Sexual Harassment Enforcement Assigned Cornell's OEO Given Additional Authority

The university's Office of Equal Opportunity has been charged by President Frank Rhodes with the monitoring and reporting responsibility on sexual harassment at Cornell.

The new role for the OEO is the latest step taken by Rhodes on an issue that is becoming a major national concern of women and institutions.

In June, Rhodes issued a strongly worded memorandum expressing clear disapproval of sexual harassment, and describing the administrative procedures that can be used if someone encounters sexual harassment on campus.

The memo was re-issued today (following) in order to reach the full university community. Rhodes requested that "special efforts be made to bring (the statement) to the attention of all Cornell students, faculty members and staff." (Full text of the memo is on page 7.)

While students, faculty and staff will have a wide variety of offices to which to bring complaints, including the OEO, Rhodes said today that he hoped the OEO "would be able to develop sufficient expertise in this area to serve as a resource for all other offices in the university which receive questions or complaints regarding sexual harassment.

"I have asked Michael J. Montgomery, executive director of the OEO, to develop educational programs throughout the university on this problem, to monitor our efforts in dealing with the issue, and to report annually on this issue to Provost W. Keith Kennedy. All members of the Cornell community should cooperate with Mr. Montgomery and his staff in dealing with this important issue."

In addition to the new role for the OEO, Rhodes announced that his statement would be included in the new Personnel Manual scheduled for publication this fall, and in the next revision of Cornell's Academic Appointment Manual, scheduled within the next six months.

Summaries of the president's statement on sexual harassment are also scheduled to appear in the next annual presidential statement on improving the effectiveness of affirmative action at Cornell, published in the Affirmative Action Plan as well as in the 1981 edition of the Policy Notebook for Students, Faculty and Staff.

Montgomery said one of the first steps he is considering is including excerpts from the statement in the

It's been a 'long, steady road up' for the Africana Studies and Research Center and Director James Turner from 1969 and the center's first home at 320 Wait Ave. (left) to 1979 and a discussion with author James Baldwin and visiting professor Eleanor Traylor in the main lounge of the Center at 310 Triphammer Road. The woman with Turner in the photo at left is Gayla Cook '71, now director of the Women and African Development Program of the African-American Institute. She will be a participant in the black studies conference here this weekend.

Black Studies Conference This Weekend Is Growing

A conference on black studies in America, which has grown in stature since its inception — comparable to the experience of Cornell's Africana Studies and Research Center — will be held here Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

"We have been getting calls all at hours for the past couple of weeks from people wanting to attend," said James Turner, director of the Africana Center. "It has become THE conference of the year."

When Turner and Jacquelyn Haskins, assistant director, began planning the conference, they estimated some 50 people from off-campus and another 50 from the Cornell community would attend. Now, they're looking forward to more than 150 out-of-towners and a total attendance well over 200.

The conference, titled "The Next Decade: Consolidating African Studies, Bonding African Linkages," will focus on the problems and prospects for black studies in the next decade. Leading black scholars and educators are among the 38 participants in the panels and roundtable discussions.

Turner said he knew there would be quality people on the panels and now, with the swelling of attendance, he expects "a major meeting of senior scholars from a cross-section of schools. The conference has taken on a character of great importance."

Among the colleges and universities that will be represented at the conference are Grinnell, Harvard, Howard, Louisville, Massachusetts, Michigan, Northwestern, Pittsburgh, Roxbury (Mass.) Community College, Stanford, State University of New York at Albany and Wisconsin.

"Educators are looking to the conference to produce discussion around major issues with which they are now confronted," Turner said. "And we'll review the long, steady road up to where we are."

Turner feels the enthusiasm and excitement in the black studies field about this conference is deserved recognition of the Africana Studies and Research Center at Cornell. The program here has been gaining the respect of educators since its inception in 1969.

Turner, the first and only director of the center, came here from Northwestern. He remembers the beginning:

"A lot of people in the media said: 'You can't create a program under duress. You can't create anything profound, positive and well organized under duress.'"

"It's a fact that many new academic programs in higher education were created with some controversy. This is true particularly in the social sciences. The history of sociology as a discipline is a good case in point.

"What happened at Cornell was that we were able to go beyond the initial impact and communicate with a significant portion of the faculty and administration. While much was going on in terms of media events, there was much talking and planning going on also.

"Critical constituencies at Cornell were involved in those discussions: the faculty, students — black and white, the administration, the trustees. I don't know whether you got that kind of effective mix anywhere else.

"What happened was the program became a Cornell venture. There was a large number of people in-involved from the critical constituencies, so the institution wasn't being torn apart while the program was being developed.

"Black students were then — and have continued to be over the decade — very much in support of the program, and they've had a share in shaping it.

"More and more we are seen as a reference point for review of programs elsewhere; not just black studies, but other international programs as well.

"It is a tribute to our faculty, our students, our alumni that schools across the country are making a commitment of time and resources to come here for this conference."

Cornell's — and Turner's — commitments of time and resources have brought them.

Referendum Ballots Out Next Week

Three Forms of Governance Proposed

The following is the final article in a three-part series on the upcoming referendum;

All faculty, students and employees will be receiving their referendum ballots either through campus mail or U.S. mail next week.

The referendum is being conducted so that members of the Cornell community can indicate their preference on the structure of campus governance. Three forms of governance have been proposed. They are: Continuation of the present Campus Council; the formation of a University Assembly; the formation of a University Assembly with an associated student assembly or an associated employee assembly, or with both.

Cornell's present form of campus governance is the Campus Council, a 17-member organization composed of elected faculty, students, and employees along with administration and community trustees, who serve ex officio.

Ballots for students and employees will include two questions; faculty ballots, one. Question 1, which will be on all ballots, is: "Do you favor major changes in the present system of campus governance (the Campus Council), as summarized in the attached outline of the Review Committee's report?"

Those answering "yes" to this question are indicating that they do not want the Campus Council to continue and would prefer a University Assembly be formed. A "no" answer would indicate that those voting want the Campus Council to remain in existence.

Question 2, which will be on student and employee ballots only is: "If major changes are made in the present system such as forming a University Assembly (and whether or not you favor such change), do you favor having such system include a separate assembly, as outlined in the attached summary, to deal with matters of employee (or student) concern?"

Those answering "yes" to this question are indicating that if a University Assembly is created they also want separate employee and student assemblies. A "no" vote would indicate that those voting prefer a University Assembly only.

(Question 2 is not included on faculty ballots, as the faculty already has its own constituent assembly in the form of the Faculty Council of Representatives.)

