THE Faculty of the Graduate School at its first autumn meeting last Friday voted to recommend for advanced degrees thirty-two candidates who have completed their graduate work since Commencement in June. Of these ten will receive the degree of Master of Arts, four that of Master of Science, two that of Master of Science in Agriculture, one that of Master of Landscape Design, one that of Master of Mechanical Engineering, and fourteen that of Doctor of Philosophy. These degrees are conferred as of September 30, 1920. The Faculty also approved the appointment of industrial fellows as follows: the Eden Valley Fellowship, L. O. Gratz; the Hampton Potato Growers' Fellowship, O. C. Boyd; the Herman Frasch Fellowship, F. P. Schlatter; the North Fork Fellowship, I. H. Vogel; the Steuben County Seed Improvement Fellowship, K. H. Fernow; the Williamson Vegetable Laboratory Association Fellowship, A. G. Newhall; and the Wilson Growers' Fellowship, R. P. White. Except the last, which terminates on April 30, 1921, these fellowships all run from April 1, 1920, to March 31, 1922.

A NEW dining hall exclusively for women has recently been opened in Cascadilla Place. Some little used rooms in the west end of the building on the ground floor have been altered and thrown together so as to accommodate about a hundred students. The changes, begun in the summer, have just been completed. Provision is thus made for those women students who have rooms in houses in the neighborhood, particularly in Williams Street, houses controlled by the University and reserved for the accommodation of those women who by reason of their numbers cannot have quarters in Sage College and Prudence Risley Hall. This separate yet easily accessible dining room gives to these women the same facilities for board that those living in the "outside houses" on the campus enjoy at Sage. The cafeteria in the east end of Cascadilla continues as heretofore.

MRS. DOROTHY WHITNEY STRAIGHT, widow of Willard Straight '01, paid her first visit to the University on October 13, the guest of Professor George L. Burr at the Telluride House. In the forenoon she went about the campus and the buildings, and in the afternoon continued her sight-seeing by a motor trip through the neighboring country.

THE INTERSTATE Schoolmasters' Club, drawing its members from southern New York and northern Pennsylvania, holds its autumn meeting at Watkins on Saturday, October 23. Professor R. M. Ogden '01 and Instructor Seth Wakeman will be in attendance from the Department of Education. The program includes an account by two officers of the Elmira Reformatory of the use made of intelligence tests in that institution. A discussion of the position which bodies of teachers should take toward affiliation with unions will be led by Dr. H. A. Hamilton of Elmira College.

MANAGERS of this year's athletic teams are announced by the Major Sports Council: of 'varsity football, E. J. Murphy '22, St. Paul, Minn.; of the crews, R. W. Hooker '21, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; of freshman football, Ralph J. McClelland, Brooklyn, N. Y.; of freshman track, John B. Shaw, jr., '21, Summit, N. J. Hamilton J. Prétat '22, Waterville, Conn., is assistant manager of 'varsity football. The Council has also ratified the election of Theodore T. Buckley, jr., '21, Cambridge, N. Y., as crew representative on the Athletic Council.

TWELVE FRATERNITIES have organized an interfraternity soccer league, which will be conducted on a plan modeled after that of the fraternity baseball league. Other societies are expected to join, and an effort will be made to form teams among the men living in the Baker dormitories, in Sheldon Court, and in Cascadilla. A schedule will be arranged for games through November. It is proposed to give members of the winning team tickets to the football game at Philadelphia on Thanksgiving Day. A suitable trophy has also been offered by Treman, King, and Company.

THE SOCCER schedule for the year includes the following six contests: Harvard at Cambridge on October 29; Yale at New Haven on October 30; Haverford at Ithaca on November 6; Pennsylvania at Ithaca on November 13; Penn State at Ithaca on November 20; and Princeton at Ithaca on November 27. All the teams except that of Penn State are members of the Soccer League, of which Pennsylvania was champion last year.

SOME CHANGES are announced in the editorial board of The Widow. To fill vacancies made by the absence of men previously elected, Howard B. Cushman '22, of East Aurora, N. Y., becomes editor-in-chief, and Roger D. McPherson '21, of Palmyra, N. Y., becomes artistic editor. F. R. Steffens '20, of Washington, D. C., is advisory artistic editor.

CHARLES A. WOOD '22 of Syracuse, N. Y., has been elected assistant manager of the Musical Clubs for the current year. Henry B. Brillinger '21, of York, Pa., is the new leader of the Banjo and Mandolin Club.

DEAN FRANK THILLY of the College of Arts and Sciences was the representative of Cornell at the semi-centennial celebration of Ohio State University on October 13. Though not on the program as a speaker, he carried handsomely engrossed greetings from Cornell to the sister institution. From Columbus Dean Thilly went to Ann Arbor, where he likewise represented Cornell at the inauguration of President Burton of the University of Michigan.

