YOU BUY synthetic organic chemicals almost every time you buy anything!

For example, let's look at a car. The weather-resistant finish is probably made from synthetic resins. There's a plastic interlayer in the safety glass. Tetraethyl lead in gasoline keeps the engine from knocking. In winter, an anti-freeze protects the cooling system. Brakes depend on hydraulic fluids—and already you may have synthetic rubber tire-treads. All of these things are made with synthetic organic chemicals produced by CARBIDE AND CARBON CHEMICALS CORPORATION.

You'll find chemicals from this organization in the drug store... in vitamins, cosmetics, antiseptics, and aspirin. You'll find them in the dry-goods store... in rayon and other kinds of cloth. In the furniture store, they are present in plywood, and as artificial leather. In the grocery store, the hardware store, the dry cleaner's are things made with synthetic organic chemicals.

Within a single generation, this Chemicals Corporation has developed, and made available in commercial quantities, more than 160 different synthetic organic chemicals... and in collaboration with other Units of UCC, is helping to make these and many other products more plentiful and useful.

The story of synthetic organic chemistry... this building up of chemical compounds from simpler compounds or their elements... is still in its opening chapter. Technically-minded men and women can obtain further information by writing for Booklet P-9 "Synthetic Organic Chemicals."

“I Want to See the Boss”

These well known words have a significance beyond their normal customer usage. Their very existence is one of those frequently overlooked indices of private enterprise.

The Constitution does not say the customer is always right,—but what a valuable privilege it is to be a customer rather than a mere consumer. The difference is the option to pick and choose versus the obligation to take it and like it.

Under this American system of business for customers and by customers, this country has advanced and prospered. The alert and ambitious have found some reward for their industry and enterprise. Even the lazy and inefficient have enjoyed a continuous rise in the standard of living. The right to be a customer seems well worth defending.

THIS is the first in a series of Co-op Columns. We'll be back once a month during the coming year with news about Campus doings as seen from our grandstand seat in the middle of things, and also with information about those Co-op specialties that appeal to all Cornellians, here and far away.

We're having a busy summer—lots of Navy men, a few Army men, lots of co-eds, and quite a few civilians. We try to serve them all with the things they need, which means everything from socks to sweetheart pins, and while we are usually short of cigarettes, candy, and camera film, in the main we are doing well.

By the way, the most popular co-ed costume this summer is a pair of dungarees and a man's shirt with the tails hanging down. The co-eds also like some new Writing Paper with their first name imprinted in the corner. We have sixty different names in stock and can get any name on short notice, so if you want to try it, send in 45c. Twenty-four folded sheets and envelopes, postpaid.

We've had lots of out-of-town requests for Drawing Sets and Slide Rules, and you might make a note that we can furnish both of these scarce items, if any of your family or friends are having trouble in locating them.

You probably remember George Doll's store on College Ave., and you may know that Mr. Doll has retired and that the Co-op has taken over his stock. We'll tell you more about the clothing and athletic equipment in future columns, but during this heat wave the most appropriate item seems to be the fine pre-war Swim Trunks which we are selling for $1.95 a pair. Most all popular colors and sizes, postpaid.

And that's all for this time, except to remind you that we like to receive your inquiries and orders, and that we will do our best to serve you. Just address us at

Good Medicine

No one travels these days for the fun of it. After standing in line for tickets and scrambling for food in diners, the average citizen comes off the train feeling slightly demented. Only the thought of a good hotel keeps him from gibbering.

It's a matter of record that he gets what he wants at The Grosvenor. The cool quiet lobby, the pleasant welcome at the desk are an instant relief to his shattered nerves. He finds his room large and airy, with bath, shower and running ice water. Refreshed, he goes in search of food; makes the acquaintance of the little Lounge Bar and the Wedgwood Room, both air-conditioned, and is restored to sanity. The next day he clicks on the job.

There's a reason.

Research Improves Legibility of Car License Plates

DESIGN, width of line, and proportionate area of numerals are more important than size in increasing legibility of automobile license plates and traffic signs, according to Curt E. E. Berger, assistant in Physics and resident doctor in Psychology. From more than 12,000 tests with human eyes, here and in Denmark, Dr. Berger has designed a series of numerals which give up to 40 per cent better legibility than those currently used on license plates. The Berger numerals, singly or in groups, all become recognizable at the same distance from the eye and also diffuse simultaneously at the longest possible distance for the area used.

His improvement is effected by changing the form of numerals, spacing them scientifically, and by narrowing the width of the stroke which forms the figures. He finds that many big signs are less legible than others with smaller proper symbols.

For numerals with an area of 42 by 80 millimeters, white on a black background, he finds the optimum stroke-width for daylight vision to be 6 mm., which is about one-third the width of a three-cent US postage stamp. Black numerals on white background, however, must have stroke width of 10 mm. for greatest legibility. Dr. Berger finds that for a single numeral, white on black is about 10 per cent more legible than black on white. But for a group of numerals such as a license plate, just as great legibility can be had with black numerals on white if figures are wider and closer.

