Government Aids Needy Students

Funds Provided by F.E.R.A. Furnish Jobs for Many and Help the University Too, Says Herbert H. Williams

FEDERAL funds available for needy students have been of great service, not only to the individual Cornell student, but to the University as well, according to a recent announcement of Herbert H. Williams, director of the Placement Bureau of the University.

The FERA is giving funds to all eleemosynary institutions of which not more than $20 a month is to be given to 12 per cent of the students and graduate students who would otherwise be unable to return to college. The student in his turn is required to do a certain amount of work in jobs created by the institution. Regular university employes, and students engaged in jobs necessary in the administration are not thereby deprived of work, for the new jobs are created specially for the needy students.

Approximately 90 percent of the students receiving aid of this sort last year had jobs which were related to their training, Williams said. Eighty-two were engaged in special research problems, 200 did clerical work, thirty-one did special work in the library, ninety-six were engaged in preparing and caring for materials in laboratories, two were switchboard operators in Barnes Hall, and only about ten percent were engaged in physical labor.

The majority of those doing physical work were foresters who worked at cleaning up lots or trimming and pruning trees in the University's forest.

Students are not confined to working on university projects, but may do work down town for the Red Cross, the Community Chest, or similar organizations. Williams tries, however, to keep most of the students on the hill, because of the amount of time they would have to spend going to and from their jobs, were they in the city.

Several interesting research projects have been made possible through the use of these funds. The work of Dr. Kurt Lewin, German psychologist, was augmented by student help paid by the FERA funds. Certain reference work in the library formerly impossible was made possible by the use of students working on the FERA salaries. [Continued on page 420

Americans Lose to English Stars

Cornell Athletes Take Three of Five American Firsts

THE combined track and field forces of Oxford and Cambridge Universities defeated the American team of athletes from Cornell and Princeton, 7 to 5, in the seventh renewal of the international series at the White City Stadium, London, July 21.

The featured event of the meet was the mile run in which England's Jack Lovelock defeated Princeton's famed Bonthron after Paul Vipond, of Cornell, had set the pace for nearly three quarters of the distance.

Lovelock, who conquered Bonthron a year ago at Princeton when the combined forces staged a meet on the western side of the Atlantic, again led Bonthron to the tape, winning by a yard in the slow time of 4:15.4. Bonthron also lost the 880 yard dash when J. C. Stothard, of Cambridge, outdistanced him in that event to cross the tape five yards ahead in 1:58.6.

Charley Stanwood, former Bowdoin College star, was the only man to score a double victory. Running for Oxford, Stanwood took both the 120 yard high and the 220 yard low hurdle races.

Cornell athletes won three of the five first places to come to the American team. Dick Hardy, during the past year captain of the Red and White forces, took the 100 yard dash; Charley Scott, Cornell high jumper, won his event; and Bob Kane walked off with the 440 yard dash. Princeton winners were Alex McWilliams in the pole vault, and Mike Berman in the shot put.

Lovelock won by a yard in a thrilling race with Bonthron, who had chased him to the then record mile of 4:07.6 at Princeton a year previously, a mark since broken by Glenn Cunningham, on the same track earlier this spring. It was a startling upset for the Americans, who had been led to believe a knee operation last winter had robbed Lovelock of much of his speed. Bonthron, only two weeks previously, had established a new world mark of 3:48.8 for the 1500 meter run, and was thought to be at the top of his form.

Charley Stanwood, competing for Oxford, repeated his victory of last year in the 120 meter high hurdles, in the opening event. Pilbrow, his team mate, was second, and George Willock of Princeton third.

Bob Kane, of Cornell, came through with a brilliant victory in the quarter to win in the fast time of 48.8 seconds. Rathbone of Cambridge trailed Kane by a yard, as the Cornell runner came within two seconds of the British record.

Cornell's former intercollegiate sprint champion, Dick Hardy, chalked up another victory as he outsped the favored Cambridge sprint ace, E. I. Davis, to take the 100-yard dash by a yard with Bob Linders, also of Cornell, third, only two yards behind the winner. The time was ten seconds flat.

Mike Berman, of Princeton, made it three straight firsts when he chalked up a toss of 44 feet 9 inches in the shot put, with Walt Wood, of Cornell, second with 43 feet 10 inches.

P. D. Ward, of Cambridge, squared the competition at three firsts for each team, when he defeated Henry Hogan, of Princeton, in the three-mile run, with C. O. Healy, of Oxford, third.

Davis came back in the 220 to win from Kane, who was making his second start of the meet. Kane was nosed out only by inches as the English star raced across the line ahead of him. Third place went to Jimmy Curran, of Princeton.

Captain-elect Walt Merwin, of Cornell, intercollegiate indoor hurdles champion, met with misfortune, and crashed to the track at the fourth hurdle in the 120 high hurdle event.

Bruce Kerr, Cornell distance runner, was suffering with sinus trouble and was unable to compete in the meet.

Had the meet been scored on a point system such as is used in America, Cornell and Princeton would have won, but the system used was that of giving one point for each first place, and not counting seconds or thirds, except in case of a tie, when second places would be counted.

KANE KEEPS ON

After the meet in London, Kane and Bonthron flew to Stockholm, Sweden, where they joined a team of picked A.A.U. runners and field events champions, with whom they have been traveling through Europe and meeting crack athletes in many different countries.

At Stockholm, the American team won six events from the Swedish athletes. Kane garnered two first places, in the 200 meter distance in 21.8 and the 400 meter stretch in 48.1.

A week later, in Oslo, Norway, Kane added another victory to his string of foreign conquests, when he won the 200 meter dash in 22 flat. He also ran on two winning relay teams, at 400 and 1600 meters.

At Amsterdam, Holland, however, the American team ran into trouble. Jack Lovelock, who defeated Bonthron at London, took part in the meet and again defeated his rival. Kane lost when Christian Berger, of Holland, won the 200 meter dash. Kane was third.

SECOND IN JUMP

Edward Ratkoski '35, Cornell high jumper, placed second in that event in a meet between Poland's native track stars, and a team of athletes of Polish descent from the United States, when he was beaten out by Plawczyk after jumping 5 feet 11 inches.

This mark is four inches higher than the leap of 5 feet 7 inches with which Ratkoski won the high jump event at the Polish Olympic games, when Polish athletes from all over the world met at Warsaw.

DUGAN LEADS LEAGUE

William D. Dugan '35, Cornell left fielder last season, led the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League in tripling according to the league figures released during the summer months.

Dugan, who is the son of William J. Dugan '07, former secretary of the University, and former graduate manager of athletics, was elected captain of the Cornell team for the coming year. He has been on the varsity team only one season, but developed into one of the team's strongest threats as a hitter and base-runner, and one of the most dependable men when it came to fielding.