THREE UNDERGRADUATE scholarships in Sibley College have been awarded for the year 1920-21: the Fred Lewis Wilson Scholarship to Edwin Holmes Krieg '22, of Woodhaven, N. Y.; the Frank William Padgham Scholarship to Arthur McKinley Bladen '22, of Syracuse, N. Y.; the John Leisenring Wentz Scholarship to Dean Hasbrouck Gallagher '21, of East Syracuse, N. Y.

DR. CHARLES MACFIE CAMPBELL, who was instructor in psychopathology at the Medical College from 1910 to 1913, and since then has been a psychiatrist at Johns Hopkins, has accepted an appointment as professor of psychiatry at the Harvard Medical School. He is one of the leading authorities on mental diseases in this country.

THE ITHACA Board of Commerce has done a useful public service by printing on a full page of the Journal-News definitions of investment and of speculation and warning citizens against putting money into stock schemes without full investigation and against hasty parting with Liberty Bonds. Investors are urged to take counsel of bankers or other trustworthy advisers. The reported operations in this section of the State of salesmen of highly speculative stocks has led the Board to issue this warning in the interests of the community at large.

Convocation Honors Scholars

Professor Phelps of Yale Speaks on "Culture and Happiness."

On Friday last a Convocation was held in Bailey Hall to do honor to the honor students of the University. The speaker was Professor William Lyon Phelps, of Yale, whose subject was "Culture and Happiness." He first quoted from the late President Timothy Dwight, of Yale, this definition of happiness: "The happiest person is he who thinks the most interesting thoughts." It is a great mistake, he continued, to attempt to find happiness in any external object or state, like riches, or health, or fame, or physical comfort. The truest happiness lies in living in the world of ideas. Knowledge cannot be taken away from its possessor. Since we are constantly learning, it follows that as we grow older we become wiser and better and hence really happier. The old notion that youth is the happiest time of life is false.

It is a common saying that as a man increases in years he loses his enthusiasm; but in reality he merely changes the objects of it. The illusions of youth, also, are less desirable than the knowledge of truths which comes with maturity. The life of ideas is the most exciting life in the world, the life which makes every day the opposite of commonplace. To say otherwise is to say that the view from the base of a tower is better than that from the top.

The most exciting thing in Cornell and in Yale is the course of study. It is strange that when the universities were founded for these particular things, a student who wished to secure them should have to contend against popular prejudice. Those who make the most of the opportunities offered by a college course have an absolute guarantee of happiness.

There are many avenues of approach to the world of ideas. The speaker mentioned two, music and books. To appreciate music nothing is necessary but the ability to hear and the will to learn to recognize the best. Music is the only universal language and is capable of expressing deeper emotion than any other form of expression. Books of fact are interesting and often beautiful in their accuracy. But the books of greatest value are the great works of literature, which are permanently true. Every one who desires a happy life should be ambitious to possess and know a large number of books. Start life with a well-furnished mind.

The list of honor students whose names appear in the program includes about 265 students, distributed as follows: Arts and Sciences, '21, seventeen, '22, ten, '23, twenty-three; Law, '21, three, '22, seven; Agriculture, '21, twelve, '22, twelve, '23, twenty; Veterinary College, '21, two, '22, two, '23, two; Architecture, seven; Civil Engineering, '21, ten, '22, ten, '23, ten; Sibley, '21, eleven, '22, six, '23, seventeen; Medical, New York, '21, five, '22, six, '23, six. The list also includes the list of undergraduate scholars (forty-two), the sixty-one winners of prizes in 1919-20, the list of editors of the Law Quarterly, and the senior members of Phi Beta Kappa, Tau Beta Pi, Eta Kappa Nu, and Phi Kappa Phi.

The Endowment Campaign

Conference on Saturday for All New York State Committeemen

The entire Endowment headquarters is engaged in making preparations for a Statewide conference on endowment plans to be held in Ithaca on Saturday, October 23. While the conference is intended primarily to acquaint representatives from each county of New York State with the necessities for carrying on an intensive campaign throughout the State, there will be many developments that will help in the formulation of plans for the national campaign.

Jerome D. Barnum, publisher of the Syracuse Post-Standard, has been appointed chairman for New York State, and his organization with headquarters in Syracuse has already been established with Charles R. Marsh '07 as executive secretary. Mr. Barnum will have charge of the campaign in all of New York State outside of the metropolitan district, which will be handled as heretofore by an executive committee located in New York City. The large number of Cornellians throughout the State who have not been personally canvassed for subscriptions to the Endowment Fund has encouraged the chairman and those in charge of the work to believe that at least $2,000,000 should come from the so-called rural districts of the State and from the smaller cities. For this reason, a goal of $2,000,000 has been set and a quota has been arranged for each county.