His ideal license plate would have white figures on black background, with a white frame around the numerals. If the stroke width of this frame is the same as that of the figures, and if it is placed a certain distance from them, it increases legibility about 9 per cent. For night vision, he finds that very slender, luminous numerals are from 10 to 18 per cent more recognizable than the best white numerals with reflected light.

He recommends for optimum legibility a simply constructed black license plate with white figures and frame of 6 mm. stroke width for daytime vision and with narrow transparent lines within strokes, invisible by daylight but illuminated from behind the plate at night with ten to fifteen-watt bulbs. Since groups of numbers require more attention than a single number, he advocates separating large groups by a dot of the same diameter as the stroke-width.

To meet the problem of State differentiation which is now solved by using various combinations of colors, Dr. Berger proposes that black and white be used for all plates and that one or two large, circled, colored dots be placed above, below, or beside the license plates to differentiate States. These colored dots, he says, would be visible far beyond the distance at which numerals, either black or white, could be recognized. "This would solve the problem of using optimally recognizable white or black numerals for daylight all over the country and still have a clear and easy way of indicating the State."

AUTOMOBILE LICENSE PLATES OF GREATEST LEGIBILITY

"Art, legibility, and recognizability are directly interrelated," says Dr. Curt E. E. Berger, whose research brings new designs of numerals for license plates and traffic signs. Top plate above is Berger's design for best daylight visibility; at bottom, for night vision. Center plate shows the form of numerals of same area now used by most States.

Personnel Services

Guidance and Personnel Services in Education. By Mrs. Anna Y. Reed, lecturer in Personnel and Guidance, School of Education. Cornell University Press, Ithaca. 1944. xi+496 pages. $4.75.

"Designed primarily to serve as a textbook for the use of graduate classes in universities," this volume traces the history of guidance and personnel activities in this country, relating them to education, industry, and community welfare. One section deals with the special problems of veterans and civilian war workers in the coming period of social and economic readjustment.

Dr. Reed retired as chairman of the department of personnel administration, school of education, New York University, in 1940, with the rank of emeritus professor.

Historical Studies

Studies in History. By Professor Albert H. Wright '04, Zoology. Published by the author at Ithaca, 1941, 1943. Nos. 1 and 2 (bound together), 78 pages, 75 cents; Nos. 3 and 4, 64 pages, 60 cents; Nos. 5, 6, 7, and 8, 146 pages, $1.25.

The first volume, The Atlantic-Gulf or Florida Ship Canal, is divided into two parts, "Questionnaire to Scientists," and "Historical Synopsis," which form the first and second of Professor Wright's Studies in History. As a zoologist, he spent three summers in the swamps of Georgia and Florida; as an historian, he became interested in the proposed Florida Ship Canal and collected the material incorporated in these two Studies.

The second volume, New York Historical Source Studies, lists "Supervisors' Proceedings of Various Counties of New York" and provides "A Check List of the County Atlases of New York," prepared in collaboration with Willard W. Ellis '01, Librarian of the College of Agriculture.

The Sullivan Expedition of 1779, comprising Studies 5-8, contains a wealth of exciting source material, drawn from contemporary newspapers, on Indian uprisings in the Finger Lakes region during the Revolutionary War. "For God Sake," writes one Jelles Fonda to New York's Governor Clinton, "Do all you can to Send our Trupes up to our Relefe; we Sertenly live in Danger." (A bronze tablet on the Ithaca Hotel reminds us that General Sullivan's punitive expedition passed through Ithaca in 1779.) The four Studies in this volume are titled, "Preliminary Correspondence and Raids," "Indian Participants: Broadhead's Expedition: Battle of Chemung," "Battle of Newtown: Genesee: Return," and "Conclusion: Bibliography."

Post-war Plans

WINNING the War and the Peace: A Program of Legislative Action, has been published by the post-war planning committee of the Commerce and Industry Association of New York, Inc., 233 Broadway, New York City 7. The forty-six-page booklet contains sixteen specific proposals for legislation on agricultural policy, taxation, social security, labor, international trade, and other government problems, all designed to aid in post-war employment.

Several Cornellians are connected with the publication. Barrett L. Crandall '13 is secretary of the post-war planning committee, which includes University Trustee Victor Emanuel '19, president of Aviation Corp., Dean William I. Myers '14 of the College of Agriculture, and Elbert O. Sowerwine, assistant to the president, Anaconda Copper Mining Co., who is the father of two Cornellians, Elbert O. Sowerwine, Jr. '37, and Charles O. Sowerwine '38.

President of the Commerce and Industry Association of New York, Inc., is University Trustee Neal D. Becker '05, president of Intertype Corp., and Jeremiah D. Maguire '98, chairman of the board, Federation Bank & Trust Co., is vice-president.

