THE RESIDENCY ARCHIVE OF JOGJAKARTA*

P. B. R. Carey

Introduction

Of all the documents in the Indonesian National Archives (Arsip Nasional) in Jakarta, the residency archives, or arsip daerah, are among the most important sources for information on local history. Spanning the seventeenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth centuries, these archives cover the day-to-day activities of Dutch administrators in trading posts (factorijen) and residencies throughout the Indonesian archipelago. They often contain material which provides insights into local conditions, material not found in the central archives of the Netherlands Indies government in Jakarta or in the colonial archives in Holland. Unfortunately, with a few notable exceptions the arsip daerah have not been used by historians for serious scholarly research and study. One of the reasons for this has been that the Arsip 1For a survey of the colonial archives available in the Netherlands, see F. G. P. Jaquet, "Guide to the Sources in the Netherlands Concerning the History of the Netherlands-Indies/Indonesia, 1816-1942," 6 vols., mimeographed (Leiden: Koninklijk Instituut, 1968-72), and also his "Dutch Archive Material Relating to the History of Asia from 1796-1949," Southeast Asian Archives (Petaling Jaya), 8 (July 1976), pp. 10-36. For data concerning the central government archives of the N.I. Government which are now in the Arsip Nasional, see J. A. van der Chijs, Inventaris van 's Lands Archief te Batavia (1802-1818) (Batavia: Landsdrukkerij, 1882), and M. G. H. A. de Graaff, Verslag van een bezoek aan het Staatsarchief van Indonesië in het kader van de overeenkomst tot uitwisseling van microfilms, maart-april 1974 (The Hague: Algemeen Rijksarchief, 1974).

2The most notable exceptions were F. de Haan (Landsarchivaris [government archivist] 1905-22), who used materials from the archive of the Priangan Regencies (kabupaten) for his famous study of the region, Priangan. De Preanger Regentschappen onder het Ned. bestuur tot 1811, 4 vols. (Batavia: Landsdrukkerij, 1910-12), and E. C. Godée Molsbergen (Landsarchivaris 1922-37), who consulted documents in the residency archive of Menado for his Geschiedenis van de Minahassa tot 1829 (Weltzijden: Landsdrukkerij, 1928). Outside the circle of government archivists, only G. P. Rouffaer and P. J. F. Louw seem to have undertaken any serious study of the residency archives. The former consulted the gewoon archieven (ordinary archives) of Jogjakarta and Surakarta during a study tour in Central Java in 1888-89 (i.e., before most of them had been transferred to Batavia) and he used much of the material gathered on this tour for his article on the "Vorstenlanden" in Encyclopaedie van Nederlandsch-Indië (The Hague: Nijhoff, 1905), 4, pp. 587-653 (reprinted in Adatrechtbundels, 34). Louw, in turn, was allowed by the N.I. Government to consult both the gewoon and geheim (secret) residency archives of Jogjakarta, Surakarta, and Kedu for his work on the history of the Java War (De Java-Oorlog, vols. 1-3 [The Nasional itself never had the status of a truly "open archive" during the period when it was administered (under the name of "Landsarchief") by the Dutch colonial government (1892-1942) or even during the early years of the Indonesian Republic, although this is no longer the case. A more basic reason, however, has been the absence of a reliable modern catalogue of these collections. The only published catalogue, that of the first Landsarchivist, J. A. van der Chijs (1892-1905), appeared nearly one hundred years ago and is now of only very limited use for historical research in the modern context of the Arsip Nasional. Meanwhile, the card fiches of the central and residency archives, which were drawn up under the supervision of the third Landsarchivist, E. C. Godée Molsbergen (1922-37), are by no means complete and are now also somewhat out of date. Furthermore, although these fiches, which are arranged chronologically and by subject, permit a good overview of the relevant collections, they are not available to general readers in the archives.

