SUMMER SESSION

The summer session of the College of Law will begin on Monday, June 22, 1925, and continue for eleven weeks. The session will be divided into two terms of five and one-half weeks each, and the schedule of courses will be so arranged that students may attend both terms or either term alone, as they may desire.

Courses in Contracts, Agency, and Personal Property will be given in the summer of 1925 so that students may begin the study of law in the summer session as well as in the fall term. Nine other courses are offered for those who have had the fundamental courses named above.

The summer session is the equivalent of one-third of the regular academic year. It is possible, therefore, if a student wishes to do so, to enter the College of Law in June and be graduated two years from the following September.

The courses given in the summer session have the same content and are conducted by the same methods as those given during the regular college year. Credit will be given at Cornell towards the degree of LL.B. for any work satisfactorily completed in the summer session by those who have the other necessary requirements for that degree. All courses given in the summer session are conducted by regular members of the Faculty of the College of Law or teachers of high standing from other law schools. The case method of instruction is used, and examinations are given upon the completion of each course.

OBJECTS OF THE SUMMER SESSION

The summer session affords an opportunity to professional students to pursue the study of law during part of the summer, and thereby shorten the time required for graduation. Such students may also secure special courses or courses for which they are unable to find time during the regular sessions. With the increasing requirements for admission to the better law schools, there has come an increasing demand for the summer session as a means of shortening the time required for completion of the law course without in any manner lessening the amount or quality of the work. It is primarily to meet this need that the Cornell summer session has been established.

The rules governing admission to the bar in the various states generally permit a part of the required law study to be taken during the summer months. For example, in New York, the rules of the Court of Appeals for admission of attorneys and counsellors at law allow not to exceed twelve weeks of law study each summer to be counted as part of the ninety-six weeks required of students in law schools.

The summer session also permits those who are unable to attend a law school at other seasons of the year, to enjoy the advantages of systematic instruction in the law. With this end in view, students qualified by reason of age and experience will be admitted to the summer session when they do not possess the requisite academic training to qualify as regular students and candidates for the degree.

Students with less than the required two years of general college work will be admitted to courses in the summer session for which they are qualified. By this means such students can undertake the study of law for a short time with the object of determining for themselves whether or not they desire to continue it further. Students of this class may not count toward the degree of LL.B. in the College of Law the credit received in the summer session, but the college will give them certificates stating the fact of their attendance during the summer session and the courses completed.

The summer session is also designed to aid students from other law schools who desire to obtain additional credit or special courses during the summer. Students in engineering and other professional courses may take the fundamental subjects of the first year of the law course for their business value.

LIBRARY AND EQUIPMENT

Boardman Hall. Boardman Hall was erected in 1892 for the use of the College of Law. It is a three-story structure, 202 by 58 feet, built of Cleveland sandstone, with interior finish of oak. On the first floor are three lecture rooms and necessary cloak rooms. On the second floor are the offices of the several professors. On the third floor are the library rooms with accommodations for over sixty thousand volumes and three hundred readers.

Law Library. The library of the College of Law numbers more than 60,000 volumes and about 6,000 pamphlets, to which generous additions are made yearly. It includes the library of the late Nathaniel C. Moak of Albany, N. Y., which was presented in 1893 by Mrs. A. M. Boardman and Mrs. Ellen D. Williams, as a memorial to Judge Douglas Boardman, the first dean of the College. In reports of the federal courts, and of the several American State jurisdictions, and in English, Scotch, Irish, Canadian, Australian, and English colonial reports, the law library is practically complete to date. The Earl J. Bennett collection of Statute Law, provided for by the gift of Earl J. Bennett, LL.B., 1901, embraces about 4,800 volumes of the session laws of all the states to date, and is of unusual fullness and value. The library also possesses a similarly adequate collection of text books, complete sets of substantially all law periodicals in English, digests and annotations, Railroad and Public Service Commission Reports and Bar Association Reports of the various States. Several hundred volumes of the records and briefs of cases in the New York Court of Appeals and accounts of important foreign and domestic trials are also to be found in the library.