Obituaries

COL. WEBB C. HAYES '76, son of President Rutherford Hayes, died recently in Marion, Ohio, after an illness of nearly a year. He was seventy-eight. Hayes was the second son of a United States President to attend Cornell. The other was the late Jesse Root Grant, son of President Ulysses S. Grant, who attended Cornell from 1874 to 1877. Hayes entered Cornell as a student in 1872, and remained until 1875. When his father was elected governor of Ohio for the third time, Hayes left Cornell to become one of his secretaries. He was advanced to private secretary after the family entered the White House, and then went into business when his father's presidential term expired in 1881. Colonel Hayes overcame the proverbial handicap of being a president's son to win distinction as a soldier, as an organizing industrialist, and, as a hobby and avocation, in the field of historical research. He served his first active life as a soldier in the Spanish American war, and later in the Philippine Insurrection, the Boxer Rebellion, the trouble along the Mexican border, both in 1911 and 1913, and finally during the World War on the Italian front and as a department commander in France. He was wounded once, in crossing the San Juan river in Cuba during the Spanish War, and received the Congressional Medal for his feats of daring in the Philippines. In business, Colonel Hayes progressed from the treasurership of the Whipple Manufacturing Company through the organization periods of the National Carbon and Union Carbide Companies. These activities engaged him from 1881 to 1901. When the trouble started on the Mexican border, Colonel Hayes was one of the first to go, and was placed in command of a detachment of Ohio troops with the rank of Colonel. At the outbreak of the World War, he caught one of the earliest steamers from New York for Europe, and it was announced by the government that he was going to observe the European armies in action. It turned out however, that he was sent as a verbal dispatch bearer for the United States, carrying messages of great importance from the embassies and legations in London, and from the headquarters of the various armies to the capitals of the different countries. This duty lasted until 1916. When the United States entered the war, Colonel Hayes promptly offered his services for active duty. He was then already well past the age limit, but he served regional brigades of British and French soldiers on the Italian front in 1917 and 1918, and was later made regional commander of the American Expeditionary Forces in the south of France. He was decorated in 1918 by Marshall Lyautey of France on behalf of the sultan of Turkey. After his return to the United States at the close of the war, Colonel Hayes returned to his family home at Spiegel Grove, Ohio, near Fremont.

C. RODMAN STULL '07 was fatally injured in an automobile accident near Philadelphia recently, on his way home from the Merion Cricket Club, when his automobile collided at a street intersection with that of Lewis H. Tilge, who works on a farm which Stull managed. He was rushed to the Bryn Mawr hospital, where he died shortly after admission from loss of blood. Stull had been attending a dinner, and had started home about midnight. The mishap occurred about 1 a.m. It was learned at the hospital that an artery in his throat had been severed. Stull, who was a widower, was president of the Cornell Alumni Corporation for two terms, 1925-27, and was a candidate for alumni trustee this spring. He graduated from Cornell in 1907, was a member of Delta Chi, and was president of the Cornell Club of Philadelphia. Besides the Merion Cricket Club, he was also a member of the Union League Club there. Recently Stull was appointed manager in Philadelphia for Hemphill, Noyes, and Company. Prior to that for several years he was in the banking and utility business.

CARL L. WEAGANT '29, who shortly after his graduation made the world gasp by sailing in a 46-foot ketch from Ithaca, N. Y., to Ithaca, Greece, and return, was found dead July 17, at his home, in Douglaston, Queens County, N. Y. He died by his own hand, a note by his side giving financial worries as the reason for his death. Weagant, who made himself a campus hero by his exploits on the water, was also prominent as an undergraduate, having been manager of the football team in his senior year. Immediately after his graduation he set sail, with three companions who expected only a short cruise along the Atlantic coast, in the ketch "Carlsark." Weagant kept his destination secret for several days after leaving the mouth of the St. Lawrence, and it was not until the little craft was far out at sea that he confided in his crew the fact that they were off to Ithaca, Greece. On arrival at the older Ithaca, they carried a boulder from the Cornell Campus to the top of Mt. Athos. On it were carved the words, "Cornell, Forever." Leaving it, they brought away another stone, which now reposes in the archeological museum in Goldwin Smith Hall. A year after their departure, the Carlsark once more tied up in Cayuga Lake Inlet, and Weagant presented the stone from Ithaca, Greece, to President Farrand, at the alumni reunion rally on June 14, 1930. Yachtsmen the world over acclaimed the feat of Weagant and his small crew as a magnificent achievement in sailing. The crew consisted of Dudley N. Schoales '29, Joseph M. Rummler '29, and Henry Devereaux. More than 14,000 miles were covered by these four in their trip, which took them to Nova Scotia, the Azores, Cadiz, Gibraltar, Cannes, Rome, Ithaca, Tunis, Algiers, Tangier, the Canary Islands, Beaufort, N. C., and Norfolk, Va. They bucked high seas, rough weather, and even had skirmishes with a couple of whales. Weagant subsequently appeared as a popular lecturer at Cornell. He spoke at the University under the Schiff Foundation, and spoke before the Ithaca Yacht Club, the Ithaca Rotary Club, and the Boy Scouts. Following his lecture tour, he took a position as associate editor of Yachting, which position he held at the time of his death. Long Island Sound yachtsmen knew him as an intrepid and expert skipper. His latest adventure was in connection with a treasure hunt off the Atlantic Coast near Cape Hatteras. He joined a syndicate to salvage a sunken vessel and was known to have invested much of his own money in the venture. The enterprise was unsuccessful, although it gave Weagant plenty to write about, and added stores to his already full list of adventures. He studied mechanical engineering at Cornell, and was a member of Chi Psi fraternity, Sphinx Head, Aleph Samach and Majura. He also played on the varsity hockey team. Tuesday, during his mother's absence from their home, he twisted a sheet around his neck, tied it to a rafter, and stepped off a small table which was found lying on its side beneath him. The mother called a neighbor to cut the body down. She told police he had tried to end his life several times recently.

DRUMMOND PRAISES College Stages

The period of pioneer amateurism is passed so far as the spoken drama on college stages is concerned, Professor Alexander M. Drummond, head of the Department of Public Speaking and Drama at Cornell says in an article which appeared in the Theatre Arts Monthly for July. The title of the article is "Drama in Colleges."

Professor Drummond, who has had a hand in the development of the Cornell Dramatic Club almost from the start, and who has made it one of the outstanding amateur theatrical organizations of the United States, declares that the reason for the high quality of the productions in colleges throughout the country today is due to an increased interest in the arts in the lower schools and in society at large.

Interest of college students in the theatre is, for the most part, according to Professor Drummond, avocational. It is purely for fun and for the cultural development that they hope to gain that students take part in such activities, he says. In general, however, college students fit better into the social scheme than do those whose entire training has been the professional stage.

"There is no better instrument of functional education than a college theatre of high standards," the article reads, "and its attendant courses in literature, theory, history, and technique have a natural content of cultural and disciplinary value."

The article is well illustrated with photographs of various Cornell Dramatic Club productions including pictures of Sidney Kingsley's "Wonder-Dark Epilogue," the first play written by this year's Pulitzer Prize winner, and "Right You Are If You Think So," in which Franchot Tone '27 had a part.

LACKAWAN' MAY GO

The Cayuga division of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad may be abandoned, which will mean a cessation of Lackawanna railroad service to and from Ithaca.

This move is being considered as a part of the federal government's plan for consolidating the railroads of the country and the discontinuance of small branches which serve sections better served by other railroads. A recent meeting in Ithaca between officials of the Lackawanna and the Lehigh Valley railroads took no action on the matter, but was held merely for the purpose of discussing possible results.

DOCTOR ROYAL H. MONTGOMERY, professor of economics, recently expressed the doubt that general strikes would ever be effective in solving labor problems. He discussed present day capital-labor problems at a luncheon of one of Ithaca's service clubs.