For a history of the Dutch archives in Batavia in the nineteenth century, see F. R. J. Verhoeven, "Geschiedenis van het Indische Archiefwezen van 1816-1854," Tijdschrift van het Bataviasch Genootschap van kunsten en wetenschappen (henceforth TBG), 80 (1940), pp. 461-529, which details the situation in the Batavia archives before the Landsarchief was set up in 1892. Even after the latter had been established, the archives still remained under the general authority of the Algemeene Secretarie (General Secretariat of the Governor-General's office) which never accepted the principle of open access to the Landsarchief. There was also no one of the stature and determination of R. C. Bakhuizen van den Brink, the man responsible for transferring the colonial archives to the Rijksarchief in Holland in 1854, to press for public access to the archives in Indonesia; see M. A. P. Meilink-Roelofsz, "Van Geheim tot Openbaar: een historiographische verkenning" (Leiden: Leiden University Press, 1970). The same situation continued to prevail after independence during the administrations of the first two Indonesian directors of the Arsip Nasional, R. Soekanto (1951-57) and R. Moh. Ali (1957-70). It is only since Miss Soemartini took over as director in 1970 that significant steps have been taken to open the archives and facilitate research there.

See Van der Chijs, Inventaria. It is worth noting that the catalogue appeared some ten years before Van der Chijs's appointment as Landsarchivist in 1892 and also before the main bulk of the residency archives for the period after 1816 had been transferred to the Landsarchief, a move ordered by the Government Secretary in 1891 (see M.G.S. August 14, 1891, no. 1931). The catalogue does, however, give a reasonably comprehensive survey of those residency archives which were available in Batavia when the catalogue was drawn up. De Haan and Godée Molsbergen have annotated two folio copies of Van der Chijs's work in the Arsip Nasional, noting the numbers of the bundles in the present residency archives in which the various documents referred to by Van der Chijs have been placed. One of these folio copies is available in the reading room of the Arsip.

For a description of the Godée Molsbergen fiches, see De Graaff, Verslag, pp. 11-12. De Graaff recommended that the fiches be microfilmed in order to make them more generally available and to prevent further deterioration. Despite De Graaff's
As the scholarly and historical interest in the holdings of the Arsip Nasional is likely to grow, it seems more important than ever that up-to-date catalogues of the available collections should be published. Members of the Arsip Nasional staff and a few Indonesian historians have already begun to compile catalogues of some of the residency archives, but it appears that it will be some time before the complete collections of the 41 separate arsip daerah and numerous departments of the central administration have been covered. During recent research in the Indonesian National Archives, I compiled a list of the documents in the various bundles of the Jogjakarta residency archive in order to permit quicker consultation of various materials relating to the history of Central Java in the nineteenth century. The list is reproduced beginning on page 127. In view of the fact that there is no modern published catalogue of this collection, it is hoped not only that this list will help specialists on this particular region, but that historians of other regions in Indonesia will be able to learn about the sort of documents they might expect to find in the archives of the residency of their own interest. The short introductory survey which follows gives a brief overview of the history of the Jogja residency archive, relates how it was transferred to the archives in Jakarta, and offers an estimation of its historical value.

The oldest and most valuable collection of letters in the archive (Nos. 22-27, 31-32, and 40-49) is the correspondence of the Jogja Residents with the Governors of Java's northeast coast at Semarang, and, after Daendels abolished this Governorship in 1808, directly with the Governors-General in Batavia. Scattered among these letters are miscellaneous bundles of correspondence between the Jogja Residents, their colleagues in Surakarta, and the sultans and patih (first ministers) of Jogjakarta, and also detailed memories van overgave (Nos. 20-21), written by various Residents between 1786 and 1808. These memoranda provide useful surveys of the changing political situation at the Jogja assertion (p. 12), many residency archives, notably those of Aceh, Bali, Banyumas, Besuki, Japara, Pasuruan, Probolinggo, Surabaya, and the government of Java's Noordoost Kust (until 1808), are not covered in detail by the fiches. Moreover, some bundles were mixed up during the Japanese period and the immediate postwar years. Thus the numbers of the documents referred to in the Godée Molsbergen fiches often do not correspond with the numbers of the bundles in which the various documents are placed at the present time (interview with Sundojo, Arsip Nasional, June 13, 1977, and see De Graaff, Verslag, p. 13). The new catalogues of the archives, which are currently being compiled, will have to be based on new research of the contents of the bundles themselves rather than on the card fiches.

