

The Personnel Planning/Program Board of Cornell is running a Campbell survey. This telephone poll will contact approximately 5 percent of the non-academic staff and employees for the purpose of better understanding the attitudes of this important section of the Cornell community. The survey began yesterday and will continue until Wednesday, March 8.

Working Women's Symposium

Woman of Year to Speak

Addie L. Wyatt, Time Magazine's Woman of the Year in 1976, will be the keynote speaker at the third annual Working Women's Symposium at Cornell University on Wednesday (March 8).

Wyatt, international vice president and director of the women's department of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of America, AFL-CIO, will speak at 4:30 p.m. in room 105 of the Conference Center of the New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations at Cornell.

Sponsored by the ILR Women's Caucus, the symposium will include a panel discussion following Wyatt's address and five workshops beginning at 8 p.m. in rooms 114 and 217 Ives Hall.

The afternoon panelists, who will also run the evening workshops, are Wyatt, Esther Bigler, a practicing labor lawyer from New York City; Eileen Hoffman, commissioner of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service in New York City; Pat Hurley, a 1977 Cornell graduate and now assistant to the director of industrial relations at Hollingsworth & Vose Co., Boston and Louise Spivack, corporate director of training with Bausch and Lomb in Rochester.

Workshop topics are: "Entering the World of Work: Day to Day Problems of Working Women," "Blue Collar Working Women: Needs and Perspectives," "Career Planning," "The Needs of White Collar and Professional Working Women" and "Careers, Family and Marriage?"

"The purpose of the symposium is three-fold," according to Lynn Paltrow, a junior in the ILR School and conference director for the women's caucus. "We want to talk about women in traditionally male fields, hear comments about how one gets started, and establish role models for women in ILR."

Wyatt, who is also vice president of the Coalition of Labor Union Women, "has built a highly successful labor-union career by speaking out effectively against sexual and racial discrimination in hiring, promotion and pay," according to Time.

She has persuaded the meat packing industry to promote women to jobs previously held only by men. Today, according to Wyatt, "there are women beef luggers, journeymen, butchers, hamboners and forklift operators, and almost all of them say that their new jobs are easier than what they had been doing and pay a lot more."

Now 52 years old, Wyatt started working at 17, putting lids on cans of stew at Armour and Co. in Chicago. In 1954 she became the first woman president of a packing house local. She was appointed one of the meat cutters' five international representatives, and in 1974 she was elected director of its new women's department.

Women
In Science
To Meet

The Cornell University chapter of Graduate Women in Science will meet at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 15, in 1108 Bradfield Hall, Cornell, for a tour of the facilities of the Division of Atmospheric Sciences.

Membership in Graduate Women in Science is open to any person who is or has been engaged in mathematical or scientific research, and all meetings are open to the public.

Skills Roster Serves Cornell

What do taxi company managers, geriatric recreational therapists, computer programmers, nutritionists, illustrators and French-speaking baby-sitters have in common? A place on the "jobs available" board at the Professional Skills Roster, a volunteer service housed in Sheldon Court in rooms donated by Cornell University.

"Over the years, hundreds of people have been referred to Cornell positions by the Roster," according to Nancy McKersie, Roster volunteer. "The Roster has listings from Cornell and many other Ithaca area Employers."

Organized in 1967 by Women in Science at Cornell, the agency was designed to help the professionally trained Ithaca housewife locate work in her field on a temporary or part-time basis. Over a decade later, the agency still strives to meet these needs, but its applicants now include many men as well as women, and an increasing number of applicants seek full-time work.

Although the Roster is almost historic here in Ithaca, it does serve as a prototype for similar agencies which have sprung up across the country in the past five years. Interest in the smaller employment agency catering to the special needs of the professionally trained was recognized early in Ithaca and fostered by dedicated friends and volunteers at the Roster.

The Roster welcomes job listings—either exotic or the bread and butter variety. Call 256-3758 weekday mornings or stop by the office located in Sheldon Court.

NSF Announces Support
Of Research Equipment

The National Science Foundation, concerned for a long time with providing adequate support for research equipment, will place special emphasis on equipment needs during FY78. This emphasis will involve efforts to upgrade or purchase equipment, including relatively inexpensive items, whose operation does not require large teams of researchers or very large amounts of money.

