Your responses have been submitted. Thank you for taking the time to complete this questionnaire. The Cornell Program for Records Assistance will be contacting you regarding your chosen remedy. Your $10 gift card will be sent to your email or home address.

You just completed a questionnaire that will provide necessary information to the Cornell Program for Records Assistance as it works to deliver remedy services as part of the settlement in the Gonzalez et al v. Pritzker case. You are now being asked to share the information from this questionnaire with the Cornell Criminal Records Panel Survey for research purposes. Consent to use your questionnaire responses for research purposes is voluntary, involves no direct cost to you, and does not impact access to your chosen remedy.

About the Study

The study is led by Martin T. Wells, Professor of Statistical Sciences at Cornell University's ILR School (Industrial and Labor Relations). The purpose of this research is to learn more about the errors in background screening and understand how criminal records and remedies like the Cornell Program for Records Assistance impact employment opportunities. If you choose to participate, the research team will contact you periodically in the future with a series of surveys. We will ask questions about: 1) demographics (e.g., age, gender, race); 2) work and income history; 3) ability to obtain driving and occupational licenses; 4) certificates of good conduct; 5) family structure; 6) living conditions; and 7) current status in the criminal justice system.

Confidentiality

Regardless of your permission to use the data for research purposes, the information you provide in the questionnaire will be kept private. Should you provide your consent, these data will be transmitted to the research team over a secure connection and access to the data will be carefully restricted by the research team. Your data will be stored in a computing environment that meets or exceeds U.S. Defense Department C-2 standards for trusted computing environments. Results of this study may be used for teaching, research, publications, or presentations at meetings and conferences. Any report or public discussion of findings from the survey will not include personal identifiers, such as names or contact information. Examples of identifying information include name, address, and Social Security number.

Risks

Your participation in this study involves answering questions like the ones you just completed. You can refuse to answer any specific question on the surveys. Answering the questions may make you think about your life and past difficulties.

Benefits

You may feel you made a contribution toward increasing knowledge about poorly understood and infrequently discussed topics related to employment of people with criminal records. We hope to learn more about what interventions result in increased employment opportunities for people with criminal records.

Compensation for Participation

You will receive compensation for participation in future studies if and when you are contacted again.