6See Daftar Ikhtisar Arsip yang terdapat di Depot Gajah Mada 111, Arsip Nasional R.I. (Jakarta: Arsip Nasional, 1976). Those archives for which catalogues have already been made are as follows: Banda, Borneo, Buitenland (Dutch factories outside Indonesia, mainly in India), Gorontalo and Limboto, and Lampung. Inventories of the archives of Ambon, Banten, and Bangka are in preparation (1977). A brief survey of some reports from several areas of Indonesia in the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries has been written by R. Z. Leirissa, Rapporten atau Laporan-Laporan dari abad XVIII dan awal abad XIX yang tersimpan di Arsip Nasional R.I. Jakarta (Jakarta: Arsip Nasional, 1973).

court in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. The historical interest of these letters and reports lies principally in the fact that they were written by Dutch East India Company (V.O.C.) officials who often had long experience in dealing with the Javanese courts, who usually spoke Javanese as well as Malay, and who were sensitive to the subtle intrigues taking place in the political world of Central Java at that time. They penned their reports with an eye for detail which was never equaled by the Dutch Indies officials of the post-1816 period, and they also wrote with the knowledge that their letters would be understood and appreciated by senior V.O.C. officials who were also knowledgeable in Javanese affairs. Apart from good political reporting, some of the residency letters and memories van overgave that were written in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, notably those of Resident Matthias Waterloo (1803-8), also provide our first insight into the development of commerce and economy in the princely territories during this period. As such, they complement the equally useful historical reports on agrarian conditions in Java which were compiled by British officials during the early years of Raffles's administration (1811-16).

Djakarta (Jakarta: Arsip Nasional, 1972); Jaquet, "Dutch Archive Material," p. 1. The writing of detailed memories was allowed to lapse during the period of Daendels's administration (1808-11) and was only revived in 1849 on the recommendation of the Algemeen Secretaris C. Visscher. The only memoria from this later period in the Jogja archive is that of A. H. W. Baron de Kock (Res. Jogja 1848-51), dated May 17, 1851 (see no. 191 [v]). I have found no other memories from Jogjakarta in the Arsip Nasional that date from prior to the beginning of the twentieth century. These latter memories have been transferred from the Depot at Bogor and have been recently microfilmed by a joint Koninklijk Instituut voor de Taal-, Land- en Volkenkunde (Leiden) (henceforth KITLV) and Arsip Nasional project. They are as follows: J. R. Couperus (March 3, 1908); P. H. van Andel (July 1911); J. H. Liefrink (July 1913); B. L. van Bijleveldt (April 1915); C. C. Canne (May 21, 1919); L. F. Dingeman (June 1, 1926); J. E. Jaspers (September 29, 1929); R. M. Verschuil Gosseler (October 1932).

9 Note the remark of J. G. van den Berg (Res. Jogja, 1798-1803; Res. Solo, 1803-1806), "I count myself lucky that in my youth I was able to learn Javanese well and that now I know it better than my mother tongue . . ." (Djokjo brieven no. 48, Van den Berg to N. Engelhard, November 8, 1801). Van den Berg found it essential to be able to converse directly in high court Javanese with Sultan Hamengkubuwono II over matters which were considered too sensitive for the Sultan's courtiers and high officials to discuss with him. The same was also the case with the two other Jogja Residents during this period, W. H. van IJsseldijk (1786-98) and M. Waterloo (1803-8). Later, the British official John Crawfurd was also skilled in Javanese, and this fact greatly enhanced his effectiveness as Resident in Jogja (1811-14, 1816). Diponegoro compared him most favorably to later Dutch officials such as A. H. Smiisaert (Res. Jogja, 1823-25) and P. F. H. Chevalier (Asst. Res. Jogja, 1823-25), who could only speak Malay, for "Crawfurd had spoken about everything in person with [Diponegoro's] father [Sultan Hamengkubuwono II] or with himself, and he had made the Javanese language his own in under six months, because the Malay language is the language of chickens and no ruler in Java wishes to hear it" (see Algemeen Rijksarchief, The Hague [henceforth ARA], J. van den Bosch coll. no. 391, J. H. Knoerle, "Aanteekeningen," June 20, 1830).

