1,274 Receive Degrees

Sixtieth Annual Commencement Exercises
Held in Bailey Hall—Rain Bars
Academic Procession

Cornell University conferred 1,274 first and advanced degrees at the sixtieth commencement exercises in Bailey Hall June 18. The diplomas were awarded by President Livingston Farrand who, in his address to the graduates, appealed to them for honesty in both thinking and living and for quick assumption of the responsibilities of citizenship.

Of the degrees conferred, 944 were baccalaureate. Of these 738 were June degrees, seventy-nine were September, 1927 degrees, and 127 were February, 1928 degrees. Fifty-seven of the 260 advanced degrees were awarded as of September, 1927, and forty-nine as of February, 1928.

Six degrees were also conferred on war alumni, former students who interrupted their courses in the University to serve in the World War and who did not return to complete their work. The number of degrees conferred also included the sixty-four degrees awarded at the thirtieth commencement of the Cornell Medical College on June 7.

One posthumous degree of Doctor of Philosophy was given for Joseph T. Schultz of Buffalo who died March 26, 1928.

Rain forced the cancellation of the academic procession, and the candidates for degrees gathered in their respective colleges before they proceeded to Bailey Hall. The faculty and trustees gathered in the north room of Bailey Hall for the exercises.

The invocation was given by Dr. William H. Powers, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Ithaca, and the organ was played by Professor Edward G. Mead, University organist. Colonel Joseph W. Beecham '97, commandant of the Cornell R. O. T. C., acted as chief marshal.

Urging the graduates to develop the inquiring mind, President Farrand declared that "the world needs the inquiring mind to afford reasonable solution for such problems" as the world is now facing.

President Farrand reminded the seniors that four years ago he met them as freshmen in the same auditorium to welcome them and give them advice during their first week of university life.

"At that time, we discussed arriving at a just estimate as early as possible in your college life, of the things to be presented to you on the Hill.

"You have spent your four years here—more or less—with the objective, from the viewpoint of the faculty, to arouse and create in you certain habits of mind and character. We assume your honesty, so far as it is possible to control your own actions, and we assume that you are going to think as well as live honestly.

"The world, however, needs not simply the honest mind, but the informed, the inquiring, the open mind. If you have those three qualities added to the quality of honesty, then you will make your contribution. Unless you carry those habits away from Cornell with you, you will miss discharging the responsibilities Cornell expects of you.

"You go out from Cornell with her stamp on you, whatever of benefit that may mean. Remember that Cornell is watching you with the keenest interest, the keenest affection, and the keenest solicitude. We ask you to accept the responsibilities of American citizenship, and also to be able to discharge those responsibilities."

PFEIFFER '16 HEADS SECRETARIES

The annual meeting of the Association of Class Secretaries was held at 9 a. m. June 16th in Willard Straight Hall. In the absence of the president, Ross W. Kellogg '12, who was unable to return to Ithaca, Robert E. Treman '09 presided. Representatives were present from twenty-nine classes.

Officers for the year 1928-29 were elected as follows: president, Weyland Pfeiffer '16; vice-president, George H. Young '00; treasurer, Mrs. R. W. Sailor (Queenie N. Horton) '09; secretary, Foster M. Coffin '12; executive committee, Clark S. Northup '93, Robert E. Treman and Ross W. Kellogg.

Professor Northup had served as treasurer of the Association for eight years. His resignation was accepted with regret and with a resolution of appreciation for his services.

Irving P. Church '73 and Henry W. Sackett '75 spoke at the meeting.

ACTS AS HEAD OF CHICAGO

Frederic C. Woodward '94, vice-president and dean of faculties at the University of Chicago, has been named acting president of the university. He will act as president until a successor to President Max Mason, who has resigned, is appointed.

Fill Sweet Professorship

Professor Herman Diederichs '97, Sibley
School Director, Named for New Engineering Chair

Professor Herman Diederichs '97, director of the Sibley School of Mechanical Engineering, has been named to fill the John E. Sweet Professorship in Mechanical Engineering, a new chair created through the efforts of Syracuse alumni of Cornell. The late Professor Sweet came to Ithaca from Syracuse to become the first director of Sibley College. The fund to establish the professorship was completed last year by the gift of $50,000 from Frank G. Tallman '80 of Wilmington, Del.