To allow analysis by constituency, undergraduate student ballots will be white; graduate student ballots will be ivory; non-exempt employee ballots will be canary; exempt employee ballots will be green and faculty ballots will be blue.

Included with the ballots will be an explanation of each form of proposed governance. Voters are urged to read all the information supplied.

Ballots must be returned before 4 p.m. Friday, Oct. 10. Ballots can be put in any campus mail drop or left in ballot boxes located in Olin Library, Uris Library, Mann Library, Willard Straight Hall, Noyes Center, North Campus Union or the Day Hall Information Center. They may also be left at 133 Day Hall.

In an open letter to the members of the Cornell community, published in the Sept. 4 Chronicle, President Frank Rhodes wrote:

"...the Cornell community now has an opportunity to express its preference for the system under which it wishes to be governed in non-academic areas. The structures for the student and/or employee assemblies are suggestions and have not been formulated in detail. Each new body should have the freedom and flexibility to establish its identity and procedures.

"The system which emerges should be a community system. It should deal with issues of importance to the community and keep the community informed about its activities.

"I believe that a formal structure of community governance is essential and that support of such a structure and participation by members of the community is an obligation of that membership. I therefore ask all members of the community to vote in the coming referendum."

Season Theatre Tickets Offer Dance Bonus

Season tickets are now available for the Theatre Cornell Series of four plays—with a bonus of the Cornell Dance Concert—all in the Willard Straight Theatre.

Included in the subscription will be another bonus: discounts for two plays in Theatre Cornell's second stage, Drummond Studio.

The theatre season opens at 8:15 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 2 with a play by Swiss playwright Friedrich Durrenmatt, "Play Strindberg." It is described as a hilarious parody of Strindberg's tragedy "The Dance of Death."

In his play, Durrenmatt stresses the laughs behind the agony with his three characters depicted as prize fighters entering the ring and sparring for survival.

The second series play, Ray Aranha's "My Sister, My Sister," will open Nov. 20 and have two guest artists. Gilbert Moses, one of the most distinguished directors of the American black theatre, will direct. David Downing will be seen in the role of Eddie. Downing played Eddie in the New York production.

Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" will open March 5.

The final play of the series will be Robinson Jeffers' poetic translation of Euripides, "Medea," a tale of vengeance with passion and fury, which opens April 16.

In her love for Jason, Medea has committed a long trail of bloody, dishonorable deeds. When Jason casts her off with their two children, her hate is as overpowering as her love had been.

The dance concert will be performed in May in the Willard Straight Theatre.

Subscribers are given a discount on tickets to the fall production of Dale Wasserman's "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," which opens Oct. 23 in Drummond Studio. In the spring, David Rabe's "In the Boom Boom Room" will be a discount play for subscribers.

For full details on the season call 256-3421. Single admission tickets will go on sale Sept. 25 at the Theatre Box Office, lower floor of Willard Straight Hall, open 1-6 p.m. Monday through Friday. Call 256-5164 for reservations.

War on Waste

Package Delivery Available

In dire emergencies the University Travel Office has been able to get packages delivered to various cities within hours or at most within one day.

This can be done if arrangements are made for someone to meet the incoming traveler from Ithaca at the airport of the city of destination concerned, according to Victor R. DiNicola, administrative manager of the Travel Office.

In many cases persons traveling out of Ithaca, through arrangements made by the Travel Office, have volunteered to take packages in extenuating circumstances, he said.

If you have a problem of this sort you should contact DiNicola or his staff at 256-4710 or 256-4284 for assistance.

When it can be done, the arrangement is not only a savings in time but money as an alternative to commercial courier services.

Council Honors Fisher Recognizes Physics Prize

A resolution in honor of award-winning Campus Council member Michael E. Fisher and a request for funding for the draft counseling service were among the items passed by the Campus Council at its meeting last week.

The Fisher resolution read: WHEREAS, Professor Michael E. Fisher is a recipient of the 1980 Wolf Prize in Physics for his work "to the benefit of humanity;" and WHEREAS, Professor Fisher through his efforts has brought great distinction to himself and Cornell University; and

WHEREAS, Professor Fisher's colleagues on the Cornell Campus Council take pride in his achievements;

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, The members of the Fourth Campus Council extend their hearty congratulations to Professor

Fisher and wish him continued success in his work.

Fisher is the Horace White Professor of Chemistry, Physics and Mathematics.

A draft counseling funding request was made by W. Jack Lewis, director of Cornell United Religious Work. Lewis' request was for $400 to cover partial payment for a work-study student to help coordinate the draft counseling service located in Anabel Taylor Hall. The funding will be provided through the Division of Campus Life New Program Contingency Fund.

In other action taken, the council passed a proposal to form an ad hoc Rules Committee and one for a Budget Commissioner.

The responsibility of the Rules Committee will be to discuss issues suggested for council consideration, assign priorities to them and make recommendations on the appropriate route for each.

The budget commissioner will coordinate Division of Campus Life budgetary activities with the council and its committees.

The council also unanimously approved the appointment of Miriam B. Hutchins as judicial administrator.

Hutchins was appointed by President Frank Rhodes in July. In accordance with the legislation governing the selection of the judicial administrator, the appointment was made by the president, subject to ratification by the Campus Council.

The next meeting of the Campus Council is at 4:45 p.m. today in 251 Malott Hall.

President Rhodes will address the group.

United Way Kicks Off Here Next Week

Campus Goal This Year Is $240,000

With a goal of $240,000 in pledges, Cornell will kick off the 1980 United Way Campaign Sept. 29 and 30 with presentations in all departments.

A campaign goal of $819,454 has been set for United Way of Tompkins County, which will aid 22 member agencies in 1981.

"Cornell employees have always contributed generously to the United Way and together constitute an immensely important element in the success of the United Way Campaign," said Jerome M. Ziegler, dean of the New York State College of Human Ecology and chairman of the 1980 Cornell United Way Campaign.

"Nevertheless, last year only 39 percent of Cornell University's employees did contribute," Ziegler noted. "This year we hope to do considerably better. The basic strategy of the United Way Campaign this year is to have every Cornell employee personally visited by a solicitor who will provide full information about the campaign and about United Way agencies and their services."

With the exception of visits to retired persons and those who operate businesses from their homes, the Tompkins County United Way Campaign plans no door-to-door solicitation. The campaign is organized and directed to give persons the opportunity to give where they work. More than 1,000 volunteers will participate in the 1980 campaign throughout the county.