Stories of Cornell

BY FRANK A. WRIGHT '79

Goldwin Smith

From the cultured walls of Oxford he came to Cornell and lived in Cascadilla like a student. At the Psi Upsilon chapter house (he was a Psi U.) we saw him with President White and ten other professors: a tall, slender man with precise good English; his lectures were outstanding. At the chapter house, we frequently saw him sometimes with Bayard Taylor and Mark Twain enjoying with a frosty smile the undergraduates' fun and songs.

In one of his lectures, Goldwin Smith made this extraordinary statement, sixty-six years ago: "Ultimately, one of two nations will control the world; either the English speaking people or the Russians."

September, 1919—Private Leonard C. Treman '14 has been awarded the Croix de Guerre for driving an ambulance through heavy shell fire October 21 and November 2, 1918; the accompanying French citation is signed, "Petain."

The late Benno Loewy, New York attorney, has left his library to Cornell University, together with a residuary bequest from his estate of $250,000 to be used in enlarging the collection of Shakespeareana and books on law and Freemasonry.

John N. Chacona, proprietor of the confectionery store at the corner of Oak and College Avenues, opposite Sheldon Court, has sold his building, business, and good will to the brothers Papayanakes, candy merchants of Gloversville. Chacona, who has sold candy, ice cream, and soda pop to Cornellians for twenty years, is planning a trip to his native Greece.

September, 1929—"Davy Hoy has sold to the University that pleasant home of his at the north end of the Swinging Bridge. The Hoyes have gone to the Faculty Apartments while Professor Lane Cooper has moved into their late home. Professor Cooper's family consists of a cocker spaniel and a police dog upon whom he lavishes that same affectionate solicitude that he showers on his graduate students. Each night at 11:05 precisely he lets the dogs out for a bit of a run before they retire. At 11:35 he notifies them it is time to go bye-bye by blowing three shrill blasts upon a powerful police whistle.

"Professor Cooper means to be, and is, a good neighbor, but the first two nights he blew that whistle six families in the immediate vicinity thought it was a raid and poured some very promising batches of home brew down the sink."—from Sport Stuff, by Rym Berry.

Aviation Scholarships

UNITED AIR LINES awarded five tuition scholarships to Summer Session students at Cornell this year. Inaugurated at a number of American colleges last year, the scholarships are open to secondary school teachers whose subjects are related to aviation. Aim is to help public and private school teachers to educate American youth in aeronautics, emphasizing the social and economic aspects of the post-war "age of flight."

Awards made this summer went to Charles L. Nearing '38, teacher of industrial arts at Bloomfield, N. J., Central School, and to four other science teachers: Martha Dunbar, Albany Academy for Girls; Anna D. Leatherman, White Hall School, Fulks Run, Va.; F. Norton Curtis, Saugerties High School; and W. Burdette Moose, Bath High School.

Class Cane Appears

RELIC of the early University came to light last month when Dr. John C. Adams '26, newly appointed president of Hofstra College, presented the Alumni Association with a wooden cane bearing the carved names and numerals of twenty-eight alumni, beginning with the Class of 1871 and running consecutively to 1899, with the single exception of the Spanish-American War year, 1898.

President Adams explains that he has kept the historic cane since 1926 when, as a Senior, he was given it by the late Robert H. Treman '78, one of its inscribers. Treman asked that Adams keep it a quarter of a century, or until such time as its age and legend would make it a suitable and appreciated gift to the University. Before he left Ithaca to begin his administration at Hofstra in Hemstead, L. I., President Adams deposited the cane with Walter C. Heasley, Jr. '30, acting Alumni Secretary, together with a fund to provide for its suitable display in Alumni House.

Arthur N. Gibb '90 of Ithaca, whose name appears on it, suggests that the relic may be "the official Class cane, used every fall in Class rushes between Freshmen and Sophomores." He does not recall the significance of the first name inscribed: "Indian." Treman's explanation was that an Indian had given the cane to its first signer, who gratefully carved the donor's identity on the handle. The cane, however, is not Indian in appearance, being a natty, steel-tipped stick with curved handle.

No mention of an official Class cane is to be found in Cornellians of the successive Classes whose members' names are carved on this one, and doubt has been expressed that the same cane could have been used in the annual Freshman-Sophomore cane rushes because those canes were often demolished in the fighting.

Mostly, the cane bears only last names and Class numerals, but they are, in succession, the names of John E. More '71, Edward Nicoll '72, William T. Morris '73, George R. VanDeWater '74, Charles B. Martin '75, Malcolm Leal '76, William S. Hill '77, Robert H. Treman '78, Robert A.