Professor Sweet was one of the foremost mechanical engineers in the United States. He was the first president of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and was the designer of the straight line engine.

The appointment of Professor Diederichs was ratified by the Board of Trustees at its meeting June 18. He is an authority on gas engines and is one of the ranking experimental engineers in the country. He has written extensively on internal combustion engines and has designed and constructed many types of combustion engines. He is a member of Sigma Xi, Tau Beta Pi, Phi Kappa Phi, Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the Society of German Engineers, and the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education. He also served as president of the Cornell Athletic Association from 1913 to 1925.

The proposal for a distinguished service professorship in memory of Professor John Edson Sweet was first made shortly after his death in 1916. The first suggestion was that the memorial take the form of a mechanical laboratory for Sibley College. It was later decided to raise funds for the professorship in the College of Engineering. In 1919-20, a total of $104,970 was raised by a Syracuse committee in connection with the Semi-Centennial Endowment Fund.

In 1926, upon the promise of Mr. Tallman of a gift of $50,000 if $150,000 were contributed by others, efforts to complete the fund were renewed. Its completion was announced at the annual meeting of the Cornellian Council a year ago.

Reunion Reports from the Classes

In accordance with their custom of late years the "boys" of '73 gathered round the festive board on Saturday evening June 16 for their annual reunion. This one happened to occur on the fifty-fifth anniversary of graduation and hence we were one of the five-year classes of this year. There were ten members present, and their number would have been greater had not four men who had counted on coming been avoidably prevented from doing so at the very last minute. This was a little unfortunate, from the point of view of prize-contestants, from the fact (to quote from a very recent letter of President French) "that if we had just one more '73 man in Ithaca we would have received a mammoth silver cup as being the class with the largest percentage of attendance among the five-year classes." But "A miss is as good as a mile," I suppose.

The members present were: Elias H. Bartley; Frances T. Brinkley; Irving P. Church; William H. French; Abraham Gridley; Charles Levings; Francis J. Root; William Hazlitt Smith; Phineas P. Staunton; and Myron W. Van Auker.

As invited guests there were also present: Mesdames French, Elsbree and Harris, and the Misses Elsbree and Gridley; also Walter French, son of our president, and two stray members of '72, Delmar M. Darrin and Thomas E. Webster, who were inveigled into our circle.

Levings and Staunton gave us very interesting talks. The latter had not been in Ithaca for fifty years. An oil portrait of himself, painted by a classmate, was presented to Gridley.

Altogether we had a "royal" time and look forward to another year hence.

Fiftieth anniversary of the graduation of the Class of 1878.

Brief History

Lo, half a century has flown
 Since "Billy" Russell hurled
 Our class with sheepskins at the head
 Of an unguarded world.
 Too soon four years had rolled around,
 And as we left we cast
 A backward look of sad regret
 Upon the pleasant past.
 But eagerly we looked toward life;
 Did not the world await
 Our coming e'er it deigned to move
 At any faster rate?
 But though we strove to urge it on
 With word and doughty deed,
 It kept on turning round and round
 At just the same old speed!
 And yet the world in lacking us
 Would not have been the same;
 It is a better, brighter place,
 We hope, because we came.

Half a century is a long time in human lives; and, lest this should be the last reunion, eighteen of us hustled together to celebrate it. Ben Johnson and his wife came from California by Panama Canal, and C. D. Marx hurried across the continent from Stanford, and Tom Merrill shook the dust of Seattle from his eager feet, and the Borden Brothers, who had spent the winter with their sister in Sunny France, playing golf and bridge, cut the season short and came; Ed. Green left Italy with all its architectural beauties, and took an earlier steamer bound Ithacawards; W. P. Pickett left Brooklyn without legal protection and brought his wife to the University where their son had graduated, and Fred Halsey said that only an earthquake would keep him away, and there wasn't any earthquake; Edward Trump gathered up his son, Cornell '11, and drove over from Syracuse; Frank Bruen stopped making wooden nutmegs in Connecticut and jumped over the state line and came; Frank Kendall left Columbus with no one to recommend Ginn & Co's. School books to Ohio; and Rob Treman cut a session of the Federal Reserve Bank in New York. C. G. Brown came into the north from Florida, and Mrs. Behan came from Cleveland and Miss Pitcher came from Union, N. Y. Mrs. Comstock and Dr. Baker and Al. Smith just had to stay home.

