To Cornellians:

In your undergraduate days, the Lehigh Valley sought to earn your patronage by rendering you its best in every detail of service.

By the the same means it seeks to maintain and strengthen the tie. Based solely on its capacity to please you—and not because of "old times' sake"—the Lehigh Valley invites your attention to its train service between New York or Philadelphia and Ithaca, Rochester, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Toronto, Detroit and Chicago. Its representatives will welcome your inquiries.

CHRISTMAS Eve in Ithaca seemed a fairy land with its thousand little lights shining in the darkness. All was silent and peaceful after the mad rush of students leaving and Faculty families getting ready for the festivities. Carolers sang hymns before the houses where candles burned in the windows. Then everything was still again until midnight, when the chimes rang out with "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," and other carols. The music was broadcast from the station at Franklin Hall.

IT WAS a white Christmas in Ithaca, but it looked as if it were going to be a black Christmas Eve when a generator burned out in the power plant which supplies the city with electricity. Five counties were dark for a while, until two reserve generators could be put into service. The generator that burned out was the largest at the plant in Remington. The cause of the break has not been determined, but it is believed that the damage will run into a large amount.

RAILROAD officials estimate that forty-five hundred students left Ithaca in this year's holiday exodus, probably the largest in Cornell's history. The holiday specials of both the Lehigh and Lackawanna roads ran ahead of schedule, except only one, which lost eight minutes in the Pennsylvania mountains when a car slid down one of the steep hills and hit it at a crossing. The driver was thrown clear, uninjured, and he continued to New York aboard the train.

TWO OFFICIALS of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, known to Cornellians as former division passenger agents in Ithaca, have received promotions effective January 1. Norman W. Pringle goes from general passenger agent to the newly created position of passenger traffic manager, and Charles A. Barber takes his place as general passenger agent. Both will have headquarters at 143 Liberty Street, New York.

FUTURE STUDENTS at Cornell from the Town of Southold, Long Island, may benefit from the will of the late Charles F. Smith, recently filed. The will leaves the residue of his estate in trust, the income to go to his grandson for his life, and then be paid to the Trustees of Cornell University "on condition that said Trustees hold the principal intact in a fund to be known as the 'Charles F. Smith Fund' and said Trustees to pay the annual income therefrom to some student at Cornell University from the Town of Southold, New York, said income to accumulate in case there is no student from Southold Town and to be added to the principal and the total income from said fund to be paid annually to a student from Southold Town when there is one there, or if more than one, to be paid according to the judgment of the Trustees."

THE STREETS of Ithaca are now graced on every corner with marking signs. A letter to the Sun credits their installation to the Sun's editorial insistence on the need for such signs.

AFTER SEVERAL months work the repairs on the Drill Hall roof have been completed. Two carloads of a waterproof and partially fire and sound-proof roofing material made from sugar cane refuse were used on top of pine plank, and the entire area was then covered with roofing composition.

PRESIDENT FARRAND, in a talk to freshmen, urged every student who has not been vaccinated within the last five years to have this done at once.

PLANS for the establishment of a Cornell chapter of Chi Epsilon, honorary civil engineering fraternity, have been completed. On January 10, Professor Fred A. Barnes '97, Director of the School of Civil Engineering, and the following seniors will be initiated as charter members: Richard E. Bonyun of St. Peter, Barbados; Edward B. Dennis, Jr., of Crisfield, Maryland; Clarence G. Eaton of Tonawanda; Richard F. Graef of Stratford, Connecticut; Richard I. Land of New York; William Petrillo of Rochester; Edward A. Proctor of Washington; David W. Punzelt of Stamford, Connecticut; Robert W. Shipman of Mount Vernon; Philip C. Stein of Baltimore; and Herman G. Veeder, Jr., of Pittsburgh.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY '25, of White Plains, is the latest victim of a mild epidemic of Ford pilfering here. His car was picked up in the vicinity of the Alpha Tau Omega House. For the information of alumni of Key West and Spokane, it was a 1922 model sedan, bearing the license plate number 687-663. McKinley would appreciate it if any alumnus who finds the trinket would ship it back to him via parcel post collect.

L. L. VOIGT '28 of Pittsburgh, had some bad dreams a short time ago which resulted in a nightmare. In his sleep he climbed from his second story window and tumbled to the yard below, fracturing his jaw and getting generally shaken up. He spent several days in the Infirmary, but was able to leave before Christmas.

SIX SENIORS have been selected by the Faculty judges of the Department of Public Speaking to participate in the '94 Memorial Debate on January 10. They are Joseph R. Houchins '26 of Ithaca; Nathan Katz '25 of Birmingham, Alabama; John G. Laylin '25 of Columbus, Ohio; Samuel Mezansky '25 of Poughkeepsie; Martin Rosenblum '25 of Middletown; and Ross E. Scanlan '25 of Buffalo. John P. Seward, Jr., '26 of Buffalo, and John W. MacDonald '25 of Watervliet were chosen as alternates.

ANDREW ACKERMAN '25 of Drexel Hill, Pennsylvania, Harold I. Frederick '25 of Cobleskill, Judith Fried '25 of New York, Cuyler E. Paine '25 of Albion, Helen J. Smith '25 of Attica, and Herbert T. Huckle '26 of Clyde have been chosen to compete in the annual Eastman Prize Contest to be held in Farmers' Week, for prizes of $100 and $20. John Marshall, Jr., '26 of Waterloo was chosen as alternate.