Parke '79, Albert J. Wing '80, Jesse E. Read '81, Albert K. Hiscock '82, Charles C. Chase '83, Ira A. Shaler '84, Stoddard M. Stevens '85, Herbert Carolan '86, Richard C. St. John '87, Charles H. Blood '88, Charles H. Treman '89, Arthur N. Gibb '90, Henry H. Sanger '91, Charles D. Bostwick '92, Waldo S. Kellogg '93, Fred W. Barry '94, William F. Atkinson '95, Archibald S. Downey '96, Charles T. Mordock '97, and Henry H. Tuller '99.

For the University records and as a matter of general interest, it is hoped that more specific information about the origin and history of this cane may be contributed, for publication in the ALUMNI NEWS.

Stick to Fundamentals

TO THE EDITOR:

When Dexter Kimball was presiding at the northerly end of the Campus, he almost became a little impatient, one warm June day, with several alumni who wanted him to establish special courses of one kind or another in the College of Engineering. In his quiet voice he said, "Every alumnus who has been successful in the manufacture of rat traps comes back here and wants the College to establish a course in Rat Traps!"

Recently, you published some suggestions by an alumnus who apparently envisages a near day when he may hire newly-sprung Engineering graduates who will be tax experts, psychologists, financiers, to say nothing of being adepts at talking Labor, Management, and Mr. John Q. Public all into the same bed together.

Let other universities, technical schools, and trade schools try to turn out the twenty-two-year-old experts and specialists in this and that. But, in the field of engineering, let Cornell try to turn out her young men with a real understanding of the fundamentals of science and mathematics, with a working knowledge of the English language, and with respect for the rights of other men. Such graduates soon learn to be effective, anywhere they go; they hire the experts.

Slants on Sports

By Bill Matero '27

SUMMER sports season ended August 26 for baseball and track, and football candidates, after sweltering in near-record heat, started a brief vacation before the opening of fall practice September 5.

Track Season Ends

TRACK team completed its season with three victories and one defeat. On August 12, Penn State won, 65-61, on Schoellkopf Field; on August 19, Cornell defeated Colgate, 65-19, at Hamilton.

In earlier engagements, Cornell had defeated Penn State, 65-61, at State College, Pa., and Colgate on Schoellkopf, 90-35.

The Penn State meet at Ithaca produced some stirring competition and progressed to the final event, the javelin throw, before the decision went to the visitors. Only fourteen events were contested, the hammer throw being omitted—presumably for lack of entries.

In the first five events, Penn State scored 33 of the 45 points and appeared headed for a walkaway. But in the mile run, John F. Kandl and Milton T. Smith finished first and second. Smith, who prefers the quarter- and half-mile runs, was a surprise starter, replacing Jay R. Bergen, who suffered heat exhaustion before the race.

Kandl then won the two-mile run and Smith the 880-yard run as Cornell caught up with Penn State, but the outcome was decided in the field. Cornell trailed, 52-56, with two events not completed and appeared almost sure of 8 points in the broad jump. Co-captain James M. Hartshorne had first place and 5 points cinched, but on his next to last leap Rainear of Penn State took second place from Calvin G. Brown '45. This made the score 59-58 in the visitors' favor.

Lang of Penn State settled all doubts with an early javelin throw of 193 feet 7½ inches, and Co-captain Ferdinand Wascoe could do no better than 184 feet 6 inches. Penn State also picked up third place to make the final score 65-61.

Kandl and Richard McCown of Penn State topped the point scorers with 10 apiece, McCown winning the 100- and 220-yard dashes. McCown is the son of Andrew R. McCown '13 of Philadelphia, Pa., who was a sprinter under Coach John F. Moakley.

Cornell traveled to Hamilton a week later to defeat Colgate, 65-19, on a 3-2-1 scoring basis for each event instead of the traditional 5-3-1, with the hammer throw again omitted. Co-captain Hartshorne set the scoring pace with victories in the 220-yard low hurdles and broad jump and a share in a two-way tie for first place in the high jump; a total of 14 points.

Smith turned in a double, good for 10 points, by winning the 880-yard and mile runs.

Upset of the meet was the victory of Francis Shaw, pole vaulter and sprinter, in the 100-yard dash. Shaw defeated McGuire of Colgate who had swept the 100-, 220-, and 440-yard competitions when the teams met earlier at Ithaca. After losing to Shaw, McGuire won the furlong and the quarter.

Meet Big Leaguers

BASEBALL team, after breaking even in its first six games, lost its last three—to Hobart, 8-6, at Geneva August 12; to Colgate, 8-7, at Hamilton August 19; and to the Sampson Naval Training Center, 6-0, on Hoy Field August 26—for a season's record of three victories and six defeats.

Cornell rolled into a 4-0 lead over Hobart in the first three innings, lost the lead, tied the game, 5-5, in the seventh, and lost it for good when Hobart scored three runs in the eighth.

Frank Higgins was the starting pitcher and was relieved by Alfred W. Rothermel in the fifth inning. Hobart also used two pitchers, and the two teams accorded their hurlers the poorest kind of support.