SUMMER CONCERTS Numerous and Varied

Most outstanding among the series of concerts scheduled for the summer term was the one presented by Mrs. Ida Deck Haigh, pianist, with Mrs. Alix Whitaker, dancer. Both are wives of Cornell professors, and both are recognized as being near the top of their fields.

Mrs. Haigh, whose husband is also a pianist of note, already has a large following among the Ithaca and Cornell music-lovers, as a result of her previous appearances in concerts here. She has given two piano recitals with her husband, Professor Andrew Haigh, of the Cornell Music Department, and has also appeared with Professor Gilbert Ross in piano-violin concerts.

The daughter of a professor at the University of West Virginia, where Mrs. Haigh had her early training, she won scholarships in piano and composition at the Juilliard School of Music in New York. After her debut in that city she became an assistant to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lhevine in their teaching, and played several times publicly, not only with Professor Haigh, but alone.

Mrs. Whitaker, whose husband is Professor Arthur P. Whitaker, of the Department of History, has studied native dances extensively in Spain, and is noted for her ability in these difficult rhythms.

Ana Grosman, young New York concert pianist, played a concert in the Memorial Hall at Willard Straight before a capacity audience. Her able and colorful execution of Prokofieff's "Prelude in C. Major, Opus 12, No. 7," was most enjoyed by the crowd of knowing listeners. Her second group was an ambitious Chopin collection.

Regularly during the summer session, Professor Harold Smith, University organist, presented recitals in Sage Chapel and Bailey Hall. These recitals are growing ever more popular, so that except at the beginning of a term Sage Chapel can hardly be used to accommodate the crowds that flock to hear him play.

Donald McGill of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., presented a song recital in Willard Straight as one of the summer series. Also Joseph Coleman, violinist, presented a concert there. Coleman is a Russian who came to this country in 1921. He has appeared before in Ithaca, but this was his first solo appearance. Previously he appeared on the Willard Straight Chamber Music series with the Perole String Quartet in 1932.

In addition to the regularly scheduled musical events of the summer, Miss Gertrude Nye, assisted by Lawrence Burrows '34, gave a Sunday afternoon musicale in the drawing rooms of Prudence Risley Hall. Miss Nye accompanied Burrows, who was tenor soloist of the University Glee Club last year.

VARIED PROGRAM In Summer Theater

A varied list of productions were offered to summer theater goers in Ithaca during the summer session this year and with excellent results.

In the first week of the Summer session, the Summer Theater opened its eleventh season with Lennox Robinson's satirical comedy in three acts, "Is Life Worth Living?" The play was hailed by the entire campus as a signal success. First honors for the show went to Rachel Wood, although Paul Hettes who played opposite her also gave a creditable performance.

The second bill presented in the University Theater in Willard Straight Hall consisted of four one-act plays by widely known writers, including "Before Breakfast," by Eugene O'Neill; "The Swan Song," by Anton Tchekov; "The Medicine Show," by Stuart Walker, and "Hat and Stick," by Margaret MacNamara. The cast of these four plays included several Dramatic Club stars of former years such as Jack Curvin, Peg McCabe, and Dorothy Buckingham.

The fourth week every summer is devoted to the efforts of the members of classes in dramatic production. This year this special bill consisted of four one-act plays, of not too pretentious nature. They were: "What Never Dies," by Percival Wilde; "The Emeralds," by Oscar Firkin; "The Great Dark," by Dan Totheroh; and N. K. Smith's "They Refuse to be Resurrected." "The Great Dark" was by far the outstanding of these pieces, not only as far as the play itself goes, but also in regard to the acting of the Cornell production. The play deals with a conflict between wife and mistress waiting outside a mine entrance for their man who has been trapped far below by an explosion. Margaret Ogden, whom none would have believed equal to such a part, performed admirably with Hannah Unger.

As a final burst to an otherwise very good, but not particularly exciting season, the Summer Theater offered Noel Coward's "Private Lives," which took the campus by storm. This show was presented on Friday and Saturday, August 10 and 11, and was repeated again on Tuesday evening, August 14, just before the final examinations of the summer term. The house was sold out for every performance, and in all of these, being helped by a large and appreciative audience, most of whom had either seen the play, read the play, or seen the movie, the actors threw everything they had into their parts, and really did a job of it. Several actors of note were "imported" to do this piece, and it was well worth the effort. Lisa Rembova, of New York; Arthur Woehl, of the summer faculty in dramatic production; and Helen Champlin and Jack Curvin, Cornell old-timers made a cast hard to beat anywhere.

HITLER HONEST Says Cornell Girl

There is no desire on the part of Germany to precipitate another war onto the shoulders of the world, according to Miss Elfrieda Pope '29, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Paul R. Pope, of the German department, who has just returned after a year and a half in Germany.

Highly enthusiastic with what she saw in that country, and with what the German government is attempting to do to pull itself and its people out of a mental as well as financial depression, she had glowing words for Hitler.

While en route to Germany, Miss Pope stayed some time in Paris, and says that she was prejudiced against the National Socialists before she ever reached Germany, but not long after she arrived in that country, her prejudices were overcome by the conditions actually existing there.

There are, Miss Pope reports, four types of attitudes toward Hitler and his government in Germany. In Bavaria there are certain liberal groups, also to be found in the cities, who are Hitler's enemies. These groups look down upon his methods. Many Jews in Germany are bitter against Hitler and his regime. Others honestly respect him and his government and are fully aware of the reasons behind his actions, she was surprised to find.

Miss Pope stressed the fact that most of the Germans with whom she became acquainted and with whom she talked, definitely wanted only Peace. Storm Troopers, the famed Nazi Brown-shirts, are regarded by many there as overgrown boy-scouts. They have no military power, she asserted.

Among the Germans of East Prussia there is fear of an invasion from Poland, which keep conditions there constantly tense. Recent developments have tended to calm the nerves of those inhabitants, however, so that the danger is regarded by Miss Pope as largely past.

President Schurman's Views

Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, former president of Cornell University, and former United States ambassador to Germany, stated in a recent press announcement that the fate of Adolph Hitler and his National-Socialists depends on his solution of two of the chief problems confronting the German people and the German government today. In a recent interview with Associated Press correspondents, Dr. Schurman is reported to have said that Hitler's ability to cope with economic and foreign relations problems will determine the fate of his regime. The death of Reichspräsident von Hindenburg will have a severe effect upon the confidence of other nations in the German government, Dr. Schurman stated. Germany needs foreign trade, and if she can reduce unemployment she can regain in a large measure that trade which she has lost, the former president stated. In event that the third Reich can do these things, the whole situation will be much more reassuring.

NEW MIRROR COATING

A new method of coating mirrors for telescopes has been evolved from experiments conducted at Cornell by Robley C. Williams, grad., who is teaching assistant in the physics department here.

Aluminium is known to be one of the best coatings for telescope mirrors, but difficulties were encountered in applying such a coating. By depositing first a thin coating of chromium on the surface of the carefully cleaned mirror, and then adding the aluminium, a fine reflecting film was produced. It is almost impossible to mar or scratch this film, or in any way to destroy its reflecting properties.