THE CORNELL CHEMIST announces the election to its board of Donald S. Barnes '26 of Sayre, Pa., Carl E. Johnson '26 of Greenwich, Connecticut, Eugene M. Hakanson '26 of Greenwich, Connecticut, James N. Ostrofsky '26 of Bridgeport, Connecticut, John F. Thompson '28 of Webster, and Charles O. Warren, Jr., '27 of Brooklyn.

AT THE Tau Beta Pi initiation dinner held at the Johnny Parson Club on December 13, Dean Kimball was toastmaster and responses were made by Professor Paul M. Lincoln, the Rev. Hugh Moran, Professor Charles L. Durham '99, Charles O. Mackey '25, and Ernest W. Starr '25.

PROFESSOR ROBERT S. STEVENS was made honorary member of Delta Theta Phi at its twenty-first annual initiation banquet held in the Dutch Kitchen on December 16. In addition to Professor Stevens, fourteen students were elected.

THE CORNELL COUNTRYMAN announces the election to its staff of Harold Wentworth '27 of Cortland, Verlee O. Linderman '27 of Allegany, Veora M. Tyrrell '27 of Nichols, Clarence F. Blewer '28 of Newark Valley, and Norma H. Wright '27 of Baldwinsville.

THE WOMEN'S Debate Club contended with University of Buffalo women in Barnes Hall on December 13 over the question "Resolved, that the Present Tendency Toward a Third Political Party is Justifiable." Cornell, upholding the negative, was defeated. The judges were Miss M. E. Peabody, Herman L. Brockway, and the Rev. Dr. Robert H. Beattie. The Club had elected to membership Eleanor Holston '27 of Ithaca, Irene M. Moffat '27 of Rutherford, New Jersey, Jeanette Hanford '28 of Ithaca, and Dorothy M. Johnston '28 of Baldwinsville.

'11 NEW YORKERS MEET MONTHLY

Twenty-nine members of the class of '11 met for their regular monthly dinner on December 11 in the Campus Room of the Cornell Club of New York. The class has fifty-four resident members of the New York Club, the largest of any class. The monthly dinners are being held in preparation for the reunion with '09, '10, and '12 in Ithaca next June. Oscar S. (Chip) Tyson presided at the last party; speeches, heavy and light, were made by Thomas R. (Tom) Cox, Edward G. (Mac) MacArthur, Harold L. (Curly) Cross, Peter J. (Pete) Gallagher, Oscar G. (Kid) Miller, William W. G. (Wint) Rossiter, and a lot of others said quite a bit.

1902 TAKES HISTORIES

Seventeen members of the Class of '02 who live in and near New York met for dinner on December 12 in the Campus Room of the Cornell Club. After dinner they amused themselves in exchanging vital statistics.

It was found that all but three of the seventeen present had gained in weight since graduation from the University, the total gain being 386 pounds, an average of about 28 pounds for each of the fourteen who gained. The total loss of the other three was 48 pounds; the entire party represented an average gain in weight of almost exactly twenty pounds.

All but three of those present had been married. Twenty-six living children were reported, seventeen boys and nine girls, the eldest twenty and the youngest two years of age. The largest families were two of four children each, and four of those who had been married reported no children.

PROFESSORS ATTEND MEETINGS

Cornell was represented by about thirty Faculty members at the scientific and historical conventions held during vacation. The American Association for the Advancement of Science met in Washington December 31 to January 3. Several Cornell professors are on the standing committees: Wallie A. Hurwitz on the mathematical committee; Floyd K. Richtmyer '04 represents the Optical Society of America on the physics committee; and James G. Needham, Ph. D. '98, represents the Entomological Society of America on the committee dealing with zoological sciences. Simon H. Gage '77 of the American Association of Anatomists represents the medical sciences, and Jacob R. Schramm is the representative of the Botanical Society of America.

Professors Julian P. Bretz, Charles H. Hull '86, Wallace Notestein, and George Lincoln Burr '81 went to Richmond, Virginia, for the annual meeting of the American Historical Association, on December 27 to 31. With them was F. J. Poicke of the University of Manchester, England, who will lecture at Cornell for a part of next term.

SPORT STUFF

The varsity scribe has gone to New York to the national football meeting. Consequently this niche of fleeting views of the ephemeral things of the Campus would be vacant, or virtually so, unless one of our more staid writers pinch hits and dons the sportive kincker.

Rym would undoubtedly have said in part a few words about the climate—invigorating, consistent, and producing to date about five inches of ice—and a few more about the approach of the ice cutting season and the opening of the toboggan slide. He is also quite susceptible to Christmas music. He dotes on the chimes the midnight before Christmas, which over at our place can't be heard without a gale from the south, which in turn there hasn't been any of.

The Christmas tree on the Campus; the waifs—i. e. the Campus Tigers—singing Christmas carols; things like this at Yuletide each in turn play on his passionate lyre. Yet the Black Diamond bears him relentlessly to the big city and leaves him helpless to express himself through his wonted medium.