The story of the Colgate game was pretty much the same: poor support for the pitchers. Cornell committed seven errors as Higgins and Rothermel combined to hold Colgate to five hits.

The Sampson game was an occasional. The Naval Training Center brought to Hoy Field several former big league baseball stars, and a crowd in excess of 2,000 turned out to see them perform.

Rothermel pitched the entire game for Cornell, giving ten hits and five bases on balls, but he again received miserable support from his teammates. They were charged with seven errors, and Rothermel himself contributed one misplay.

Yet he pitched steadily against the toughest kind of opposition. Not one Sampson run was earned.

Starting battery for the visitors was Al Lyons, pitcher, and Rollie Hemsley, catcher, former members of the world champion New York Yankees. When Lyons completed his three-inning chore on the mound, he was replaced by Johnny Vander Meer, ex-Cincinnati star who once pitched two consecutive no-hit games. For the last three innings, the Sampson pitcher was Hal White, formerly with the Detroit Tigers.

The result was that Cornell picked up just one hit: a scratch single by Frank McArthur, center fielder, in the second inning off Lyons. McArthur reached second on a subsequent base on balls, but was stranded. In all but one of the other innings, Cornell went down in one-two-three order. The exception was a hit batsman in the sixth.

But for Cornell errors, the game might conceivably have been close. The crowd applauded Rothermel's efforts.

Football Squad Rests

SEVEN weeks of summer football practice ended August 25 with an intrasquad game in which the Reds—the first team—scored three touchdowns. Approximately 300 spectators watched the scrimmage, but Coach Carl Snavely expressed disappointment.

However, he expects, he said, that after fall practice leading up to the Syracuse game at Syracuse September 23, he will have "a creditable team for the time and circumstances."

On the first team were: left end, Robert F. Coll; left tackle, Cecil O. Snyder; left guard, Grant R. Ellis; center, Richard M. Golden; right guard, George E. Williams '44; right tackle, Joseph Brozina; right end, Lionel M. Noel; quarterback, Daniel Hrtko; left halfback, Allen E. Dekde-brun '47; right halfback, Nathan Scherr; fullback, Frank J. Accorsi. All but Noel appeared in the Cornell lineup last fall.

These players represent several other colleges and universities. Coll came from Pennsylvania, Snyder from West Virginia, Ellis from Pennsyl-

Navy Men Train

MIDSHIPMEN in the Naval Training School at Cornell will, beginning in September, receive five hours of recreation and sports each week, an increase of two hours over the current program. A basic course will include calisthenics, the obstacle course, and running.

The maintenance program will include touch football, softball, volleyball, soccer, speedball, tennis, and handball. The program is directed by Lt. (jg) S. W. Maddaloni, assisted by chief specialists. Maddaloni was graduated from Ithaca College in 1940 and was commissioned an ensign in 1942.

Officers studying the Diesel engineering course in the School have a weekly two-hour athletic program Monday nights. The Navy uses the fields and equipment of the Department of Physical Education and Athletics.

The physical training program for apprentice seamen in the V-12 program is given by University coaches under direction of George K. James, baseball coach, who disclosed recently that of 2,440 V-12 trainees who have taken physical training at Cornell, not one has departed without knowing how to swim and without passing a swimming test.

Five per cent of new trainees are unable to swim, James said, but when the training is completed each man is able to pass a minimum test of swimming 100 yards, using three strokes. Swimming instruction is under the supervision of G. Scott Little, swimming coach.

Coaches Play Golf

GOLF tournament at the Country Club of Ithaca August 21 for members of the Department of Physical Education and Athletics staff and Navy physical training instructors was won by R. Harrison Sanford, rowing coach.

Sanford shot a 76, four over par. Bernard M. Clarey '28, acting director of athletic publicity, was second with 77 and George K. James, baseball coach, third with 79. Chief Petty Officer Joseph Sawicki, who holds the University Golf Course record of 32 for nine holes, scored 80; Max Reed, assistant football coach, 81; and Carl Snively, head coach, 82.

Give Engineering Scholarships From John McMullen Fund

AWARDS of McMullen Regional Scholarships to forty-two new students in the College of Engineering have been announced by the University. Thirty-five of the scholarship winners entered the College at the beginning of the summer term, July 1, and seven have applied for entrance at the start of the winter term, November 1. They come from seventeen States and the District of Columbia, and were selected by a Faculty committee which reviewed their school records and reports of interviews made by regional committees of alumni on their qualities of leadership, initiative, and general character.

Stipends up to $200 a term are granted to scholarship winners for the entire undergraduate course in any of the four Schools of the College of Engineering, so long as they maintain satisfactory academic standings. Of the boys entering this year, fourteen are in Chemical Engineering, twelve in Mechanical Engineering, nine in Electrical Engineering, five in Civil Engineering, and two are registered in the Administrative Engineering course.