Although NSF has announced this as a special program, no additional funds have as yet been appropriated. Thus, all equipment requests will compete with proposals for regular research project support.

Applications will not be restricted to past or present recipients of NSF research grants. Proposals for research equipment should follow the format for scientific research proposals. They may be submitted by individual researchers or groups of investigators within the same department, from several departments, a school, an institution or a region. Concurrence of the department chairman and dean are required before the proposal can be submitted formally for the University by the Office of Academic Funding. There is no specific deadline for this program. Further details are available from the Office of Academic Funding, 123 Day Hall.

trol the organization, to BTO's emphasis on collecting usable data on real problems and the organization's efforts to keep those who participate in studies informed of the results.

Those North American data collection projects now using volunteer help—among them the Colonial Bird Register and Nest Record Card Program of the Laboratory of Ornithology, the Fish and Wildlife Service's annual Breeding Bird Survey and the North American Hawk Migration Association's fall and spring counts of migrating birds of prey—also offered suggestions for organizing successful programs.

"One of the major benefits to come out of the conference is a new appreciation of the potential resource available in amateur ornithologists and a commitment to work out a better way of getting amateurs and professionals together," said Douglas Lancaster, director of the Laboratory of Ornithology.

As a first step in that direction, the conference participants appointed an ad hoc committee to explore possibilities for cooperation and coordination between amateurs and professionals.

The committee chairman is

Harold Mayfield, past president of the American Ornithologists' Union. Other members are Jane Church, executive director of the Point Reyes Bird Observatory in California; Stephen Curtis of the migratory birds branch of the Canadian Wildlife Service; Michael Harwood, president of the North American Hawk Migration Association; Lancaster, representing the Laboratory of Ornithology; Chandler Hobbins, director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Breeding Bird Survey, and Arnold Small, president of the American Birding Association.

Students, Staff Meet In Receptions

A series of receptions designed to bring together Cornell University students, faculty, staff, executive staff and deans began this week, according to Ron Loomis, director of University Unions.

Loomis, who is coordinating the program, said the receptions will be held in a number of locations throughout the campus during the remainder of the semester. The first get-together was yesterday.

Students, faculty and staff will be receiving personal invitations. Participants will be randomly selected, but the purpose, Loomis said, is to achieve a mix of students and faculty from different schools and staff members from various departments.

The idea for the receptions originated with Vice Provost June M. Fessenden-Raden and William D. Gurowitz, vice president for campus affairs. Both felt that an increase in personal interactions among the various segments of the Cornell community would be beneficial. "It's something we wanted to start on an informal, yet regular basis," explained Raden.

Loomis said if the programs are well attended and seem to be effective, they may be continued next year.

Career Discussions With Alumni Set

Cornell University students will be able to meet with eight Cornell alumni to discuss their career experiences and opportunities on Friday, March 10, on the University campus.

Students can sign up through March 8 for the day-long program. Sign ups will be taken in Willard Straight Hall from noon until 2 p.m. and at the Career Center, 14 East Ave., from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The meetings with the alumni will be throughout the campus.

It will be possible to meet with as many as five different alumni during the day, according to Dale Rosenthal, president of Mortarboard Senior Honor Society, one of the five Cornell agencies conducting this Career Profiles Program.

Alumni on the program are William Ohaus '49, executive vice president of Ohaus Scale Corp.; James Stocker '51, vice president with Scott Paper Co.; Dana Friedman Tracy '73, associate director of the Coalition for Children & Youth; Clifford Whitcomb '43, senior vice president with Prudential Insurance Co.; Cynthia Jaffee McCabe '63, curator of exhibitions at the Hirschorn Museum & Sculpture Garden; John J. Meakem Jr. '58, executive vice president of COMBE, Inc.; and Alan Cohen '55, president of Site Engineers Co.

The program concludes with a wine and cheese reception to which all participants are invited. The reception will be from 4:30 to 6 p.m. at the Andrew D. White House.

Sponsors of the Career Profiles Program this year, in addition to Mortarboard, are the Class of 1978, the Cornell Internship Program, the Federation of Cornell Clubs and the Career Center.

More than 75 alumni have participated in the Career Profiles Program since it was begun in 1976. The programs are scheduled on campus twice each semester.

