got together, however, and with the utmost calm and coolness settled down to a 34 beat while Syracuse was pulling at 38.

At the half mile, Commodore Fritz Garber raised the time to 36 and the Cornell shell crept up until the two crews were rowing even at the mile mark. Allen, Syracuse stroke, tried to raise the stroke when he saw Cornell creeping up, but his crew was unable to respond and Cornell reached into the lead.

Garber raised the Cornell stroke to nearly 40 as the Cornell boat swept past Syracuse and the varsity skimmed across the finish line nearly two lengths ahead of Syracuse. Despite the demoralizing effect of a crab, Cornell showed superb power, and clean rowing.

Freshman Race

The freshmen, rowing against a more experienced aggregation, gave a performance that indicated that they will be among the best first year crews in the East this year. They defeated the Syracuse freshmen by a little more than a length in rather rough water. The races had been delayed for nearly two hours by a strong wind which chopped up the water so much that rowing was impossible. When the freshman boats lined up for the start the lake surface was still choppy, which made smooth rowing difficult. After an even start, the Syracuse No. 6 caught a crab, and although the Syracuse yearlings soon reorganized, they fell a length behind the Cornell boat.

The Cornell freshman boat, stroked by Jenkins, answered every spurt of Syracuse, and maintained the lead of a length, which was stretched out to nearly a length and a half as the two crews rowed by the white skiff at the finish.

Junior Varsity Race

The junior varsity boats started exactly even, but Hooper, in the Cornell shell, broke an oar, so that throughout the race he was rowing with nothing but a stub. Cornell lost ground steadily throughout the first half of the race, and were two lengths behind at the halfway marker. Payne put up the stroke, but although the shell responded strongly, Cornell was unable to make up the large lead held by Syracuse, and the boat finished a length and a quarter behind. Had Hopper not broken his oar, the Cornell boat would undoubtedly have finished the race in much better shape, and with a much smaller margin of victory. The Orange boat, however, completely outclassed Cornell from start to finish.

With the first regatta past, Cornell oarsmen will start at once to train for the Carnegie Cup regatta on May 19 with Yale and Princeton on Carnegie Lake, Princeton. During the week before the Syracuse races, Coach James Wray put his charges through several strenuous workouts, and favored by good weather, had his men in tip-top shape.

There was trouble in the freshman boat during that week, largely centered around the middle of the boat. Clark Wray, freshman coach, spent most of his time training Rogers at No. 4, who had trouble with his slide and back. This difficulty was apparently ironed out in time for the race against Syracuse.

The boatings:

Varsity, Cornell: Garber stroke, MacLeod 7, Williams 6, Schroeder 5, Hopper 4, Borland 3, Foote 2, Kitchen bow, Jenkins, coxswain. Syracuse: Allen stroke, Wiloughby 7, Gramlich 6, Schroeberlin 5, Swanson 4, Matasavage 3, Hildebrand 2, Puls bow, Havill coxswain.

Junior Varsity, Cornell: Payne stroke, Dickerson 7, Thompson 6, Hooper 5, Hart 5, VanArsdale 3, Allen 2, Vaughan bow, Tracy coxswain. Syracuse: Ahearn stroke, Davis 7, Van Arnam 6, Roder 5, Crowley 4, Greiner 3, Conan 2, Jackson bow, Kirkwood coxswain.

Freshmen, Cornell: Jenkins stroke, Sowerwine 7, Drisler 6, Kuck 5, Rogers 4, Hartman 3, Menges 2, Snook bow, Steiner coxswain. Syracuse: Voegeler stroke, Jacobs 7, Richards 6, Dluski 5, Seal 4, Blocker 3, Boettger 2, Collins bow, Jones coxswain.

Penn Relay Trophies

Trophies won by the Cornell trackmen at the Pennsylvania Relay Carnival have been placed on exhibition in the lobby of Willard Straight Hall.

The Kappa Sigma Challenge Cup was won by the 440-yard sprint relay team of Dick Hardy, Bob Kane, Bob Scallan and Bob Linders. This trophy, which was won last year by Pennsylvania, will become the permanent possession of the college or university winning it three times.

The Josiah H. Penniman Challenge Cup was won by the half-mile relay team of Bob Linders, Jack Messersmith, Bob Scallan, and Bob Kane. This cup also must be won three times to become the permanent possession of any college or university. It was donated by the Provost of the University of Pennsylvania. It has been once won by Army and twice by Ohio State.

The shuttle relay team, who set a new record for that event this year, brought home the Phi Epsilon Pi Cup. On this trophy the following institutions have legs at present:—

Penn State; Cambridge University; Ohio State 2; Army; Yale 2; and Pennsylvania.

In addition to the cups, each winning team was presented with a large bronze placque. These are permanent possessions and will stand in the Schoellkopf Trophy Room.

Each member of the winning teams received a handsome wrist watch, bearing an inscription of the Pennsylvania Relays. Captain Dick Hardy received a gold medal for his second place in the 100-meter dash event. Since several of the men were on two winning relay teams, they received two watches.

Baseball

Harvard—First Game

Cornell divided a double header with Harvard on Friday in Cambridge, 3-2, and 2-4, at the beginning of the wind-up of that period designated by Coach Paul Eckley as the toughest part of the season for Cornell. Following a double header the week before, Cornell faced Harvard twice on Friday and journeyed overnight to Philadelphia to meet Pennsylvania. Of these five games played within a week, Coach Eckley said Cornell would do well to win four. He was right. Cornell, however, did not rise to the occasion quite as well as hoped, and after dividing the double-header last week with Princeton, won only one of the three games this week end.

Captain Toots Pasto showed some astounding stamina for a pitcher when he stayed in the box throughout the entire fourteen innings of the afternoon. He allowed thirteen hits during the day, but considering his performance, this does not speak too badly for him.

Cornell scored a run in the third frame, and two in the fifth which sufficed to win the first game. Harvard's two runs came in the fourth. Miscall, Cornell short-stop, scored two runs, out of two times at bat. The third Cornell run was scored by Johnston.

Pulitzer Prize Winner

Sidney Kingsley '28 Receives the 1933 Drama Award for His Broadway Success, "Men in White"

SIDNEY KINGSLEY '28, who will be remembered by Cornell playgoers as the man who "stopped the show" during a production of The Merry Wives of Windsor, is this year's Pulitzer Prize winner in the dramatic section—for his play Men in White. Kingsley is quick to attribute his success in part to Professor Drummond and the early training he received in dramatics at Cornell.