The John McMullen Scholarship Endowment was started in 1923 with a bequest from John McMullen of Norwalk, Conn., founder of a dredging firm, the Atlantic & Pacific Co., who left the common stock to the University "for the purpose of creating and maintaining free scholarships for the education of young men as engineers." Dividends from the stock have been funded as received, and the return on this fund in times of normal civilian enrollment in the University has supported each year 120 Regional Scholarships given to entering students for their entire courses, an equal number of undergraduate scholarships awarded annually to students who have completed one year in Engineering, fifteen scholarships for graduate students, and sixteen scholarships for students selected upon recommendation of industrial concerns from among their promising young employees. The McMullen Endowment Fund has grown to approximately $2,500,000, increasing last year by more than $128,000. Income from the Fund in 1943-44 was just over $96,000.

McMullen Regional Scholarships are usually restricted to students from outside New York State, in order partially to compensate for the added cost of coming to Cornell from a distance and because other financial aid is available to students from New York. Application blanks are distributed each spring to schools all over the country, to be filled out both by the applicants and by their school officials. These are reviewed for academic requirements by the Faculty committee of the College and names of satisfactory applicants are forwarded to regional committees of alumni who then interview the candidates and report on them for final selections.

Among this year's recipients of McMullen Regional Scholarships are seven sons of Cornellians. Scholarship winners (with chairmen of alumni regional committees in parentheses) are listed below.

Bernays '12 Provides Lectures To Discuss Civil Liberties

SERIES of five lectures on civil liberties has been provided at the University by Edward L. Bernays '12, public relations counsel in New York City. The series will open September 6 with a lecture on "Political Freedom, American Style," by Professor Carl L. Becker, History, Emeritus. Max Lerner, editor of PM and former professor of political science at Williams College, will speak September 13 on "Freedom: Image and Reality." James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, will discuss September 20 "Some Observations on Freedom of Speech and the Press." September 27, US Attorney General Francis Biddle will describe the protection of civil liberty by the Civil Rights Section of the Department of Justice. Professor Robert E. Cushman, Government, who acted for the University in organizing the series, will give the concluding lecture October 4, on "Civil Liberty and Public Opinion."

First announcement of the Edward L. Bernays Lectures on Civil Liberties was in a letter July 20 signed by President Edmund E. Day and sent to 1,000 educators, 1,000 religious leaders, and 1,000 newspaper editors, columnists, and radio commentators. Several newspapers, including The New York Herald Tribune, printed the President's letter, others made editorial comment, and many recipients have written expressing agreement on the importance of the subject.

President Day's letter cited a recent survey by the National Opinion Research Center in which only 23 per cent of the persons interviewed had any knowledge of the so-called Bill of Rights as embodied in the first ten amendments to the Constitution of the United States. "This shocking indifference to and ignorance of the fundamental principles of American democracy is extremely dangerous in a time of social, economic, and political flux," the letter said. "At any moment, we may move from the tension and sacrifice of war into the difficulties and complexities of peace. We shall then face the problem whether wartime restrictions on these liberties can be at once relaxed, and whether American civil liberties can be effectively established throughout the world. We shall need to be sharply aware of what these civil liberties are."

Touching upon the importance of the Bernays Lectures at Cornell, the letter expressed the hope that they will "highlight the problems implicit in an effective Bill of Rights and at the same time focus public opinion upon the significance of civil liberties." Referring especially to the First Amendment which protects freedom of thought and speech, the letter pointed out that "if these democratic freedoms do not prevail in the classroom and do not dominate the spirit and life of the school, the college, and the university, they are not likely to persist elsewhere."

"We are appealing to group leaders and opinion molders," it continued, "to express themselves unequivocally through whatever channels are open to them in support of civil liberties . . . unless we do have an alert public conscience to guard our civil liberties, we may discover that they have slipped away from us. Twenty-three per cent is a dangerous minority."

Student Reminiscences

STEPHEN EDWARD ROSE '98 has recently published, "primarily for my grandchildren," a collection of stories of his youth, under the title, Magee and Washington Avenue. The family home was at that corner in Elmira, and there Rose was born in 1876. After four years at Cornell in the Science Course and after receiving the BS in 1898, he and Mrs. Rose (Harriet Bishop) '03 returned to live in Elmira where he is now treasurer of the wholesale hardware firm of Barker, Rose & Kimball, Inc.

The chapters of Rose's book which deal with his experiences at Cornell give an amusing picture of Campus life in the closing years of the last century. Excerpts from these chapters are reprinted with the author's permission.

FALL CREEK SWING BRIDGE

College students seem to be under the strange necessity of making themselves prominent. They feel impelled to "go out" for something. Perhaps this fear of being overlooked, of failing to furnish the Class historian or the editors of the Class Book with sufficient material for a "writeup" is more characteristic of non-fraternity men of whom I was one. Perhaps the Greek brotherhoods invest their members with enough self-assurance and complacency to relieve them from this sense of necessity.