Campus Roads Closed

Two short roads on the Cornell campus through which vehicles are able to gain illegal access to restricted parking areas will be closed to all traffic between the hours of 7:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. Mondays through Fridays beginning Monday, March 6.

The roads are Schoellkopf Drive at its intersection with the Kite Hill parking lot and Wing Drive at its intersection with Tower Road.

According to William Wendt, director of transportation, the Campus Council Committee on Transportation has approved

Guerlac Room Dedication

Robert W. Purcell, chairman of the board of trustees of the University, speaks to a crowd assembled Tuesday for the dedication of the main living room, the former library of President White, at the Andrew D. White Center for the Humanities in honor of Henry Guerlac '32, the Goldwin Smith Professor of the History of Science Emeritus, who was director of the Society for the Humanities from 1970 to 1977. Guerlac is in the front row, third from the right.

Three Named Athletes of Week

Basketball player Mike Davis, and women's and men's hockey players Cheryl Hines and Brock Tredway were named Athletes of the Week by the Red Key Society of Cornell University last week. The Red Key began making selections two weeks ago and will continue to do so for the remainder of the school year.

Hines, from Ithaca, was selected for the week ending Feb. 11. The sophomore skater scored one goal in a 5-3 victory over Colby and came back the following day with the hat trick against the same team as Cornell won, 3-2, in overtime.

Davis and Tredway were the Red Key Athletes for the week ending Feb. 18. Davis, a sophomore from Philadelphia, scored 27 points in a 71-63 victory over Yale and 25 in an 84-66 triumph over Brown.

Tredway of Highland Creek, Ont. scored a goal in a Big Red 3-0 win over RPI and had two more tallies in a 6-3 victory over Brown to lift Cornell into first place in the Ivy League.

Food Industry Holds Training Workshop

A Train-the-Trainer Workshop for food industry personnel and training directors who want to inject new life into their employee training programs will be held on campus, March 14-16.

Emphasis will be on the use of all types of audiovisual equipment and materials, development of better communication skills, and integration of several new techniques into company training programs.

On the workshop staff are Wendell Earle, professor of food industry management; William Frank, professor of industrial and labor relations; Gene German, food distribution specialist; George Hayward and Robert Nolan, specialists in food industry management, and Brian Earle, lecturer in communication arts.

Industrialism In China Is Topic

Thomas Rawski, a specialist on China's economy, will give a talk at 4:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 8, in G-08 Uris Hall. His lecture, "Producer Goods and Industrialization in 20th-Century China," will analyze the role of technological change in China's rise to industrialism.

For Rawski the visit will be a return home. He grew up in Ithaca and attended Cornell, receiving his B.A. in 1965. He subsequently completed his Ph.D. in economics at Harvard University in 1972 and now is a member of the Department of Economics at University of Toronto. This talk is sponsored by the China-Japan Program.

Income Tax Assistance Available

A representative of the U.S. Federal Income Tax Division and New York State Income Tax Bureau will be available in the International Student Office, 200 Barnes Hall from 12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Thursday, March 9, to assist international students and staff with especially complicated income tax problems.

Assistance in filling out tax forms of a routine nature is available at the local office of the Internal Revenue Service, Babcock Hall, Terrace Hill, from 8:15 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Insect Survival Slide/Talk

Thomas Eisner, professor of neurobiology and behavior at Cornell University and holder of a Jacob Gould Schurman professorship, will give a slide-illustrated talk on "Survival: Insects and Their Avian Predators" at 7:45 p.m. Monday, March 6, at the Cornell Laboratory of Ornithology, 159 Sapsucker Woods Road. The lecture is free and open to the public.

Eisner, best known for his research on the behavior, ecology and physiology of insects, frequently documents his research findings photographically. Two of his photos appear in the most recent issue of National Geographic magazine.

these measures in an attempt to strengthen traffic enforcement by reducing the number of vehicles gaining illegal access to restricted parking areas in the interior campus by means of these roadways.

War on Waste

Here is one of the many repeat suggestions for saving money that have crossed the desk of the University's War on Waste Committee.

Many companies use toll-free 800 numbers for their businesses. A listing of all known companies having this service is in the front of the staff directory for your use.

If you have other suggestions, please submit them to Jack W. Lowe, B-7 Day Hall. If yours is a good one, it might win a cash prize.