The aluminium mirrors are preferred for certain telescopic work because of the superior reflecting properties of this metal in certain sections of the spectrum. Engaged in this work with Dr. Williams are three groups of workers. Those at Cornell include: Professor S. L. Boothroyd, astronomer; H. C. Ketchum, instructor in chemistry; G. B. Sabine, graduate student in physics; and Doctor Williams. Other groups at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and at the University of California at Los Angeles are also working on the problem.

Mirrors coated with aluminium were used successfully by Professor Boothroyd on a recent expedition in search of astronomical discoveries. Those mirrors, however, were not entirely satisfactory, due to the fact that they tarnished easily, and were easily scratched in cleaning. The new surfacing, almost impervious to scratching and non-tarnishing, uses only the aluminium for its reflecting, and employs the chromium merely as a base to hold the aluminium in place on the glass. The chromium also adds a hardness to the aluminium which accounts in a large measure for the non-scratching properties which the new-mirrors have. The largest mirror coated with aluminium so far is a 30-inch reflector at the Lick Observatory of the University of California.

RUMORS THAT Frank E. Gannett '98, trustee of the University, and publisher of the Gannett chain of newspapers, would accept the pleas of farm leaders, and officers of civic clubs of New York State to run for a seat in the United States Senate were exploded recently by Gannett himself. When approached regarding the report, Gannett replied that he was too busy making newspapers to discuss the question, and that he was definitely not promoting the idea himself.

CORNELL CADETS

Cornellians shared in the honors won during six weeks of camp of the Infantry Reserve Officers Training Camp at Plattsburg Barracks on Lake Champlain recently.

Nearly two hundred students, completing their training in conjunction with R. O. T. C. courses at Cornell, Syracuse, Rutgers, New York City College, and New York, La Salle, and Bordenton Military academies, and the Manlius School, attended the encampment. There were also several men from Missouri, Alabama, and Illinois at the camp.

Cadet Jonathan P. Blount '36, of Ithaca, was awarded the gold medal for pistol marksmanship, and the Lohr Medal, presented each year by Lennox R. Lohr '16, of Evanston, Ill. to the Cornell student attaining the highest score in rifle marksmanship.

Lawrence B. MacArthur '35, of Buffalo, was runner up in the tennis singles for Company B., to William P. Kyle, of Rutgers. Company B. was composed largely of men from Cornell and Syracuse Universities, and was selected to furnish all positions of honor at the final parade as a fitting reward for having the best company pennant for the camping period. This company also won the camp baseball and basketball championships.

Cadet Thomas W. Bowron '35 was commanding officer at the final parade of the student officers. Among his staff were Cadet Lieutenant John S. Crocker '35, of Yonkers, as supply officer; and Cadet Thomas P. Brownrigg '35, of New York, as platoon leader.

Nine graduates of Cornell were sworn in as commissioned second lieutenants at Pine Camp, the artillery encampment of the R. O. T. C. recently at the close of the six weeks summer training. Those receiving commissions as officers in the reserve corps were: John W. Roehl '34, John B. Jenkins '34, Walter M. Moskowitz '34, Howard C. Peterson, Jr. '34, Harry C. Pritchard '34, William R. Robertson '34, Milton F. Untermyer '34, Donald B. Williams '34, and Jacob B. Morris '34.

Two batteries, composed of many prominent athletes and undergraduates from Cornell and Princeton, were highly praised by the regular army officers for their work. Cornell had its share of athletes in the camp with Jenkins, William C. Babcock, Lawrence McAfoos, and Williams of the varsity crew; Untermyer, and John C. Lawrence, of the Varsity polo team; and Robertson, football manager.

DR. DEAN F. SMILEY '16, chief medical adviser to the University, addressed one of the Ithaca service clubs recently on "Cold Prevention." Dr. Smiley has been conducting research on the common cold for a number of years.

AG PUBLICATIONS

Take Prizes at Conference

Professor Bristow Adams, Nell B. Leonard, and James S. Knapp '31, of the editorial department of the College of Agriculture, attended the three-day conference of the American Association of Agricultural College editors at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis during July.

Publications of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics at Cornell won the sweepstakes prize at the meeting. Out of sixteen classes, New York (Cornell) won six firsts, two seconds, three thirds, and two honorable mentions. The sweepstakes points for colleges which came closest to Cornell were: Kansas, 16; Wisconsin and Iowa, 13 each. Cornell earned 25 points.

Publications were judged in classes. Cornell placed as follows: popular bulletins, honorable mention; general publications, first; periodical, honorable mention; newspaper story, tied for second; localized experience story, third; feature article, tied for third; direct radio service, first; radio syndicate, first; circular letter first; photographs, first; film strips, second; single project, first; A. A. A. radio service, third.

Cornell is expected to be chosen by the officers of the Association for the 1935 meetings, to be held during the summer. The last conference of this association held at Cornell, was in 1916.

PROFESSOR HARRY CAPLAN, of the classics department, who has been awarded a grant by the Council of Learned Societies for the study of medieval Latin rhetoric, has left Ithaca to spend his sabbatic leave in Europe at work on this project.

ROTARY TO HONOR Foreign Students

Foreign students, visiting lecturers, and even internationally minded American students at Cornell are now eligible to join the Ithaca Rotary Club as special International Guest Members on the invitation of the club, as a result of a recent change in the by-laws of the club, which opens the rolls to these temporary members. This is the first time that any Rotary Club has undertaken such a step.

The new practice provides for a maximum of fifteen such members in each year. Invitation will be issued by the club to take part in the club meetings for a year. It applies not only to those enrolled at Cornell, but also at Ithaca College.

The guest members will not have all the privileges of regular members, but will merely be free to attend the regular luncheons, and to enjoy the programs. Whereas regular members are expected to attend all the meetings in a year, guest members are required to attend only nine.

The step was taken by the Ithaca Club as a crystallization of the feeling that Ithaca was not taking advantage of its opportunities to expand international good-will.

CHEAP RENT For Students

C. R. Rosenberry '26, who conducts a column in the Ithaca Journal, recounts visiting the local tourist camp at Taughannock Falls State Park where he ran across a couple who have made it their home for nine successive years in order to attend the summer session at Cornell. This year, Tip reports, they didn't go to summer school, but they couldn't stay away from Ithaca, and so they drove up to Taughannock for a week.

Tip also reports in his same column that a clipping from the same Ithaca Journal relayed by Dr. C. A. Martin, retired Cornell professor now living in Sarasota, Florida, winter headquarters of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Combined Shows, concerning Ithaca 50 years ago, was reprinted in the Sarasota Daily Tribune. The clipping related the arrival in Ithaca of the Greatest Show on Earth with two huge elephants, one the famed white elephant which P. T. Barnum imported.

PROFESSOR GEORGE F. WARREN '03, head of the department of agricultural economics, and a number of his colleagues, will go to Germany for the International Conference of Agricultural Economics at Bad Eilsen, August 26 to September 2. Besides Dr. Warren the Cornell delegation will consist of Dr. M. C. Bond '28 Ph.D., L. C. Cunningham, grad., W. M. Curtis, grad., and G. W. Hedlund, grad.

CORNELLIAN MENTIONED For Nobel Prize Award

Dr. John R. Mott '88, one of Cornell's most distinguished alumni, has been suggested as a possible recipient of the Nobel Prize award.

For forty-six years Doctor Mott has held international offices in the Young Men's Christian Association, and is widely known throughout the Orient as well as in Europe and America. He is one of the outstanding advocates for world peace.