Nearly three-quarters of the United Way funds raised in Tompkins County are made as pledges to be paid by payroll deduction plans or direct billing by United Way. Last year, some 15,000 gifts were made by business firms and individuals. Noting that there are more than 30,000 persons employed in Tompkins County, campaign planners hope to broaden the base of participation this year.

"It is very important for Cornell University and its employees to become involved in the affairs of the Ithaca community and Tompkins County," said Dick Schultz, director of athletics at Cornell and 1980 Campaign Chairman for the county-wide drive. "The United Way is very important to all of us, even if we as individuals or our families have not as yet required services from any of the agencies funded by United Way."

Last year, United Way's 22 member agencies served more than 25,000 Tompkins County residents, and the 13 affiliated Town Chests and Councils served thousands more. Total operating budgets of member agencies in Tompkins County total nearly $5 million. Some agencies receive all their support from United Way, while others, because of other sources of income, need only 25 percent from United Way.

Contributions to United Way of Tompkins County aid the following service agencies: The Alcoholism Council, the Battered Women Crisis Line, Big Brother/Big Sister, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire, Challenge Industries, Day Care and Child Development, Family and Children's Counseling, FISH (Friends in Service Here), Girl Scouts, the Greater Ithaca Activities Center, Human Services Coalition, Learning Web, Mental Health Association, Offender Aid and Restoration, Red Cross, Salvation Army, Senior Citizens Council, Southside Community Center, Special Children's Center, Suicide Prevention Crisis Line and the YMCA.

A successful United Way Campaign in 1980 will make possible additional aid, including in-home service for frail elderly persons, suicide prevention services for youth, a new emergency shelter for battered women and children, and expanded mental health services for elderly citizens.

Proxy Group Holds Hearing One Stockholder Resolution Discussed

The University Investment Proxy Advisory Committee heard speakers support a stockholder resolution aimed at South African labor reform during a public hearing Friday afternoon.

The committee will meet Oct. 6 in New York City to form its recommendation to the University Board of Trustees' Investment Committee in casting its proxy vote. The resolution has been submitted to the Board of Directors of International Minerals & Chemical Corp., a U.S.-based firm with operations in South Africa, by the Cornell Corporate Responsibility Project.

No one spoke in opposition to the resolution at the hour-long hearing in 242 Goldwin Smith Hall. About 40 people attended including media representatives.

Those speaking in favor of the resolution included J. Congress Mbata, associate professor of Africana Studies; Gary S. Guzy, Law '82, a student member of the University Board of Trustees and an active leader in CCRP, and James Tulsy, Arts '81, director of CCRP.

Mbata said that while he supported the resolution it still does not get at the root of the problem. Under South African law African workers have no legal identity as "employees," the term used in South African law, he said. He cited a law passed in the 1920s that expressly eliminates blacks and non-whites from the category of "employee," as covered in South African statutes.

He said after the hearing that the resolution was in many ways an exercise in futility but was useful in bringing international attention to the legal non-identity of South African non-whites in their own homeland.

Some of the key points in the resolution are:

—IMC should ensure that all its employees, irrespective of racial or other distinction, are allowed to choose freely the type of organization to represent them.

—Employees should be regularly and unequivocally informed that it is company policy to consult and bargain collectively with organizations freely elected by and representative of employees.

—Should black African employees decide that their representative organization should be in the form of a trade union, the company should accept this decision.

—The company should recognize and negotiate with unions whether registered or unregistered.

—The company should allow collective bargaining with these organizations to develop in accordance with internationally accepted principles.

—The company should do everything possible to ensure to black African employees the freedom to form or join a trade union.

Campaign Within $18 Million

The Cornell Campaign for $230 million is within $18 million of its goal with less than four months remaining in the five-year effort. The campaign ends Dec. 31, 1980.

At the end of August, the campaign that was launched in 1975 stood at $212 million.

An excellent 1979-80 fiscal year is largely responsible for the campaign's August total of $212 million, according to Raymond L. Handlan, director of development.

In 1979-80, the university received $46.2 million in cash, an increase of more than 20 percent over the previous year's total of $38.4 million. In 1977-78, the figure was $33.5 million.

A significant factor in the $46.2 million total is the more than $7 million raised by the Cornell Fund, the university's annual alumni giving program, Handlan said. The 1979-80 Cornell Fund was up approximately $1 million, an 18 percent increase over the previous year.

Cornell continues to be a national leader among private universities in financial support. In 1978-79 the university ranked fourth in the nation; in 1977-78 it ranked sixth in total gifts received by private universities.

Parents Will Be Here This Weekend

As many as 2,000 parents of university freshmen and other new students are expected to visit the campus for Freshman Parents' Weekend, Sept. 26-28.

Activities will include a reception in Barton Hall by President Rhodes and Provost W. Keith Kennedy, an open house information program by each of the colleges and several student support services, a chicken barbecue before the varsity soccer game and a dinner theater presentation.

Parents will be encouraged to partake of Cornell's regular fare of weekend activities, including men's and women's athletic events, concerts, films, art exhibits, plays and a Country Fair planned for the Agriculture Quadrangle.

In the planning for more than six months, the weekend is being held again this year because the program has been so successful since it was resumed in 1977. Planning is being coordinated by Ronald Loomis, director of Unions and Activities.

Loomis said all hotel rooms in Ithaca, Cortland and Elmira are already booked and late comers are finding lodging as far away as Binghamton and Syracuse.

Music

Amade Trio Concert
The Amade Trio, Cornell University's internationally known resident chamber music ensemble, will present its first home concerts of the academic year Friday and Saturday, Sept. 26 and 27, in Barnes Hall. The free public programs, consisting of Beethoven's Trio in G Major, Opus 1, No. 2 and Schubert's Trio in B flat Major, Opus 99, will be played at 8:15 p.m. Friday and repeated at 4 p.m. Saturday.

This will be the first time that an audience in this country will have an opportunity to hear Beethoven's and Schubert's music as it sounded to 19th-century audiences. These performances inaugurate three gifts of musical instruments presented to the Music Department by Cornell alumni and friends.

The fortepiano is the first copy by Thomas McCobb, Klamath Falls, Ore., of an 1826 Conral Graf fortepiano typical of those used in Vienna during the first half of the 19th century. Acquisition of this fortepiano was made possible by special gifts from Cornell alumnus Charles Snitow '28 and the national Cornell Friends of Music, Otto Doering '63, chairman.

The violin, attributed to Domenico Busan, Venice, circa 1750, was a gift from the late Verne Swan of Utica. It was recently restored to its original proportions by F. Lindemann of Amsterdam, The Netherlands, with funds provided by the Cornell Friends of Music.