According to those who know him well in the present days of his success, Kingsley is that strange and almost incredible rarity, a New Yorker at heart and a New Yorker by actual birth. Manhattan saw his origin and Manhattan now holds his allegiance after the inevitable stretch of chafing imprisonment in the deceptively open stretches of sunny California. He is devoted to the sun, but he never got around to seeing any of it in Hollywood. In New York it shines only between the rifts in adjoining skyscrapers, but at least he now enjoys the freedom to profit by these slight solar invasions.

Kingsley became a feature of the metropolitan scene a little over twenty-seven years ago. Life was not easy for the family, but the boy was so apt and eager a pupil that continue at school he must. As early as high school he manifested his attraction to the theatre by writing a one-act play, designing the scenery, painting it, and even occupying himself with the costumes. He acted, too. But his interests in the theatre were equal; no one phase of it engrossed him any more than any other; he merely knew that he was intensely drawn to it and that that was where he would eventually work.

At Cornell, which he attended on a free tuition scholarship, Kingsley took every available course on the drama, studying for the most part with Professor A. M. Drummond. Here, again, he wrote a one-act play which was not only produced but won a prize and was later published in a collection of prize plays of the university.

But his only really concentrated activity was acting; this he did with great intensiveness, extending it even to the debating platform, where he won every possible prize for public speaking.

When he graduated, in 1928, he promptly enlisted in a stock company in Westchester at the then impressive remuneration of twelve dollars a week and worked for four months doing small bits. He might have continued doing this indefinitely if the company had not suddenly closed and he found himself without prospects or money. This turned out to be a fortunate impetus, though it was very far from appearing so at the time.

For, with forced leisure on his hands, Sidney Kingsley was driven to make the first serious examination of his essential interests that he had ever made—and learned, not without surprise, that writing excited him infinitely more than acting ever could. He accordingly proceeded to write a play. It was a farce to end all farces, by his own description, and it interested a producer sufficiently to result in a purchase of the option.

While he was waiting for the production which never came (and he is now pleased that it didn't), he secured a small role in "Subway Express." He stayed for several months, still naively convinced that the purchase of an option on a play automatically meant its production. When "Subway Express" closed and Kingsley's farce was still a lifeless manuscript, he went into dark retirement, sworn never to act again.

Now came the dark days. First he did play-reading for a living and then he wrote short stories for theatre programs. Then, slowly and methodically, he began work on what is now Men in White. This is a play that took three months to write and three years to rewrite, which is often the way with dramas that seem to have emerged out of the nowhere like precocious mushrooms. Kingsley consulted student friends and general libraries and the library of the Academy of Medicine.

When the script was ready and put into circulation, one producer promptly bought it and promised early production. But funds failed him. Another producer bought it. He seemed earnest; he wanted to think about the play for a time. Meanwhile, Kingsley had contracted to go to Hollywood to write scenarios. He had spent four unhappy months there when he received a wire to come back and aid in the production. But when he arrived he was encountered with further difficulties that seemed insuperable.

Now the understandably impatient author decided to take away the manuscript and find someone who was really interested in giving the drama an early presentation. And he found the Group Theatre and Sidney Harmon and James R. Ullman. All of them spent the summer at Warrensburg, New York, with the permanent acting company of the Group Theatre, trying out many versions of a single scene until the one they wanted emerged—and the play opened at the Broadhurst Theatre on the evening of September 26, 1933, three full years after the play had been begun.

Sidney Kingsley has no intention of rushing into the composition of a dozen new plays all at once. A new theme is now being entertained and, as soon as it has thoroughly crystallized, he will begin his slow and methodical labors.

PENNSYLVANIA MEET

Cornell and Pennsylvania will meet Saturday, May 12, on the track at Schoellkopf Field, in one of the oldest annual events on the Cornell campus, one which has been held every year since the early '90's.

Although since the War Penn and Cornell have not been the track leaders of the East as consistently as previous to that struggle, the meet has lost none of its color nor of its strong rivalry.

With the exceptional performances turned in by the Cornell trackmen at the Pennsylvania Relay Carnival held recently at Franklin Field, and the showing made by Pennsylvania runners in that and other meets this spring, the meet promises to be an exciting one, packed with thrills and close finishes.

Cornell should have little trouble in the sprints, and in the running events. Penn's best chances will be in the field events, although rumors on the campus this week indicate that Cornell's weight tossers, jumpers, and vaulters have been improving and are out to surprise the Pennsylvanians.

Hopes for the shattering of a few of the records for this meet, many of which have been set during recent years run high at the present, but Saturday will tell whether or not they are well grounded.

FRANCHOT (PAMP) TONE '27, is the favorite movie star of little Joanne Xenos, nine year old child prodigy, who appeared recently before a group of child training experts. Daughter of a jobless cook, Joanne sailed through grade schools in less than three years.

BUILDINGS and Grounds

Plans for the annual spring cleaning and repairing of the Cornell campus after the ravages of winter and fall call for several major construction operations, as well as the innumerable little repair jobs, and cleaning and painting jobs that are yearly affairs, according to Conant van Blarcom '08, superintendent of buildings and grounds for the University.

The old Cornell house, at the corner of Stewart and South avenues is to be re-decorated within and without. This building has for the past several years been used as a dormitory for students of the College of Architecture.

A fifty foot extension is to be erected on the west wing of the Agricultural Engineering edifice on Judd Falls road, back of the Dairy and Animal Husbandry buildings. This will give more ample quarters to the Agricultural Engineering department.

At Balch Halls, the new women's dormitories, the ceilings in the bed-rooms and corridors on the top floor are to be insulated more thoroughly, against winter cold and summer heat.

Suites of rooms in Baker Tower and Founders Hall are to be cut up into single rooms, to make them more readily rentable.

The basement of the Entomology Building on the upper campus is to be remodeled. This building was formerly the home of the Home Economics College, until that school moved into its new quarters. The basement, where the cafeteria used to be, is to be reapportioned and divided, to provide for laboratory space, and professorial offices.

In general, the trees are being pruned and trimmed over the entire campus, and all of them have been tagged and numbered, and fed. Each elm is being periodically observed for traces of the Dutch Elm disease.

Grading and planting of the fore-court of the new Home Economics Building has been begun, now that the drainage problem of that part of the campus has been solved.

During the summer numerous landscaping and planting projects will be carried on, roads will be resurfaced over the entire campus, and new colprovia walks will be built on the campus in place of the few cinder paths that remain. Around the new houses of the Sigma Phi and Psi Upsilon fraternities, the grounds will be planted and landscaped, and top soil laid on. Extensive work will be done on the tennis courts throughout the campus to put them in good condition.

Buildings will be redecorated and painted, and will have new weather-stripping installed. Lavatories and blackboards will be reconditioned throughout the entire campus.

