

---

CONTRIBUTORS

Razif Bahari received his PhD in Literature from the Australian National University in October 2002 and is currently a teacher at Catholic Junior College in Singapore. He has published essays on an eclectic group of writers of postcolonial fictions such as V. S. Naipaul, A. Samad Said, and Brian Friel.

Birgit Bräuchler is a PhD candidate of Social Anthropology at Ludwig-Maximilians University of Munich, Germany. She is currently writing her dissertation on the Moluccan conflict and its extension into cyberspace.

Linda Connor is currently President of Academic Senate at the University of Newcastle. Her long ethnographic work on Bali has resulted in the production of a series of films around the life and work of Jero Tapakan. She has published in the areas of medical anthropology and comparative sociology, and was co-editor (with Raechelle Rubinstein) of Staying Local in the Global Village, published by University of Hawai'i Press.

Nancy I. Cooper, currently a Visiting Academic in the Anthropology Department at University of California, Santa Barbara, has a PhD from the University of Hawai'i. She has taught in Hawaii, at the National University of Singapore, and at UCSC and UCSB. Her research focuses on gender relations in Java.

Doreen Lee is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Anthropology, Cornell University. She is conducting a comparative study of the Reformasi movements in Malaysia and Indonesia.

Katharine E. McGregor teaches Asian history at Melbourne University, Australia. Her most recent publications are "Digging up the Past in Post-Suharto Indonesia," "Commemoration of 1 October, 'Hari Kesaktian Pancasila,' A Post Mortem Analysis?" and the forthcoming "Nugroho Notosusanto: The Legacy of a Historian in the Service of an Authoritarian Regime."

Julie Shackford-Bradley teaches at the Institute of Global Studies at California State University, Monterey Bay. She is currently researching representations of globalization and the global social justice movement in literature and film.

Adrian Vickers is currently Associate Dean, Research and Graduate Studies, in the Faculty of Arts at the University of Wollongong. Among his publications on Bali is Bali: A Paradise Created (Penguin, 1989). His latest project is a history of modern Indonesia, based around the writings of Pramoedya Ananta Toer.