

I look very racially ambiguous. So I'm able to sort of like in different situations use... either being half Asian or some sort of racial other. Um when it is to my advantage. And other times I can pass as white. Um and I until I realized I was doing that would just sort of um per situation just use it without realizing that I could. It would just be like that was the situation that I was in and that was just sort of how I identified. And um it wasn't a conscious thing. More recently I've begun to realize that's something that I do and been more aware of that.