The new road behind Willard Straight Hall that is to run through the site of the old University Club house, will not be completed this year, since the fill, which already contains 12,000 yards of earth, needs about 2,500 more, which must then be allowed to settle for a sufficiently long period to insure solidity. This additional fill will be added this summer.

In the old armory, the gymnasium floor will be repaired, and the building will be redecorated.

BOOK REVIEW

WILLIAM MEYERS, JR., Think Nothing of It, Galleon Press. $2.00.

Meyers, writing in a light, humorous vein, has produced a small volume of short stories, which have been described as "concerning the activities of divers warm blooded gentlemen and unreluctant ladies, wandering husbands and wayward wives."

The book is far from being what that description implies. While it treats in general of men and women and their love affairs, it never approaches the pornographic in any single word or phrase, and never reaches that point even by implication.

Whether or not Meyers is the authority on women that he seems, it is impossible to say, but he writes with the utmost confidence.

His dialogue is natural, and rather convincing, but the humor which the book contains suffers something by his short sharp, and often incompleting sentences. That is to say, he writes in the most modern style, which, until you accustom yourself to it, may make reading less pleasant.

Meyers is at present living at 213 Front Street, Harrisburg, Pa. He is a member of the class of '22. P.

HENRY MORGENTHAU, JR., '13, recently appointed Secretary of the Treasury, according to Drew Pearson and Robert Allen, authors of The Washington Merry-Go-Round, is now in the midst of his "biggest fight—over income taxes." According to an article in the New York Mirror by these authors, Morgenthau "found his department organized so that it seemed to function chiefly for the benefit of the rich. . . . Furthermore Morgenthau found that every wealthy man's tax return was filed with the same examiner every year, so that it was relatively easy for the horde of Washington's income tax lawyers to cultivate that examiner. That horde of lawyers is giving Morgenthau the hardest fight he has had. . . . He has been an excellent organizer. He insists on having men around him he can trust, and without exception they swear by him."

JOHN R. MURLIN '16 M.D. has been awarded a research grant from the American Philosophical Society "for investigations into effects of high frequency currents on energy metabolism."

CORNELL ORCHESTRA Presents Concert

Cornell University's very admirable orchestra, made up largely of student talent, and augmented by a number of towns-people musicians, performed nicely on Tuesday, May 1, under the capable guidance of George L. Coleman '95 in presenting a well chosen program which included Max Bruch's Violin Concerto in G minor. Professor Gilbert Ross, of the Department of Music, was the star performer and guest artist for this work.

Needless to say, the University Orchestra is not a perfect organization. But when one thinks for a moment the trials and tribulations which are exclusively those of a university orchestra conductor one wonders just how George Coleman was able to develop the orchestra to the point to which he has.

Tschaikowsky's Fifth Symphony made up the first half of the program and was performed exceptionally well, if not brilliantly. If in certain parts the first violin section seemed to be dragging behind the rest of the players, and if the French horn players seemed to be having a little difficulty with their extremely intricate part, that was to be expected. Probably the audience as a whole was surprised at the fact that the faults of the orchestra as a whole were so notably absent. Outstanding in the presentation of this work were the second and fourth movements.

Following the intermission, the strong sections of the orchestra presented Haydn's Serenade in fine style. And then came the most impressive and most moving part of the program, Bruch's Concerto. Credit for this goes, not alone to Professor Ross, and to Mr. Coleman, but to the orchestra members as well. It was as if each one were playing his very best, in order that the chief artist might not be thrown off. Such a performance by an amateur organization is exceptional.

It is, and always will be, a matter of great wonder, that anyone can take a group of undergraduates, and mould from them an orchestra such as Cornell boasts, especially when one realizes the innumerable conflicts of rehearsals with dates, meetings, basketball games, and dances, which turn a director's hair white and make a concert such as this an almost superhuman feat. Nowhere near enough praise can be heaped upon the modest head of George Coleman, for what he has been able to do with the Orchestra. Nor can enough thanks be bestowed, on his behalf as well as on behalf of the University community, to those towns-people who form the steadier back-bone of the group and make it possible to hold together the less interested undergraduates.

COSMOPOLITAN DEBT

An effort is under way to pay off the debt of $11,000 which the International Association of Ithaca, Inc., inherited when it took over cosmopolitan affairs on the Cornell campus, through a membership drive.

Seven thousand dollars of this debt is in the form of a mortgage on the Cosmopolitan Club building, which is to be amortized at the rate of four hundred dollars each year. The remaining $4,000 consist of bills owed largely to local firms which have been allowed to accumulate over a long period. These will, of necessity, be paid as soon as possible.

It was the purpose of the new association to bring the Cosmopolitan Club back on a sound financial basis and to pay off its back bills which student treasurers had allowed to mount and accumulate. It is the Association's hope that with a responsible group of citizens in charge of the business management of the Club, it can eventually be made self-supporting, with a great increase of interest among students, both foreign and American.

The Association is not seeking members for itself, but for the Cosmopolitan Club. In this way, it is felt that more interest will be aroused in that organization, in participation as well as financial support.

The Cosmopolitan Club has pledged 75% of its income from new memberships toward paying off old indebtedness, and 25% to the furtherance of their program. Therefore, as soon as the debts are wiped out, a much larger program of activity and usefulness will be possible.

Recently the International Association published the International News of Ithaca which contained recent news of Cosmopolitan Club and International Association affairs. This has been sent to all former members of the Club.

LARGE BEQUEST

A bequest of $250,000 to Cornell University is included in the will of C. Sidney Shepard, capitalist of New York and New Haven, N. Y.

Cornell shares in the estate along with Yale University, the Northfield, Mass., School, churches, church organizations and relatives.

Although Mr. Shepard was not a Cornell graduate he served as a member of the University's board of trustees for 32 years. He was elected trustee in March, 1896, and served continuously to January, 1928. Mr. Shepard was also a former member of the Cornell University Medical College Council. [See also under Obituaries.]

AT THE ANNUAL DINNER of the Cornell Law Quarterly's editorial board the principal speakers were Judge Frederick E. Crane of the Court of Appeals and Mr. Jerome Frank '06 chief counsel to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Appointments and Promotions

THE Board of Trustees at the spring meeting here last Saturday adopted the budget for 1934-35 for the endowed colleges without further reduction of salaries of the University staff.

New appointments, announced at that time, were made to the teaching staff, promotions ratified and leaves of absence approved for the endowed and state colleges.

Dr. William I. Myers '14, professor of farm finance and agricultural economics, had his leave of absence extended to June 30, 1935, enabling him to continue as governor of the Farm Credit Administration.

Dr. Kurt Lewin of Berlin, German child psychologist here this year as acting professor of education on funds from the Rockefeller Foundation and the Emergency Committee in Aid of Displaced German Scholars, was reappointed for another year and will be assigned a seat in the University faculty and in the faculties of the Graduate School, Arts and Sciences and Home Economics.