bundles from this period in the Jogja residency archive are bound and arranged in good chronological order greatly facilitates research.¹¹

For the period of British rule (1811-16) the residency reports from Jogjakarta are much more sparse, and the three bundles which are available (Nos. 28-30) appear to have been put together by Dr. F. de Haan, who himself had an interest in the period.¹² The scarcity of documents may be partly explained by the fact that many that concerned the political decisions of Raffles's administration were destroyed by the British on their departure; the remaining material was later filed by a clerk of the Batavia archives in such a disorganized fashion that Van der Chijs found it almost impossible to inventory the bundles properly.¹³ But this was not necessarily the case with those archives left behind by the British in the residencies, and it is striking that the documents for this period in the Surakarta archive are far more voluminous than those for Jogja.¹⁴ It seems likely that the Jogja archives from the British period were removed from the residency office. It is possible that the Jogjakarta Resident F. G. Valck (1831-41) may have been responsible for this; he consulted documents from this period for his survey of Jogjakarta history between 1755 and 1830 and may have kept many of them in his possession.¹⁵ Such appropriation of government archives by a senior Indies official was not unusual in the first half of the nineteenth century; there are many examples, notably of Governors-General and members of the Council of the Indies (Raad van Indië), who built up large private collections out of what were official administrative documents.\textsuperscript{16}

¹¹ It is unclear whether the ordering of the bundles was done in Jogjakarta or later by Van der Chijs in Batavia.

¹⁴ Surakarta bundles Nos. 14, 23, 24, 29, 37, 121, and 151 contain Surakarta correspondence with Batavia during this period. There are other bundles (Nos. 53, 55, 122, and 127) which contain some loose letters from the period (notes from Godé de Molsbergen card fiches, AN). It is worth noting that there are some important collections of letters from Jogjakarta and Surakarta for 1811-12 in the India Office Library (London) (henceforth IOL), see M. C. Ricklefs and P. Voorhoeve, Indonesian Manuscripts in Great Britain: A Catalogue of Manuscripts in Indonesian Languages in British Public Collections (London: Oxford University Press, 1977), p. 58 (IOL MSS Eur. F 148/24). The collection contains correspondence between Crawford and Raffles (January-June 1812), copies of the secret correspondence between the courts of Solo and Jogja (November 1811-April 1812), and miscellaneous letters from Surakarta. There are also copies of treaties between Raffles and the courts in IOL Eur. F 148/23, the originals of which can be found in Jogja bundle 42 (i) and (vi) in the list given below. Of particular interest is the original of the preliminary treaty between Crawford and the Jogja Crown Prince (later Sultan Hamengkubuwono III) signed on June 18, 1812 in bundle No. 42 (v).