During academic recesses and in the summer, the Traffic Bureau will be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, unless otherwise announced.

"It is hoped that these extended office hours will prove convenient and useful to those who need to visit the Traffic Bureau," according to Sally VanEtten, bureau supervisor.

Public Safety Actions Defended

Editor:

On Feb. 16, 1978, an individual saw fit to defame the Cornell University Department of Public Safety and the Student Service Aid Program, with some injuriously misleading comments. I am a Student Service Aid with the department, and feel it is necessary to set the record straight. These are my opinions and not those of the department.

First, this individual complained about the cost for his permit, and the large amount of paperwork he had to deal with in order to obtain an S permit. The Traffic Bureau regulations clearly state that only a department may purchase such a permit. So, I question whether this individual had to fill out much paperwork, let alone pay for the permit his department bought him.

Secondly, this individual complained of the rampant bureaucracy at the Traffic Bureau. While it may be true that the rules and regulations of the Traffic Bureau are similar to a form 1040, and bureaucracy is widespread, it is a common characteristic of the university as a whole, and of real life. Quite frankly, I found my form 1040 fairly simple to fill out. The truth is, that the bureaucracy would be greatly reduced if it were not for the many people who are afraid to expend a little energy and walk around campus, instead of attempting to park at the front door every place they go. Along the same line, this individual would probably be dumbfounded if he were to walk around with one of the "terrible ticket givers," and see the astounding numbers of violations of clearly posted regulations.

Thirdly, this same individual complained about not having ten minutes to deal with the tremendous bureaucracy he found. I happened to be present the same day this individual received his tickets, when he appeared at the Department of Public Safety office. At the moment, he did have plenty of time to childishly berate all the officers present. All this individual had to do, was politely explain the problem to the person in charge of traffic control, and I am sure the tickets would have been voided on the spot. But no, the individual did not have the time. He again found a half hour of time later in the day, to complain to the lieutenant in charge, over the phone. The lieutenant then explained to just mail the tickets to the Traffic Bureau, as it was an obvious mistake and would be rectified.

Finally, while this individual feels that the Student Aids are "terrible ticket slappers," at the rate of 685 tickets for every three and a half hours, let me remind him that we are students at Cornell University, attempting to earn some extra money to help defray the costs of an education. (We do not receive a commission.) The truth is, that sequential numbers of tickets are signed out by officers, including Student Aids, at an average of approximately twenty-five apiece. The fact is that SA-10 wrote only thirty-one tickets in three hours and twenty minutes.

Granted, two blatant mistakes were made by the student who wrote this individual two parking summonses. But, that is not evidence enough to publicly discredit the same student, other Student Aids, and the Department of Public Safety. This individual was correct in a couple of statements though. Students do hand out tickets while our stalwart guardians of the peace are out in their powerful machines with woo-woo sirens. But, the poor boob who made a left-hand turn onto East Avenue (not Central Avenue) at 4:45 p.m. may have run over some poor boob crossing the street, expecting the car to follow the rules and not turn.

This individual was also correct by stating that the men in their powerful machines are trained officers. And, they deserve the respect that a trained officer of the law should get. This individual fails to remember that the trained officers, in their powerful machines with woo-woo sirens may have to save his life some day. And, if the officers cannot respond quick enough, because some boob parked his car in the way, (even if he does have an S sticker) who is to take the blame? This individual should be happy that the officers have the time to handle complaints and emergencies, because the students are doing some of the menial, less important jobs.

Final Statler Concert Set

The last performance on the Statler concert series for this season will be a recital by Lynn Harrell, cello, and Paul Schenly, piano at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, March 14 in the Alice Statler Auditorium at Cornell University.

Harrell and Schenly will perform two sonatas together: Beethoven's Sonata in G minor, Op. 5, No. 2 and Brahms' Sonata in F Major, Op. 99. Harrell will play Bach's Suite in C Major, and then Schenly will perform Schubert's Impromptu in D-flat Major, Op. 142.

Harrell, in his early 30s, has already appeared as guest soloist with a number of orchestras including the New York Philharmonic, Chicago Symphony, London Symphony and the National Symphony of Washington. He has also been a regular participant in the festivals at Marlboro, Stratford, Aspen, Ravinia and at the Casals Festival in Puerto Rico.