PROFESSORS

Visit Clubs

Three well-known professors, Bristow Adams, Charles L. Durham '99, and Riverda H. Jordan, have returned from around the circuit, meeting with alumni, conferring with principals and headmasters of secondary schools, speaking at school assemblies, and conferring with students interested in entering Cornell. Professors Adams and Jordan were on trips of two weeks duration; Professor Durham was out for three weeks. They visited 26 cities.

Professor Adams' itinerary took him to Milwaukee, Chicago, Grand Rapids, Jackson, Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland. Foster M. Coffin '12, alumni representative, accompanied Professor Adams during the first week of his trip, visiting Milwaukee, Chicago and Grand Rapids.

Professor Durham swung through the south, stopping at Pittsburgh, Columbus, Dayton, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Louisville, Charleston, Norfolk, Washington, Baltimore, and Wilmington.

The tour of Professor Jordan, out into the middle west, included St. Louis, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Omaha, Des Moines, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Davenport.

The annual banquet of the Cornell Club of Milwaukee was held on April 10. Clair P. Nourse '22 as toastmaster introduced as speakers Professor Adams and Foster Coffin. Officers for the new year were elected: Henry D. Lindsay '10 president, succeeding F. Van Epps Mitchell '23; Henry M. Stillman '30, vice-president; Arthur C. Kletzsch, Jr., '25, secretary; Ernst Clarenbach, Jr., '31 was re-elected treasurer; additional members of the Board of Governors: Elliott B. Mason '20, Mitchell, and Nourse.

The Grand Rapids alumni meeting was the first Cornell gathering held there in many years. It was voted to form a club, with William A. Vawter, 2d '05, chairman, S. Eugene Osgood '04, and Frank L. DuMond '20, appointed as an organization committee.

DRAMATIC PRIZES

Announcement was made at the last meeting of the University Faculty of the winners of the 1934 Forbes Heermans Dramatic Competition, awarded to undergraduates for the best one-act plays on an American theme.

First prize went to Charles B. Moss '34, for his play This is What Happened. Second award was given to Avery B. Cohan '34, for his Dollar Deliriums, Ruth Beck '34, received honorable mention for her Frogs Become America.

CAREER CONFERENCE

A novel conference designed to help college students choose a suitable career will be held for a three-day session June 26-29 in Newark, N. J.

This "Choosing-a-Career Conference" will have a "faculty" composed of outstanding men from many professions. President Livingston Farrand is on the advisory board, which includes such men and women as President Aydelotte of Swarthmore, President Neilson of Smith, President Mary E. Woolley of Mt. Holyoke, President Compton of M.I.T., and President Ada M. Comstock of Radcliffe. The speakers will include men from the fields of advertising, journalism, shipping, steel, beauty culture, photography, radio, social service, the theatre, and many other professions.

"It is hoped," say the sponsors, "that the experiment will stimulate young men and women to think beyond a mere job and consider the career possibilities five or ten years hence in the fields they are entering. If successful, the conference may become an annual event."

Edward L. Bernays '12, public relations counsel, is named as representative of his profession at the conference. George Bijur, member of the administrative board of L. Bamberger and Co. where the Conference will have its headquarters, is general director.

WILLIAM C. WHITE '95, attorney for the village of Scarsdale, N. Y. has a new problem on his hands. A bright yellow lunch wagon, reputed to have cost $8,000, has been set up in a conspicuous place in the village, striking a discordant note in the midst of the village's "quaint English architecture." The villagers have arisen in indignation and want Mr. White to do something about it, which, however, is apparently outside of his jurisdiction.

'34 MEMORIAL FUND

Addressing a group of nearly one hundred campaign workers at a dinner in Willard Straight, Monday April 30, President Livingston Farrand opened the drive for the '34 Memorial Fund with a stirring description of the University, its purposes and accomplishments in the past, and the need for financial support for such institutions.

Dr. Farrand's address followed short informal talks by Robert E. Treman '09, and Louis C. Boochever, '12, who told the financial history of Cornell. The speakers were introduced by John N. Brownrigg, Jr., '34, toastmaster and chairman of the drive.

The purpose of the drive this year is to obtain a contribution from each and every member of the class, rather than to reach any set amount.

HOTEL STUDENTS EMPLOYED

Six students completed their four years work in the course of Hotel Administration in February 1934. The members of this group and their present addresses are: D. H. Clements, Childs Restaurant, 1485 Broadway, New York City; Frederick Gray, The Bartram, Philadelphia; A. Harry Jackson, The Baryram, Philadelphia; V. F. Ludewig, 317 Eddy Street, Ithaca, New York; J. R. Mangan, 41-16 50th Street, Woodside, Long Island, New York; H. E. Westfall, 317 Eddy Street, Ithaca, New York; Ludewig and Westfall are both acting as assistants to Professors Meek and Courtney respectively and will continue in these capacities until June.

IRVING C. BROWER '01, recently named city manager of New Rochelle, has had an interesting career. After graduating from Cornell, he started as a rodman at Ridley, Pa., for the old Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington Railroad. "I was with the PBW in the office of the PAE," he said. "We used letters even in those days." After serving as division engineer for the Chicago and Alton some years later, Brower became city engineer of Evanston, Ill. Later he held the same position in Pontiac, Mich., Lima, O., and Greensboro, N. C. Recently he has been head of the subdivisional Code Authority of Ohio with headquarters in Cleveland.

SEVEN STUDENTS have been named to the Board of Managers of Willard Straight Hall as a result of elections for positions on that body held May 1 and 2. They are: Chakratong Tongyai, grad., Bangkok, Siam; T. W. Kheel '35, New York; A. M. Lucha '36, Utica; Paul H. Reinhardt '35, Oakland, California; Charles E. Dykes '35, Springfield, Ohio; Miss Charlotte Putnam '36, Larchmont, N. Y.; and R. A. Scallan '35, Terrace Park, Ohio.

The Week on the Campus

CORNELL may be momentarily leading the league in baseball, crimson placards may seek to excite undergraduate "workers" over May Day. Sir Arthur Stanley Eddington's lectures may progress so far into the remotenesses of interstellar space that even the mathematicians are lost, but what really interested the students last week was the news that Paul Whiteman's complete orchestra will play here for the Navy Ball on May 25. The whole outfit will appear including Paul himself and the alluring Ramona.

THE PROCEEDS of the Navy Ball furnish the chief financial prop of the Cornell band and when students do not flock to the Navy Ball it's bad news for the band. But Paul Whiteman will bring them in from Varna to the Rhine. A good many conservative investors would be willing to wager that he will break the all-time attendance record established by Guy Lombardo in the consulship of Joe Beacham.