At the conference on Saturday evening, Acting President A. W. Smith will speak, as will J. DuPratt White, alternate chairman of the Endowment Committee, Jerome D. Barnum, chairman for

New York State, Prof. C. L. Durham '99, and Charles R. Marsh '07, executive secretary for the State campaign. Seats have been reserved at the Colgate-Cornell football game for the delegates to the conference. The business will all be transacted after a dinner in Prudence Risley dining room at which the out of town representatives will be the guests of the Endowment Committee. In order to increase local interest and enthusiasm in the campaign and in order to obtain constructive ideas from Faculty members and local alumni, many professors and deans and members of the Ithaca community have been invited to attend the conference dinner.

In addition to the plans made for the New York State campaign, arrangements have been made looking to the immediate resumption of activities throughout the country. By the first part of November it is expected that the campaign will be going again on a larger scale than at any time last spring.

Rochester Entertains

Associate Alumni Directors Luncheon Guests During Fall Meeting

The Board of Directors of the Associate Alumni held its regular fall meeting at the University Club of Rochester last Saturday. The meeting was noteworthy for the attendance, which was much better than at any meeting since the Cleveland meeting in the spring of 1919. Those present were President J. P. Harris '01 of Cleveland; Treasurer W. W. Macon '98 and E. N. Sanderson '87 of New York; N. J. Weldgen '05 and Miss Eleanor Gleason '03 of Rochester; Mrs. George D. Crofts '05 of Buffalo; and Romeyn Berry '04, Dr. Luzerne Coville '86, F. M. Coffin '12, and Secretary R. W. Sailor '07, of Ithaca.

The matter of first consideration at the meeting was the proposed consolidation of alumni interests, a resolution to that effect having been adopted at the annual meeting of the Associate Alumni last June. The proposal received considerable attention, and the probable gain and loss of each of the consolidating organizations was discussed. The opinion seemed to be general that alumni affairs would receive a decided impetus from the change, and that none of the organizations would necessarily be altered essentially or lose in effectiveness. It was felt that the Associate Alumni, the proposer of the idea, should stand ready to cede to the other organizations any of its fancied rights or prerogatives that might interfere with the success of the consolidation, regardless of the effect on the Associate Alumni as such.

Preliminary plans for holding a convention in the spring were considered and President Harris was authorized to proceed with the arrangement of place and date.

The News Committee, whose business it is to determine the desirability of a transfer of the ownership of the ALUMNI NEWS from the present corporation to the Associate Alumni, was asked to present a report during the current year. The directors also recorded the opinion that the war records of the University should be published without delay.

After the meeting the directors were entertained at a luncheon at Powers' Hotel. There were between sixty and seventy present including members of the Cornell Club of Rochester and of the Cornell Women's Club.

President Harris for the Associate Alumni thanked the Rochester clubs for their hospitality, congratulated them on their enthusiasm, and touched on the subject of the baseball championship. Director Berry, speaking of things in Ithaca, told of the popularity of President Smith with the students and gave several illustrations of his direct methods in cutting red tape. He deprecated the desire for haste in selecting the new president, feeling that the office at present is excellently well filled.

After the luncheon several of the local alumni drove the directors on a sight-seeing tour of the city, an opportunity that many of them had not had before.

DRAMATIC CLUB ACTIVE

The Dramatic Club is beginning its year's work promptly. Trials were held last week for positions open to both men and women both in the prospective casts and in the management; and the first series of plays will probably be given sometime this month. Continuing the plan adopted four years ago, the Club will confine its efforts to noteworthy one-act plays, since these by reason of their relative simplicity and adaptability seem preferable to the longer plays such as the Club earlier put on its stage. All members of the organization thus have an opportunity to share in its activities and to contribute to its success. The first series this year will be selected from the group presented in the Country Theater at the State Fair in September, performances showing the possibilities of good theatricals in rural communities without elaborate stage settings. These will be followed by other series at intervals of about six weeks throughout the year. This dramatic work, though similar to that done in other institutions, is not a part of any regular course in the University. The work is, however, under the general direction of Professor Alexander M. Drummond, the new head of the Department of Public Speaking, in whom are united keen interest and long experience. The Club has every prospect of a prosperous season.

COMPETITION IN MICHIGAN

The Cornell University Association of Michigan has the right idea when it has real competition in its election of officers. The regular annual meeting of the association will be held at the University Club in Detroit on Friday evening, October 22, at 7.30 o'clock, when the following positions will be filled: President, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, industrial secretary, sixth member, and two delegates to the Associate Alumni.