For the period after the restoration of Dutch authority in Indonesia (1816) until the end of the Java War (1830), the amount of material in the Jogja archive increases dramatically. The incoming and outgoing correspondence (Nos. 50-59/60-78) is very nearly complete for each year.\textsuperscript{17} Although the quality of political reporting from this period is rather poor when compared to earlier years, the sheer volume of material is nevertheless important for the historian, for its detail facilitates learning about the day-to-day administration of the residency. Most of the bundles contain a variety of documents covering finances, commerce, health, notary acts, petty crime, education, reports from outlying districts, and military affairs, as well as more \textsuperscript{16}See Jaquet, "Dutch Archive Material," p. 29, and Verhoeven, "Geschiedenis," pp. 512-28. Prominent officials who accumulated large private collections were H. MacGillavry, J. I. van Sevenhoven, and H. G. Nahuys van Burgst. The first two were compelled to return their collections to the government (ibid., p. 512). On Nahuys van Burgst, see below, n. 17. According to De Haan, the private archive of Nicolaus Engelhard was so complete that Indies officials used to consult it in order to draw up their reports; \textit{Preanger,} 1, 2, "personalia," p. 297. The practice of collecting private archives was effectively stopped by a decree published in \textit{Staatsblad van Nederlandsch-Indië} no. 18 (1854); see Jaquet, "Dutch Archive Material," pp. 35-36.

\textsuperscript{17}A considerable number of documents from this period, mainly copies, were taken by Nahuys van Burgst (Res. Jogja, 1816-22, Acting Res. Solo, 1820-22, Res. and Commissioner Solo, 1827-30) and are now in his private collection in the Leiden University library (afd. westerse handschriften); see Jaquet, "Guide," 4, pp. 18-19. According to J. F. W. van Nes (Res. Jogja, 1827-November 1830, December 1830-March 1831), various Jogja archives, among them all the documents referring to the administration of the postal service which had been set up shortly before the outbreak of the war, were thrown into one of the canals in front of the residency house by Asst. Res. P. F. H. Chevalier in 1825; Jogja bundle 58 (ii), Van Nes to Commissarissen ter regeling der vorstenlanden, June 30, 1830, and Van Nes, "Verhandeling," p. 132. It is my opinion that few residency archives were actually destroyed during this period, and it is significant that this was not mentioned in Chevalier's letters to Smitsaert; see Louw, \textit{De Java-Oorlog}, 1, Bij. 50-52.
important political matters. There is thus a wealth of detail on a wide variety of administrative and judicial activities which will prove invaluable for social and economic historians. For the Java War years the everyday administrative documents in the Jogja archive are supplemented by a wide range of reports on the political and military conduct of the war (Nos. 6-9B). It is likely that much of this material was gathered by P. J. F. Louw and E. S. de Klerck during research in various government and military archives for their history of the Java War. Some of the documents bear annotations by these two men and a few were published almost verbatim in the appendices of the various volumes of their history. In De Klerck's words, the reports from this period afford "a unique picture of the land and people of Central Java and particularly of the situation prevailing in the principalities both before and during the Java War. They later provided the background knowledge on which the government's decisions and policies were based during the post-war period." Although he originally had intended to publish them in toto as source material, he refrained from doing so because in his view the specific policies advocated by the reports had never been implemented.

Among the other documents in this section (6 [xx]-[xxi]) are copies of various Javanese lawbooks which were annotated by G. P. Rouffaer during his study tour in Central Java in 1888-89 and which were later used by Soeripto for his thesis on the development of law codes in the principalities. Soeripto also used Rouffaer's notes on several agreements between the patih of Jogja and Solo concerning criminal cases, copies of which can be found in the Jogja archive (42 [ii] and [v]).