THE WIND-UP of the underclass disorders incident to the Freshman Banquet and the Sophomore Smoker sounded like old times. After the last named event those who had borne the brunt called it a day, went home and washed up. But some 200 sophomores who had previously taken little or no part in the activities marched down town. They were shunted up a side street and gradually dispersed with no damage to person or property. One student—the wrong one—was arrested and locked up charged with disorderly conduct, resisting an officer, etc. In the morning his hearing was adjourned and the boy was paroled in the custody of Professor C. L. Durham who once again functioned successfully in the familiar role of Tribune of the Plebes.

YOU WILL NOT be surprised to learn that after the incidents recorded in the preceding paragraph there appeared undergraduate letters in the Sun protesting against unnecessary roughness on the part of the police. When you were a sophomore you also believed that night sticks should be wielded con amore in breaking up harmless student raids through the business section of Ithaca and only on the heavily upholstered portions of the person. Human nature doesn't change much.

THIS DEPARTMENT could (but it won't) print the names of 20 professors now at Cornell who as sophomores (1) took part in down-town marches (2) were slapped a tergo with night sticks and then (3) wrote indignant letters complaining of police brutality. As I remember it we referred to them as "armed Kossacks" in my time.

THE CHI PSIS and the Alpha Delta Phis gave largely attended faculty teas on Sunday afternoon. The boys do these things with astonishing skill and increasing facility. The Alpha Deltas have introduced a new gadget. When a professor drives up there is a freshman to relieve him of his Ford and to park the thing for him. Later the same freshman seeks the professor out in the crush and returns his keys.

THE DRIVE for the 1934 Memorial Fund started on Monday with a dinner to the drivers in the Terrace Room of Willard Straight. The captains and troopers were spurred on by speeches from President Farrand, R. E. Treman '09 and L. C. Boochever '12. After the first day 8½% of the men and 28% of the women had subscribed.

THIS DEPARTMENT was, it seems, in error when it announced two weeks ago the passing of the Sun's department known for 20 years as the Berry Patch and the establishment, in place thereof, of a new satirical column to be called Beer and Skittles. More in sorrow than in anger has this error been called to our attention—repeatedly and in print. The Berry Patch will continue to appear, it seems, most of the time. The new column will take its place occasionally—once a week perhaps. And the new one isn't to be Beer and Skittles at all. It is Skittles and Beer. Our apologies.

THE SPRING FOOTBALL campaign was brought to a conclusion with the practice of May 4.

ITHACA was not one of those cities which moved its clocks an hour ahead when April passed into May. We are essentially a rural community, which must regulate its life on the rising of the sun and the going down of the same—on the dew upon the clover and the natural roosting habits of the fowls of the air. Ithaca is upon standard time and you'd better remember that when you come back for games and things.

PERHAPS we bore you with too many extracts from the agony column of the Cornell Sun, but to us these advertisements are human documents which paint the picture of current undergraduate life upon the campus with a degree of stark realism to which art can never attain—

Lost—Tan camel's hair coat, McCreery label, at Beaux Arts Ball Friday night. Reward. Phone Meyer 9684.

Lost—New portable typewriter; loser left without other means of paying expenses; Reward.

Lost—Among other things, pair of dirty white buckskin shoes in front of Old Armory Saturday night; purely sentimental value. Moderate reward. Call 9579.

THE TRUSTEES met last Saturday—always an exciting event upon the campus. From the standpoint of the community the news of that meeting is both good and bad. It is good to the extent that academic salaries will not suffer a further cut and it is bad to the extent that Professor Morris Bishop has been granted a sabbatic leave and will not be with us for the second term next year. Provided, of course, that he succeeds in renting his house.

THE DEWITT HISTORICAL Society, founded in 1865, but for 30 years last past moribund, has been revived and is again a going concern. The society is devoted to the history of this locality and to the preservation of documents, memorials and monuments connected therewith. It was founded largely at the instigation of Ezra Cornell and at the time of building the Cornell Library. The plans for the new building provided a room for a Farmers' Club and another for an Historical Society. Neither existed. Ezra Cornell wanted both and he got both. The archives reveal that Francis Miles Finch did most of the dirty work in organizing the historical society and was its first secretary. Judge Finch was at the time a young lawyer in the community and not averse to pleasing Mr. Cornell.

AMONG THOSE elected to Phi Beta Kappa on Wednesday was Mr. Jake Goldbas. This is news only because Mr. Goldbas is the University's best boxer and the same young man who made that first touchdown against Pennsylvania last Thanksgiving day. He is to be our boxing coach next year. In appearance Mr. Goldbas is not of the conventional Phi Beta Kappa type. He looks more as if he had spent his first three years of boxing lessons in learning how to block left jabs with his face. For this reason it took the faculty a long time to find out—and to be convinced—that his interests are intellectual, that he possesses one of the best minds on the campus and that he is an outstanding student. R.B.

"ELIJAH" AND THE New York Orchestra

Cornell music audiences were given varied treats over the weekend, which were guaranteed to appeal to any taste, and which apparently appealed to most.

On Friday evening, under the baton of Nikolai Sokoloff, the New York Orchestra presented the final of the University concert series, which also ushered in the spring music festival on the Cornell campus. The principal number on the Friday evening program was the favorite Brahms' Fourth Symphony. This work was done exquisitely, and with true artistry as Brahms' Fourth should be done. The second half of the program began with Houssorgsky's A Night on Bald Mountain, and continued with Liadoff's Enchanted Lake and Rimsky-Korsakoff's Le Coq d'Or.

Saturday afternoon, Mr. Sokoloff conducted his players in what was frankly announced as a "pop" concert in Bailey Hall, featuring Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony No. 8 in B Minor. That this work still holds audiences spellbound was clearly evidenced by the behaviour of the listeners that afternoon. The remainder of the program consisted of Dvorak's Overture, Carnival, which preceded the Schubert symphony; a Johann Strauss Waltz, delightfully done; Tschaiakowsky' Andante Cantabile string quartet movement, and Sibelius' symphonic poem, Finlandia. Altogether, a charming program, even though as equally "pop."

The musical week was climaxed Saturday evening, with the presentation of Mendelssohn's Oratorio Elijah, in the Drill Hall, with a chorus of 439 voices, a choir of 25 voices, five soloists, and the accompaniment of the New York Orchestra.

Professor Paul Weaver directed the production from beginning to end, with a true and sincere assuredness

Sokoloff, after conducting two concerts in as many days, relaxed and sat back to listen to his orchestra as Professor Weaver conducted it. Those of the audience to whom Elijah was unfamiliar were obviously agreeably surprised at the colorful and tuneful rendering.