M. A. Beltaire, jr., '02 and P. O. Reyneau '13 will be placed in nomination for the presidency, and Christian Schwartz '14 and K. P. Royce '16 are running for secretary. The two delegates for the Associate Alumni will be selected from Heatley Green '01, C. F. Hirshfeld '05, W. P. Holliday '72, and W. H. H. Hutton, jr., '91.

CLUB HONORS VAN ORMAN

The Cornell Association of Maryland gave a dinner at the Baltimore Country Club on Tuesday, October 12, in honor of Ray Van Orman '08, who is well known as head football coach at Johns Hopkins University, this season. Until this season Van Orman had been assistant coach at Cornell, instructing the ends since 1910.

Thirty members of the Maryland Association assembled to welcome Van Orman to Baltimore and to wish him success for a winning team. Johns Hopkins has this year started on an enlarged athletic policy and the football team is already showing the benefit of experienced handling.

Assistant Coach Wilcox of Harvard was present and expressed the hope that the blending of the Cornell and Harvard systems at Hopkins would prove successful enough to introduce them elsewhere.

COUNT 'EM—SEVEN

The first annual "RUB" of the Cornell Club of New England was held at South Natick, Massachusetts, Saturday, October 9. Alumni were present from towns all along the main line from Boston to the Berkshires and from points north and south. It was remarked that there were present seven past presidents of the New England alumni, as well as the present head, Harold L. Stevens '95, who led the celebration and introduced Romeyn Berry '04 as the guest of honor. About fifty sat down to a beef steak dinner at the Old Natick Inn after an afternoon featured by a spirited game of ball between the odd and even classes, umpired by Rym, and an equally enthusiastic but less conventional football match with unlimited sides reminiscent of Tom Brown's School Days and not without its casualties. There was also swimming. The "evens" won the ball game 5-3.

After dinner Rym regaled the party with stories and a serious and interesting account of the progress in many lines "On the Hill." Secretary Creed W. Fulton '09 told of the origin of the "RUB" as the necessary fall aftermath of the time-honored summer function, the WASH, and gave statistics of the several hundred alumni resident in New England, of whom all will be brought into closer touch with the C. C. N. E. through a campaign now being planned.

The committee responsible for starting the custom of the "RUB" consisted of Messrs. Fulton, Savage, Bryant, Porter, G. H. Burr, and Barrett Smith.

THE SAGE CHAPEL PREACHER for Sunday, October 24, is the Rev. John Baillie, Presbyterian, of Auburn Theological Seminary.

CORNELL-DARTMOUTH CONCERT

Tickets for the Cornell-Dartmouth Joint Concert are now on sale at the Cornell Club, 30 West 44th Street, New York City, and at Schoellkopf Clubhouse, Ithaca. The concert, followed by a dance, will be presented in the ball-room of the Hotel Pennsylvania, Friday evening, November 5, at nine o'clock. The admission, including the dance, is $4 for main floor chairs, and $6 for box seats.

The concert will be in the nature of a general Cornell-Dartmouth get-together, and will include several novelties by both the Cornell and Dartmouth Clubs. Dartmouth has a "Ted Lewis" novelty dance with a stunt orchestra. The Cornell Clubs have a saxophone-saw duet, in which H. M. Leinbach '21 and G. W. Teare '22 will feature; J. W. Ross '19 and B. E. Wrigley '19 will have a new banjo duet, and there will also be a marimbaphone stunt.

Only eight hundred main floor seats and thirteen boxes are available in the Cornell sections. As special trains will leave from both Hanover and Ithaca in time to get undergraduates to the concert, an unusually large number of undergraduates will attend the concert. The management expects all seats to be sold within the next two weeks.

SERVICES FOR NASMYTH

On Thursday afternoon a memorial service for the late Dr. George W. Nasmyth '06 was held in Sage Chapel. It had been expected that the body would arrive before the service, but the ship failed to arrive in time.

The speakers included Professor Nichols, who spoke of Nasmyth as a scientist; Professor Schmidt, who spoke of Nasmyth's connection with and deep interest in the Cosmopolitan Club and Corda Fratres movement; the Rev. Dr. Sidney L. Gulick, of New York, who spoke of his association with Nasmyth during the early part of the War, when they traveled together through the West speaking on the ultimate aims of the war; the Rev. Dr. William P. Merrill, of New York, who spoke on Nasmyth's work in behalf of the World Alliance for Promoting International Friendship Through the Churches; and President Smith, who presided and who read an original poem admirably summing up the spirit of George Nasmyth's noble and unselfish life.

THE COURSE of lectures on the history of civilization, in abeyance last year, is now resumed, the opening lecture, entitled "Civilization and Progress," being given this week by Professor Burr. The series, running through the year, will deal with the principal epochs and characters of history and with their significance in the progress of humanity. The lectures are open to all students and to the public. Though advertised in the announcement as "History A," and given by the entire Faculty of History, the course carries no university credit. Another lecture of the week was Professor Schmidt's "The International Course of Justice" before the Ethics Club.