Football meetings ought to be held at some other time of the year. How can we legislate the small college teams from scoring on us when our heads are full of waifs and carols? T. S.

JOHN LYELL HARPER '97

Largely responsible for the present world-famous power development at Niagara Falls, and conceded to be one of the greatest hydro-electrical engineers of the world, Harper died at Niagara Falls on November 28, following an operation for appendicitis. For fifteen years chief engineer of four power companies, he built the mammoth power plants along the banks and in the gorge of the Niagara River.

ANOTHER WOMAN WINS

Another Cornell alumna who won a seat in her State's legislative assembly at last fall's elections is Mrs. Albert H. Emery, Jr., (Julia E. McClune) '02. She is said to be the first woman ever elected to the lower house in Connecticut from Stamford.

The other one, reported in our issue of December 11, was May A. Thropp '20, elected to the New Jersey Assembly from Mercer County.

CITE TWO CORNELLIANs

Two Cornellians are listed among the 131 Jews who made notable contributions to American progress in 1924, in "Who's Who Among American Jews" issued by The American Hebrew. Louis Wolheim '07 is cited under Drama, and William F. Friedman '15 under Science.

Wolheim served as tutor in Ithaca several years ago, and acted for the Whartons, who had a motion picture studio here. He later went to New York to act on the legitimate stage. He had the title role in "The Hairy Ape" and is now playing in "What Price Glory".

Friedman has won fame as a cryptanalyst. He decoded many of the mysterious messages which were part of the Teapot Dome investigation. As related in the ALUMNI NEWS of March 13, 1924, he was credited earlier with having decoded certain German letters which influenced the United States to enter the war on the side of the Allies.

A TRIBUTE TO MORSE STEPHENS

The California Monthly recently printed the following editorial tribute to the late Professor Henry Morse Stephens, written by Farnham P. Griffiths, California '06:

A great college president looks for great professors, and when President Wheeler came to California in 1899 he began to pull at his old friend and colleague, Professor Morse Stephens, left behind at Ithaca. It took time to pry him away, for Mr. Stephens was fond of Cornell and the Cornell boys, and had come to that time of life when men dislike to move. But he tried us for a few summer sessions and in 1902 Dr. Wheeler had his way and Mr. Stephens came to the University of California to remain and, as he often said, became a Californian for good. He seemed to have found what he wanted both at the University and in the State. Through his university extension lectures he made friends everywhere who lasted and at Berkeley itself he became a figure the like of whom we shall probably not find again. There was, as President Wheeler has often said, but one Morse Stephens.

It is not easy to tell what he was, though men like Scott Hendricks and John Fletcher and Richard O'Connor and Prentiss Gray (these are but typical of many) who were students in his time felt and knew full well. And if you ask them whether it was worth while going to college, and if so why, they are apt in lieu of argument to tell you simply that Morse Stephens was at Berkeley in their time and close the discussion with that. If you do not understand, they are sorry for you. It is just one of the things so plain to them that they don't care to argue the point. If every college had its Morse Stephens there would be no debate, they think, about the value of a college education.

These men and hundreds who are of like mind were not students of history particularly. That's just the point. The University has many professors who are interested in the promising men in their specialties who some day will be doctors of philosophy. But Mr. Stephens, though a teacher of history whom none excelled, took all the University for his province when it came to his touch with the students. The track or baseball captain, the president of the student body, and the editor of The Californian were quite as interesting to him and normally closer to him than mere students of history without personality or promise otherwise. His fireside at the Faculty Club was not a history seminar but a gathering place for men coming from all the colleges and for all purposes. They came to hear him read Kipling or to discuss with him the football situation or the next Extravaganza or simply to spend the evening and hear him talk—he loved to talk and knew how. They were welcome regardless. He had the interest and the time for such a program of life. The evening was always young with him until midnight, when he usually had his cup of tea, lit a fresh cigar and began his own reading and writing.

Thus he touched the University life at all points except among those who, though professing ideals themselves, saw life so foreshortened that they could not understand his idealism, which was generous in its judgments of men.

His friendships among the alumni were but the going on of his friendships with the students. So they were not to be found primarily in faculties of history but everywhere as men scatter when they graduate. He had no sons of his own. But all the world over you will find his "boys" like the late Willard Straight, to whose home in New York he went as naturally when taken suddenly and seriously ill as any father would go to his sons. There is something wonderfully human about a man who comes to that relationship out of an original contact of professor with student.

In the nature of things all the students could not come to know Mr. Stephens in quite that intimacy. Yet it is probably true that there are few men who were in college in his time who did not feel the magic of that great and kindly personality and who do not wonder whether the University can be quite the same now that it is gone.

Alumni Trustee Reports

Roger H. Williams '95 Defines Character Building as First Aim of University—High Compliment to Farrand

Roger H. Williams '95, who completed his term as an Alumni Trustee and was re-elected last June, gave the following report for his five-year term, 1919-1924, before the fifth annual alumni convention in New York on November 14:

The past five years of Cornell history may perhaps best be characterized as a period of transition, transition not only from one administration through an interregnum to another, but from one era into the next. The era the end of which was more or less coincident with the close of the Great War, had been one in which expansion was the keynote. There was growth in numbers of students and Faculty, in multiplication of courses, and increase of buildings; and to many these achievements which could be expressed in plus figures were a matter of pride. They seemed to indicate that Cornell was "no mean city."