Born in Livingston Manor, N. Y., Doctor Mott received the degree of bachelor of philosophy from Cornell in 1888. His son, John L. Mott, is at present assistant to Dean Cornelius Betten of the University faculty, and executive director of the International Association of Ithaca.

After graduation, Doctor Mott entered the Y.M.C.A. service as student secretary of the international committee, and served in that office from 1888 until 1915, when he was made general secretary. He held the latter post until 1931. Since 1926 he has been chairman of the world's committee of Y.M.C.A.'s.

He has toured the world many times, and made his first trip in 1895-7 for the promotion of the Student Christian movement. He was appointed by President Woodrow Wilson in 1918 as a member of the Mexican commission, and the following year was sent on a special diplomatic mission to Russia. During the War he served as general secretary of the National War Work Council of the Y.M.C.A. and extended association service to all the allied armies and to prisoners of war.

He has published a large number of books concerning the Y.M.C.A., and world peace. His home is in Yonkers, N. Y., his office at 230 Park Avenue, New York City.

LIPMAN HONORED

The Chandler Medal of Columbia University for 1934 will be awarded to Dr. Jacob Goodale Lipman, dean of agriculture at Rutgers University, and director of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment station, according to a recent announcement. The medal will be conferred for achievements of world influence in agricultural chemistry.

As an undergraduate, Dr. Lipman, who came to this country in 1888 from Latvia, became interested in agricultural chemistry, particularly in soils work, and fertilizers. He continued his graduate work along these lines at Cornell and in 1901 received an appointment as Sage Fellow in Chemistry. The degree of Master of Arts was conferred on Dr. Lipman by Cornell in 1900, and that of Doctor of Philosophy in 1903.

All's Quiet on the Campus

SUMMER SCHOOL is over and once again deep peace broods over the campus—a peace not to be broken until the arrival, around the 10th of September, of the Sun competes, the laundry agents and the football players.

AFTER AN ABSENCE of 25 years white sails gleamed once more against the blue of Cayuga. Over the week end, of July 30th, the Ithaca Yacht Club, from its station south of Glenwood, staged the three-day annual regatta of the Central New York Yacht Racing Association. Fifty-four boats raced in six different classes while a fleet of motor craft margined the lake and all Ithaca turned out on the last day to watch a noteworthy spectacle from reserved seats in the surrounding hills.

THE ITHACA YACHT CLUB won the golden words for the manner in which they managed the regatta but visiting sailors from the neighboring lakes won all the trophies. Among the Ithacans and Cornell men who raced their boats were Doctors Norman Moore, Leo Larkin, Robert Gutsell and L. A. Fisher together with Messrs. Fred Wilcox, Paul Rice, Foster Coffin, Edward Gillette, John Udall, James McKinney and John Howell.

FORMER STUDENTS of a nautical trend who happily recall the days when they dared the rockbound coasts of Ludlowville and Aurora in the Result, the Trilby, the Louise and the Box, will rejoice in the return of sail to Cayuga.

CYRIL G. SMALL, Ph.D., has originated a new profession in putting out his shingle in Ithaca as a practicing plant pathologist. You can now call the doctor at any hour of the day or night if the delphinium develops alarming symptoms or the begonia feels bad.

PROFESSOR H. H. WHETZEL of the Department of Plant Pathology welcomes the appearance of Dr. Small in this new profession. He says that there is throughout the state a vast, but unrealized, need for such practitioners. He points out that the diseases of plants, unlike the ailments of humans, have generally passed the possibility of cure by the time they have become apparent to a layman, and that the presence of trained, practicing plant doctors through the state will go far toward preventing the pests and decreases which now cause the loss of millions every year.

THERE ARE APPEARING about the campus and in private gardens those ominous glass-jar traps designed to catch the dreaded Japanese beetle. This would seem to indicate that somebody has received some bad news. But so far no one has caught a single Japanese beetle.

PROFESSOR EVERETT WARD OLMSTEAD, formerly Professor of Romance Languages at Cornell and for the last twenty odd years head of the corresponding department at the University of Minnesota, has been visiting in Ithaca with his son John before sailing for a year's study and travel in France, Italy and Spain. On August 5th Professor and Mrs. Elmer gave a tea for Professor Olmstead which was the means of gathering together most of the campus people who were here a quarter of a century ago.

TOMMY, THE PTARMIGAN, who two months ago was merely an egg beside the Arctic Ocean, is now strutting around Professor Arthur Allen's front yard as the most interesting specimen in the unique Allen collection of strange birds. At the present time Tommy looks and acts a good deal like a young pheasant except that his body is bigger and rounder in proportion to his head. He is still unaware that about the time skating starts at Beebe Lake his plumage will have turned white and he will have become an obvious ptarmigan.

IT MUST BE REGRETFULLY recorded that the 26 brothers and sisters of Tommy, whom the good professor brought down from the Arctic in the shell, all turned out bad eggs.

PROFESSOR HARRY CAPLAN (classics) has sailed for a half year's study in France, Spain and Austria in the field of medieval Latin rhetoric. Professor Caplan is the recipient of a special grant to this end from the Council of Learned Societies.

MISS LOUISA FARRAND and Mrs. Sherman Peer are on a walking trip through the Scottish Highlands and the Western Isles.

STUDENTS WHO RETURN in September will find difficulty in recognizing the old artillery stables on the shores of what used to be Eddy's Pond. A drab heritage from the war-time cantonment school of architecture, the stables have lent themselves not at all to the movement to create beauty on the campus. But with the construction of the new riding hall alongside, the group has been blended into a not displeasing whole and painted green with white trimmings. The immediate surroundings have been laid out with neat paths and lawns sloping down to the winding edge of Cascadilla Creek. The result is still frankly utilitarian but much better looking.

THE RIDING HALL is now finished and ready for use with the single exception that the surface of the riding area requires more raking, rolling, sprinkling and patting. 200 feet long by 90 wide and 18 high it has—apart from the Drill Hall of course—the largest clear area under roof on the campus and will provide us with excellent facilities for mounted drills, indoor polo and instruction in horsemanship. Along the north side is a gallery to accommodate some 400 spectators and at the west end a glassed-in and charmingly decorated enclosure for members.

MISS ELFRIEDA POPE, daughter of Professor Paul R. Pope, recently returned to Ithaca after two years of graduate study in Germany. On the evening of August 14th Miss Pope delivered a university lecture in Goldwin Smith Hall on her observations of what went on in Germany during an extremely interesting period of that country's history. She avoided controversial subjects and confined herself to her own observations. At the conclusion of the lecture a student got up, walked to the front of the room and himself discussed Germany with more passion than the previous lecturer had displayed. This is not done at university lectures ordinarily. Miss Pope, who had left the platform, merely grinned.

NEW TIMES MAKE new customs, to be sure, but university lecturers who discuss contemporaneous history are going to have some interesting evenings ahead of them if the audiences are to take up the running where the speaker leaves off.

FOOTBALL CANDIDATES will report for practice on Monday, September 10. The assistant coaches will be F. O. Lueder, Bart Viviano, W. C. Beal and R. H. Beyer. Beal, a back on the 1932 team, and now a student in architecture, is the only newcomer on the staff. With the opening of the university Beyer will probably be detached and sent to the freshman squad where he served last year.