Harrell received the Avery Fisher Award in January 1975. Given to an outstanding young artist, the award includes a cash payment and performances with the New York Philharmonic, the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center and a recital on New York's Great Performer Series.

He is also the recipient of the Merriweather Post Award, the Piatigorsky Award, and, at the age of 18, was a finalist in the second Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow.

A Ford Foundation award allowed Harrell to commission and premiere a major new work for cello and orchestra in collaboration with composer Donald Erb for the 1975-76 season. In 1974, Harrell made his debut with the London Symphony Orchestra, and his European tour culminated in three joint recitals with pianist Vladimir Ashkenazy at the Queen Elizabeth Hall in London.

Paul Schenly, also a winner of the Avery Fisher Award in 1976, made his debut in 1972 with the Cleveland Orchestra and has since been soloist with major U.S. orchestras including those of Chicago, Los Angeles, Houston, Utah and Miami. He has also performed as recitalist in many major cities.

In Europe, Schenly has performed with the Rotterdam Philharmonic and the Amsterdam Philharmonic. He has also toured the United States as guest soloist with the Rotterdam Philharmonic.

Schenly received the Young Artists Award which enabled him to play with the Oakland Symphony and in the National Competition of the Young Musicians Foundation. He holds a masters degree in music from the Cleveland Institute of Music where he studied with the late Victor Babin.

Tickets go on sale starting Monday, Feb. 27 at the Lincoln Hall ticket office, open 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., 256-5144.

'Cibola' Combines Dance and Art

Dancer and choreographer Joyce Morgenroth and painter Barbara Page Cooke have collaborated in a new performance piece titled "Cibola" to be presented at 8:15 p.m. March 9 at Cornell University's Herbert F. Johnson Museum of Art.

"Cibola" is based on the quest for the seven fabulous cities of Cibola by Coronado and other 16th-century explorers of the Southwest. Cooke, an art instructor at Cornell, created the paintings especially for this performance.

The dance, choreographed by Cornell dance instructor Morgenroth, will be accompanied by the live performance of the Ithaca College Percussion Ensemble, directed by William Youhass. Musicians are Barbara Merjan, Robert Patterson, Brian Rothmeier and Mark Zettler. Dancers are Karen Bell, Janice Kovar, and Sue Penney.

University Ethics: Openness Urged

Editor:

On Saturday, Feb. 11, Cornell held its second annual community symposium. The topic was "Ethics and the Changing World." Cornell President Frank H.T. Rhodes, who delivered the keynote address, chose to speak on the subject of "Ethics and the University."

In analyzing the university's mission, Dr. Rhodes concluded that there is no a priori reason for a university to subscribe to value neutrality. Offering his own view, he suggested that faculty members should encourage value formation and clarification in their students with due regard for diversity and pluralism. Dr. Rhodes delivered his remarks with grace and eloquence.

I write not to comment on what was said at this lecture, but rather to discuss what was not said. As Dr. Rhodes acknowledged in his conclusion, he chose not to speak about the university as an investor, purchasing agent, employer, or land grant institution. His lecture considered what goes on inside the confines of the university. It did not address the ethical issues raised by the existence and maintenance of the university as an institutional entity.

What goes on inside the university is of great importance. An inspiring professor, for example, can transform a mere room into a place of learning. And yet a university must be judged not only by its words, but by its deeds as well.

If we are to examine the subject of ethics and the university, then we must consider the impact of such issues as our institution's investments. Cornell has over $71 million invested in corporations operating in the racially oppressive Republic of South Africa. Such investments do not merely yield a financial gain for the university; rather, they cost us a price as well. That price can be measured as the difference between the loftiness of our words and the lowliness of our deeds. The price is that of our own hypocrisy; and that alone is a heavy price to pay for an institution purporting to hold truth and honesty among its highest values.

Despite this situation, our university's leaders have in the past steered clear of the issue of investments and social responsibility. Our trustees, for example, have consistently refused to discuss this issue in an open forum before the university community.

If we are to seriously grapple with the subject of ethics and the university, then we cannot afford to ignore the issues involved with the university as an investor, purchasing agent, employer, or land grant institution. With the South African investments issue now looming larger than ever, we cannot afford to ban this subject from our university dialogue. I choose then to consider Dr. Rhodes keynote address as an eloquent introduction to what will hopefully be an ongoing discussion on this subject in the coming months by our university's trustees, administrators, faculty, students and staff.