The audience was held throughout the performance by the dramatic theme, and the story of Elijah and his troubles in coverting and keeping converted the people of Israel.

Outstanding was the work of the choir in the early part of the oratorio when they sang as priests of Baal crying to their God to ignite the fire under an offering as Elijah stands by sneering visibly at their inability to get results from their idol.

It seemed to this critic that Miss Doris Doe, contralto, and Dan Gridley, tenor, more than held their own with Richard Bonelli, famed Metropolitan baritone and Miss Emily Roosevelt, soprano.

Henry Carey, Jr., Ithaca boy soprano, had a difficult role, which he performed admirably, although in the vast spaces of the Drill Hall, his voice at times sounded strained.

This performance of Elijah is the last of many well-remembered ones here. The first time the oratorio was given in Ithaca, it was under the leadership of Hollis Dann, in 1903, and by the Festival Chorus. The accompanists were George Daland, organist, and the Boston Festival Orchestra, under direction of Emil Mollenauer. Mr. and Mrs. Eric Dudley were soloists and the place was Sage Chapel.

FOOTE BASKETBALL CAPTAIN

William H. Foote '35, of Milwaukee, Wisc., son of Edward T. Foote '06, was elected captain of the 1934-35 basketball team at a meeting of the lettermen held during the past week.

Letters for the 1933-34 season were awarded to the following men: Foote, Ernie Downer '36, Poughkeepsie; Charles E. Dykes '35, Springfield, Ohio; John J. Ferraro '34, Buffalo; Louis M. Freed '36, WilkesBarre, Pa.; Nelson D. Houck '34, Poplar Ridge, N. Y.; A. C. Taylor '34, Wyomissing Hills, Pa.; John C. Wilson, Jr., '35, of Milwaukee, son of John C. Wilson '06; and Steve Voelker '34, New York.

A cup donated by the Buffalo Alumni Club was awarded to John J. Ferraro as the team's most valuable man. Nelson Houck received a cup, donated by Coach Howard Ortner '18, as best defense man. Steve Voelker received an anonymously donated cup as the man who had shown the most improvement.

A TUTORIAL PLAN to individualize the education of superior students of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences at the University of Illinois has been proposed and will become effective when it is officially approved by the University Senate and the Board of Trustees. The plan will give juniors and seniors with high averages during their first two years an opportunity to pursue a part of their work under a tutorial adviser rather than to follow the formal classroom instruction. Students under this tutorial system will be given a comprehensive examination by a faculty committee at the end of the senior year.—School and Society.

A FACULTY BASEBALL LEAGUE will again be formed this spring, according to H. H. Benson '29, traffic control executive, who is making out the schedule. Eight teams have already signed up for the play, as compared with ten last year.

JACOB S. FASSETT, JR., '36, son of Jay Fassett '12, (Jake, to you) has won the competition for the position of Manager of the University Musical Clubs.

HORSE SHOW

The fourteenth annual Cornell Horse Show will take place Saturday, May 19, on the Upper Alumni Field, and will be the most ambitious presentation of its kind ever undertaken by the R.O.T.C. here.

In addition to continuing the steeplechase, which was the outstanding event at last year's show, several new events have been announced, by the committee. Among these features will be ladies' and gentlemen's saddle classes for horses owned and maintained in Tompkins County. Fine harness horses will be shown this year from many famous stables.

In the gymkhana events there will be a mounted obstacle race, musical chairs contest, and mounted wrestling. An obstacle jumping event will also be staged.

In all there will be 19 different classes covering three- and five-gaited saddle horses, jumpers and hunters, children's classes, polo ponies, and the climaxing steeplechase. Since such a large number of events have been scheduled, the show this year will start at 11 a.m.

The committee in charge this year consists of: Major General D. E. Nolan, honorary chairman; Colonel J. J. Fulmer, chairman; Major C. S. Ferrin, secretary; Captain S. E. Bullock, treasurer; Bart J. Viviano '33, executive committee chairman; B. L. Gordon '33, Max Dercum '34, D. B. Goodwillie '34, Don L. McCaskey '34, A. J. Nichols '34, C. L. Ranney '34, A. A. Reed '34, W. A. Rider '34, Starbuck Smith '34, Dan S. Stevenson '34, A. M. Unger '34, M. A. Bradley '35, J. W. Cobb '35, and W. J. Williams '35.

SPRING DAY

Sage Green will be the site of the Spring Day Circus which is to take place on May 26, according to information released recently by the Spring Day Circus Committee. More than this the committee will not reveal concerning its plans for the forthcoming event.

Even the possibilities of another duck race, perhaps on land, have been suggested by thoughtful undergraduates, as have ground-hog relays, snail sweepstakes, and other similar enterprises. With the committee keeping mum, anything may happen (and probably will).

UNIVERSITY HELPS ATHLETICS

Acting upon recommendations of the Policy Committee of the University Athletic Association, the Board of Trustees authorized at its spring meeting last week, a loan in support of the program of the Association.

The recent petition of the students was received by the Board, and referred to President Livingston Farrand with the suggestion that he report his recommendations at a subsequent meeting.

About The Clubs

Philadelphia

At the annual meeting of the Club the following officers were elected: president, C. Rodman Stull '07; vice-president, James Harper '22; treasurer, Samuel F. Eldredge '26; secretary, Charles B. Howland '26; assistant secretary, Stanley Law '17; directors, Walter W. Buckley '26; Wilson H. Patterson '09; Chandler Burpee '17; Howard M. Rogers '07; Roy L. Williams '93; George T. Ashton '12; Charles D. Mackay, Jr., '21; Frank L. O'Brien, Jr., '31.

The Club house at 1219 Spruce Street is open for luncheons every day and makes an ideal place for Cornell men to gather and settle the affairs of the nation each day.

Jack Moakley, track coach, was the luncheon guest last Friday on the occasion of the Penn Relay Carnival.

The Club is much encouraged by recent developments and looks forward to an improving year.

"Emil und die Detektive," a German talking film, was shown at the Cosmopolitan Club on Thursday evening, as one of the regular series of foreign movies being presented by the Club. A large crowd of students from the German department swelled the audience to "crib," for they are reading Erich Kastner's famous story in the classes there this term. It was condoned cribbing, however, because some of the professors had seen the film before and stated that the film was so amusing and so well done, that their students really ought to see it, even if they were reading the story.

CORNELL DAY DANCE

Visiting high school and preparatory school guests on the Campus for Cornell Day will be treated to a dance in the Drill Hall on Saturday evening, following the other events of the week-end. Students and faculty members will be charged a moderate sum for the dance, which is being run by the Student Council for the benefit of the International Association of Ithaca, and the Cosmopolitan Club. John L. Mott, executive secretary of the Association, and assistant to the Dean of the Faculty, is assisting in the arrangements.

