and represents the bridge as it now appears, and as it has stood for forty years. It remained in its first position over twenty years, and was then moved to its present place.

I do not know that this is the map you refer to or you speak of, but if it be, I can.

I have been informed that a wooden bridge of the stone house period was built over this Com-