Children Cost More

Raising a child to the age of 18 at a moderate standard of living now costs $54,000, according to statistics compiled by the N.Y. State College of Human Ecology at Cornell University. This covers only the direct costs of food, clothing, housing, public education, and medical expenses.

Robin Douthitt, graduate student in consumer economics and housing, said total costs also would include any income given up to raise the child and the cost of extra household work. College also would be extra.

Adviser Gives Notice

Editor:

I am the listed adviser of a student organization, the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi. The chapter seems to have dissolved, which is basically its members' business, but I'd like to perform formal burial rites if they're appropriate, or resume acquaintance with the entity if it survives.

Letters to its recent officers are not answered. All relationships can benefit from an element of laissez-faire, but enough now. This constitutes formal notice of abandonment by its adviser unless I record some stirring among its members.

'The Works' Given In Dance Series

A residency and performance by modern dancer and choreographer Jennifer Muller and her company, The Works, will be presented March 7-9 as the third event of the Cornell Dance Series.

The company will perform a three-act piece by Muller entitled "Beach" at 8:15 p.m. Thursday, March 9, at the Strand Theatre. A lecture demonstration will be held at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday, March 8, in Cornell's Barnes Hall.

Muller is a graduate of the Juilliard School and has performed as a principal dancer with the Jose Limon Dance Company from 1963 to 1971. In 1968 she joined the Louis Falco Company as associate director and principal dancer. During the next seven years, she added many of her own works to that company's repertory.

Established in 1974, Muller's company, The Works, toured the country and abroad, performing Muller's choreography, which Deborah Jowitt of the Village Voice praised in a review: "When it comes to making dances, Jennifer Muller is almost too generous. Her dancers, glowing and zesty, hurl their dancing into the air as if we were a starving multitude and they the good providers."

Tickets for the concert are $3.50 and $2.50 for students and senior citizens and are available at Nippenose, the Strand Theatre, and the Willard Straight box office. Admission for the lecture demonstration is $1.50 at the door.

Women's Studies' Contest

The Women's Studies Program at Cornell is offering the Mary B. Knoblauch Prize of $75 for the best essay by a Cornell student on the history or the problems, present and future, of the struggle for equal rights for women.

The competition is open to all Cornell students, and the deadline for essays is noon Friday, April 14. For more information on the competition, contact the Women's Studies Program Office, 431 White Hall or phone 256-6480.

Free Concert Series Planned

A series of Cornell University concerts from March 4 to 10 will feature some infrequently heard musical instruments. All of the events, in Barnes Hall, are free to the public.

On Saturday, March 4, at 8:15 p.m. and on Sunday, March 5, at 4 p.m., Kenneth Cooper will play several works for solo harpsichord: sonatas by Handel and Domenico Scarlatti, and excerpts from Handel's "Water Music." Cornell's Sonya Monosoff will join him in performing violin and harpsichord sonatas by Jean-Marie Leclair, Vivaldi and Bach.

Known both as a musicologist and performer specializing in 18th-century music, Cooper has recently been hailed as "an outstanding player" by Hi-Fi Magazine for his Vanguard recording of Scarlatti sonatas.

Monosoff is well known to local audiences for her many appearances as a soloist, member of the Amade Trio, in chamber music concerts, and for her recordings of early music.

At 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, March 7, Marta Fabian of Hungary will perform a cimbalom recital. She is the youngest and one of the foremost interpreters of the instrument, a Hungarian-style dulcimer. Her program selections range from music of the 16th century to the present.

Fabian, born in Budapest in 1946, studied at the Bartok Conservatory and is a 1967 graduate of the Liszt Academy of Music.

She is soloist with the Budapest Chamber Ensemble, which specializes in contemporary works, and also soloist in the Berlin Komische Oper production of Kodaly's "Hary Janos."

On Friday, March 10, at 8:15 p.m., Malcolm Bilson of the Cornell Music Department will present a concert on the fortepiano, the piano which existed in the late 18th century. Bilson will play two Haydn sonatas (G Major, Hob. 39 and E minor, Hob. 34), Sonata in D Major, K. 576 by Mozart, Sonata in D minor ("Tempest") by Beethoven, and Fantasy in C Major by C.P.E. Bach. All are 18th-century composers.