Others of the thirty living members of the class were absent only because the finger of unkind fate pointed sternly elsewhere.

Well, we gathered together at Sill Cottage and sang and talked of the old days when Cornell was a real university where everybody knew everybody; we took a bus ride around the Campus and its vicinity, and we looked at the new beautiful things and the things whose beauty half a century has failed to dim, and we sat at a banquet where good fellowship and kindly reminiscence reigned, and we were honored guests of the class of '13 at the Rally, and received the great shining cup for the largest proportionate attendance, and we voted unanimously that we hadn't had such a good time ever, and that we'd surely come again without waiting another fifty years.

With the thirty year class of '98, the adjacent classes of '97, '99, and '00 united in a grand joint reunion which constituted the best test that the Dix Plan has thus far had.

THE TEN YEAR CLASS

The individual classes composing this group had on Friday evening following the Senior and Alumni Singing their own class dinners, but for the major portion of the reunion period these classes, closely associated in undergraduate days, mingled with one another in comradeship that quite forgot the passing of three decades since their graduation, and the climax of their combined regathering was in the Joint Dinner where one hundred and sixty-eight members of the four classes met in Memorial Hall of Willard Straight on Saturday evening at 6.30 o'clock. Toastmaster Mordock '97.

The classes of '97, '98, '99, '00 meeting individually and at the Joint Dinner voted overwhelmingly for a continuance of the Dix Plan.

Under the leadership of the class of '97, heartily seconded by '98, '99, '00, a proposal to establish a permanent University memorial to Louis Agassiz Fuertes was made and endorsed, and the presidents of the four classes were authorized to appoint a committee from each class to direct the undertaking. A striking feature of this joint Reunion was the famous Cornell Cadet Band which was retained to play exclusively for this group of classes, and the Band led the parades of these alumni on both reunion days.

An expert moving picture photographer, Allan H. Mogensen '22 shot 400 feet of 16mm film of the various doings of the alumni of the '97-'00 crowd and the pictures taken from the arrival of the early Lehigh on Friday morning through the afternoon of that day were rushed to Rochester for development and were shown at the joint dinner on Saturday evening along with a hundred slides of the fin de siècle period. The complete film will be deposited in the office of the Alumni Secretary as a permanent record of the Reunion.

'03

The Twenty-Five Year Reunion of the Class of 1903, from comments made in Ithaca and from numerous letters received by the committee this past week, was unquestionably the best reunion the class has ever had, in point of comfort, entertainment and attendance. The figure of 120 men back greatly exceeds the class record for any previous reunion and also the Cornell record for any Twenty-Five Year Reunion.

The 50-50 plan for financing the reunion was an unqualified success. Without a doubt it brought back several men from the Middle-West and the Coast who would not otherwise have come. But what is equally or more important—this plan made it possible for the committee to plan in every way to provide the maximum convenience and comfort for those returning and left little or nothing for the individual to worry about except having a good time.

Probably the outstanding feature of the reunion was the "1903" Club. The University very generously allowed the class to decorate part of the old cafeteria building below the dormitory, for a general gathering place. As such it proved a great success and was visited and appreciated by many alumni of other classes. As a new feature in Cornell Reunions the clubroom has proved its worth.

The dinner at the Forest Home Inn on Friday night and the banquet at the Ithaca Hotel on Saturday night, as well as the costume—a white flannel coat with red trimming, helmet and cane, were all distinct successes.

ATHLETICS

Crews Coming Along

Cornell made an improved showing in the intercollegiate regatta on the Hudson River at Poughkeepsie June 19. In a field of twenty crews, the largest ever assembled for the rowing classic of the year, the Red and White varsity placed fourth in a race that saw the first three crews better Cornell's record of 18 minutes 53½ seconds for the four-mile race, set in 1901. California won, in a thrilling duel with Columbia, last year's champions, under ideal racing conditions, and set a mark of 18 minutes 35½ seconds. Cornell's time was 19 minutes 1 second.