See n. 2 above for a discussion of some of the materials consulted by these two authors in the Jogja residency archive. Other documents used by Louw are listed in his private papers in the Koninklijke Bibliotheek (The Hague), No. 76D 33-36 (see also Jaquet, "Guide," 4, p. 8). De Klerck later wrote a survey of the main political reports and letters from the Java War period, which is probably based on many of the documents in bundles Nos. 6-9B of the Jogja archive; see KITLV western language MS H 414, "Politieke bescheiden betreffende den Java-Oorlog." Many of the documents (e.g., those in Jogja bundle No. 7) probably derived from the archive of the General Staff of the Royal Netherlands Indies Army (Archief van den Generalen Staf) in Bandung which was used by Louw and De Klerck but now appears to have been dispersed. Other material on the military conduct of the war can be found in the H. M. de Kock private collection in ARA; see Jaquet, "Guide," 2, pp. 46-47. While Louw and De Klerck had access to the official letters of De Kock in the General Staff archive, they were unable to use his private correspondence, which was only deposited in the ARA in 1905 (see Louw, De Java-Oorlog, 1, pp. 429, 480, 494 n. 1). Many duplicates of the notes and reports written by senior Indies officials during the course of the Java War can be found in Ministry of the Colonies folder 4132 in the ARA.
After the end of the Java War there was a period of intense government activity in Central Java (1830-32), during which far-reaching administrative reforms were effected, reforms which drastically altered the political and economic situation of the Javanese courts, particularly their relationship with the colonial government. The task of putting these reforms into practice was entrusted to three Commissioners ("Kommissarissen ter regeling der vorstenlanden"), and the archive from their work was deposited in the Batavia archives in 1832. Much of the material from this archive, including the comprehensive indices, was later filed in the residency archives of Surakarta and Jogjakarta (Nos. 10-17). It represents a very important collection of documents for historians wishing to study this crucial period of Javanese history. Besides the day-to-day correspondence between the Central Javanese Residents and the Commissioners, much of which is political in nature, the files contain extensive documents on such matters as land settlement in the princely territories, the definitive separation of Surakarta and Jogjakarta territory, the putative beginnings of the "cultivation system" in the annexed mancanagara (outlying) lands, the financial situation of the courts, and the appointment of new administrative personnel. A glimpse of some of the main issues covered by the documents can be gained from the sixth volume of De Klerck's history; it is clear this archive can form the basis for a far more detailed study of this period.

There are a number of documents and bundles in the Jogja archive that cover the later years of the nineteenth century, but their topics are diverse and their provenance is not absolutely clear. The yearly general and political reports on the residency from this period (algemeene and politieke verslagen, Nos. 1-5) are likely to have originated from the archive of the Algemeene Secretarie (General Secretariat) since the Residents sent these reports to the Governor-General's office annually. In the same category are the statistical reports, notes on land tenure, and secret memoranda which were compiled by Resident Valck and his successors (Nos. 18-19II, 81-84). Among these are some things written by J. F. W. van Nes during his period as Commissioner in the princely territories (1846-47) and by the head of the statistical (later historical) bureau of the Algemeene Secretarie, A. J. F. Hansen. The latter may also have been responsible for the numerous copies of treaties and contracts in the Jogjakarta archive (No. 42 [i-ii], [v-vi]), since it was on his initiative that many of the early treaties with Indonesian rulers that are in the Batavia archive were copied and arranged in chronological order to save them from loss by deterioration. However, some of these Jogja copies and originals of treaties and contracts made between 1749 and 1831 may have come directly from the archive of the Commissioners when it was still in the archive of the Algemeene Secretarie. For a modern discussion of the beginnings of the cultivation system in Madiun, see Onghokham, "The Residency of Madiun: Priyai and Peasant in the Nineteenth Century" (Ph.D. thesis, Yale University, 1975). Onghokham does not make use of archival material in the Arsip Nasional.

the Jogja residency archive itself. This was the case with the Jogja copy of the important register of landholdings known as the Serat Ebuk Anyar, drawn up in 1773 (No. 43), and W. H. van IJsseldijk's report on the V.O.C. pepper and indigo plantations in Loano, Gentang, and Pacitan (No. 45). This latter section of the residency archive seems to have been put together rather haphazardly, possibly as a result of the diverse nature of the material on Jogjakarta in the Algemeene Secretarie at the time when it was turned over to the Landsarchief.