Cross-Country Intramural Ski-Off

It was a great day for cross country skiing, dull gray sky, spitting snow, temperature about 18 degrees and a foot of white-on-the-ground. In other words, it was lousy. It was lousy enough for 130 members of the scissor-legged aficionados of the skinny skis to register for the four-mile course through, around and over Cornell's golf course. This event, the one and only intramural cross-country ski-off of the season, took place Saturday, Feb. 18, and even if only 79 contestants did finish the course, it was one of those things where everyone had a great time of it.

For the record books, Tom Little, a grad student in the law school, finished with a time of 22:41, best time for the men. Martha Wood of Animal Science set the best time for women with 28:40.

Golden Phone Award Announced

The Golden Phone Award went to the Graduate School of Business and Public Administration for the largest percentage increase in pledges over last year in Cornell's phonathon fund-raising drive held in February. B&PA had a 73.5 percent increase over 1977. The phone, donated by Western Electric and the New York Telephone Co., is being received by Jacob Simon, a senior B&PA phoner; Neal Shea, also a senior phoner in the school; H. Justin Davidson, dean of B&PA; Charles Wolf, a senior in B&PA who organized the school's phoners, and Marian Weinflash, still another of the senior phoners from the school. A total of 204 University students made calls for eight nights. They contacted 1,768 alumni who made pledges totalling more than $68,000. Dave Liberatore, a senior in the New York State College of Human Ecology, was the overall phonathon chairman.

Public Library Needs Help Moving

By MARY MCGINNIS
Coordinator, CIVITAS

The Tompkins County Library in downtown Ithaca needs help for the next few weeks. The library is reorganizing to provide more room for the children's department and to relocate all newspapers and periodicals in one place. Volunteers are needed to mount the art reproduction display panels at a new location, to take apart and reassemble shelves and other library furniture in new locations, to clean shelves and furniture, to transport books, newspapers and periodicals within the building, and to shelve books and other library materials.

Library work will go on from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday. Come to CIVITAS, 125 Anabel Taylor Hall, to make arrangements to help.

Willard Psychiatric Center is also working on the relocation and reorganization of its library used by patients. Books need to be unpacked and shelved. In addition, the Willard Cemetery has been neglected for a long time and become badly overgrown. Heavy clearing work needs to be done as soon as the snow goes, followed by more careful manicuring and maintenance work. A fine project on a spring day for the strong and energetic. CIVITAS can put you in touch and help your group get organized.

Volunteers are needed in case of possible future flooding in Fall Creek. If you are willing to be on call in case a flooding emergency occurs again, register with CIVITAS now. Both the city of Ithaca and the Ithaca schools may need help, and often the call for assistance comes to us at the last minute. If you are willing to stand by to assist if needed, we would like to know now.

Located in downtown Ithaca, it is designed to provide an alternative to institutionalization and serve as both a comfortable living situation and a learning experience for all those involved. The current staff is now seeking students interested in living at Evergreen this summer and next fall. Perhaps you would like to volunteer this semester to learn more about this program before committing yourself. For more information call Marty, Sara, Rich, or Chris at Evergreen (273-0980); or come to CIVITAS, 125 Anabel Taylor Hall, and we will put you in touch.

HIGH SCHOOL TUTORS IN MATH AND SCIENCE NEEDED: Several Ithaca High students whose class schedules have been badly disrupted by the winter flooding need help with physics, chemistry, algebra and geometry. An hour or two of your time would be really appreciated on a mutually convenient schedule.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON BOWLING for handicapped children and adults. Bowling program for handicapped children (1 to 3 p.m.) and for handicapped adults (3:30 to 5:30 p.m.) needs helpers for bowling and scoring. Local bowling lanes within walking distance to Collegetown.

'Sojourners' Editor at Sage

Jim Wallis, editor of the magazine "Sojourners" (formerly the "Post American"), will be the speaker at the Sage Chapel convocation at 11 a.m. Sunday, March 5. His topic will be "The Gospel in a Hard Time."