The cello, attributed to Albani, Tyrol, circa 1720, has been restored to original 18th century proportions by William Monical of New York. It is a recent gift from Mrs. Byron Saunders of Ithaca.

The Amade Trio is composed of Malcolm Bilson, fortepiano, Sonya Monosoff, violin, and John Hsu, cello. All are on the faculty of the Cornell music department; all have outstanding reputations as soloists as well as ensemble players. Their scholarly yet exciting interpretations and faithfulness to performance practices of the composers' times have brought the members of the trio highest praise from critics and audiences alike. Their recordings of a series of Haydn trios have been very favorably reviewed by "High Fidelity" and "Stereo Review."

The Amade Trio has toured extensively in the United States. The group has also toured in Canada and in England and played at the prestigious Bath Festival in Britain. For the second time they have been awarded a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts and during the current season will perform in concert throughout the country.

Sponsored Programs

The Office of Sponsored Programs, 123 Day Hall, 6-5014, wishes to emphasize that the information in this column is intended for post-doctoral research unless otherwise indicated.

Environmental Protection Agency is soliciting applications for mission related research and development projects through headquarters and 15 major laboratories located throughout the United States. Research topics are intended to stimulate long-range, investigator-initiated projects and are not necessarily representative of the kind of projects which the Agency may want as cooperative agreements or contracts. All applications received will first receive an administrative review. Then all grant applications will be evaluated by the appropriate Science Peer Review Panel convened at regular intervals. This solicitation will apply during Fiscal Year 1981 (October 1, 1980-September 30, 1981). Applications may be sent at any time. Additional information is available in the Office of Sponsored Programs.

Reminders of the following submission dates are listed below: National Endowment for the Humanities Summer Stipends for 1981-October 13. National Endowment for the Humanities Applications for experimental projects that test new approaches to humanities programming or new types of grant support-October 16. John Simon Guggenheim Fellowship October 1 deadline. Rockefeller Humanities Fellowship October 1 deadline. Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education Mina Shaughnessy Scholars Program October 17. National Historical and Records Commission of the General Services Administration Records and Publications Program-October 1.

National Science Foundation New Proposal Forms

A new single-page budget form and a new project summary form have been released by the National Science Foundation for use on all proposals to that agency. These forms have been reproduced by the Office of Sponsored Programs and are available at 123 Day Hall or by calling 6-5014.

Following is a list of new grants and contracts for the Ithaca and Geneva units of the University which were inadvertently omitted from the list published in last week's Chronicle. They were received between April 15 and July 15, 1980.

J. Caldwell, Sociology: Microanalytic Forecasting of American Populations. DHEW/SSA, 4 Months, $10,900.

J. Calvo, Biochemistry: Regulatory and Evolutionary Relation between ilvHI and leuABCD Gene Clusters in E. Coli and S. Typhimurium. NSF, One Year, $13,784.

B. Carpenter, Chemistry: Test of a New Theory on Structure and Reactivity. NIH, One Year, $82,395.

B. Carpenter, Chemistry: Research Fellowship. Sloan Foundation, 2 Years, $20,000.

B. Carpenter, Chemistry: Thermal and Transition Metal-Promoted Reactions of Small Ring Molecules. NSF, One Year, $56,000.

C. Chu, Design & Environmental Analysis: Development of Bicomponent Braid Fibers as Potential Surgical Implants. J.M. Foundation, 23 Months, $25,000.

D. Clark, Nuclear Science & Engineering: Experimental Studies of Nuclides far from Stability with the TRISTAN II Fission Product Separator at Brookhaven. Department of Energy, One Year, $80,000.

Campus Title IX Report Now Filed

Covers Athletics, Other Units, Services

An annual report with recommendations—most having to do with athletics—regarding the university's continuing work in compliance with Title IX has been submitted to the university administration.

Cornell's Title IX coordinator, Ann Roscoe, recently filed the fourth annual report on Title IX, as compiled by the Provost's Advisory Committee on the Status of Women, with Provost W. Keith Kennedy.

The PAC committees reporting this year were in physical education and athletics, admissions, publications and health services.

Kennedy subsequently distributed copies of the report to Cornell deans and directors. That document and other Title IX materials are available at the reference desk of Olin Library and at the reserve desk of Mann Library.

Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972 prohibits discrimination by sex in educational programs or activities which receive federal funds.

The report summarizes the activities and recommendations of four PAC subcommittees charged by the provost with responsibility for an annual review of university Title IX policies and procedures. The Cornell administration is reviewing the report and its recommendations.

The report includes a summary of the on-site compliance review of student employment and the selection processes for graduate research and teaching assistants conducted in April and May 1979 by a team from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

HEW issued a finding in May that said Cornell was in compliance with Title IX as it relates to financial aid and the granting of teaching, research and graduate research fellowships.

Among the 18 recommendations on athletics were ones calling for: central scheduling scheduling to insure equal access to "prime time" for practice and competition; basic athletic budgets for each team to cover, "in a reasonable way," all team expenses; coach/athlete ratios that are similar for men's and women's teams in the same sport; teaching and other duties for coaches assigned by published criteria equally applicable to men and women; equally usable, adequate and centrally assigned locker rooms for Cornell teams and their opponents; increases in women's team budgets to cover recruiting costs.

The admissions committee reported that it had met with admissions officers in the Graduate School of Business and Public Administration, Law School, New York State College of Veterinary Medicine and the College of Arts and Sciences over the past two years.

"The subcommittee has found no evidence of discrimination in admissions practices in any of these colleges," the report states.

The committee examined in detail the problem of "stop outs"—students who begin school, leave, and return.

It found the "stop out" rates of men in the New York State College of Human Ecology and of men and women in the College of Architecture, Art and Planning to be large. It called on those colleges to "make a commitment in...counseling and academic policy geared toward remedying the sex imbalance in stop outs...."

This year, the committee plans to review attrition rates in the Graduate School and the professional schools, and possibly categorize why leaves are taken.

The publications committee reported that in 1979-80 it reviewed publications sent to prospective students by the graduate fields at Cornell, published and distributed a brochure explaining Title IX and its application to students, and met with representatives of the offices of development and alumni affairs to discuss forms of address for Cornell alumnae.

The committee felt "greater effort must be made to educate those people who prepare publications (outside of University Publications and Media Services) to be alert to the need to show no sex bias in publications for traditionally male dominated fields."

Among its other recommendations, the committee asked that a system be devised to keep all divisions and offices of the university informed as to the preferred forms of address of alumni, as recorded by Public Affairs Records.