ALBERT E. PETERMANN '00, general counsel of the Calumet and Hecla Consolidated Copper Company, has been appointed one of eleven men to constitute the Code Authority for the administration of the Copper Code under the NRA. Petermann is a resident of Detroit with offices in the Dime Bank Building, and a member of the firm of Wiley Streeter, Smith and Ford.

WOMEN'S CORNELL DAY

Fifty-seven young women of sub-freshman age, appeared on the campus Saturday morning for a women's Cornell Day, sponsored as an experiment by the Ithaca (women) Cornell Club, and the women's groups of Utica, Syracuse, Cortland, and Rochester.

The girls arrived at about 10 a. m. and were assigned to student guides who showed them over the campus, and took them to confer with professors. At luncheon, all visiting girls and their guides were guests at Balch Halls, and spent the afternoon driving about, boating on Beebe Lake, until 4 o'clock when they met for tea in Willard Straight.

Albert R. Mann '04, provost of the University addressed the girls there, and explained the set-up of the various colleges at Cornell, and discussed entrance requirements.

Members of the committee of the Ithaca Club were Miss Lillian Fasoldt '27, president of the Cornell Women's Club of Ithaca and Mrs. R. C. Osborne (Agda Swenson) '20. Miss Mary Donlon '20 of New York was also present to take part in the program. The student committee, which arranged for guides for the girls consisted of Miss Isabel White '34, president of the W.S.G.A., chairman; and Norma Nordstrom '35, Ruth Harder '35, and Helen Smith '36.

EZRA CORNELL Hotel-for-a-Day

Friday saw the opening, and Saturday the closing, of the famed Ezra Cornell Hotel-for-a-Day, in Willard Straight Hall, with more than 360 persons in attendance to make the affair one of the largest in the history of the Cornell School of Hotel Administration and of Willard Straight.

Members of the Board of Directors of the Cornell Society of Hotelmen, alumni of the hotel school, met early Friday morning in preparation for the annual spring meeting of the Society on Saturday. Seniors in the hotel school and guests met for luncheon in the terrace room of Willard Straight at noon, and following the luncheon there was a round-table discussion of hotel problems, at which visiting hotelmen aired their views and presented their problems. Professor George F. Warren '03, gold-manipulator, and A. L. Olsen, former member of the hotel school staff and now with the NRA in Washington, took part in the conference on hotel economics.

In the evening came the formal opening of the Hotel-for-a-day, with a banquet and dance in the Memorial Hall. David B. Mulligan, president of the Bowman-Biltmore hotels, delivered the principal address. He was introduced by Hubert E. Westfall '34, managing director of the annual enterprise. Professor H. B. Meek, director of the hotel school, spoke briefly for the school.

The banquet over, the tables were cleared from the floor, while coffee was served in the women's lounges, and then the room was given over to dancing. Despite several house-party dances on the hill, the party was well attended, and extremely successful.

The entire dinner was prepared and served by students in the hotel school. Every possible task, but one, was performed by the students during the entire period when the hotel was open.

The door man was a student, despite his natty maroon uniform; the desk clerks were students, even though they also act as desk clerks for Willard Straight; the bell boys were students; the hostess was a student; the chef a student; and likewise the manager, the assistant managers, the waiters, the undercooks, the bus boys, and all the other attendants and servitors.

One job was not filled this year by a hotel student, however, and that was the job of page-boy. The twenty-four-year-old diminutive page-boy (he's exactly forty-two inches tall) whose voice goes out over the radio to advertise a smart cigarette, arrived in Ithaca on Thursday evening, and remained over the week-end to handle the paging assignments. His presence was the signal for students to start smoking the brand of cigarettes he advertises, for before the hotel opened he handed out small packets of them to all those who were within reach. Because his height is his fortune, the tiny page has had himself insured for $100,000 which amount he receives if he grows an inch within the period of one year. Since he is already about twenty-four, he's considered a fairly safe "risk."

DWYER ELECTED

He is senior partner in the firm of Marshall, Mehorn, Marlur, and Martin. The Irvine Foundation was established in 1924 by the Cornell chapter of Phi Delta Phi, national legal fraternity. Each year some outstanding lawyer is invited to Cornell on this foundation to deliver the lecture before the entire student body of the Law School.

FOSTER M. COFFIN '12, alumni representative, and Edgar A. Whiting '29, assistant director of Willard Straight Hall, were speakers at the dinner of the Cornell Club of Albany held at the University Club in that city on Thursday evening, April 19. Motion pictures of the campus, and of the last Pennsylvania football game were shown after the dinner. About fifty Cornellians attended.

W. ATLEE BURPEE, JR., '17 has sailed for Europe to exhibit six plants of the $10,000 nasturtium which won the highest awards at the recent flower shows in the large Eastern cities. The plants will be in bloom and on exhibition at the Chelsea and Convent Garden flower shows and in Holland, Germany, Belgium, and France. This double hybrid nasturtium was developed by David Burpee '17. In order to cheat the seasons and bring it to its height in record time he shipped seeds to Buenos Aires, Puerto Rico, and Australia by air mail.

Second Harvard Game

In the second game, Harvard started things off with a run in the first, but Cornell retaliated with two in the latter half of the session. During the next two frames both teams were scoreless, Harvard chalked up another in the fourth, and two more in the final frame, for an easy win.

Miscall, again at bat twice, scored once more for Cornell. Bill Dugan, left-fielder, scored the other Cornell run.

Pennsylvania Game

Cornell dropped to third place in the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League by virtue of the defeat handed to the Eckley-coached players on Saturday by the team of the University of Pennsylvania, 5-1.

Don Kellett, always a problem, was largely responsible for Cornell's defeat, as usual, and this time batted a home run, and helped in two scoring spurts, which defeated Cornell.

Although Cornell stands in third place, Pennsylvania and Harvard, who are tied at first place have each three wins and two defeats, while Cornell has four wins and three defeats, so that the position isn't as bad as it might be. A split in this week's Harvard-Pennsylvania double header, and a Cornell victory over Yale will restore the Ithaca aggregation to its former standing as league leader.

Cornell's single score came in the fifth inning, when Mayer walked, and advanced on two fielding errors, to come home on Draney's sacrifice to right field. Penn scored in the first, and the sixth, while holding Cornell completely blank during the rest of the game.

Cornell threatened again in the ninth, after loading the bases on Kellett's error, a pass, and a fielder's choice. Barton, the Pennsylvania pitcher, pulled himself out of the hole, however, and struck out Kreimer, pinch hitting for Pross, and flied Draney out.