UNION KICKS

The Cornell varsity is shown endeavoring to block a punt by Union. Because of the similarity in uniforms, Dobie had the Cornell men wear white jackets. There is usually a lot of action in every play, this year.

A UNITED ALUMNI

The steps taken in the Associate Alumni directors' meeting last Saturday to forward the consolidation of alumni interests and alumni organizations distinctly mark progress. By declaring their readiness virtually to resign in a body on request and let someone else engineer the consolidation and manage the new organization, the directors have shown the proper spirit.

It is obvious that the process, whether one of confederation or outright reorganization, must not be one of absorption. There are a number of highly independent bodies now in existence, each functioning efficiently as a general alumni organization, without responsibility to any other body, and each doing its work well. But each has a restricted field, and team work is weak without a central body, whether it be a clearing house, a general council, or an actual governing body to which the existing organizations are wings or even committees.

Thus the main object of the Association of Class Secretaries is to conduct reunions and gather information about Cornellians, the duty of the Cornellian Council is to solicit and collect funds for the University; the purpose of the Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs is to consider the problems of Cornell women as distinguished from Cornell as a whole; the primary function of the Associate Alumni is to elect Alumni Trustees, with such secondary functions as have been delegated to it by default, including the fostering of alumni clubs, and the holding of conventions. Yet none will say that each organization does not do some slight service for each of the others in its special field, and that by careful coordination under a central governing body that service could be made important rather than slight.

The importance of the functions and the general effectiveness for this specific work of each body renders it impossible that any one of the several organizations shall become the governing body. The process of absorption by any one of all the others might well be eliminated from the possible amalgamation plans.

Whatever the process, it is obvious that Cornell's wealth of active workers can never be so huge that any of it can be squandered with impunity. Four or five general and independent bodies, each with a full set of officers and directors, a full set of meetings, and a full set of reports, is an extravagance that can be dispensed with to advantage.

With a centralized organization, whatever its form, Cornell could avail itself of the strongest personalities, the best ability, the keenest thought, that is now scattered about and diluted to twenty per cent. For it is not as if the collection of endowments bore no relation to the gathering of information, or that the women's problems can be solved without reference to everything else in the world, nor that reunions can be held independently of address lists, local clubs, or conventions. The interlocking of all alumni problems was recognized when the Alumni Representative was appointed to represent, not one, but all the alumni organizations.

Ultimately each general organization must depend on the same personnel—the thirty thousand former students. Of these a limited number are interested in the problems of organization. The members who can be drafted by the Council, the Secretary, the Federation, and the Associate Alumni are virtually the same. A director of one is potentially a candidate for office in any other. In a crisis, like the Endowment Fund drive, the ranks of all were depleted and some of the non-financial work was pretty thin. Some of the organizations would admit, perhaps, that the holding of meetings during the drive was continued as a matter of form, lest it be said that their association was not really alive.

With a centralized government, whether the existing bodies acted as wings, committees, or confederates, it would be possible to concentrate wholeheartedly on a single project, if necessary, and to exempt from that work only such persons as are delegated to special unrelated effort. The governing body could determine the needs of the several projects and decide how large a trickle should be diverted from the main stream.

How far any organization may wish to submerge itself is an open question. It is conceivable that the changes might vary from a mere executive council of the constituent organizations, each retaining its identity and the sacred by-laws, to a complete consolidation of interests with nothing left to mark the old organizations except a committee to do its former work.

Selfish considerations, such as giving up of office will, we are sure, be swept aside much as the proposers have agreed to step aside. The form and spirit of the new force should, and undoubtedly will be moulded by the best intelligences that Cornell alumni have to command.

OBITUARY

Thomas V. Cator '74

Thomas Vincent Cator died of heart disease on September 20 at his home in San Francisco.

Mr. Cator was born in 1851, and was a student at Cornell in 1870-71. He began the practice of law in Kingston, N. Y., but soon moved to New York. While practicing there, his home was in Jersey City; he took an active part with the citizens of New Jersey in a struggle against the railroad corporations, and succeeded in securing reform measures. He was elected to the Legislature in 1881 and was reelected the following year. Later he was elected Senator for New Jersey. He went to California in 1888, and became one of the foremost lawyers of the State. At the time of his death he was president of the Board of Electors of the State of California.

He is survived by his widow, one son, two daughters, and two sisters.

Franklin H. King '80

Notification has recently been received of the death of Franklin Hiram King on August 5, 1911, at Madison, Wis. His widow lives in Madison.

Edwin Smith '17

Edwin (Crookes) Smith committed suicide on September 29 by shooting himself through the heart.