ONE READS of droughts and observes the ravages of the same in the surrounding country. But the campus has enjoyed nicely distributed rains and showers all summer. There has never been at the end of August greener or soggier turf on the playing fields. R.B.

PTRIKKS PTRIUMPH; Ptmarmigan Ptmamed

The experimental attempts to hatch ptarmigan eggs in captivity have worked successfully at Cornell, and another "first time" can be chalked up on the University records.

Professor Arthur A. Allen '16 managed to get one of the twenty-six eggs he brought back with him from the far north to hatch out, but the others failed to produce, even after receiving the best care from foster mother chickens. The one that did hatch, however, is thriving nicely, thank you, and may soon be kept company by some small cousin fledgling ptarmigans, for the three scientists that Dr. Allen left behind to make his hurried trip to Ithaca with freshly laid ptarmigan eggs have returned and brought some twenty more fresh eggs with them which have been placed under the accommodating hens of the Cornell flocks.

Ptommy, the first ptarmigan hatched in captivity, looks something like a baby pheasant, except that he is rounder, and his head is proportionately smaller. His plumage, though now brown and mottled like a pheasant, will turn pure white when winter comes.

Dr. Allen had hopes of producing a larger number of ptarmigans here at Ithaca, in order better to study the causes and effects of the strange disease which periodically wipes out great numbers of this arctic bird. Though he still has hopes for the twenty new eggs which are being patiently sat on by Cornell hens, he admits that they "don't sound quite right" and that there are grave doubts that they will hatch.

MONEY FOR Elm Fight

New York's fight against the Dutch elm disease, in which Cornell University is participating, now needs further appropriation to be successfully waged, and so Governor Lehman called on the special session of the Legislature to assign $155,000 to further combat the blight. Over 1,100 trees within the state have been identified as infected, and the money already set aside for the eradication of the diseased trees will only suffice to eliminate one-third of those infected.

Professor Glenn W. Herrick, of the Department of Entomology, urges farmers and city property owners to inspect their elm trees for any sign of the deadly disease. Summer eradication of the infected trees, it has been learned, is crucial. Permitting the trees to stand during the winter allows the production of millions of beetles, which mean destruction to many more trees before another year is up.

Campus elms at Cornell are being carefully watched for signs of the epidemic, and will be removed as soon as infected.

COLONEL'S DILEMMA

Army orders are often unpleasant to those who receive them, but the order which assigned Colonel "Joe" Beacham '97, to the post of commandant of the R. O. T. C. at the University of Pennsylvania, has presented the Colonel with a pill that will be bitter to swallow.

COLONEL JOSEPH W. BEACHAM '97

From his undergraduate days when Joe Beacham played on the Cornell Varsity football team, the University of Pennsylvania has been his pet hate. While commandant of the Cornell R. O. T. C. unit, Colonel Beacham took great pride in sending a band to Pennsylvania on Thanksgiving Day that would outdo the best maneuvers of the Pennsylvania band, and now he will have to go to Philadelphia and sit on the other side of the fence.

Next Thanksgiving Day will find a peculiarly tried colonel on the side lines of the annual football classic, as Joe tries to devise some method by which he can cheer for Cornell, and still not break the proprieties. If, however, the Colonel is as adept to finding solutions for difficult problems as he was while he was at Cornell and putting the Cornell band on its feet, he will in all probability have something worked out by that time.

During the past two years, Colonel Beacham has been on duty at Fort Williams, Portland, Me.

FEDERAL TRAINING School for Teachers

A training center for unemployed teachers was established at Cornell this summer as a part of the summer program of the University, by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. There are seventeen other similar centers at various universities and colleges throughout the country.

The federal department of education and the state department of education co-operated in the work, and New York State has two of the centers, the second being at New York University.

Thirty teachers are enrolled at each center, are being prepared to teach industrial workers who ask for classes in English, public speaking, economics, history, and social science subjects.

Ernestine L. Friedman, administrative assistant in worker education, explains that these workers desire to prepare themselves for the new responsibilities that are placed upon them by the government through the adoption of the various codes under the NRA. Since few of the unemployed teachers were prepared to give this type of training these special courses have been established for them. The teachers receive relief maintenance while attending the six weeks session. Eleanor Reilly is the executive supervisor in charge of the center at Cornell. She is assisted by two other teachers.

OLSEN REPLACED

Alfred L. Olsen, assistant deputy administrator of the National Recovery Administration, on leave of absence from his position as instructor in hotel accounting, has resigned to confine his activities to his new post, it was revealed recently at the University with the announcement of the appointment of his successor.

Professor Howard B. Meek, in charge of the Hotel Administration school of the University, announced that Charles E. Cladel '29, who has been substituting for Olsen in his absence, has been named as the permanent incumbent of the post. Cladel, following his graduation, was employed as hotel accountant with Haskins and Sells, Horwath and Horrath, and the American Hotels Corporation.

THE COMMITTEE ON SCHOLARSHIPS of the University has awarded twenty-seven scholarships in the Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics, it was announced recently by President Livingston Farrand. The scholarships total $3,666.

RIDING HALL COMPLETED

The New Cornell Riding Hall, built for the R.O.T.C. as a result of the appropriation for labor made by the CWA last March, is now finished and ready for use. With funds donated to the University a few years ago by friends and alumni for materials, the cost of the building totals approximately $25,000.

The new structure has been erected close to the artillery stables, on the Dryden road, near the University heating plant. It was designed by the University architects and erected under the supervision of Conant Van Blarcom '11, superintendent of buildings and grounds of the University.

The new riding hall is better than originally planned, and is complete in every detail. It is 200 feet long by 90 feet wide, and has head room of 18 feet. The roof consists of eleven steel trusses, supported by sets of steel columns. The riding area is clear with no intermediate supports.

Knee boards extend around all four sides of the riding ring, to protect horse or rider from injury when they come in contact with the wall. The building has sash windows extending around all four walls, for lighting and ventilating purposes.

The hall can be adequately lighted for night riding by means of its eighteen 500-watt lights. The floor of the riding area is a mixture of sawdust and cinders. A spectators gallery, which extends across one end of the structure, seats approximately 750 persons. Large doors at the east end of the building and at the south permit easy access for horses, and equipment.

An attractive lounge situated on the west side of the building serves as a rendezvous and as a gallery for ordinary observation purposes. It is separated from the riding area by a glass partition. The lounge, which has an open fire place, has been decorated and furnished by Mrs. Livingston Farrand. There is a kitchenette adjoining as well as dressing rooms for both men and women.

Although intended primarily for the use of students and officers connected with the R.O.T.C., the hall is admirably adapted to such other occasional University purposes as exhibitions, stock judging, and indoor athletic practice.

The movement for the erection of such a building on the Cornell campus was begun several years ago by Major Ralph Hospital, then stationed here, but the campaign for funds was halted because of the depression. The new riding hall makes use of the cash on hand as the result of Major Hospital's efforts. R. E. Treman '09 was chairman of the committee which secured the allotment of labor from the C W A.

STUDENT TRAINING

For House Parties

Repeal of Prohibition has added another job to the list of those used by students in working their way through college. This time it's bar-tending.

Ray Williams '35, a senior in Hotel Management, is working this summer as bar-keep for a Syracuse hostelry, which not only adds money to his bank-roll, but also counts as practical working credit toward his degree.