The health services committee worked in 1979-80 with the Student Board of Health and the Gannett Clinic staff to develop plans for the Women's Health Clinic that opened in Gannett this fall.

The committee had two recommendations: "The (Gannett) clinic staff attempt to find ways to reduce or eliminate fees for gynecological services" and the committee "monitor the success of the new clinic in serving the gynecological needs of the student body."

Questions about Title IX should be directed to Ann Roscoe, Title IX Coordinator, at 256-7596.

CIVITAS

By Mary McGinnis

Coordinator, CIVITAS (256-7513)

ITHACA SCHOOLS NEED HELP: Urgent calls for help have begun to come in from the Ithaca schools:

1. Tutors to work with learning disabled junior high school students (class meets daily, 1:45-2:30); to help students with learning problems in all skill areas (science, social studies and reading, especially). One-to-one or small groups (no more than 3 to 1). Help welcomed anytime between 8:40-2:30, M-F, and as often as you can manage. Thirty minutes from campus on foot, same by bus.

2. U-Pick the foreign language: junior high students from all over the world need help NOW in learning English. Some knowledge of language needed, proficiency not necessary. How about Spanish, Indonesian, Cameroun, Korean, French, Polish, Bengali, Italian, Japanese? Anytime between 9-3:15, MF, best time is 1:45-2:30. Transportation not a problem.

3. Volunteers with some knowledge of general science sought by science program in downtown elementary school. You can: a) work with small groups of children on science project (some choice in subject matter), at least 2 hrs./wk., M-F, 9-2:30, for one semester; b) supervise science room during lunch hour, 11:25-12:45, M-F, when children come to work on their own interests; c) share your specialty on a one-shot basis or through short-term project.

AFTER-SCHOOL (INCLUDING SATURDAYS) YOUTH PROGRAMS NEED LEADERS: If you like cooking, nutrition, arts and crafts and wood working, share your knowledge and skills with children, 6-14 yrs., living in low-income housing projects downtown. Good supervision, materials provided. Schedule to be worked out when club meets, but count on two hour meeting a week, plus preparation time. Club near campus also seeks leaders to revitalize last year's program. One semester's commitment, preferably two.

GRAPHICS SKILLS SOUGHT: By women's advocacy group. Brochures, posters, general publicity. As much as you want to do on your own schedule. Good opportunity to build up your portfolio.

DOWNTOWN COOPERATIVE NURSERY SCHOOL needs morning helpers: could work either M,W,F, 8:30-12:30, or same hours T, Th, but times negotiable.

Program for 18 children, 2-5 yrs., includes art and music. Volunteers can help plan and offer suggestions. One semester's commitment.

ITHACA YOUTH BUREAU needs dedicated, caring folks to work one-to-one with disadvantaged kids aged 3-18. Men and minorities especially needed. On-going training provided, commitment of 2 semesters required. Call CIVITAS for more information.

THURSDAY EVENING SWIM PROGRAM for handicapped children: Volunteers needed to teach basic swimming skills, every other week, Thursdays, 6-9 p.m. TC3 pool, but car pooling can be arranged. One semester's commitment.

FRIENDS FOR FOREIGN STUDENTS: The Intensive English Program is a semester-long program for foreign students from 20 different countries around the world. These visitors to our campus not only want to learn English, but also hope to understand American/Cornell culture. Will you be a friend and cultural guide? Hours and times are flexible according to mutual convenience.

COUNSELOR TRAINING, suicide prevention and crisis service; To begin, Thurs., Sept. 25, Mon. and Thurs. eves., 7:30-10, through Oct. 23, with 9-3:30 session, Sat., Sept. 27. Time commitment: 15 hours plus two evening meetings per month for 2 semesters. Qualifications: must be 21 or a senior. Applications being received now.

BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA: Seeks leaders for Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, Explorers and for indirect programming support for regional activities. One year commitment of 2-3 hours a week. Troups will form in Sept., so come to CIVITAS for specific meeting times and places, and detailed information on needs.

IF YOU WOULD LIKE TO HELP, 125 Anabel Taylor Hall, 256-7513, M-F, 10-2.

Funded in part by the Student Finance Commission and open to the entire Cornell community.

Graduate Bulletin

Late initial course registration and/or course additions are still possible upon payment of $10 late fee. (Deadline for registration was Sept. 19.)

Oct. 24 is the deadline for dropping courses or changing the grade option.

In nominating their Special Committees, graduate students must elect only members of the Graduate Faculty of the appropriate field.

Graduate students whose employment is other than a teaching or research assistantship and is in excess of 10 hours per week (and is not contributory toward degree) or 20 hours per week (and is contributory) may be eligible for proration of tuition. Applications are available at the Information Desk, Sage Graduate Center.

To be eligible for a special tuition rate of $800 a semester, doctoral candidates must have completed three years of residence, taken their 'A' Exam and be taking no courses. Check with the Graduate School for details and application forms.

Graduate students planning doctoral dissertation research overseas in modern foreign languages and related area studies should consider the Fulbright-Hays Doctoral Dissertation Research Abroad Training Grant Program administered by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Under its auspices, graduate students may be funded for six months to one year of independent research in non-Western European countries that have diplomatic relations with the United States. Grant provisions include round-trip transportation and excess baggage allowance, maintenance and dependents allowances, health and accident insurance, and tuition and fees at foreign institutions. Students applying for dissertation research grants in East Asia, East Europe and Russia, Latin America, South Asia, and Southeast Asia should request information from the appropriate Foreign Area Program in Uris Hall. Applicants to other non-Western European countries (e.g., Africa, Middle East) should contact Jeanne Bowen, 116 Sage Graduate Center for information. Deadlines are approaching.

Comment

In the September 11 article, "What does Communism Mean to China?", professor Esman seriously misinterpreted a fundamental principle of Marxist ideology. He states, "(Communism) means specifically, ownership by the state of all the means of production, the bedrock concept of a Marxian communism."

The state that he refers to is the Chinese government, a very different state from the one that Marx envisioned. In the Communist Manifesto, Marx wrote, "The proletariat will use its political supremacy to wrest, by degrees, all capital from the bourgeoisie, to centralize all instruments of production in the hands of the State, i.e. the proletariat organized as the ruling class." Marx goes on to talk about the State losing its political character, the Leninist "withering away" concept that most westerners scoff at. The Party bureaucracy in China and Russia has not withered because it is the ruling class organizing the proletariat, and not vice versa.

Professor Esman should be more careful about what he calls "Marxist". I personally believe that the alleged communism in China has lost most of its Marxist character.