Smith was born on October 7, 1896, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smith of Brooklyn. He prepared at the Boys' High School, and entered the College of Agriculture in 1913, receiving the degree of B. S. in 1917. He played on his college basketball team.

During the war he served as a lieutenant in the Air Service, and since receiving his discharge he had been associated with the W. D. W. Davis Company, of Newark, N. J., holding the office of treasurer. His act was prompted by grief over the death of his young wife, whom he had married only this year. She was formerly Miss Claire Beer.

Angus McDonald '20

Angus McDonald was killed by an Interurban car at Seymour, Ind., on September 29.

McDonald was born on July 4, 1898, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald McDonald, of Louisville, Ky. He prepared at the Asheville School, Asheville, N. C., and entered Cornell in 1916, in the course in mechanical engineering. He was a member of Chi Phi.

He leaves, besides his parents, a brother, Donald McDonald, jr., '12.

SPORT STUFF

I didn't see that game with Union on the 16th, but I have it from such trustworthy authority as H. Goldenberg, the Mayer Brothers, and our own Doctor Sheehan that the team showed an attack such as one might expect from a highly irritated lady wild cat.

We have passed the first three games—the period of development. Now come two games—with Colgate on the 23d and with Rutgers on the 30th—which may be regarded as tests of the machine which Dobie is building for the final matches with Dartmouth, Columbia, and Pennsylvania. It would be idle to pretend that the undergraduates are not greatly encouraged by the showing in those first three games. A student body which has never seen a good Cornell team and expected little from this year's outfit has seen a green team of cast-offs playing surprisingly good football and winning impressively on three successive Saturdays. It has seen a gradual, sustained improvement from one week to another. This same student body is becoming slightly flushed and it wouldn't take much to have it break out in a rash of excitement. Dr. Frank Lehigh Wingert, than whom there is no keener prognosticator in undergraduate ailments, says that he detects all the symptoms of a general migration to New York about November 6. If the team gets by the Colgate game he is going to order another flock of Pullmans equipped with two kinds of cold water and everything.

Sportsmen of maturity and experience, however, will ignore this feverishness and will repress even the germs of hope until the team has met an opponent sufficiently strong and alert to take advantage of its inexperience and obvious crudeness.

It seems a little like the grand old days before the war to have the cross country team go over to Syracuse last Saturday and finish 2, 3, 4, 5, and 8 against such opponents as Syracuse, the intercollegiate champions, Yale, Columbia, Dartmouth, and Colgate.

THE ITHACA POST of the American Legion is now settled in its new quarters in Rothschild Hall, in East State Street, nearly opposite the Tompkins County Bank. Here the post has an assembly room large enough for dances, a kitchen and a dining room, and a comfortable reading room. In the library, besides war books and publications of interest to veterans, is a set of framed war pictures presented by Major Sherman Peer '06. The winter activities of the post, in addition to regular meetings commencing this week, will begin more formally with an entertainment on Armistice Day. The post has a membership of about eight hundred.

Cornell Defeats Union, 60-0

Having bowled Union over by a 60 to 0 score last Saturday, thereby making the total score for the first three games 128 points, the football team faces Colgate Saturday in the first of the important games on the schedule and incidentally a game that ought to prove a genuine test of the actual strength of the machine.

The Union eleven was no match for Cornell. It was powerless to withstand the aggressive, hard hitting, running game of the Cornell backfield, which piled up nine touchdowns all told, one in the first period, two in the second, three in the third, and four in the last, gaining momentum as the game advanced and wearing the garnet steadily down. In weight, in condition, in power, speed, and aggressive play Cornell was so superior that it soon became apparent that the only question involved was whether the score would equal that made against St. Bonaventure on the preceding Saturday. It beat that score by five points.

The team was slow in getting under way, but once the machine started to function it was soon apparent that it had improved materially in the week that had elapsed since the St. Bonaventure game both in individual and team play. The line on the whole charged quickly and managed to open many big holes for the backs. Tackling was cleaner and more decisive and end play more wary and effective. Union's attempts to glide through the line were unavailing; indeed it was not until the last five minutes of play when the entire first Cornell eleven except Brayton had been withdrawn, that the Schenectady eleven figured offensively at all. They uncovered and got away with a forward passing attack which gained thirty or forty yards before it was halted. Here a short kick was recovered by Cornell and Referee Cutts then called the game two minutes before the time was up because a young cloudburst had descended, soaking players and spectators alike. Everybody was drenched, but as nearly everybody was happy no one minded very much.