The Cornell freshman and junior varsity crews finished second to the Naval Academy in the first two races of the afternoon. The yearlings were two lengths behind Navy in the two-mile brush, but the junior varsity lost to the Annapolis oarsmen, over a three-mile course, by the closest of margins. It was one of the most stirring finishes ever seen on the Hudson, and a consultation of the judges preceded the announcement of the winner. Navy's time of 14 minutes 18 seconds broke the record of 15 minutes 40½ seconds set by Washington in 1926, and Cornell was only ⅔ of a second behind. All six crews in the race broke the record.

In all three races the Red and White eights showed the best of racing form. There was never a break in the run of the shells and the oarsmanship was superb. Coach James Wray sent three fine crews to the starting line, and they upset all pre-race predictions of the rowing experts.

The varsity furnished the surprise of the regatta by stepping out at the starting gun to lead the fleet of shells for the first two miles. Cornell made it a sprint race for half the distance, but, while the oarsmanship never faltered, the speed and power slackened, and California, Columbia, and Washington went out ahead to finish in that order. Cornell's fast pace at the start had much to do with the phenomenal time of the winning crew.

The finishes and times:

Freshman race, two miles: Navy, 9.42; Cornell, 9.49; Syracuse, 9.53; Washington, 9.54½; Pennsylvania, 9.57½; Columbia, 9.58; California, 10.05.

Junior varsity race, three miles: Navy, 14.18; Cornell 14.18½; Syracuse, 14.19½; Washington, 14.21½; Columbia, 14.25½; Pennsylvania, 14.31½.

Varsity race, four miles: California, 18.35½; Columbia, 18.38; Washington, 18.46; Cornell 19.01; Navy, 19.10; Syracuse, 19.16½; Pennsylvania, 19.24½.

Racing conditions were practically perfect for the regatta, as far as the oarsmen were concerned. For spectators, conditions were not so favorable. Rain throughout the morning flattened the surface of the Hudson. It cleared for the first two races, but the varsity was rowed with a light rain falling. A following breeze and a strong tide helped the shells along. The temperature was also conducive to record-breaking performances.

The start of the freshman race saw Cornell and Syracuse get away from the stake boats in the lead. They battled all the way down the course, but they could not match the Navy plebes who took the lead in the first mile and increased the margin of victory in the second half of the race. Open water showed between the Cornell and Syracuse shells as the Red and White took second place.

Cornell and Syracuse again battled in the junior varsity race, but it was Navy that took the lead. At the railroad bridge which marks the start of the last mile Cornell was back of the Orange crew, but it started a finishing spurt that carried it to second place over Syracuse by a half-length. The finish of the junior varsity race saw five crews cross the line less than three lengths apart, with Pennsylvania far in the rear.

The seven crews in the varsity race came to the stake boats as dusk settled over the river. The fine rain interfered with visibility, but there was no mistaking Cornell's gallant bid in the first two miles. The shell was off first at the gun, the oars flashing at a 40-beat in a fine racing start that only emphasized the form of the Cornell oarsmen. They held the high beat long after the other crews had settled down, and their lead at the quarter-mile mark was more than a length.

The beat went down to thirty-six, but the lead was maintained. Going into the second mile, the shells that were to fight it out for first honors started to gain, and shortly after the two-mile mark Cornell was in fourth, two lengths behind the leading trio.

It was then that Cornell looked bad, but only momentarily. Navy began to come up from fifth place, offering its only challenge to the Ithacans for fourth place. Navy's bid appeared to bring renewed power to the Cornell oars, and at the bridge, Cornell began to speed up, regaining ground lost to the leaders and killing off the Navy eight.

The real battle was out in mid-stream where California answered the last desperate bid of Columbia by a fine exhibition of a finishing sprint that gave the Golden Bears victory by more than a length.

Cornell's showing was the best in eight years. The Red and White has not won the varsity race since 1915, when that year's crew defeated Leland Stanford on its last eastern invasion. Prospects for 1929 are particularly fine, for few men will be lost from the boatloads that rowed at Poughkeepsie. Coach Wray, in his second year, has produced most satisfactory results.

Abbott Named Commodore

Stanley W. Abbott '29 of Yonkers, stroke of the Cornell varsity crew this year, was elected commodore at the Cornell boathouse on the Hudson at Poughkeepsie after the regatta June 19. He succeeds Henry C. Boschen '28 of Larchmont, who rowed No. 6 in the varsity at Poughkeepsie.