Paul West

Ag Development Chairman Named

H. Joseph Pendergast of Cobleskill is heading the Development Committee of the State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences.

A member of the class of 1938, Pendergast chairs a 14-member committee which has the responsibility for raising private support for the college.

He has been active in the Alumni Association, which observes its 70th anniversary this year, and was president of the association in 1957-58. Prior to assuming the chairmanship of the Development Committee, Pendergast worked behind the scene developing various scholarship funds. The College Development Committee was instrumental in acquisition of the college's largest single gift ever, a 300-acre farm in Putnam County, which was sold for more than one million dollars.

Barton Blotter

A total of 11 backpacks containing more than $800 in books and other valuables were stolen on campus during the past week. Several were taken from the pigeonhole book rack in the campus store. Other common locations where these thefts occurred were around athletic facilities at Barton Hall, Teagle Hall and Schoellkopf Stadium.

Seven veterinary bags, containing drugs and instruments with contents valued at about $7,000 were stolen between 7:30 and 8 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 13, in the parking area next to N-Barn at the vet school.

Five bicycles, including one valued at $800, were taken from racks at various locations on campus during the past week.

Other thefts included a $200 trash receptacle, a State of Ohio license plate from a car parked on the north side of West Dorms, a green love seat valued at $175 from Sage Hall, a pearl ring, two boxes of carpenter tools, two checks made out for a total of $500, and a $7,000 car from the parking lot at the veterinary college. The car was recovered the following day, Sunday, Sept. 14 with nothing found missing.

There were 29 larcenies, two burglaries, two cases of criminal mischief and two incidents of harassment reported on campus for the period beginning Thursday, Sept. 12 and ending Sept. 17.

Survey Shows Good Response for Libraries

Concern for Ability to Maintain Collections

Initial analysis of faculty and graduate student response to a survey evaluating Cornell University Libraries shows for the most part a favorable reaction to the system's research collections but concern for the University Libraries' ability to maintain the currency of the collections.

This was pointed out in a statement released last week by University Librarian Louis E. Martin. Made during the 1979-80 academic year, the survey was part of a larger study on collection growth and development being conducted under a grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation.

Although all of the data have not been tabulated, a large number of tables and cross tabulations have been compiled in a draft report, which is available at the Reference Desk in Olin Library.

After further analysis of the data by the library staff, conclusions and recommendations will be made and published, probably by early spring, Martin said.

He made the following status report: "In comparison with other institutions 45 percent of the faculty and research staff respondents found Cornell better than other research libraries in which they had worked, about 24 percent evaluated Cornell not as good, and 18 percent ranked Cornell about the same.

"Graduate students rated the libraries more favorably than the faculty with more than 61 percent indicating an opinion that Cornell was better than another institution with which they were familiar. Like the faculty, the graduate student appraisal of the collections indicated that respondents were most concerned about the currency of the collection. Both groups indicated greater satisfaction with the breadth and depth of collections in their fields of research.

"The response indicated that approximately 67 percent of faculty use of the libraries was for research with about 30 percent directly attributable to their teachings. Graduate students use was about 83 percent for research and slightly over 5 percent for teaching.

"As would be expected, graduate students in the sample tended to visit the libraries more frequently than the faculty with graduate student respondents averaging 4.7 visits per week while faculty visits averaged 2.7 per week."

Martin pointed out that further analysis would center on breakdowns by colleges and schools, or by graduate fields. This would enable the libraries to focus attention on specific areas of the collection that needed improvement to meet research requirements. Martin stated, for example, that preliminary findings with respect to the evaluation of the collections in engineering, physical sciences, and mathematics indicated a lesser degree of satisfaction than in other academic areas.

"Because the survey was part of the study of the collections and other research resources of the libraries carried out under the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation grant and because faculty interests largely determine the academic program of teaching and research, as well as the composition of current library acquisitions, the survey concentrated on faculty and graduate research. Undergraduates were included in a small sample of users that were interviewed in an on-site survey that was part of the larger study. If undergraduates were to be intensively surveyed the emphasis would be on the effectiveness of library services rather than on the collections.

David Gautschi, a professor in the School of Business and Public Administration, designed and directed the survey and in consultation with library staff prepared the questionnaires. They were addressed to all the faculty and research staff and to a two-thirds sample of the graduate students enrolled in the Graduate School. Martin indicated that Gautschi was hoping for an approximately one-third return of the questionnaires distributed. The actual response rate, however, far exceeded this with over 50 percent return in the case of both faculty and graduate student groups.

Regardless of the views of the library system that might be reflected by individual respondents, Martin feels that the response to what was a long and rather complicated questionnaire expressed a keen sense on the part of the faculty and graduate students that the libraries were of critical importance to their academic interests.

Publicity Major Weapon Against Sexual Harassment

next printing of the brochure Students and Title IX produced by his office.

In April, the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission published interim guidelines that offered this description of sexual harassment:

"Unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature...."

The federal guidelines stated that sexual harassment is an act of sex discrimination within the meaning of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, and that employers may be held legally liable for such misconduct by supervisors.

Sexual harassment of students was held by one federal court to be a violation of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. If an institution has no formal administrative procedure for bringing complaints to the attention of responsible officials, it may violate Title IX.

There are several procedures in place at Cornell, and they may be set in motion through a number of channels: University Ombudsman, Personnel Services, OEO, Dean of Students, Dean of the Faculty, deans of the various schools and colleges, faculty advisers, department chairpersons.

Campus publicity is a major weapon against sexual harassment, according to several national researchers. At universities where administrators make widely circulated statements about sexual harassment — and where it is brought into the public arena — everyone is forewarned and there is likely to be support for institutional policies and procedures.

In 1979, the president of the University of Washington inserted an order in the university code stating that sexual harassment is considered to be sex discrimination — and could lead to firing.

An adjunct ombudsman at Washington, who estimated she had dealt with one case of sexual harassment per week before the president's order, reported the number of complaints dropped to about one per month after.

Efforts to highlight and eradicate sexual harassment are taking a variety of directions: A University of New Hampshire sophomore is developing a handbook on sexual harassment and abuse for use by students, faculty and staff through a grant from the National Student Education Fund.

The National Advisory Council on Women's Educational Programs, established by Congress in 1974, has been gathering data in an effort to develop ways in which the federal government can assist in protecting students from sexual harassment in high school and college. It will issue a report in October that urges the Department of Education's Office of Civil Rights to establish a policy that would specifically forbid sexual harassment of students as a violation of Title IX.