General Library. The University Library, containing over 650,000 volumes (exclusive of the number of volumes in the Law Library), is accessible to law students in the same way as to students in the other colleges.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ADMISSION

1. Regular first-year students. All applicants for admission to the 1925 summer session of the College of Law as candidates for the degree of LL.B. are required to present a certificate or diploma showing that they have successfully completed two or more years of study, other than professional law study, in a university or college of approved standing, and have received an honorable dismissal.

In September, 1925, the Cornell University College of Law will become a graduate school. Beginning at that time, candidates for admission will be required to present evidence of the receipt of a bachelor's degree from an approved college or university.

The arrangement will continue, however, by which students in the College of Arts and Sciences of Cornell University are allowed in their senior year to elect the first year of the law course and so obtain the degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Laws in six years.

Applicants who qualify for admission as regular first year students in the summer session, 1925, will not be affected by the increased requirements for admission and may continue as regular students in the college.

2. Students from other law schools. Applicants who are registered in other law schools and who desire to attend the Cornell summer session for the purpose of obtaining credits to be certified to the schools which they are attending, will be admitted upon presentation of a certificate stating that they are students in good standing at other law schools. Such students may not become candidates for the degree of LL.B. in the College of Law without complying with the entrance requirements for regular first-year students.

Students who have complied with the entrance requirements for regular first-year students, and who have also successfully completed law work in a law school of approved standing may, in the discretion of the Faculty, be admitted to advanced standing upon such conditions as the Faculty may prescribe.

3. Other students.

(a) Applicants who have not completed the requirements for admission as regular first-year students will be admitted to the summer session as special students upon presentation of a certificate showing the completion of a four-year course in an accredited high school. Such students may not count their law work toward the degree of LL.B. in the College of Law.

(b) Applicants who are twenty-one years of age may, in the discretion of the Faculty, be admitted as special students where the training and experience of the applicant justifies his admission, without regard to educational qualifications.

CREDITS AND CERTIFICATES

Students regularly admitted to the summer session of the College of Law as candidates for the degree will receive credit toward the degree for the courses satisfactorily completed. All other students will be entitled to receive certificates stating the fact of attendance during the summer session, and the courses taken and completed.

REGISTRATION

Applicants must first secure from the Secretary of the College of Law permission to register. They will then register with the Registrar of the University, and return to the Secretary of the College for the purpose of selecting a course of study.

TUITION AND EXPENSES

The tuition fee for the summer session is $65, or $35 for either term of the session. Tuition fees for the summer session are payable at the Treasurer's office within five days of the day of registration.

The University has five residential halls for men students, situated on the Campus, and furnishing accommodations for about 420 men. These will be open to students in the summer session. For particulars, address the University Comptroller, Ithaca, New York. There are also many private boarding and lodging houses near the University Campus. In these, the cost of board and furnished rooms varies from $10 to $15 a week.

Inquiries about board and rooms for women students should be addressed to the Manager of Residential Halls, Sage College, Ithaca, N. Y.

COURSES OF INSTRUCTION

Contract. Assistant Professor WHITESIDE. Huffcut and Woodruff's Cases on Contract (4th. ed.). Eight hours a week, both terms. Credit six hours.

This course treats of offer and acceptance, consideration, contracts under seal, the statute of frauds, rights of beneficiaries and assignees, joint and several contracts, conditions, illegality, impossibility, and discharge of contracts.

Property Ia. Professor BOGERT. Bigelow's Cases on Personal Property. Six hours a week, first term. Credit two hours.

The subject matter includes: distinctions between real and personal property; rights of action based on possession or on ownership; possessory interests in chattels, including found property, bailments, liens, and pledges; acquisition of ownership in personal property; fixtures; crops and natural fruits of the soil.

Agency. Professor STEVENS. Huffcut's Cases on Agency (2nd. ed.). Six hours a week, second term. Credit two hours.