The present era bids fair to be one of consolidation, of intensive rather than extensive growth, of betterment of present facilities and Faculties rather than the adding thereto. This is not an attempt to prophesy or forecast, but rather to voice what seems to be implied as inevitable if Cornell's life is to continue in wholesome balance.

The transition period which has lain between these two eras has been by no means a dies non. It has afforded Cornell a most needed opportunity for self-examination, and this opportunity has not been neglected. The part she should play in America's educational and cultural life has been debated, challenged, and redefined. Her financial strength has been found wanting and partially mended by the receipt of some of the many millions needed. The executive machinery has been under scrutiny by both the Board and the alumni, and in the creation of the new office of vice-chairman of the Board, and in the filling of it with one of the ablest of Cornell's alumni, a real step has been taken to gear this organization up to the demands upon it.

Solid foundations have been made in many other phases of her activities, which are bound to bear fruit later. Nothing which has happened in this period, however, can outrank in importance the fact that the University is now led by Dr. Livingston Farrand. Here is a man who has as his ideal for Cornell what every Cornellian can not only approve but be enthusiastic about. That this is not a mere personal endorsement, though it is a most hearty one, is borne out by the universal acclaim his avowed purposes have received from all connected with the institution. "'Twere superfluous to praise him more."

However, if your pet project seems to be delayed, still keep behind him. Indeed, if your pet project gets turned down, still keep behind him. He probably has a better plan. Such faith will make it impossible for him, if it were not already so in his nature, to swerve from his whole-souled consecration to his task.

Livingston Farrand is working for Cornell and not for himself. That is important for us to know, and what is equally important is that, if I understand him correctly, and I think I do, he is anxious that the students who graduate from Cornell shall approach their respective careers in the same spirit of service. If that can be realized in this institution, those graduating from Cornell will be known not merely as Cornellians but everywhere will be recognized as persons of constructive force, helpful to their generation; and the name of Cornell will be great in the nation, not because of the size of its roll, or of its income, but because it has become a source of unusual power.

This point has been stressed because it augurs the curing here of a lamentable lack common in too many institutions of higher learning, namely, the lack of official concern for the building of character in the students. It has been too generally the fashion in America to regard an aloofness of responsibility along this line as a proof of rank and as evidence that the institution was of real university grade. European influence has presumably contributed somewhat to this, and to it also a reaction from too rigidly church-ed schools. It is well to recognize that the average American college boy is, on good authority, judged to be about two years less mature, age for age, than the Continental university man; but even if the wisdom of application in America of the European attitude were not made doubtful by this fact of slower maturity, it seems deserving of challenge on its demerits.

Approaching the matter from a purely technical angle, how can the training of the cognitive faculties alone be regarded as furnishing a well rounded education when proper control of the feelings and of the conative powers are not only equally essential, but without it the former is largely ineffective?

From the angle of practical experience also, character is the first rated requirement in every respectable employment bureau, and will be found in high degree in all those who greatly achieve. Shall we, then, ignore it in the educational setting we give our youth?

Nor is it enough to say that there are outside agencies helpful to this general end and that the University looks favorably on them. This is at best passive and inadequate and a poor discharge of definite responsibility.

It better becomes a professional educator than it does a mere Trustee to determine whether the recognition of this responsibility should be in any way announced or formal, but "by its fruits you shall know it," and if that spirit pervades Cornell, as I rejoice to believe it may in the near future, it will not be long in being known, announced or unannounced. My concern is to register most firmly my belief that the Trustees of this great institution, and the alumni and alumnae who share the trust, cannot regard their stewardship as fully discharged if they permit this wonderful investment so splendidly administered to function only along lines of bare intellect.

This does not mean the turning of Cornell into a boarding school or the establishment of additional restrictions and penalties. Nothing negative where it can be avoided. Self-governing men are not best developed that way; but it does mean that inspirational teaching shall be the institution's aim, and that the men chosen for its teaching staff shall be, so far as obtainable, real personalities who have found themselves, and have a real vision or message about life to give, for which their specialty is only a vehicle. Such men cannot be bought with money, but few efforts or emoluments are too great to secure or keep them for Cornell once they are discovered, and perhaps the most potent attraction for them will be the knowledge that they will be coming to an institution where alongside of sound scholarship and deepest research, they will find a sympathetic atmosphere of idealism attuned to the postulate that the finest part of man is his spirit.

Students from forty-one foreign countries are registered in the University, according to the Directory issued recently. Twenty-seven countries were represented last year. There are 170 foreign students enrolled, an increase of eighteen over last year's registration. China is at the head of the list with 48 students, Porto Rico has 18, the Philippines 16, and Canada ranks next with 14.

The remaining countries represented, with the number of students from each, are: Argentina, one; Armenia, one; Australia, two; Barbadoes, one; Bermuda, one; Belgium, one; Bolivia, one; Brazil, three; British Columbia, one; Columbia, one; Cuba, six; Denmark, one; Domingo, one; Dutch Borneo, one; Esthonia, one; Egypt, one; England, two; Germany, one; Holland, one; France, three; India, eight; Hawaii, ten; Japan, nine; Iceland, one; Mexico, two; Norway, two; Poland, one; Russia, three; Guatemala, one; Santo Domingo, one; Spain, one; Sweden, one; Switzerland, one; Syria, one; Turkey, one.