The outstanding feature of Cornell's play was the sustained power and punch of the attack which though grounded on a relatively simple running game, also made the forward pass, and the threat of the pass, a timely and effective weapon. Mayer at right half scored two touchdowns on passes, and he tore off 30 yards on a fake pass. A thirty-yard toss from Carey to Munns, and several shorter passes also figured prominently. Most of them were deceptive; that is, one could not tell from the formation, and sometimes even after the play got well under way, what was going to happen. Once when the team was held on the twenty-yard line, Carey dropped back on the fourth down as if to take a kick. Instead he passed to Mayer, who had no trouble in going over for a score. Most of the ground gaining was accomplished by Mayer and Kay, the half backs, though Carey's lunges through the line were very useful and Jewett was steady and dependable. A noticeable improvement in backfield play was the interference, and, as with the case last week, the backs were usually on their toes.

In the final period the second team kept the good work going except that it was not alert to Union's forward game. Hoff at quarter, Danzig and Livingston at half back, and Baugher at full back all showed capacity.

The Boy Scouts of Ithaca were guests of the management.

Union being attired in maroon jerseys, Coach Dobie dressed his men up in white jackets; that is they were white when the game started. A close acquaintance with a rather soft field soon changed them into a dirty gray.

Syracusans Honor Moakley

Alumni of Syracuse University paid a compliment to Jack Moakley last Saturday at the Syracuse-Pittsburgh game in the Orange stadium when they gave him a traveling bag and toilet case as a testimonial of the high regard in which they hold him and in appreciation of his work in handling two Syracuse runners who competed on the American Olympic team at Antwerp last summer, Allen Woodring, who won the 200 meter dash, and John Simmons, the distance star.

Jack was called out on the field between the halves and there the presentation took place amid the plaudits of thousands in the stands. The presentation speech was made by George H. Bond on behalf of the Syracuse alumni. Cornellians who reside in Syracuse and who accompanied the Orange delegation included E. L. Robertson '01, Leonard C. Crouch '89, Benjamin E. Tilton '97, B. J. O'Rourke '09, A. A. Costello '04, and Jerome D. Barnum '12.

In the evening Jack was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the Syracuse Chamber of Commerce.

Cornell Wins Cross Country Meet

The cross country team won a decisive victory in an invitation intercollegiate meet at Syracuse last Saturday, scoring 22 points to 67 for Syracuse, 69 for Yale, 114 for Columbia, 123 for Colgate, and 125 for Dartmouth.

The team went back to the pre-war custom of Cornell harriers, for out of the first eight men to cross the line, five were Cornellians, and out of the first eleven seven wore the red and white. In other words Jack Moakley seems to have a standard Cornell team this year, like those well balanced teams that were uniformly successful in winning championships in the sixteen years before the war.

Individual honors went to John Simmons of Syracuse, intercollegiate individual title holder, but the Orange star was hard pressed by T. C. McDermott of Cornell, who came up on him in the last quarter mile and finished close behind him. McDermott had set the pace for half the distance. Closely behind McDermott as he crossed the line came N. P. Brown, C. C. Carter, and J. L. Dickinson, all of Cornell. R. E. Brown, the last Cornell man to score, was eighth and H. V. Bonsal and J. W. Cowan, both Cornellians, finished in tenth and eleventh positions.

The race was run over a four and a quarter mile course starting from the Syracuse gymnasium. The going was bad because of a heavy rain that preceded the race, and a drizzle that fell while it was in progress. Nevertheless Simmons lowered the record he made last year by 34 seconds, finishing in 24 minutes 21 1-5 seconds.

LITERARY REVIEW

Theocritus and Wordsworth

The Theocritean Element in the Works of William Wordsworth. By Leslie Nathan Broughton, Ph. D. '11. Halle (Saale). Max Niemeyer. 1920. 8 vo., pp. viii, 193. Price, 14 Marks.

This work, a part of which formed the author's doctoral dissertation, was completed in 1913, and when the war broke out about half of it was in type and the first four sheets had been printed. The rest, through no fault of the author or publisher, is printed on inferior paper; but the printing itself is fully up to the pre-war standard, and the number of errata is small.

Dr. Broughton has sought not merely to trace the influence of Theocritus upon Wordsworth but also to trace the fortunes of typically pastoral and Theocritean material and ideas in the works of the English poet.

He first takes up the treatment of man in general. Both poets draw largely upon the humble trades of shepherds and neatherd. Wordsworth believed that the best measure of human nature was to be found in men "who lead the simplest lives and most according to nature." He differs from Theocritus in accentuating the domestic ties, which the Sicilian slighted. In humor the two poets differ widely; Theocritus gives us plenty of lively humor, Wordsworth relatively little; for the latter heard too constantly "the still, sad music of humanity." Both were deeply religious.

Next comes a discussion of nature. Theocritus was fond of the softer side of landscape, though he does not neglect the sterner side, and speaks of the mountains with "love and admiration." The English poet, of course, far surpasses the Greek in the variety of his landscapes and in his delineation of the subtle influence of nature on man.