Being neither fraternal, athletic, nor convivial and lacking mental alertness necessary for debate, I tried out for the Glee Club. I could mention that I was president of the Cornell Christian Association but that activity, instead of conferring honor upon me, was regarded in some quarters as a social handicap. Moral and religious excellence in college is not held in as high esteem by one's fellows as by the folks at home. Mark Twain undoubtedly had the campus in mind when he pronounced his famous aphorism. Those students who go to the top socially, do so in spite of their religious predilections rather than because of them.

Thus it was that I became a slave to that martinet, that great trainer of men's choruses, Hollis E. Dann. In those days of waning Sabbath observance, Sunday morning was becoming the popular time for taking group pictures. Obviously it was the easiest time to get students together, but now and then it cut squarely across the convictions of a man like "Tar" Young, star pitcher of Varsity baseball, who upon one occasion at least, forced the choice of a week-day by declaring flatly that they could take their picture without him. No such indispensibility attached to me.

To be left out of that picture and to miss the Christmas trip was a greater concession to conscience than I was willing to make and so there I was on a Sunday morning at Howes's Studio and not too happy about it either. The "little spark of celestial fire" known as conscience glowed, but faintly.

There was a long wait that morning and the Club lined up to go through its routine. Some of our songs were of a rollicking character and hardly in keeping with the Sabbath Day. When we came to "Give Us a Drink Bartender," I quietly withdrew and took a seat where I hoped not to be noticed. This was not a regular rehearsal and no one was under compulsion to join, or at least so I assumed.

"Rose, are you sick?"

The student leader waited inexorably for my reply and thirty-two pairs of curious eyes focussed upon me. When martyrs were burned at the stake, divine help was forthcoming to dull their pain, but there was absolutely nothing done for me that morning. My reply was neither heroic nor convincing.

"No, I'm all right; I just don't feel like singing."

Instead of "lighting a candle" that would never be put out, I merely made a silly spectacle of myself. The smiles and asides that were exchanged conveyed the idea that here was a guy who hadn't freed himself of childhood inhibitions.

For eighteen years it had been drilled into me to "keep the Sabbath holy." And, I had been taught that "God's Laws" were as binding in one place as another.

I burned with humiliation and I burned like a martyr. The trouble was, I was a cheap martyr. I wanted to "eat my cake and keep it too." So I was singing as I deserved.

"Conscience doth make cowards of us all."

In a fiercely contested Senior Class election, so close that it was decided by one vote, we "Independents" took the presidency away from the fraternity crowd and I was rewarded by a place on the Senior Ball Committee. This entitled me to complimentary tickets to the Sophomore Cotillion and the Junior Ball.

The girl I selected for Junior Week was one of Elmira College's fairest daughters, whom I shall call "Phyllis Perkins." She was to be housed with a jolly party in the fraternity house to which my closest friends belonged. Junior Week promised to be the biggest social event of my life.

For some time I hadn't been feeling well. The wintry blasts that swept past the Library seemed fiercer than usual. I had little appetite and felt simply awful. When old Doc Beaman said I had jaundice, I had no idea what I was in for. His remedial efforts were supplemented by certain student-friends who had the idea that by stripping me and slapping, pummeling, and generally manhandling me, they could "drive out the poison."

Meanwhile of course I had filled up my dance cards by the usual trading method and had sent to the cleaner the dress suit that had survived several Glee Club trips.

The Sophomore Cotillion was held in the Opera House and was thought of as being somewhat more "classy" than the grander Junior Ball which was staged in the Armory on another night of the same week. Getting my girl started on her program left me an utter physical wreck so that I was glad to find a place to hide and lie down. I had to stick it out until dawn when I hoped that Phyllis would have had enough. I was too far gone to have any compunctions about cutting my own dances. Considering the quality of my terpsichorean art, there was no reason why I should have had.

Sometime later that night, a pink and white dish of ice cream swam into my line of vision, causing my digestive system to turn over and me to pass out. Between the moment of my collapse and the discovery of myself in bed at home I must have made a lot of trouble for someone.

Midshipmen Graduate

THIRD class of midshipmen to complete the four-month course in the US Naval Reserve Midshipmen's School at Cornell graduated August 23. The largest class so far, 189 were commissioned ensigns at exercises in Bailey Hall.

Professor Richard T. Gore, University organist, played the processional, and Captain William W. Edel, USN, senior chaplain at the Sampson Naval Training Center, pronounced the invocation and benediction. Commencement addresses were made by Dean S. C. Hollister, Engineering, representing the University, and by Captain J. K. Richards, commanding officer of the USNR Officers' Training Center in New York City. Captain Burton W. Chippendale, commanding officer at Cornell, presented diplomas and administered the oath to the new ensigns, who left the same day for advanced training elsewhere or duty with the fleet.

Now in My Time!