Nine Breaks Even

Cornell broke even in two games with the Dartmouth nine at Hanover June 18 and lost a chance to tie Pennsylvania for first place in the Quadrangle Cup League. The Quakers, by virtue of their victory over Cornell at Ithaca June 15, won the championship, with the Red and White runner-up.

Cornell lost the morning game by 6-0, but captured the afternoon encounter, 6-2. The final standing of the four teams in the Quadrangle Cup League:

	W	L	PC
Pennsylvania	4	2	.667
Cornell	3	3	.500
Columbia	2	3	.400
Dartmouth	2	3	.400

Froehlich was reached for ten hits in the first game, but Cornell errors also contributed to his downfall. Cornell was able to get but four hits off Breckenridge.

The tables were reversed in the afternoon contest, Cornell getting ten blows off three Green pitchers, while Boies, Red and White hurler, held Dartmouth to five hits. Captain Balderston, playing his last game, starred at the bat in the second game with three hits in three times at bat.

Runner-up Intercollegiate Tennis

Cornell finalists in singles and doubles lost to Fordham and Columbia players in the Eastern intercollegiate tennis championships at Rye, played June 21-24. John S. Custer '29 of Cynwyd, Pa., lost to Eugene McAuliff of Fordham in the singles final June 24, 6-1, 6-3, 6-4.

The victory of the Columbia pair, Frank Bowden and Frank Tchorn, over Bennett M. Levin '28 of Stamford, Conn., and Thane R. Halstead '28 of Somerville, N. J., gave the Lions permanent possession of the trophy which has been in competition for several years. Columbia's victory by 8-6, 6-3, 6-4 gave the Blue and White a point to make the required seven. Cornell was runner-up in the team point standing with 5½, having scored a half-point in each final match.

Custer's victory over Bowden of Columbia in the semi-final round, singles, was the upset of the tournament, as the Lion player was the ranking seeded player.

Custer won his way to the semi-final round by defeating Raymond B. Stock, Pratt Institute, 6-1, 6-2; Julius Rosenthal, Fordham, 6-2, 6-1, and Andrew B. Bicket

'30 of Brooklyn, a teammate, 6-3, 7-5. The Custer-Bicket match was in the third round, the latter defeating Harrison Terry, Union, 6-3, 6-1, to meet Custer.

Custer and Bicket, paired in doubles, won over Harry J. King and Rosenthal, Fordham, 1-6, 6-4, 8-6, and Melville Brill and Edward Hymes, Columbia, 6-1, 8-6, before they lost to Levin and Halstead in the semi-final round, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3. Levin and Halstead reached the semi-final bracket by eliminating Arnold C. Pederson and Raymond B. Stock, Pratt Institute, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

In the early singles matches, Bowden eliminated Levin, 6-4, 6-0, and Halstead lost to Tarangoli, 6-1, 6-3.

The council voted to study this question of adult education at its recent annual convention at Minneapolis, Minn. Alumni organizations are urged to send suggestions for the study to Miss Snow at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., for presentation to the aims and policies committee. They will later be considered by the joint committee.

THE CREWS COME BACK

THE ROWING season for Cornell ended in what would be regarded by a college without Cornell's rowing background as a blaze of glory. Two seconds in the minor events and a fourth in the varsity was Cornell's performance. Annapolis, winning the two minor events, took fifth in the varsity. California the varsity winner, was last in the freshman and had no entry in the J. V. Columbia with second in the varsity and Washington with third were back toward the rear in the other races. Cornell's results were generally good, with possibly one other institution out of the seven slightly better.

Sweeping the Hudson is the dream of every rowing college. It is a dream that surely has materialized. We doubt the ability of any college ever to control the river as Cornell did under Courtney. The results of the recent regatta at Poughkeepsie should not give rise to obsessions of grandeur to that extent.

The races do, however, give rise to the hope that Cornell will again be regarded as a serious contender for first honors as a rowing college. Coach Wray should be given credit for pulling Cornell rowing out of a bad fix. He has three boat loads of sturdy oarsmen practically intact as the nucleus for next year's campaign. These crews have tasted victory and have defeated others that were expected to win.