This brings us to the city. The antithesis between complex, distracting city life and simple country life is in the poetry of Wordsworth very marked indeed; in Theocritus, on the other hand, it finds no direct expression, though his general attitude toward the city and the crowd is clear enough. Wordsworth, however, did not blind himself to all that was good in the city: "suffering, vice, and deformity throng the streets; but there are also enduring beauty, harmony, and unity."

Inseparable from the pastoral is the Golden Age. The lost Eden of Genesis is paralleled by Ovid, Virgil, Theocritus, Hesiod; and it is found richly shrined in the works of the English poet. Not all readers will agree with Dr. Broughton that the Golden Age has "scientific foundation in truth"; many will insist that it is merely the projection of the romantic imagination back into the past, and thus belongs not to fact but to folklore.

Other chapters of this interesting and valuable discussion deal with classical and mythological subjects, pastoral language, parallel passages in the two poets, and Wordsworth's theory of pastoral poetry. We shall welcome the further studies in this important field which the author hopes to make.

In The Geographical Review for July Professor Louise F. Brown's "The Freedom of the Seas" is reviewed by Frederick J. Teggart, who speaks of it as "a concise and brilliantly written history of one of the most difficult of international problems." He concludes thus: "It must be evident, indeed, to any reader of this fascinating book that the only reasonable solution of these most difficult questions is international control of the seas through the establishment of a league of nations."

In the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science for May, which number is devoted to "Prices," Bert S. Butler '05, of the U. S. Geological Survey, writes on "Copper," Dr. Eugene H. Porter '80 on "Cooperation and Prices," and Professor Ralph C. Bryant '00, of Yale, on "Lumber Prices."

In The Journal of Political Economy for July Professor James E. Boyle reviews Herbert E. Gaston's study of "The Nonpartisan League."

Professor Frank A. Fetter, Ph. M. '92, of Princeton, in The American Economic Review for September discusses "Price Economics versus Welfare Economics." Professor Abbott P. Usher's "Introduction to the Industrial History of England" is reviewed by Clive Day.

For Boris Brasol's new volume on "Socialism versus Civilization" (Scribner, $2) Professor Thomas N. Carver, Ph. D. '94, has written an introduction in which he says, "The only things that will save civilization are, first, to make it possible for the great majority to prosper under this system, as they do in this country, and, second, to show them that this system of liberty and voluntary agreement is the best possible system for men of intelligence, virtue, and productive capacity."

Professor Emil C. K. Wilm, Ph. D. '05, of Boston University, contributes to The Methodist Review for July-August an article on "The Church and the Child."

In The International Journal of Ethics for July Professor Henry W. Wright '99, now of the University of Manitoba, discusses "Rational Self-Interest and the Social Adjustment." Professor Emil C. Nilm '05, of Boston, reviews John Elof Boodin's "A Realistic Universe" (Macmillan).

The leading article of The Philosophical Review for July is "The Concept of the State as Power" by Professor George H. Sabine '03, of the University of Missouri, who also furnishes a review of H. Krabbe's "Die moderne Staats-Idee," 2d German edition, and of Bertrand Russell's "Mysticism and Logic and Other Essays." Dean Thilly reviews "Die philosophische Krisis der Gegenwart," second edition, by Karl Joel; Edward Spranger's "Volkerbund und Rechtsgedanke"; and Thraugott Konstantin Oesterreich's "Die Staats-Idee des neuen Deutschland." Summaries of articles are furnished by Glenn R. Morrow, Grad., R. B. Cooke, Israel Chasman, Grad., Marie T. Collins, Ph. D. '19, Professor Allan H. Gilbert '09, and Irl G. Whitchurch, Grad.

To The Educational Review for September Dean James E. Russell '87, of Teachers College, contributes a study of "Organization of Teachers."

In The Evening Post Literary Review for September 11 Theodore Stanton '76 writes on "The Authorship of 'Democracy'" (1880), the novel which in the Tauchnitz "Manual of American Literature" is attributed to Henry Adams. In this letter Mr. Stanton gives the grounds for attributing the novel to the eccentric author of "The Education of Henry Adams."

The Sewanee Review for July-September includes an article on "A Problem of American Civilization"—namely, the fostering of the fine arts—by Professor Martin W. Sampson. It was originally delivered as a Phi Beta Kappa address at the University of Cincinnati in 1916.

In the summer number of Poet-Lore Professor Christabel F. Fiske '98, of Vassar College, discusses "The Sane-ness of George Giffard."

In The Yale Review for October Professor Wilbur C. Abbott, '92-5 G., of Harvard, writes on "The Great Game of Politics."