Rhodes' Statement on Sexual Harassment

Following is a statement on the subject of sexual harassment issued during the summer by President Frank Rhodes.

A number of recent cases have come to my attention involving supervisory employees or faculty members who have misused their positions of authority to make sexual demands upon junior employees or students. Indeed, the problem has become a national concern.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has published interim guidelines which state that sexual harassment is an act of discrimination on the basis of sex within the meaning of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, and that employers may be held legally liable for such misconduct by supervisory employees. Such harassment is defined as:

Unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature...when (1) submission to such conduct is made either explicitly or implicitly a term or condition of an individual's employment, (2) submission to or rejection of such conduct by an individual is used as the basis for employment decisions affecting such individual, or (3) such conduct has the purpose or effect of substantially interfering with an individual's work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment.

While the EEOC guidelines apply only in the context of employment, sexual harassment of students by faculty members presents an analogous and equally grievous situation. At least one federal court has held such harassment to violate Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972.

A university community cannot flourish in the absence of an understood and accepted code of conduct which ensures a basic civility and respect for the dignity of every individual. We must make it unmistakably clear to every member of the faculty, as well as every employee and student, that sexual harassment will not be tolerated.

Clearly, the basic integrity of the university is threatened by a teacher who intimidates a junior colleague or a student by demanding sexual favors as a condition of academic advancement. A supervisor who harasses an employee and misuses a position of authority to accomplish a private purpose is no less destructive and corrupting.

We cannot ignore the problem or pretend that such conduct does not happen at Cornell. Accordingly, I call upon every academic and administrative official of the University to give this subject the serious attention it requires. Students and faculty members should be encouraged to bring complaints to an appropriate University office, which may include the Ombudsman, the Office of Equal Opportunity, or an appropriate adviser, department chairperson or dean. Non-academic employees should be directed to the Ombudsman, the Office of Equal Opportunity or the Department of Personnel Services. Complainants should be assured that their concerns will be treated with appropriate confidentiality and that they will not suffer retaliation by any University official for having reported the incident.

I shall need your help in bringing the University's position in this matter to the attention of the widest possible audience. Moreover, I urge you to use your authority to take appropriate action when cases of this kind come to your attention. There must be no mistake about our determination to do everything possible to eradicate sexual harassment from our campus.

Brief Reports

A Penny Shortage Afflicts University

The University has been hit by a penny shortage, according to Frieda Alexander, university cashier.

"We have been very short of pennies for the past three or four months and the situation is getting worse. Our main problem is that Cornell's bank, the First Bank and Trust, does not belong to the Federal Reserve, and consequently we're only getting about $50 in pennies in a day," Alexander said.

Any Cornell employee, student or faculty member who would like to turn in his/her collection of pennies may bring them to the Cashier's Office, second floor of Day Hall.

Since they do not have a machine to count pennies, the people in the Cashier's Office would prefer to have them already packaged. They will be glad to supply the packages. They are, however, willing to count and package the pennies if necessary.

Now It's Poultry And Avian Science

The university's department of poultry science has a new name, the department of poultry and avian sciences.

The name change was requested by members of the faculty because birds other than chickens, turkeys, and ducks are occasionally used in research. Research in the department focuses upon physiology, nutrition, genetics and reproduction, embryology, and disease. Other efforts in the department include agricultural engineering to mechanize production and handle economics, distribution and sales of poultry and eggs.

Poultry and avian sciences is one of 17 academic departments in the State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences.

Funded in 1907 by James E. Rice, it was known originally as the department of poultry husbandry. The first professor of poultry science in the nation, Rice is considered the dean of American poultry education.

Cornell was the first institution in the nation to offer a major in poultry husbandry (1903), as well as the first to offer a master's degree (1906), and a Ph.D. program (1922) in poultry science.

Wells First Holder Of Owings Chair

Jerry A. Wells has been elected the first holder of the Nathaniel and Margaret Owings Distinguished Alumni Memorial Professorship in Architecture.

He holds the chair as a result of being elected to a five-year term as chairman of the Department of Architecture in the College of Architecture, Art and Planning, by action of the University Board of Trustees.

The Owings chair was established last year with a gift from Margaret and Nathaniel Owings, the latter a founding partner of the architectural firm of Skidmore, Owings & Merrill. In addition, some 20 more distinguished alumni of the college have made commitments to help finance the professorship. It is the first chair endowed by alumni in the College of Architecture. Owings is a 1927 graduate of the college.

Wells joined the Cornell faculty in 1965 as an assistant professor and was elected associate professor in 1977. He also has practiced architecture in Ithaca with Wells/Koetter/Dennis since 1966.

Student Insurance Waivers Due Soon

All students who decline coverage by the university's health insurance plan must return their signed waiver forms by Friday, Sept. 26.

The Accident and Health Insurance Plan is for hospital, medical and outpatient services not available at Gannett Medical Center. The cost for the 12-month plan is $103.50 and includes a $20,000 major medical benefit.

All full-time registered students and those registered in absentia are automatically enrolled in the plan unless they sign a waiver. If the waiver is signed, it means that the student accepts responsibility for his or her medical costs.

Married students who are enrolled in the plan may also enroll their spouses and children. Deadline for enrollment of spouses and children is Sept. 30.

For further information contact the Student Insurance Representative at Gannett Health Center, 256-6363.

Cornellian's Work To Have Premiere

The world premiere of "Kenningar (Symphony No. 4)" by Steven Stucky, assistant professor of music at Cornell University, will take place Sept. 25 at the 14th Contemporary Music Festival at Indiana State University. The symphony will be premiered in a concert to be performed by the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra.

Stucky, who began composing at an early age, is a graduate of Baylor University. He earned advanced degrees at Cornell where he studied composition with Robert Palmer, Burrill Phillips and Karel Husa. From 1978 to 1980, Stucky was a member of the faculty at Lawrence University. He started teaching composition at Cornell this year.

In addition to composing numerous works for chamber groups, chorus and orchestra, Stucky has been active as a conductor of his own music and as a lecturer and writer on 20th-century music. He is a regular contributor to the quarterly journal "Notes," and his book "Witold Lutoslawski and His Music," was published by Cambridge University Press.

Stucky will be among several guest artists from all over the United States attending the Sept. 22-25 festival.

'Perspectives' First Symposium Subject

"Perspectives on Perspective," will be the first in a series of programs to be given this fall as part of a symposium on mathematics and art. The symposium will be sponsored by the Mathematics Department in cooperation with faculty from other departments and the Johnson Museum.