May the Cornell oarsmen again feel that their sport is worth the effort. Given the will to win, Coach Wray will provide the rhythm, and these hills will take care of the leg drive.

WOMEN'S FEDERATION MEETS

The Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs held its annual meeting June 15 in Risley Recreation Room. In the absence of the president, Margaret L. Stecker '06, of New York; the third vice-president, Mrs. R. W. Sailor (Queenie N. Horton) '09 of Ithaca presided. Official delegates were present from fourteen clubs with several other clubs unofficially represented by members present.

Mrs. Finis E. Yoakum (Wilhelmine C. Wissmann) '11 of Oakland, Calif., was elected president, and Mrs. Fred A. Weisenbach (Clara O. Koeller) '06 of Philadelphia second vice-president. Mrs. Sailor's term of office as third vice-president holds over, and a first vice-president will be appointed by the Board of Directors to fill out the term of Mrs. Yoakum, who resigned in order to be eligible for the presidency. A secretary-treasurer will be appointed by the Board of Directors who include, in addition to the officers, Mrs. W. Denning Stewart (Margaret B. Thorp) '12, of Pittsburgh, Emmeline Moore '06 of Albany, N. Y., and Ruth I. Stone '10 of Chicago.

Mrs. Anna Bottsford Comstock '85 as treasurer of the Dearstyne Loan Fund reported a capital of $2,669.79 of which the income is available for loans to women students. Informal discussion of methods of cooperation with the Committee on Relations with Preparatory Schools of the Cornell Alumni Corporation left the understanding that the Board of Directors should act as a committee to effect an informal practical cooperation.

LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS HERE

A joint conference of the American Society of Landscape Architects and the National Conference of Teachers of Landscape Architecture was held at Cornell June 21 and 22. Fourteen colleges and universities were represented by delegates, who were welcomed to Ithaca by Dean William A. Hammond of the University Faculty and Professor George Young Jr., '00, acting dean of the College of Architecture. Professor E. Gorton Davis presided at one of the sessions.

ROBERT CHAMBERS, JR., professor of microscopic anatomy at the Cornell Medical College, has been appointed research professor of biology and chairman of the Department of Biology of Washington Square College by the Council of New York University. He is the inventor of the micro-manipulator, a device for studying microscopic living cells under powerful magnification.

Reunion Reports of the Classes

Julia Stone Haviland, Agnes Henderson Hoff, Margaret Wilson Livermore, Ruby Ames Newman, Ethel Vernon Patterson, Etta Koch Reed, Ruth Hofman Roberts, Irene Spindler, Jane McKelway Urquhart, Irene Osterkamp Wilkinson, and Gertrude Marvin Woodruff.

These were officially taking part in the reunion. A few others dropped in for part of one day or another. Seven were prevented at the last moment from coming and sent telegrams of "sympathy and greeting."

At the class meeting Hazel Brown Godfrey was elected reunion chairman for next year with Jane McKelway Urquhart continuing as secretary until next June.

It was voted to reunite strictly on the Dix plan from now on, with no regard to quinquennial reunions with the exception of the 25th and 50th.

The banquet was held in the Red Room of Risley Hall. Miss R. Louise Fitch, dean of women, spoke of "What deans of women have to do," and Dean Dexter S. Kimball of the College of Engineering gave a most interesting talk on the progress of Cornell during the past fifteen years and the probable development in the future.

A letter will be sent to the class during the next week or so giving more detailed information.

J. U.

1918 was the largest class which ever entered Cornell and can boast of fewer graduates. This was not due to the percentage of morons but because of the war. The class was completely broken up in 1917, probably 90% enlisting in the service. Many were killed in France; a few came back to finish up their work in 1919 and 1920. These facts are mentioned to show sufficient reason for a small reunion attendance. Despite these facts, however, we had 107 men back with almost a record under the Dix Plan. These 107 men were representative of the class. Present were: Elbert P. Tuttle of Atlanta, Ga., Guy Benedict, Wes Dixon, Paul Miller, Champ Van Horn, Dutch Hoffman, all members of Al Sharpe's 1916 championship football team, Kirk Kirkland of crew fame, etc., etc. Our secretary, Tex Roden, was among those missed. Rumor has it—for the manyeth time—that he is on the verge of matrimony, much too engrossed for such things as reunion.

