THOSE GALOSHES!

(Answering '19's article).

I'm glad someone's expressed her opinion
For I really do think it's a crime
For girls to go blopping around so
With galoshes keeping the time.

I may lack a musical nature and
I may lack a sense of the "style"
but I'd rather be deaf, far, - tell you
Than hear those things "clink" all the while

I hear them on going to classes
And see them in crowd and in throng
but I hope when I get up to heaven
There'll be peace from that galoshes song.

At 5 o'clock Monday afternoon Stimson Auditorium was crowded with entering girls who listened to the first of a series of Health Talks given by Dr. Matzke. First they were warned that they must have plenty of sleep, fresh air and sunshine if they wished to retain good health in an environment so new and so exciting. If they would take a hygienic point of view, keeping both mind and body clean, there would be no undermining of health, no decrease in mentality. Then too there is no place in the life of a University girl for the emotion of love. She has too many opportunities for broadening comradeships to neglect them. If she tries to crowd in too many experiences, the nervous tension reaches the breaking point and the girl is no longer in the race as physically and mentally fit. She has reached the point of elimination and degeneration.