The Graduate school is the most popular for there are 68 students registered there, while Agriculture is next with 34; Mechanical Engineering has 19. In both Civil Engineering and Arts there are 15; in Chemistry eight; in Architecture five; in Law five, and in Medicine one.

LITERARY REVIEW

A Good Book About Cornell

Concerning Cornell. By Oscar D. Von Engeln '08, Professor of Physical Geography in Cornell. Third Edition. Ithaca. Cornell Cooperative Society. 1924. 19.3 cm., pp. xvi, 458. Price, $3.50.

Professor Van Engeln's book began its career in 1917. It has now appeared in a third completely revised edition. The number of pages has been somewhat increased, and while some statements no longer wholly true have been cut out, many other facts have been inserted in an attempt, which may be regarded as entirely successful, to portray Cornell life as it is to-day. The book has become a standard manual of information about Cornell and the author deserves much credit for his pains and scholarly care in keeping the book up to date. His efforts deserve to be and doubtless will be rewarded by large sales; for no better present to a friend or relative can be suggested.

The Care of Crippled Children

The Care, Cure, and Education of the Crippled Child. By Henry Edward Abt '25. Elyria, Ohio. The International Society for Crippled Children. 1924. 23.5 cm., pp. xiv, 222.

Last year Abt chose this subject for a term report in the course in social science and becoming absorbed in it carried on a voluminous correspondence in the effort to gather material. This resulted in his being appointed for the summer as director of the Bureau of Information of the International Society. During that time he elaborated his report into the present volume. Work in this field has been developing of late very rapidly, stimulated by the recent epidemics of infantile paralysis, and the great success with which new methods of treatment have been crowned. No survey of the subject has been made for ten years. The book includes an extended directory of American organizations and institutions with a summary of the work of each, and a bibliography of the books and articles in English dealing with the subject. It seems destined to serve for years as the one book for students of the problem or active workers in caring for crippled children.

In Bird-Lore for November-December the frontispiece is a fine picture of eight humming-birds by Louis A. Fuertes '97. Professor Arthur A. Allen '08 answers the question, "Where are the Summer Birds at Christmas?"

In School and Society for December 20 Dr. David Starr Jordan '72 writes on "The University and Moral Teaching."

ATHLETICS

Kearney Football Captain

Francis Kearney, Jr., '26 of Maplewood, New Jersey, will lead the football team next fall. His election as captain was announced at a meeting of the 1924 letter men on December 17. Kearney entered from the Irvington, New Jersey, High School and played on his freshman team. In his sophomore year he made the varsity, and has played left tackle for two seasons. He has been one of the strong men of the team, and is classed as a first rate tackle. He was frequently mentioned in the various honor lists and "All" teams compiled at the end of the season.

Win First Basketball Game

The basketball team opened the season at Buffalo on December 20 with a victory over Canisius College by the narrow margin of one point. The score was Cornell 24, Canisius 23, the team just pulling through by a rally in the last few minutes of play.

The game served as a try-out of material; the same purpose will be served by the games with Rochester and Buffalo this week, Coach Ortner proposing to use men on this trip who did not get into the Canisius game. When the University opens a fairly definite idea of the make-up of the team will be obtainable.

Against Canisius the two regulars from last year's team available, Captain Merrill S. Dake, center, and Francis D. Rossonondo, left guard, were both in the lineup. George D. Clucas, and Harold George Melniker, who were on last year's squad started at forwards and Charles Rosenbaum, who also gained some experience last year, played right guard. Ignacio S. Molinet, member of last year's freshman basketball team and halfback on the varsity eleven last fall, and Arthur M. Winkler, center on last year's freshman basketball team, also got into the game as forwards.

Canisius was in the lead at the end of the first half, the score standing 10 to 7.

Rosenbaum, with three field goals and four foul goals, for a total of ten points, led the Cornell scoring. Rossonondo was next, with two goals from the floor and two fouls.

GARGOYLE announces the election to membership of Harold C. Bernhard '26 of New York, Walter D. Burger '26 of Chicago, Malcolm P. Cameron '26 of Los Angeles, Henry S. Lockwood, Jr., '26 of Brooklyn, and Conway L. Todd, Sp., of Ithaca.

IF PLANS of local authorities mature, Ithaca may soon have a local dry ordinance that will give the city power to settle its own problems of enforcement. Federal officials have made a number of raids in Ithaca in the past month.

THE SEXTETTE OF THE MUSICAL CLUBS

REUNIONS are not as far away as the temperature indicates. The reunion calendar will go forth shortly to members of the reuniting classes. The class secretary is already busy on his committees. The local class dinner, a sort of prereunion cocktail, will soon be spurring our appetites in those classes, growing less numerous, that suspend all animation between their big shows. In a few weeks campaigns will be in full blast to bring the classmate back, and campaign literature will be hammering at our doors. It is perennial as the lilac and much more dependable, for it makes its growth in the cold months and nothing can prevent its blossom time.

