What:

Don’t Tell Me What to Do, Just Send Money

When:  Wednesday, Oct. 19, 12-1 p.m.

Where:  MVR G87

Who:  Christine Schelhas-Miller, senior lecturer, Human Development

Why:  Christine will discuss her newly updated guide for parents of college students. Bring your lunch if you’d like; cookies will be provided.

In the book, Schelhas-Miller and her co-author give advice on loosening the so-called electronic umbilical cord, along with tips on how to help children through such common challenges as the freshman 15, internships, roommate problems, financial pressures, and time management.

Schelhas-Miller teaches adolescent development and is a consultant to independent, secondary schools on related issues. For more than twenty years, she has worked in higher education, providing academic, personal, and career counseling to students. She is the parent of two children and lives in Ithaca.
