

are so uneasy upon this account that they are obliged to make stories of their own and report them. The deaths of Col Hamilton and Col Humphries are currently circulated through this City but I suppose there is no foundation for either.
I have unfortunately lost my Alphabet and am therefore unable to decypher your epistle. I wish you to send me a copy of yours. Pray write often I am told the law lectures by Judge Wilson begin on the fifteenth of next month. I hope to hear them, for from the sketch of his design I imagine they must be very interesting.
I wish you to give me some account of the manner in which he proposes to deliver them. Our friends here are all well except Miss Sally Smith who I fear is in a very bad way. Remember me with affection to all our family.

Yours C Adams