The regular university reunion program was apparently much enjoyed by everyone. Additional and unpremeditated events gave considerable extra zest to the regular program. For instance the boxing match between Whyte of 1913 and Chardon of 1928—one round to a knockout in favor of youth. The referee, one Benedict '18, lost two front teeth endeavoring to make the play fair. Another high spot, literally, was the aerial performance of Lieut. Curtis

Moffat '18. While the Pennsylvania game crowd were engrossed in watching clever plays and errors, an aeroplane appeared on the horizon. It came toward the field at terrific speed, turned in a vertical bank and revealed the numerals 1918 on the upper wing. For some fifteen minutes Moffat gave an exhibition of stunt flying long to be remembered.

Still another interesting touch was the timely message of Major Kendall, Cornell 1898. His magnanimous offer to the university had a sobering effect on the class. In the last few hours of our gathering a meeting was called with the following unprecedented results. A subscription was taken which showed a pledge of $20,000,000 (to be willed) on condition, first, that the Cornell faculty makes it possible to equal Major Kendall's boast for Harvard: "the liquor habit in two years," second, that Charles E. Curtis, Superintendent of Grounds gives absolute assurance that Fall Creek Gorge will be filled so that the University can be undivided, a happy, homogenous group of buildings. We await with interest a letter of gratitude from the proper University authorities, such as the one written to Major Kendall.

To come back to reunion. It seems that the ten-year get-together was a great success. Let us plan on a still better one for 1933.

TRUSTEES' MEETING

Charles E. Treman '89 and Roger B. Williams, both of Ithaca, and Henry H. Westinghouse '75 of New York were re-elected board members by the Board of Trustees at the last meeting of the year, June 18. Their terms expired June 1. Cuthbert W. Pound '97 of Lockport, who has served as alumni trustee, and J. DuPratt White '90 of New York, who has served as an appointee of Governor Alfred E. Smith, sat with the board for the first time under their new designations as board members. Both were recently named to fill vacancies. White was re-elected vice-chairman of the board.

The positions held by the late Ira A. Place '81 on the medical College Council and on the Heckscher Research Council will not be filled until the first fall meeting of the board. At that time also the newly elected alumni trustees, J. Frederick Schoellkopf, Jr., '05 of Buffalo and Bancroft Gherardi '93 of New York will take their places.

Professor Otis F. Curtis, Ph.D. '16, was elected to the Heckscher Research Council to succeed Professor Emeritus John H. Comstock '74. Ratification of the appointments of Professor Henry H. Wing '81 and Professor Herbert C. Elmer '83 as professors emeritus was given by the board.

The board also granted a leave of absence until October to Assistant Professor Edward G. Lawson '13 of the College of Architecture to enable him to complete a term of teaching at the American Academy in Rome.

A report on the War Memorial group of men's dormitories indicated that construction will be started on these units in the near future, as soon as estimated costs can be pared down to meet the limits of the funds available.

DEAN ALBERT R. MANN '04 of the College of Agriculture gave the principal address at the commencement exercises of the Nichols School, Buffalo, June 5.

BOOKS

The Evidence for Evolution

Creation by Evolution. A Consensus of Present-Day Knowledge as Set Forth by Leading Authorities in Non-Technical Language That All May Understand. Edited by Frances Mason. New York. Macmillan. 1928. 22.4 cm., pp. xxii, 392. Price, $5.

This is a much needed book. The workers in the various fields of science, with few exceptions, have thus far been so busy in their laboratories and their special conferences that they have neglected the duty of passing on their findings to the public. There have been relatively few scientists gifted like Huxley with the capacity for first rate research and with the sense of obligation—perhaps also the gift of expression—requisite for the successful popularization of scientific knowledge. The less intelligent part of the public, hearing vague rumors of alarming discoveries, has become suspicious of an organized plot to overthrow religion and the Bible. Such a book as this, then, can and will do much to clear up matters.

The authors of this book are all, one is convinced, serious, honest, devoted to the discovery of truth above all else. What they have to say is in no sense subversive of real religion and is in no sense antagonistic to the view that the universe is of Divine origin. But they speak most emphatically, conclusively, and convincingly as to the method by which the universe has come to be what it is. The process has taken millions of millions of years. Instead of removing the Creator from the picture, it has vastly exalted his power and gives us a clearer conception of this power as exemplified in the stupendous force of Nature.

