Preserving the Published Heritage of Kansas Agriculture, Rural Economy and Society: 1850-1945

One aim of this project was to compile a comprehensive bibliography of pre-1946 published works potentially useful for studying the history of Kansas agriculture, rural economy and society, and human ecology. These general categories cover a broad range of literature, which overlap among disciplines

The following criteria were meant to be very inclusive to help determine the size of the pertinent literature and the preservation problem. The rural and agricultural world were viewed as group activities of people who live in the country and the effect of these activities on the farm people themselves. This should include outside influences (e.g. advertising, war) as well as those within a state which affected the activities and character of rural people

General criteria for inclusion in the bibliography:

1. Falls within the subject parameters of the project (see "Subject Scope of the Historical Bibliography")
2. Substantial portion of a title is concerned specifically with the State of Kansas (e.g. in compilations, regional, national or comparative works). Excepted are works which provide valuable insight into Kansas agriculture, etc. in relation to other locations.
3. Monographs, serials, and pamphlets (of > 24 pages) published before 1946.
4. Publications about Kansas State University (and its antecedents) and its role as a land grant university.
5. Relevant KSU and other university's M.S. and PhD theses.
6. State of Kansas documents, in particular the State Board of Agriculture, Board of Irrigation Survey and Experiment, Grain Inspection Dept., etc. (and their antecedents)

Exclusions to the general criteria

Many categories of materials have been excluded. Exclusions have been made on the basis of format, date, provenance, and likelihood of coverage in other preservation projects. While these exclusions may limit the utility of the bibliography as a bibliography for scholars of Kansas agricultural history, they are designed to focus preservation efforts on a specific body of literature. The emphasis has been on published materials of special significance to the study of Kansas agriculture, excluding many items touching on agriculture and rural life but which are also likely to receive preservation attention on account of their value to Kansas history in general.

Specific Subject Areas

1. Rural Economy: Agricultural economics; farm organization and management; production economics; food distribution; state food supply; statistical data; agricultural prices; marketing of agricultural products; small scale, home production and marketing of agricultural products (e.g. garden produce, orchards, poultry and eggs); agricultural and food policies (state level only); cooperatives; agricultural finance; land economics and land use; land tenure; rural industry and business connected with the processing and