The late Edwin Asa Dix, Princeton '81, did an excellent bit of constructive imagining when he evolved the reunion plan that celebrates his name. The Cornell hybrid, a cross of the contemporary class plan with the older quinquennial plan, has met the local requirements excellently and the so-called "Dix classes" have added much to the gayety of the celebration. As yet, however, no record has been hung up by a Dix class that was not at the same time a five-year class.

For 1925 we have something to look forward to. Two aggressive classes, 1909 and 1910, are parts of a group of contemporary reuniting classes. Naught nine is just after having set a new record at its fifteen-year reunion. The Class of Ten believes it can hang up its own flag at the masthead. Naught nine believes that what has been done before can be done again, and that if certain persons that promised to come back last year and did not, plus those that enjoyed themselves last year, will all come to their Dix reunion, Ten won't have a chance.

We are neutral. We are glad to see that persons approaching the maturity of the late thirties can still play, and can relish the old freshman-sophomore rivalry. It is a fine thing to have, not to say to be able to exhibit, this other side to the usual hard-boiled business face. We hope they will both succeed. The record doesn't matter. It's having everybody back that can get back that counts. It's the early winter campaign that does the trick.

ASK FOR ENGINEERS

The employment bulletin of the Sibley School of Mechanical Engineering for December 23 lists a number of engineering positions open for graduates. These vary from the one which specifies a young Brazilian to that of a company which wants a man to direct the spending of between three and four million dollars a year in steam generation. Several of the concerns inquiring for men are listed by name, and they offer a wide variety of work in engineering sales, correspondence, and administration. Alumni interested in further details may get a copy of the Bulletin by writing to Sibley College.

ECHOES FROM THE CORNELL CLUB

Class dinners nearly every evening have recently brought to the Cornell Club of New York more alumni than ever before. The following letter, written by a non-Cornellian tenant of the building to his Cornellian brother, describes the spirit of the place:

"Dear _____

"Ever since the other evening, when down the air shaft at one-thirty a. m. from the newly opened Cornell Club came the memory-provoking strains of the little ditty you used to sing back in nineteen nine or ten, with your hat off and tears in your eyes, about something or other far above Cayuga's waters, I have been wanting to write to you. . . . Why, now that the musical accompaniment is over, I fail to get, but I'm going to yield to the impulse at any rate. . . .

"My proximity to the strains before mentioned is due to the fact that I have taken up my abode in the new Interfraternity Club House here on the corner of Thirty-eighth Street and Madison Avenue, and the Cornell Club of New York occupy about four floors of the place high above me. It was this singing the other night. . . those songs that you used to sing about the house when you were going to Ithaca and with which I became so familiar. . . the one with the line in it about working like a Turk and the old football song about the red and the white, . . . so worked on my poor old semi-Teutonic synthetic sentimentality that I got to thinking about the days that I used to hear you singing in your pseudo-harmony about the place. . .

You know, when we get far away from a thing, be it time or distance that does it, there are moments, glamorous ones you may say, that sort of glorify the thing. . . . So it was with me the other night.

"Really, though, seriously, you should have been up here to hear that singing. There was evidently plenty of. . . foot because I don't care how collegiate you might happen to be, you don't stay up until one-thirty warbling dear old Alma Maters without the impetus that only. . . can give. . . All the songs, too, seemed to be of the period that you went to school. . . I suppose men of that period mostly constitute the resident membership of the Club. They even sang that song about Sweet-potato Sal that came out in one of the musical shows of your years. I imagine you'd have found many familiar faces that would have looked fairly good to you even though wrinkled with the passage of the last thirteen years or so. The bunch do look prosperous though. . . the ones that I saw in the elevator. . . ."

INTERCOLLEGIATE NOTES

BROWN for the first time in its history has passed the two thousand mark, having this year 2,013 students, as follows: graduate students, 150; undergraduate men, 1369; School of Education, 66; Women's College, 428.

THE CITY of Syracuse went over the top in its effort to raise a million dollars for the support of Syracuse University. The final report of the committee gave $1,022,201 as the sum raised by the city. This included over $13,000 from students, about $250,000 from alumni, and nearly $7,000 from faculty members who were not alumni. A vigorous campaign is now being carried on among Syracuse alumni outside of Syracuse.

VERMONT has this year 1,242 students: Arts and Sciences, 717; Medicine, 123; Engineering, 167; Agriculture, 119; Graduates, 15; Two-Year Teacher-Training Department, 101. There are 732 men and 510 women.

YALE has received from Edward S. Harkness of New York a gift of one million dollars for a department of dramatic art in the School of Fine Arts. Professor George P. Baker of Harvard has been called to be the head of the new department. Professor Everett V. Meeks, formerly of Cornell, now dean of the School of Fine Arts at Yale, in The Yale Alumni Weekly for December 5 outlines the program for the new department, which includes the erection of a theater and the production of plays in various languages.

MICHIGAN has received from Mrs. Christina M. Simpson of Detroit a gift of $400,000 to establish the Thomas Henry Simpson Memorial Institute for Medical Research. Of this sum $150,000 is to be used for the erection of a building, the rest for salaries.