Anti-evolutionists have some hard nuts to crack, e.g. the parasitic ants (p.221) and the numerous vestigial or useless organs present throughout the world of life (pp. 34-48). It is hard to see what they gain by making the attempt.

The twenty-six chapters of this book are written by some of the most eminent British and American scientists of the day. Here is the list:

Wide Fields

Wide Fields. By Paul Green, '22-3 Grad. New York. Robert M. McBride and Company. 1928. 19.5 cm., pp. x, 280. Price, $2.50 net.

In this volume we have a group of short stories and sketches of the poor white farmers of the Carolinas. They are Little Bethel folk, the setting and many of the characters being already familiar to us from Green's plays.

The author has a keen and sympathetic understanding of these simple people, whose struggle for existence and with the complexities with which even their lives have to cope, is often more than they can meet. The reader gains an impression of having come into contact with real personalities. Uncle January Evans, the old reprobate whose reform could be accomplished only by a dramatic and effective visitation of the devil himself; Lalie Fowler, the pathetic but proud daughter of a white father and a negro mother; Aunt Margaret, the saint of Little Bethel; Doctor John Hayes, who ministered faithfully to their needs for half a century; Tim Messer, a great fiddler, so well loved by all Little Bethel folk that his death later in France cast a lasting shadow over them all; Tim and his pal Sam, whose merry "Ti-yiddy-yum-yum-yiddy-yum-ya" has often made the moonlit hills echo; these and many others are pictured in such a manner that one thinks of them as interesting acquaintances he has made on a journey into the Carolina hills.

In this collection are included the following short stories: "A Tempered Fellow," "The Devil's Instrument," "Her Birthday," "The Sixth of June," "The Cornshucking," "The Woods Colt," "The Lost Ford," "The Humble Ones," "The First Death," "Fare Thee Well," "The 'Possum Hunt," "Bread and Butter," "Come to Supper," and "Too Smart for God."

Black Valley

Black Valley. By Hugo Wast. Translated by E. Herman Hespelt '10, A.M. '17, Ph.D. '25, and Miriam Van Dyck Hespelt, A.M. '18, Ph.D. '19. New York. Longmans, Green and Company. 1928. 19.2 cm., pp. viii, 302. Price, $2.50.

This is a South American story of unusual interest. The author is one of the best known novelists of that continent. To this story was awarded the Royal Spanish Academy Prize. Another of Wast's novels, "Stone Desert," received the $30,000 First National Prize for literature in Argentina.

"Black Valley" is a story of life in the beautiful wild country of the Argentine Mountains where landed lords hold the power, maintained by peons in the real old feudal manner. Here, traditions of old family alliances and bitter feuds are held from generation to generation. Hatred between two of the old, once-powerful families is the tragic note marking this story. The son of one clan loves a daughter of the other, the strife and passion of their secret alliance passing on to the next generation.

Then young Gracián, an outsider but also of noble family, fine-grained and lovable but weak-willed, with the characteristics of his race, is caught in the toils of this bitter feud; loved by the girl who is the child of the secret alliance, but loving the daughter of the nobler house, the youth finds only tragedy for himself or those whom his life involves.

It is a picture of passion and crime on the one hand, and of exquisite beauty and fineness on the other. Doubtless we have here a picture truly delineating the temperament and life of the people of the great Argentine country, a country concerning which, as may be said of all of South America, there is among us a definitely growing curiosity.

The translation has been well done.

After you get Home and think it over

There will be several things which pleased you but in your hurry you were unable to buy. Did you remember the price? If not, write us now. The "Gift Folder" will show many of the articles with prices. We can serve you now just as well as when you were in college.

Books

The books most in demand are von Engeln's Concerning Cornell, Courtney and Cornell Rowing, Songbook, Sport Stuff and Andrew D. White's three books. Perhaps you saw more than the writer remembers. Just send to the Co-op for a copy of any of them.

Jewelry

Let us send you one of the gift folders showing charms, brooches, bar pins and book-ends. We know what you bought and what the students of today buy. You are interested in the later things.

Candy

Good candy but in the campus assortment made for us by Whitman is the added touch of design. A design for students. Your gift will mean more if the candy is this package.