Each summer students in hotel management have to work at some job connected with the hotel or restaurant business. Ray went looking for such a job and this one turned up. "It's good fun, and no temptation," he says. "I expect to be in good shape for house-parties when they come around again next year."

SUMMER WINTER COURSES

Dr. David P. Barr '11, is giving a winter course this summer at the University of Melbourne, Australia. That's only, however, because it's winter there while it's summer here.

Dr. Barr was invited to give the course as American lecturer there, because of his eminence in the field of medical education. He has been professor of Medicine at Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., since 1924, and is now on leave of absence for his Australian post.

After graduating from Cornell in 1911, Dr. Barr attended the Cornell Medical College and received his M. D. degree in 1914. He was subsequently house officer at Bellevue Hospital, New York, and assistant physician and research fellow at Russell Sage Institute. He served as instructor in Medicine at the Cornell Medical College from 1916 until 1922 when he became assistant professor. Since going to St. Louis, he has been physician in charge of the Barnes Hospital in addition to his teaching duties.

He is a brother of Joseph S. Barr '21, who lives in Ithaca.

HEADS GOLFERS

Leonard C. Urquhart '09, professor of structural engineering, and a member of the Country Club of Ithaca, was named president of the Finger Lakes Golf Association at a meeting of the association held in Elmira July 19, following the first day of the 13th annual tournament there. Ithaca was chosen as the scene of the 1935 tournament.

Only two Cornellians remained in the first flight for the individual championship honors at the close of the first day's play. They were: John Carver '34, and Professor Horace E. Whiteside '22, LL.B. Carver was defeated on the second day of the tourney by A. B. Carpenter of Corning; and Professor Whiteside by Howard Tryon, of Elmira.

STRETCHING LIVES

Dr. Clyde M. McCay, assistant professor of animal husbandry, whose work in nutrition has provided worthwhile results of scientific value, as well as amusing incidents, comes forth now with prognostications that if dollars can be stretched, so can the lives of animals, and therefore in all probability, of humans.

Experimenting with diets as a means of prolonging and shortening life, Dr. McCay has discovered for instance that heart disease can be induced in animals by means of regulating their diets. He is now, as a result of this discovery, attempting to find some way of preventing that trouble as a cause of death in humans.

Not enough attention is paid to dieting, according to Dr. McCay, especially in regard to adults, both animal and human. In addition to the proof made during the past four years that life can be extended or shortened by special diets, he pointed out recently that two advances of interest to every grown person have been made. First of these is that heart disease can be caused at will in animals through their diets, and these can then be varied to learn what foods and combinations of foods do not cause the trouble; and second that better methods of studying the food requirements of grown animals have been developed during the past few years which enable scientists to learn than the composition of the bones can be changed by means of dietary changes.

Eventually, it is hoped, the bones of old people can be kept as supple as those of their younger fellows, so that not only will they break less easily, but they will knit more readily when broken.

Animals upon which Dr. McCay experiments are given the best diets until they reach a mid-way point in their life spans, and then they are given varied diets which produce the results mentioned here.

RESIGNS POST

Kenneth B. Spear '23, scout executive of the Louis Agassiz Fuertes Council, at Ithaca, for the past five years, has resigned his post to take a similar position at Wilmington, Delaware, it was announced recently by Ithaca scout officials.

Spear, after graduation, served as scout master and assistant executive at Schenectady, N. Y. He came to Ithaca in 1929, where he has since remained. Scouting under Spear's leadership has made substantial progress in Ithaca and Tompkins County.

Among the projects which have been the direct result of Spear's efforts are the annual Enfield Glen encampment, Camp Barton, and the indoor Drill Hall Rallies. Through his efforts also, the boundaries of the council were extended, thus opening the field of scouting to small boys within reach of the influence of the local council.

Engagements and Weddings

MISS ANNE WYNNE ALLEN '36, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Allen, of Clarksdale, Miss., and Benjamin L. Barringer '33, '35 Law, son of Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin S. ## CORNELLIAN HINTED For Governorship

Supreme Court Justice William F. Bleakley '04 of Westchester County, president of the Cornell Law Association, has been hinted as the next Republican candidate for governor of New York State.

The political career of this eminent alumnus began as city judge of Yonkers. He was active in forming a boys' club, formed of his delinquent charges, which is said to have been a great source of good among the younger members of the community. From Yonkers City Court he went to the County Court of Westchester County, and from that post to the Supreme Court Bench.

During the past two years, Justice Bleakley has risen rapidly in the political scene in Westchester County. When one of Yonkers' banks became shaky, he was asked to lend his name to help bolster it up, and he was made president of the institution, and helped it through the hard banking times.

Justice Bleakley was named chairman of a citizens committee on county finance after Westchester county for the first time in its history defaulted on its debt obligations. His influence and advice was largely responsible for the restoration of the county's credit as well as that of several municipalities.

BRETZ IS CANDIDATE

Julian P. Bretz, professor of American history, was recently placed on the Democratic ticket as the party's candidate for Congress from the Thirty-seventh district. He has run for the same post previously, without success.

In 1932, Professor Bretz lost the election to Gale Stalker, by only 7,000 votes, in a district where the normal Republican majority is usually 30,000 or 40,000. He polled 48,000 votes, 15,000 more than the previous Democratic record of 33,000 in 1928.

He is at present Tompkins County Democratic Committeeman. At Cornell he is faculty representative on the Board of Trustees.

FIELD DAY AT GENEVA

Secretary of Agriculture Henry W. Wallace and Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York State will be speakers at the third annual dairy field day Tuesday August 21, at the New York State Experiment Station, at Geneva, N. Y.

Hundreds of dairy farmers from Tompkins county and other counties of the New York State milk shed will attend the affair. Secretary Wallace will discuss the Agricultural Adjustment Administration work in the morning, and Governor Lehman will speak in the afternoon. The experiment station is closely associated with the State College of Agriculture at Cornell.

DANCE FETE

Summer school students and staff members of the College of Home Economics were entertained on August 8 on the quadrangle of the College of Agriculture as guests of the College. Folk dancing by the group of graduate and undergraduate students who have been conducting a course in that subject during the past winter and this summer in Willard Straight Hall provided the entertainment. Members of the Teachers Training Institute in Workers Education made up a male chorus which presented folk songs from other countries.

SUMMER PROTEST

Cornell's chapter of the National Student League, active in the regular terms, extended its activities into the Summer Session on July 23, when it held a symposium on the strike waves and Pacific Coast general strikes in Barnes Hall.

The fact that strikes often break out in a period of returning prosperity when wages fail to rise as rapidly as commodity prices, was the main topic of discussion at the conference.

Telegrams of protest, voted by the symposium, were despatched to Governor Merriam of California, and Mayor Rossi of San Francisco, denouncing the use of the National Guard against the strikers, and the violation of civil liberties in the smashing of union and Communist headquarters.

HOMEMAKING FOR BOYS

Many boys in New York State are taking home economic courses, according to a recent statement made by Marion Van Lieu, chief of the State bureau of Home Economics, to a group of high school principals attending the Cornell summer session.

The interest in such work among the boys of New York is greater than in any other state in the United States, she said. The courses, however, are not in cooking and sewing, but are more apt to include courses in home making, and family life.

