GREETINGS

THE REVIEW

We rejoice that the Bulletin and the Review have found a local habitation and a home. We wish them joy in their perilous journey across campus and the gorge. May they lose no pieces of type, however small, nor precious bits of paper teeming with dozens of words to the square idea.

May their Ink Bottles be established in convenient places in this new abode. And may their Illustration Chiefs moreover, find time to hold instructive classes for Aspiring Compets in the Application thereof -- that our eyes may no longer be ruined, nor our imaginations strained to the snapping point by fruitless efforts to glean from a cafe-au-lait surface the pearls of wisdom and warning thereon.

To those same Eager Apprentices who ply their hands on the lever of knowledge in alternating succession, we also recommend a spelling and English grammar, and Inch-Rule, and a T square.

We, the great dumb, suffering public have supported you with our hard-earned cash. May we be able to support you henceforth throughout the ages with our most hearty approbation, as worthy organs of the Women of Cornell.

Again we rejoice in your new home, as sincerely as we rejoice in the progress of Mankind, the Hoped-for-Improvements in S age, and the Rise in price of that staple and nutritious article of diet, Macaroni!

PAGEANT

Miss Eager, our Pageant director, writes the following: "Now that I have personally seen the girls with whom I am to work and have met the committees and know their ability, I am confident that we are going to produce a splendid pageant."

Hereafter if gymnasium walk is not named on record cards, credit will not be given.

CLASSES.

1918 When you come to class meeting, as of course you will, bring $.10 along. Never mind what it is for, but, -- don't forget.

The Juniors will be unable to give their their proposed Stunt for the Frosh, because Professor Kimball, Chairman of Student Affairs has objected to so many activities among the classes. Therefore the Frosh will be entertained by the Juniors only with the class christening the stunt given yearly by every Junior class.