Batting Averages

Bob Frost, Cornell player, is tied for the league leadership in batting so far this season, with an average of .500, according to figures released recently by the League.

Nevin, Harvard, and Morgan, Columbia, share honors with Frost. Nevin, at bat 18 times in 6 games, has 9 hits credited to him. Frost, in 3 games, was up 8 times, and made four hits, and Morgan, in one game hit once in two times at bat. Nevin's record looks as though it would be hard to beat, although the season is not yet half over.

Bradley and Kreimer, Cornell men, are listed among the .333 hitters; Dugan is hitting .292; Downer and Seranati are in the .273 class; and the others string along down the list.

Cornell stands in fourth place with a team batting average of .235 as compared to Harvard's average of .273 at the head of the list and Dartmouth's average of .100 at the foot.

In team fielding Cornell's standing and average are both better, being nearly that of Columbia, who tops Cornell by four hundred-thousandths, which is of course absurd. Here are the figures: Columbia fielding average—.96296; Cornell fielding average—.96292.

Tennis

Princeton courtmen defeated the Cornell tennis team on Friday on the Ithaca courts, 8-1. Steve Hamilton, Cornell's undefeated singles player, scored the only victory for Cornell. His win was the second point scored against Princeton at tennis this season.

The doubles, between Bacon and Flynn, of Princeton and Marcis and Sklasky of Cornell, was the only match in addition to Hamilton's victory, in which Princeton did not win two straight sets. In this match, the Cornellians showed spirited resistance, with the sets going, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

Summaries: Singles: Hamilton (C) defeated Foulke (P), 4-6, 6-1, 6-3; Flynn (P) defeated Condon (C) 6-4, 6-2; Lynch (P) defeated Sklarsky (C) 6-4, 6-1; Tilney (P) defeated Tilden (C) 6-0, 7-5; Bacon (P) defeated Doughty (C) 6-1, 6-1. Doubles: Tilden and Foulke (P) defeated Anderson and Condon (C). 6-1, 6-1; Bacon and Flynn (P) defeated Marcus and Sklarsky (C) 6-4, 4-6, 6-4; Tilney and Whitman (P) defeated Tilden and Doughty (C) 6-3, 6-2.

Obituaries

CHARLES SIDNEY SHEPARD, of New Haven, Oswego County, N. Y., retired industrialist and philanthropist, and for over thirty years a trustee of the University, died April 26 in his suite in the Roosevelt of pneumonia.

Born in Buffalo on July 29, 1856, he was the son of Sidney and Elizabeth De Angelis Wells Shepard. Mr. Shepard was graduated from Yale in 1878 and took a law course at Hamilton College in 1879.

Upon the death of his father, who was a prominent industrialist and railroad man, Mr. Shepard succeeded in 1893 to many positions of trust, and devoted a great deal of time to the care of the estate. He gave large amounts to charity and other worthy objects, but almost invariably anonymously.

Mr. Shepard was a director of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad Company, Seaboard Air Line Railway Company and Fort Dodge, Des Moines & Southern Railroad Company. In 1910 he had resigned from many other directorates.

He was admitted to the bar in 1879, but did not practice the profession. Mr. Shepard was chairman of the board of the Republic Metalware Company. He was a member of the Metropolitan Museum of Art; a life member of the American Museum of Natural History, American Philological Society, New York State Historical Association, New England Historical-Genealogical Society and of the Buffalo Fine Arts Academy, and a member of the American Social Science Association.

Mr. Shepard also was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon, Phi Beta Kappa, and various patriotic educational and philanthropic societies. He was a Republican and a Presbyterian. His clubs were the Buffalo, Saturn (Buffalo), Fortnightly (Oswego), and University, Lawyers' and Yale (New York).

He never married. He was a cousin of the late Judge P. C. J. De Angelis '71, of Utica.

CHARLES DUANE BAKER '73, an attorney and a former United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, died April 23, at St. Luke's Hospital. He was 88 years old. Born at Painted Post, N. Y., Mr. Baker attended Oberlin College and Cornell. A member of the State Legislature from 1882 to 1886, Mr. Baker also had been secretary to the commission which codified the State laws of civil evidence. He was considered an authority on custom-house law and was at one time a special attorney for the Federal Government. Mr. Baker was one of the founders of the Harlem Republican Club. He was a member of the Steuben Society and Delta Upsilon. Surviving are two sons and a daughter.

WALTER J. FLANIGAN '81 A. B., retired dramatic and music critic of The Newark Evening News, died of a heart attack in his sleep during the night at his home in Bloomfield, N. J. on April 25. He was 74 years old. Mr. Flanigan held his post on The News from Sept. 1, 1901, until Sept. 2 of last year, when he retired on the advice of physicians. Born in Binghamton, N. Y., Mr. Flanigan was educated there before entering Cornell. After graduation he went to work on The Binghamton Republican in an editorial capacity. After seven years on that paper he went to The Syracuse Post-Standard as a dramatic critic. He came to The News from Syracuse. He is survived by a sister, Miss Anna Jean Flanigan.

EDWIN VERNON MORGAN '98 Grad., former American Ambassador to Brazil, died April 15, at his home in Petropolis of angina pectoris. He was 69 years old.

The body will be returned to the United States. The embassy has asked Mr. Morgan's brother for permission to allow the government to take charge of the funeral.

Mr. Morgan recently received the order of the Southern Cross from the Brazilian Government in recognition of his services during twenty-one years of diplomatic service here. The press eulogizes Mr. Morgan and recalls that recently he said that he desired to die here. A resident Vargas has decreed full military honors for Mr. Morgan.

Mr. Morgan, until his retirement at the beginning of the Roosevelt administration a year ago, had been Ambassador to Brazil for twenty-one years, a record of continued service for American diplomats.

Born in Aurora, N. Y., on Feb. 2, 1865, he was the son of Henry A. and Margaret Bogart Morgan. He was a grandson of the late Edwin B. Morgan, who represented the Cayuga district in Congress for many years, and who was a close friend of Secretary William H. Seward.

From 1905 to 1910, Mr. Morgan filled the somewhat troubled post of Minister to Cuba, from 1910 to 1911 he was Minister to Uruguay and Paraguay, and the following year he was appointed Minister to Portugal.

The following year, 1912, he started his long period of service in Brazil when he was appointed Ambassador by President Taft.

A few years ago he was described by a prominent Brazilian as "an honorary Brazilian, owing to his long residence there and his thorough and sympathetic knowledge of the entire country."

He had never married. He was an honorary member of the Instituto Historico e Geographico Brasileiro of Rio de Janeiro and a member of the Metropolitan Club, Washington, and the Century Club, New York.