Though it seems certain that many of the documents for the period of the Java War and the later nineteenth century entered the Batavia archives by way of the Algemeene Secretarie or through the help of private individuals such as Valck, Louw, De Klerck, De Haan, and Rouffaer, the path by which the bulk of the Jogja archives for the pre-1830 period was transferred to Batavia is not so clear. According to the introductory guide to the Arsip Nasional, many of the V.O.C. archives in the outlying trading posts and residencies were sent to Batavia in 1795 to prevent them falling into the hands of the British, who had just begun a blockade of Indonesian waters and who appeared ready to mount an immediate attack on Dutch establishments. But numerous archives from the V.O.C. period still seem to have remained in the residencies and subordinate governmental areas, for in 1820 Governor-General G. A. G. P. van der Capellen promulgated an order (besluit March 24, 1820, No. 25) that the various Residents and Governors send him detailed inventories of all books, registers, charters, plans, and papers in their offices so that the government could make use of them, if necessary, as background information on which to base governmental decisions. According to Verhoeven, the replies which were sent in to the government by the Residents and Governors give good insight into the state of local archives in Indonesia in the early nineteenth century, but unfortunately these letters are not available at the present time, since they were sent to the directorate of finances ("hoofd directie van financiën"), whose archive, until recently in the Pasar Ikan depot of the Arsip Nasional, has never been catalogued. Nevertheless, some idea of the situation prevailing during this period in the residency archives in Surakarta and Jogjakarta can be gleaned from other contemporary letters. A. H. Smissaert, the Resident of Jogjakarta (1823-25), complained in 1823 that certain key maps and diagrams of the kraton (court) and Jogja lands had been sent to the military academy in Semarang shortly before the British attack on Jogja in 1812 and were never returned. In Surakarta, A. D. Cornets de Groot Jr., the brilliant young linguist who was then attached to the Surakarta residency as an "élève voor de Javaansche taal [student in the Javanese language]," described how he was given the task of making an index of the residency archive papers of 29Interview with Sundojo, Arsip Nasional, June 13, 1977. F. G. P. Jaquet, of the Koninklijk Instituut, and M. G. H. A. de Graaff, of the ARA, are currently (1977-78) compiling a catalogue of this important collection together with the archive of the "cultivation system" (Cultures en Domeinen).

1816 to 1822 and how he estimated that this task, which also involved sorting the letters in chronological order and sewing them into bundles, would take at least six months, the idea of an index being then a complete novelty.31

It is uncertain just how many documents were in fact sent to Batavia after Van der Capellen's order of 1820, but it is likely to have been only a few, for in 1849 A. J. F. Jansen felt constrained to send another letter to the Residents and Governors to solicit additional information on their archival holdings, a letter which elicited little response.32 In the same year, however, an extremely important addition was made to the archive holdings in Batavia--most of the archive of the former government of Java's northeast coast was transferred there.33 Government attention had been drawn to the parlous situation of this archive in 1847, when, in connection with Van Nes's commissorial activities in the principalities, certain documents regarding agreements with the Surakarta rulers in the late eighteenth century were needed in order to formulate government policy on the issue of succession in Solo. A hurried search in the government archives in Batavia and Bogor had failed to uncover the necessary documents, and so the Resident of Semarang had been asked to trace them in the old Semarang archives, which were then stored in a large government warehouse and in the residency office. The condition of the warehouse archive was so bad--papers were stuffed into chests or piled in heaps on the floor--that any search was deemed impossible. The government then decided to appoint two pensioned officials to order and inventory the entire archive.34 This process took nearly a year, and late in 1848 Jansen arrived to arrange the transfer to Batavia of those documents in the archive which were considered to be of genuine historical importance. Jansen appears to have been meticulous in checking through the prepared bundles, over 700 of which were kept. Among these was most of the eighteenth and early nineteenth (until 1808) century correspondence of the Governors of Java's northeast coast with the Javanese courts (126 bundles), with the bupati of Madura, and with local Indonesian rulers on the outer islands.35 The papers which were left were mainly routine items concerning finance, commerce, and everyday administration in Semarang. The latter, regarded by Jansen as taking up useful space, were offered to the local armaments factory for the manufacture of cartridges, but, before many of the documents could be disposed of in this fashion, they were destroyed by fire in 1850.36 Although by current archival standards Jansen should be censured for having left any materials in Semarang, he undoubtedly saved the most important documents. These papers, which are now housed in the Arsip Nasional (packed in 56 boxes in the collection "Java Noord Oost Kust"), complement the holdings in the Jogjakarta and Surakarta residency archives and constitute an important addition to the sources available for the history of Central and East Java in the eighteenth century.