In this course a study is made of contracts created not solely by the action of the contracting party himself, but formed by him through a representative; creation and termination of the relation of agency; rights and duties of the principal, the agent, and the other party to the contract, in respect to one another.

Administrative Law. Professor FRANKFURTER. Six hours a week, first term. Credit two hours.

Through discussion based on assigned cases and other material, this course will deal with the problems arising in "the field of legal control exercised by law-administering agencies other than courts, and the field of control exercised by courts over such agencies." A written thesis, the subject of which is to be selected in consultation, will be expected from every member of the class.

Trade-Regulation. Professor FRANKFURTER. Kales's Cases on Contracts and Combinations in Restraint of Trade, and assigned cases, together with The Federal Anti-Trust Laws with Amendments. Six hours a week, first term. Credit two hours.

In this course a study is made of the legal control of business enterprise as exercised by the body of Federal Anti-Trust Laws, in their judicial applications.

Code Pleading. Professor CLARK. Hinton's Cases on Code Pleading (2nd. ed.), and selected cases. Eight hours a week, first term. Credit three hours.

This course treats of the principles of pleading under modern codes, including the union of law and equity, the rules of joinder of parties and of causes, the stating of the case in the complaint, the manner of taking objections to the complaint, the answer and the reply. Emphasis is placed upon a scientific study of general principles rather than upon the rules of particular codes.

Conflict of Laws. PROFESSOR STEVENS. Lorenzen's Cases on Conflict of Laws (2nd. ed.). Eight hours a week, first term. Credit three hours.

This course includes discussion of the principles governing the choice of rules to be applied in determining questions "concerning the rights of persons within the territory of one nation or State, by reason of acts, private or public, done within the dominion of another nation or State."

Law of Public Service. PROFESSOR BURDICK. C. K. Burdick's Cases on Public Service and Carriers (2nd. ed.). Six hours a week, first term. Credit two hours.

In this course are considered the bases of the duties of public service, and the extent of those duties, as well as the legality of rates fixed by the company, the constitutionality of rates fixed by the State, and the law with regard to illegal discrimination, adequate facilities and withdrawal from service.

Negotiable Paper. PROFESSOR AIGLER. Britton's Cases on Negotiable Instruments. Eight hours a week, second term. Credit three hours.

A discussion of the formal requisites of bills, notes, and checks, the obligations incurred by the various parties to such instruments, and the steps necessary to perfect the holder's rights. Throughout the course special attention is given to the provisions of the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law, which has been adopted in all the States.

Sales. PROFESSOR BOGERT. Woodward's Cases on Sales (2nd. ed.). Eight hours a week, second term. Credit three hours.

This course is concerned with the formation of the contract of sale of personal property, the respective rights and duties of buyer and seller regarding the performance of the contract, the origin and incidents of warranties regarding the goods sold, and the remedies open to buyer and seller, respectively, in the various contingencies incidental to sales of goods.

Mortgages. PROFESSOR SIMONTON. Durfee's Cases on Mortgages. Six hours a week, second term. Credit two hours.

This course includes a discussion of the history and development of the modern mortgage, including equitable liens, with a detailed study of mortgage law in its present-day application; it also includes an examination of the procedure for the foreclosure of the mortgage.

Bankruptcy. PROFESSOR SIMONTON. Williston's Cases on Bankruptcy. (2nd. ed.). Six hours a week, second term. Credit two hours.

In this course the history of bankruptcy and the construction of the National Bankruptcy Act will be studied with emphasis on the following topics: who may be bankrupt and petitioning creditor; acts of bankruptcy, including fraudulent conveyances and preferences; what property passes to trustees; provable claims; protection, exemption and discharge of bankrupts.