Wallis was graduated from Michigan State University in 1970 with a B.A. degree in history, political science and sociology. He was active in the civil rights and anti-war struggles of the late 60s. He attended the Trinity Evangelical Divinity School where he and several other students founded the "Post American."

Today, "Sojourners" is known as a magazine of biblical radicalism which deals with current social and economic issues. Wallis is one of the founders of Sojourners Fellowship, an ecumenical church community in Washington, D.C., and serves in the pastoral leadership of the community.

He is one of the principal drafters of the Chicago Declaration issued by Evangelicals for Social Action in 1973. He is involved with other community leaders throughout the country and internationally in ongoing dialogue and action toward the renewal of the church.

Music will be provided by the Sage Chapel Choir under the direction of Thomas Sokol, professor of music and University director of choral music. Organist will be William Cowdery, graduate assistant.

"Radical Discipleship" is the topic of his lecture for the Cornell Graduate Christian Forum at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 4, in the Founders Room of Anabel Taylor Hall.

On Sunday at 8 p.m. Wallis will give the Thorp Lecture entitled "Conversion and the Nuclear Crisis," also in the Founders Room, and sponsored by the Centre for Religion, Ethics and Social Policy (CRESP).

Charismatic Renewal Movement Meeting

The "charismatic renewal movement" within Christian churches will be the focus of a regional fellowship meeting at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the auditorium of Anabel Taylor Hall at Cornell University.

Sponsored by the Cornell Roman Catholic community, the event will be the first regional meeting held at Cornell, though it is the third in a series.

The "charismatic movement" is a spiritual renewal within Christian churches, according to W. Jack Lewis, director of Cornell United Religious Work. The main purpose of the meeting is to encourage the growth and unity of charismatic prayer groups, he said. While most of the groups participating are Roman Catholic, the meeting is open to all.

The service will begin with a talk by two Cornell students explaining the charismatic renewal movement. They are Millard Baublitz, a graduate student in the College of Engineering, and Tom Grden, a senior in the College of Architecture, Art and Planning.

Jim Connolly, S.J., University Roman Catholic chaplain, will deliver a sermon on "Christian Commitment: Beyond the Sunday Obligation." Connolly has been in the renewal movement of the Christian church since its beginning 10 years ago.

A eucharistic celebration in the worship style of the charismatic renewal will be led by Tom Schmidt, C.S.S.R. Schmidt serves as chairman of the Liaison Committee for the Charismatic Renewal in Rochester.

There will be an opportunity for questions at the end of the service, along with refreshments.

Ice Sculpture at Cornell

An environmental ice sculpture has been created on the south lawn of the Herbert F. Johnson Museum of Art. The artist is Phyllis Dukes, who will receive her M.F.A. from Syracuse University in May. "Ice Tapestry II," 8 feet high and 32 feet long, was made with posts driven into the ground and jute fiber wrapped around them to form a woven support for the ice. The fiber was then sprinkled with water over a period of four hours in 20 degree weather. Dukes is documenting "the whole life of the piece," with photographs and notes on changes. She considers this work to be "a kind of earth art whose first life is brief but whose memory exists for a much longer period through documentary photographs."

Classics Alumna To Give Lectures

Helen North, a 1942 Cornell University graduate and now chairman of the Classics Department at Swarthmore College, will present a public lecture and a public seminar at Cornell on Monday (March 6) and Tuesday (March 7).

On Monday, North's lecture topic will be "Combing and Curling: 'Orator Summus Plato.'" She will speak at 4:30 p.m. in 110 Ives Hall. The lecture is sponsored by the Committee on University Lectures, the Society for the Humanities and the Department of Classics.

On Tuesday, the subject of North's seminar will be "A Platonic Argument Against Rhetoric in Greece and Rome." The seminar will be at 4 p.m. in the Andrew D. White House.

North holds three degrees from Cornell—bachelor's in 1942, master's in 1943 and Ph.D. in 1945. Now the Kenan Professor at Swarthmore, she has been on the faculty there since 1948.

In 1969, North received the Charles J. Goodwin Award of Merit of the American Philological Association. That same year she also received the Harbison Prize of the Danforth Foundation.

North is the author of "Sophrosyne: Self Knowledge and Self-Restraint in Greek Literature" among other publications, and she has translated and edited numerous others, including John Milton's "Second Defense of the English People."