CLUB ACTIVITIES

Buffalo

The Cornell Club of Buffalo held two particularly well attended luncheons on December 12 and 19. At the first one Professor Nathaniel Schmidt spoke on the problems of the Near East, and the next week Dr. W. F. Rittman, professor of chemistry at Carnegie Institute of Technology and the inventor of the Rittman process for obtaining a greater yield in the manufacture of gasoline, spoke on "Oil." Dr. Rittman is the author of many books on oil geology and is consulting engineer to the United States Government and the State of Pennsylvania.

New York

So much interest was shown in the series of class dinners held at the Cornell Club of New York every evening of the week of December 15 to 20 that all the classes have decided to continue these meetings during the coming year. The dinners are open to all alumni of the respective classes, and all are cordially invited to attend.

The total membership of the New York Club reported at the meeting of the Board of Governors on December 16 was 2,036, with forty-one more candidates accepted at that meeting.

Rochester

James F. Barker '93 was elected president of the Cornell Club of Rochester at its annual meeting on December 13 at the Hotel Rochester. Other officers elected were Raymond A. Lander '12, vice-president; W. Clyde O'Brien '21, secretary; Joseph B. Bloss, Jr., '22, membership secretary; and Harold A. Meng '17, treasurer. Dr. Floyd S. Winslow '06, the retiring president, was presented with the two volumes of Andrew D. White's "Autobiography."

Gilmour Dobie, George Pfann '23, and Captain Frank L. Henderson '25 of the football team were the guests of honor at the meeting, and addressed the two hundred members of the Club present.

Plainfield, New Jersey

The annual banquet of the Cornell Club of Plainfield was held at the Plainfield Country Club on December 17. C. Benson Wigton '07 presided as the retiring president. The speakers were Harold F. Welch '10 of Westfield, Andrew J. Whinery '10 of East Orange, Joseph Vanderventer, president of the Princeton Club of Plainfield, and Macready Sykes, another member of the Princeton Club of Plainfield.

Hal Welch entertained with musical stunts in addition to his talk, and Andy Whinery served as a verbal "captioneer" for the Cornell moving pictures which were sent from Ithaca. He supplemented the printed captions. The chairman of the banquet committee was R. H. Rausch '13.

At the business meeting, officers for the year were elected as follows: president, Arthur W. Wilson '15; vice-president, R. H. Rausch '13; secretary-treasurer, Albert W. Stone '03.

OBITUARY

Frank N. Hagar '73

Frank Nichols Hagar died at his home in Plattsburg, N. Y., on September 23, following a stroke of paralysis ten days before.

He was born at Cumberland Head, N. Y., in 1852, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan T. Hagar. After attending a district school, he won a scholarship in Cornell and entered in 1869 as a student of arts and sciences. He was a member of the Irving Literary Society. He was graduated in 1873 with the degree of A. B.

For two years after leaving college, he taught school in Plattsburg and vicinity, then went West and taught school in Lake City, Minn., where he also studied law. Later he took up the practice of law in New Prague, Minn. In 1881 he married Miss Mary Ella Merrill of Lake City and in 1890 they moved back to Plattsburg, where his wife died in 1894 leaving five small children.

In 1911 he married Miss Elizabeth Cook of Brooklyn, N. Y., and she survives him with four of his children, one having been killed in action in France. They are Arthur M. Hagar of Amsterdam, N. Y., Paul J. Hagar of Jersey City, N. J., Mrs. Benjamin I. Allen of Plattsburg, and Mrs. Charles A. Sherlock of Bloomfield, N. J. He also leaves a sister, Mrs. Grace Sweet of Plattsburgh and a brother, John A. Hagar of St. Louis, Mo.

During his life he wrote several articles and poems, his best known work being "The American Family," published in 1905.

William O. Bates '75

William Oscar Bates died at his home in Indianapolis, Ind., on October 29.

He was born at Harrisburg, Ind., on September 19, 1852, the son of John and Angeline Thomas Bates. He received his early education there and at Northwestern Christian University, now Butler College, then came to Cornell in 1872 as a student in the philosophy course. While in the university, he joined three other undergraduates in founding the New York Alpha of Phi Delta Theta. He was also a member of the Sprague Boat Club and secretary of his sophomore class. In his senior year, he was appointed class poet and had a prominent part in the Commencement exercises, graduating Ph. B. In 1884 he was elected a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

After leaving Cornell, he was at various times connected in an editorial capacity with the Indianapolis Journal, the Cincinnati News-Journal, the St. Paul Pioneer-Press, the New York World, the Butterick Publishing Company, and the New York Commercial and Advertiser. He was the first editor of The Scroll, official publication of Phi Delta Theta, and the author of the four-act comedy entitled "Our Foreign Correspondent," and of a textbook on "Recitations and How to Recite." He was also the author of "Uncle Rodney," "The Black Bokhara," "Polly of Pogue's Run," and "Asaph," one-act comedies; "Merry Mount," a three-act comedy to which was awarded a Drama League prize; and "The Dryad and The Deacon," a one-act faerie.

He was a member of the Shakespeare Society of New York, the Players Club of New York, the Contemporary Club, the Cornell Club of New York, the Santa Fe Arts Club, and secretary of the Society of Colonial Wars of the State of Indiana.

On October 23, 1893 he was married to Miss Clara A. Nixon of New York. They had three children, John N., Angeline N., and Lydia C. Bates, who survive him with his wife.