"Perspectives on Perspective," described as a cross-cultural discussion of the history of perspective and pictorial space and its effect on artists and mathematicians, will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 1, in Kaufmann Auditorium, Goldwin Smith Hall. H. Peter Kahn, professor of art history, and David W. Henderson, associate professor of mathematics, will lead the discussion. After the program refreshments will be served in the Temple of Zeus.

For further information on the symposium, contact Beverly West, coordinator, at 256-3576. A schedule of other programs will be published in next week's Chronicle.

Workshop Scheduled For English Tutors

A two-day workshop for tutors of English as a second language will be held Saturday, Sept. 27, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sunday, Sept. 28, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., in 202 Uris Hall.

The purpose of the workshop is to teach participants how to teach English to refugees, immigrants and other international members of the community, according to Jerry Wilcox, director of Cornell's International Student Office.

Those interested in registering should contact the Southeast Asia Refugee Committee, 120 Uris Hall, telephone 256-4031.

The workshop is sponsored by the Retired Senior Volunteer Program of Tompkins County (RSVP), the Southeast Asia Refugee Committee (SEARC) and the Literacy Volunteers of New York State, Inc.

Students Eligible For Design Award

Cornell Student Agencies is sponsor of a $2,000 contest for fourth and fifth year architecture students in the College of Architecture, Art and Planning.

The students will develop design ideas for the site at 409 College Avenue which currently houses the Vineyard Restaurant and the offices of Student Agencies, an organization totally independent of the university.

Owner of the site and existing building, Student Agencies will give $1,000 for the winning design. The remaining $1,000 will be awarded for other noteworthy design ideas, according to Kevin Townsell, secretary-treasurer of agencies.

Officials of the student agencies will meet with students in design classes taught by John P. Shaw and Lee Hodgden through the fall term to develop ideas on how the site could be best developed commercially and aesthetically, to enhance the changing character of Collegetown.

In addition to developing specific ideas for the site at 409 College Avenue, long-range consideration will be given to other properties owned by Student Agencies. These include Ruloff's Restaurant, Oliver's Delicatessen and Collegetown Bagels.

The development will include commercial, office and apartment spaces.

The initial design ideas are expected to be completed by the end of January, with prizes being awarded sometime in the Spring according to Townsell.

Agency officials said it is too early to tell when the actual construction will begin and whether the project would be largely renovation and expansion around existing facilities or all new construction.

New Vice Provost To Head Computing

Kenneth M. King, vice chancellor for University systems at the City University of New York, has been named as vice provost for computing.

The new post will give King responsibility for all academic and administrative computing at Cornell.

Serving as vice chancellor since 1978 for CUNY, King was responsible for computer and information systems as well as for television systems and institutional research and reporting at the 20-college system. From 1971 to 1978, he was professor and university dean for computer systems at CUNY.

The completion of a major study of data processing for the City of New York led to King's appointment as deputy director of operations and director of the Office of Computer Plans and Controls, a position he held from 1976 to 1978.

From 1962 to 1971, King managed the central computing facility at Columbia University while developing undergraduate and graduate curriculum in computer science. He has served as a staff member and manager of the IBM Watson Scientific Computing Laboratory at Columbia University and as a staff member of the IBM Systems Research Institute.

King received a bachelor of arts in physics from Reed College in 1951 and a Ph.D. in theoretical physics from Columbia University in 1962.

Domestic Violence Program Scheduled

A program on domestic violence, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 1, in the Moot Court Room of Myron Taylor Hall, is the first of a series of public issues to be discussed this fall through the auspices of the Cornell Women's Studies Program.

The featured speaker will be Jeanine Ferris Pirro, assistant district attorney of Westchester County, and chief of the Domestic Violence Prosecution Unit of the Westchester County District Attorney's Office.

Pat Valls, director of the Tompkins County Task Force on Battered Women, and Marjorie Olds, assistant district attorney of Tompkins County, will also speak. A discussion moderated by Ruth Siegel will follow the presentations. The Women's Law Coalition of Cornell will give a reception afterwards.

The program, free and open to the public, is being sponsored jointly by the Women's Studies Program, the Tompkins County Task Force for Battered Women, and the Women's Law Coalition.

Other topics in the series which will involve the cooperation of relevant local organizations are:

- Oct. 16, "Giving Birth" (to explore midwifery);
- Oct. 29, "Women's Issues in the 1980 Election;"
- Nov. 5, "Single Parenting;"
- Dec. 11, "Family Matters."

Labor Book Prize Award Is Made

"Black Detroit and the Rise of the UAW" by August Meier and Elliott Rudwick has been selected by the Philip Taft Labor History Award Committee as the best book on American labor history published in 1979.

Philip Taft was a labor historian at Brown University for 31 years. His death on Nov. 17, 1976, prompted a national committee of his friends and colleagues—chaired by Maurice Neufeld, professor in the New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations—to set up a fund and a prize in his honor.

Competition for this year's $600 prize was administered by the committee, whose members are chairman James O. Morris, Cletus Daniel and Gerd Korman, all of Cornell, Irving Bernstein of the University of California at Los Angeles and Sidney Fine of the University of Michigan.

August Meier is university professor of history at Kent State University, and Elliott Rudwick is professor of history and sociology there. Their long range study of the history of the NAACP led to "Black Detroit and the Rise of the UAW," published last year by Oxford University Press.

Sage Service

Richard Polenberg, professor of American history at Cornell University, will be the speaker at the Sage Chapel Interreligious Service at 11 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 28. His topic will be "Religion and Radicalism."

A member of the Cornell faculty since 1966, Polenberg served as chairman of the History Department from 1977 to 1980, and received the 1979 Clark Distinguished Teaching Award.

Polenberg is the author of several books, the most recent being "One Nation Divisible: Class, Race, and Ethnicity in the United States Since 1938."

Polenberg is currently president of Temple Beth-El.

Music will be provided by the Sage Chapel Choir under the direction of Donald R.M. Paterson, university organist and Sage Chapel Choirmaster.

Manuals Available

Copies of the updated Academic Appointment Manual covering all University regulations and policies concerning promotions, tenure and recruitment of faculty are available at the reference desks of Olin, Mann and the ILR libraries.

Alexander Lipson

Alexander Lipson, who taught Russian as an assistant professor at the Division of Modern Languages from 1965 to 1967, died in Boston on Sept. 12, 1980, after a long illness. Before coming to Cornell, he taught at M.I.T. and in private language courses which he organized in Cambridge; thereafter he held positions in Language Education at the Harvard Graduate School of Education and in Russian at Brandeis University.