The episode of the Semarang archives and the government's need to have documents available for consultation appears to have accelerated the process of transferring to Batavia the V.O.C. archives that still remained in the outlying administrative offices. By 1858, according to one source, the majority of the archives dating to the end of the British period (1816) had been moved, and some years later (1864) specific instructions were given to the head of the statistical bureau of the Algemeene Secretarie to sort through the V.O.C. archives. But lack of space in the General Secretariat meant that much material from this period had been sent back to the Netherlands for safekeeping in the Rijksarchief. In 1878, the whole collection of V.O.C. archives in Batavia was nearly moved as well. Two years later, however, Van der Chijs was appointed to the statistical bureau with the specific task of sorting and inventorying the archive, and it was only then that those V.O.C. papers which had been rotting for over half a century in the attics of government warehouses in the Kota (downtown) district of Batavia were eventually brought to the General Secretariat. With the publication of Van der Chijs's catalogue in 1882, the modern period of archival supervision began in Batavia, and the process of sending materials to the Netherlands was halted.

The final move for the residency archives came in 1891, when documents for the years 1816-30 were transferred to Batavia. Shortly before this final move, in 1888-89, G. P. Rouffaer had been permitted by the government to consult the Surakarta and Jogjakarta archives; he had found that the latter was in an excellent state of preservation, but that the former had been heavily damaged by flooding. His observations help explain the very different condition of the two Central Javanese archives in the Arsip Nasional at the present time.

38Van der Chijs, Catalogue, p. vii. The date 1858 was cited by Sundjojo, personal interview, Arsip Nasional, June 13, 1977. It cannot be checked, and it is possible that materials continued to be sent to the archives in Batavia until 1891. The archive of the government of Ambon covering the years 1600-1816, for example, was sent to Batavia in 1881; see M.G.S. August 14, 1891, no. 1931, Res. Ambon to Governor-General, September 30, 1891.

41Sejarah dan Petunjuk singkat Arsip Nasional, p. 5. The letters from the Residents and Governors in M.G.S. August 14, 1891 no. 1931 (available in AN) give a good idea of the sorts of papers which were sent to Batavia at this time and also of the state of the residency archives.

42Rouffaer's notes on the Jogja and Solo residency archives in KITLV H 698 a-b. The Surakarta residency archive, which contains over twice as much material as the Jogja archive, is in a much worse state of preservation, with many documents almost too brittle to touch and with bindings broken. Heavy floods occurred at frequent Such, then, is a brief account of the history of the Jogja archive. From an historical point of view, the strong points of the archive are clearly its wealth of documentation on the latter part of the eighteenth century, the period 1816-30, the Java War years (1825-30), and the work of the Commissioners in the principalities (1830-32). After about 1832, the quantity of documentation decreases sharply, primarily because there was no attempt on the part of the Dutch colonial government to centralize the materials from the residency archives for the post-1830 period. The result was that these were lost during the chaotic period of the Second World War and the Indonesian war of independence (1945-49). The limited material which is available in the archive dating from after 1832 must have originated from the archive of the Algemeene Secretarie and is limited mainly to the yearly general and political reports and to a few memories van overgave which were sent by the Jogja Residents. Historians who wish to research the latter part of the nineteenth century would thus be advised to seek the bulk of their sources elsewhere -- in the archive of the Algemeene Secretarie, in the mailrapporten, the koloniale verslagen, and the varied holdings of the archive of the Ministry of the Colonies in The Hague and the hulpdepot in Schaarsbergen.

intervals throughout the nineteenth century in Surakarta, a particularly severe one in 1861.