Charles S. Harmon '75

Charles Sumner Harmon, for many years a leading Chicago attorney, died in the Winnetka, Ill., Sanatorium on December 14.

He was born in Shagrin Falls, Ohio, on January 10, 1854 and early in childhood removed with his parents to Chicago, where he secured his early training. In 1871 he entered Cornell as a student in science and graduated in 1875 with the degree of B. S. He was a member of Delta Upsilon, the Tom Hughes Boat Club, and the Cornell Musical Association and played left field on the senior baseball nine.

After graduation, he studied law in the office of the late Federal Judge C. C. Kohlsaat and later became legal adviser for several corporations. For several years, he acted as personal counsel to the elder P. D. Armour, Chicago packer.

In addition to his son, C. Stanford Harmon 'c6, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Merrill C. Meigs of Evanston, Ill.

Emmett E. Hart '87

Emmett Ellsworth Hart died in Cleveland, Ohio, on December 4, after having been in poor health for several months.

He was born at Little Valley, N. Y., on September 18, 1861, the son of Austine and Dorleski Manley Hart. He received his early education there, then came to Cornell in 1883 as a student of civil engineering. In 1887 he graduated with the degree of C. E.

The same year he entered the service of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad and continued with the company as draftsman, assistant engineer, and division engineer until 1897. The next two years he was employed by the Government on deep waterway surveys and in 1899 he entered the employ of the New York, Chicago, and St. Louis Railroad as division engineer of its Eastern Division. A few months later he was made engineer of the entire line of the company and in 1906 became chief engineer. He held that position until February 1, 1924, when he was made consulting engineer.

He was married in April, 1891, to Miss Rachel Joy Sprague and they had two children. He was a member of the American Railway Engineering Association and of Tau Beta Pi.

William S. Tuttle '17

William Sylvester Tuttle died at his home in Bridgeport, Conn., on September 15, 1924, following a decline in health which began two years before.

He was born in Bridgeport on April 15, 1892, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Tuttle. After getting his early education in that city and graduating from the Bridgeport High School in 1912, he came to Cornell in 1913 as a special student of mechanical engineering. He was a member of Eleusis. In 1917 he left and went with the Bullard Machine Tool Company of Bridgeport. Later he joined the Navy and rose to the rank of lieutenant, junior grade.

After being discharged from the service, he entered the employ of the Columbia Graphophone Company and Remington Arms Company of Bridgeport and later of the Singer Manufacturing Company in Bridgeport.

He was given a military funeral by the members of Harry W. Congdon Post, American Legion, and Raymond W. Harris Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, to which he belonged. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Agnes B. Tuttle, a sister, Miss Marion A. Tuttle, and a son, William S. Tuttle, Jr.

Robert J. Spear '17

Robert James Spear died suddenly in Cleveland, Ohio, on December 13, 1924, following an operation for appendicitis.

He was born on December 29, 1895, in Cleveland, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Spear. He received his early education there and after attending the East High School, he entered Cornell in 1913 as student in the College of Arts and Sciences. Before completing his course, he left to enter the Army and was assigned to the Medical Corps at Field Hospital 329, 3c8th Sanitary Train, Camp Sherman, Ohio. While in the service he was especially concerned with the making of Daykin-Carrell solution.

After being mustered out of service, he returned to Cornell and received in 1919 the degree of A. B. He then became associated with his father and brother in the printing business in Cleveland, where he was an active member of the Cornell Club.

ISAAC ROTHSCHILD, one of the three brothers who own Rothschild's department store, died at his home on December 15. He had been in poor health for the past eight years.

THE SKATING SEASON officially opened on Beebe Lake December 23. Faculty families and other towns-people immediately took advantage of the opening, and have kept the ice humming.

Steinmetz

Emerson tells how the mass of men worry themselves into nameless graves, while now and then a great, unselfish soul forgets himself into immortality. One of the most inspiring influences in the life of a modern corporation is the selfless work of the scientists in the laboratories which it provides for their research.

If you are interested to learn more about what electricity is doing, write for Reprint No. AR391 containing a complete set of these advertisements.

The spirit of Dr. Steinmetz kept his frail body alive. It clothed him with surpassing power; he tamed the lightning and discharged the first artificial thunderbolt.

Great honors came to him, yet he will be remembered not for what he received, but for what he gave. Humanity will share forever in the profit of his research. This is the reward of the scientist, this is enduring glory.

The Class Endowment

And How It Can Be Done Through Life Insurance

THE JOHN HANCOCK MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY worked out this problem for the 1923 graduating class of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and is ready to do it for others.

Many graduating classes, wishing to benefit their Alma Mater have turned to the insurance idea since it allows the participation of a large number of students

This plan provides for the payment of a certain specified sum to the University at the end of 20 or 25 years, the members of the graduating class paying a nominal sum each year to create an endowment. In case of the death of a graduate before the endowment matures his full share is paid into the fund.

Every student is given a chance to put his John Hancock on the dotted line and become a continuing contributor to the future welfare of his Alma Mater. It has been successfully carried through in a number of cases, and it can be done with your institution.

The John Hancock organization will be glad to render any service it can to college classes and individuals; also to interest ambitious college men in life insurance work.
