

the year. in circumstances which would render her voyage hazardous that being the case. it has removed from my mind, former disagreeable impressions with respect to them. The vessel did not sail. She was soon after frozen up. Since that time I have not heard a word from them nor can I learn, that any letter has been received from them by any of their friends.

I am very glad your brother went first to the valley, which was always my advice. I think he owed that attention to his family, and to his constituents, who I am rejoiced to find have neglected him. I know him to be a rational man, not blinded by party spirit. but a true American, who fought and bled for its independence, and who would not now, surrender it to any power.

we expect to see him. In all this month.

Quincy does not present us with any novel scenes. Susan has had of her trial and mislaid marriage I dare say, and of Hannah Smith.

I am conscious I owe more than a letter to my dear Abby. who I rejoice to learn is so well pleased with her new situation. when I feel more at my ease, I will write to her.

Remember me to your sister,

and believe me ever your affectionate