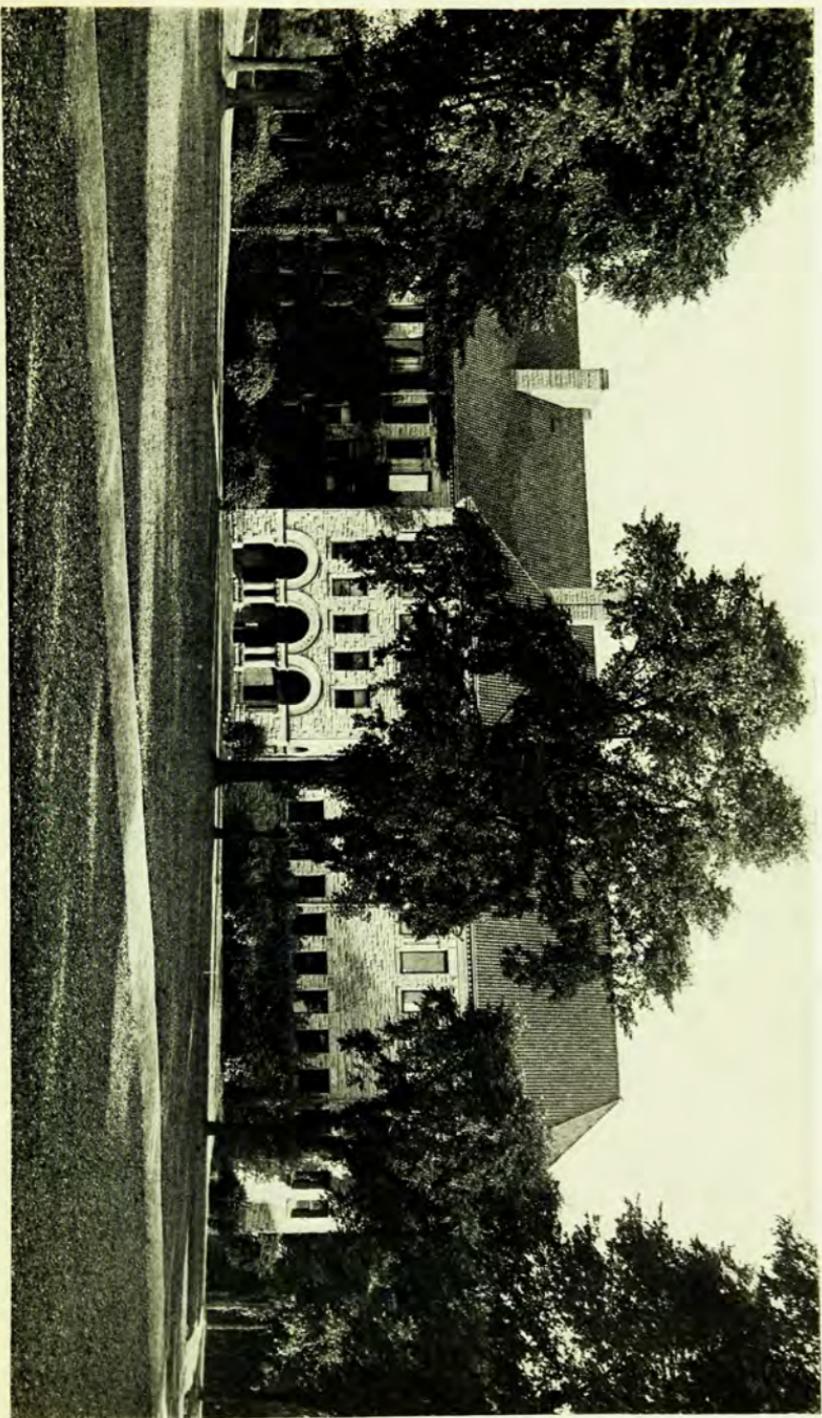

LOCATION

The College of Law is situated at Ithaca on Cayuga Lake, in the heart of the picturesque Finger Lakes Region of Central New York. The climate and physical surroundings are peculiarly favorable for summer work. There are varied opportunities for golf, swimming, tennis, boating, and other recreation.