A CABIN atop Connecticut Hill was erected secretly as a surprise present for Robert H. Treman '78, who purchased a large tract on the summit of the highest spot in Tompkins County, for purposes of public recreation, by a group of his friends associated with him in state park work in New York State. While the cabin is located on the land which Mr. Treman has donated for the use of the public it is intended solely for use by him and his friends.

PROFESSOR MONTGOMERY ROBINSON '14 has been named chairman of a committee to correlate the contributions of the University's college to the State Milk advertising campaign.

PROFESSOR BARRUS On Leave of Absence

Professor M. F. Barrus, of the department of Plant Pathology of the New York State College of Agriculture, sailed June 28 for Puerto Rico where he becomes director of agricultural extension for the next two years. Leave of absence has been granted him by the University for that period.

Professor Barrus has been a member of the staff at Cornell for the past twenty-five years. He has been to Puerto Rico previously, and served there as specialist in agriculture and labor in 1927 and 1928.

The United States Department of Agriculture has assigned Federal soil men to survey 1,000,000 acres on the island, which work is beginning this month in the mountainous interior, where soils will be classified and mapped.

EXCHANGE STUDENT

Malcom McRae Burns, a graduate of Canterbury College, New Zealand, and of the University of Aberdeen, Scotland, will come to Cornell this fall as a fellow of the Commonwealth Fund. Each year this Fund grants fellowships for study in the United States to British and colonial students.

Fellows of the Fund this year will be distributed among nineteen colleges and universities in the United States for study.

BACK FROM NEAR EAST

Dr. Harold B. Allen, former postgraduate student at Cornell, since 1926 director of education for the Near East Foundation in Greece, Albania, Syria, Bulgaria, and Palestine, returned to Ithaca for a short visit during the summer. With Mrs. Allen he was a guest of his brother, Paul Allen, a student in the summer session.

Previous to accepting his present post, Dr. Allen was president of the New York Association of Agricultural Teachers and Principals.

HELP MILK CAMPAIGN

Cornell agricultural leaders are aiding the State of New York in its campaign to promote the use of milk throughout the state, and are taking an active part in planning the program of advertising, through which the state hopes to accomplish its purpose. L. R. Simons, director of extension, Earl Flansburgh, New York State Farm Bureau Leader, W. F. Crandall assistant professor of animal husbandry, and professor W. J. Wright, state 4-H Club leader, met recently with William M. Rider, assistant director of the bureau of milk publicity, and made plans for coordinating the existing agricultural agencies in the program for increased milk consumption.

Obituaries

STATE SENATOR HENRY D. WILLIAMS '14 LL.B., of Utica, was found dead in his office in that city Tuesday morning, August 7, victim of a heart attack. He spoke in Ithaca in the interest of prohibition reform not long before the repeal of the 18th Amendment. Senator Williams was among the few upstate members of the Legislature to vote against prohibition. During his terms in the Senate from 1925 to 1930 from Oneida county, Senator Williams was co-author of the present decedent's estate law and author of the law against child marriage, the building lien law, the law against the use of prison-made materials from other states on public works, and the law providing more equitable wages for state hospital employes. Senator Williams was elected to the Assembly four years after his graduation from Cornell, but resigned to volunteer with the Marines. He was corporation counsel of Utica under Mayor Fred J. Douglas. In 1930 he became Utica representative of the American Surety Company. In 1931, in association with William M. Bray, now lieutenant governor of New York, he represented the city of Utica in a water rate case. State, city, and county paid tribute to Senator Williams after his death. Lieutenant Governor Bray headed a delegation of state senators, and a large representation from the State Assembly at his funeral. Members of the Oneida county Bar Association and the American Legion attended the services, which were held in the Westminster Presbyterian Church at Utica.

DR. ALFRED J. MALONEY '06 died August 11 in a private Ithaca hospital after a long and severe illness. He was 53. Born in Ithaca, Dr. Maloney received the degree of D.V.M. from Cornell. After graduation he joined the government service and travelled all his life in government interests. His home was in San Diego, California. Recently Dr. Maloney suffered a severe paralytic stroke, and on recovery from that was the victim of another. He was found unconscious on the floor of his home, with a fractured skull. He was apparently recovering and was sent to Ithaca to the home of his sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Evans, a member of the University comptroller's staff. After his arrival here, his condition gradually grew worse, and he succumbed. He is survived by one son, Alfred J. Maloney, Jr.; two sisters, Mrs. Evans, and Miss Christina Maloney, both of Ithaca; and a niece, Dorothy Evans Phillips '30, of Scarsdale, N. Y.

FRANCIS LEON CHRISMAN '87 Ph.B., former owner and publisher of the Montclair (N. J.) Herald, died recently in the Montclair Hospital where he had lain ill for a week with a heart malady. He was seventy-four. Before becoming a publisher, he had been a staff member of several New York papers, including the Herald and the Press. He was manager of the Chrisman Newspaper Syndicate. Burial services were held at Vernona, New Jersey.

MRS. IVALO HUGG WOOD, '18 B.S., died at her home, 147 West Kennedy Street, after a short illness. Mrs. Wood was a past president of the Women's Cornell Club of Syracuse, and was third vice-president of the National Federation of Women's Clubs. She was also acting chairman of the University's freshman entrance committee, and a former member of the faculty of the Continuation School of Syracuse. She is survived by her husband, Theodore M. Wood; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Hugg, of Cazenovia; and a sister, Mrs. Edward Giddings, of Norwich.

COLISEUM NAMED For Cornell Professor

New York State Fair's great amphitheater is to be named in honor of Henry Hiram Wing '81, for forty years professor of animal husbandry at Cornell. The ceremony of dedication, an outstanding part of this year's fair, will take place September 4.

Owen D. Young will make the presentation address, and Dr. Frank P. Graves, president of the University of the State of New York, will be master of ceremonies, and will unveil a bronze placque commemorating the occasion. Charles H. Baldwin, commissioner of agriculture and markets, will also speak on the dedication program.

The honor of having the coliseum dedicated to him comes to Professor Wing in recognition of the distinguished service which he for many years gave to the livestock interests of the state. As head of the animal husbandry department at Cornell, his work, both directly and through the thousands of students who received their training under his guidance, has had a great influence upon the development of the dairy industry, both here and in foreign countries.

Professor Wing was honored upon his retirement from active teaching in 1928 by the Holstein-Fresian Association of America, which elected him to its presidency. Dedication of the huge coliseum to Professor Wing is extremely fitting, because there will be annually displayed there the outstanding specimens of the different breeds of cattle.

Government Aid

Since the establishment of the funds, Cornell has received an average of $5,400 per month, and Williams feels certain that the University will receive even more during the coming year for distribution among needy students for work which they will do in their spare time.

Students on government salaries this year will receive a flat rate of fifty cents an hour for work done. The work is restricted to thirty hours a week per student, which means $15 for each worker. Only those students who actually are dependent on the relief to stay in college are entitled to receive it.

It Is Not Enough

that a student has mastered the subject matter of the required "fifteen units"

Scholastic and all other forms of success in college are very largely conditioned upon such factors as initiative, poise and self control.

At Cascadilla our students have the freedom and responsibility which alone can give poise, self mastery and initiative.

Instruction and administration are directed to these ends.

A unique, flexible program insures rapid progress in return for industry and ability.

"Facts and Opinions" tells something of our methods and their results. May we send you a copy?