By Conny Perry

THIS threatened cigarette shortage, which is leading so many scholars to lay in a reserve supply of Camels before other people start hoarding, would have caused small concern at the turn of the century.

In my time, I'd say that 80 per cent of the students smoked, and most of these smoked a pipe or rolled their own of Bull Durham. Tailor made cigarettes of Virginia tobaccos—Sweet Caporals, Perfections, and Richmond Straights—were then obviously on their way out, with their use pretty well confined to professors who had formed their tobacco habits in the Eighties.

Egyptian cigarettes—Rameses, Murads, and Egyptian Dieties—came to college just about the time your reporter did, and their vogue did not long survive his departure. Though widely used, they never quite overcame a settled prejudice against them; a prejudice based on the suspicion that they were drugged and therefore habit-forming, and on the certain knowledge that they were expensive and smelled badly. Even the cheapest, Egyptian Prettiest, cost ten cents for a package of ten, which made their use by undergraduates ostentatious profligacy. One smoked them only when he went to dances, or was invited out to dinner.

The modern cigarette of the Camel, Lucky Strike, Chesterfield type, which has caused us to become a nation of cigarette smokers, made its first appearance with Fatimas while your reporter was in college. Fatimas were offered frankly as a compromise. They were said to combine the nourishment of honest American tobacco with the exotic flavors of the Egyptian. They took hold quickly. I don't know what has since become of Fatimas.

The typical experience was for a Freshman to start off by smoking Seal of North Carolina in a twenty-five-cent pipe purchased at Egbert's drug store on Heustis Street. He had a pretty gruesome time of it until the varnish burned off. The next step on the downward path was the attempt to master the deft touch of the upperclassman in fashioning one's own. Some never acquired it.

Neat and old-maidish students made a ceremony of pipe smoking. They built up a collection of pipes, carried gadgets, and affected soggy smoking mixtures of British origin, carried about in rubber pouches. For such, the conventional ten minutes between classes was scarcely long enough to make it worth while.

But your manly man, your bluff American, made a fetish of crude efficiency in his tobacco habits. A handful of loose Bull Durham in his right-hand coat pocket, two score loose matches in his left one, and he was fully equipped for the day. The pipe was carried in the handkerchief pocket while cigarette papers were concealed in various handy spots about the person.

The smoking habit was not an expensive one in my time. A five-cent sack of Bull Durham was sufficient to fashion scores of cigarettes. It lasted for days and days, even when one's room-mate was a confirmed borrower. And we recall one year when smoking did not cost anything at all, if one belonged to the right fraternal organization.

We refer, of course, to the year when Brother Reid of Reidsville, N. C., "Home of Pride of Reidsville Smoking Tobacco," transferred to Cornell from the University of Virginia. It shocked Brother Reid to find The Quality being forced to pay actual money for tobacco. He caused a large packing case of Pride of Reidsville (you couldn't tell it from Bull Durham) to arrive within the week. A large bowl of the Pride was thereafter offered in the front hall without money and without price. One merely stuffed a handful of it in his pocket when he left the house for the Hill.

Not to be outdone by Brother Reid, the Freshman delegation then took upon itself the obligation of keeping a companion vase in the front hall filled with loose matches for the free use of the Brethren.

Under such favorable conditions, working one's way through college was not an insuperable task at the turn of the century. Nor did it take much sophistry to convince a hesitating guest once he'd seen our front hall, that it was really cheaper to join a house than to stay out!

Soldiers Sing

SINGING by students, always a distinctive and remembered feature of the University, has also taken effect with the Army men here. Conductors of the Army service column, "Through G-Eyes," in The Summer Bulletin remark:

"One of the most impressive parts of an outing around Cornell is the spirited singing which springs up along about twilight. And some of the songs made famous on the Hill, 'Alma Mater,' 'The Pope,' 'Cocaine Bill,' et al, lend themselves admirably to the close harmony of a 'singing army.' That whiskey tenor ringing out above the soupy bass on 'Far Above Cayuga's Waters' is one sound which every Cornell soldier will carry with him back to the troops."

Praise for Cornell

THE EXISTENCE of a body of unenlightened opinion is at once a national peril and a challenge to our institutions of light and learning. One American college, Cornell, has gallantly taken up the challenge by inaugurating the systematic study of Russian history and civilization. The storm of obloquy with which the announcement of this course was greeted showed how sorely it was needed. There is a call to every college in the land to overcome this kind of national ignorance and folly. . . . When this college can afford to be herself again, I hope that she will share with Cornell in allaying the senseless jealousies of the country to which mankind owes eternal gratitude for its leading part in preserving human freedom."—From the Amherst College commencement address, "Education for Democracy," of Dr. George F. Whicher, professor of English at Amherst.

Fraternities at Brown

TEN of the sixteen fraternity chapters at Brown University which owned houses have deeded their properties to the university, it was announced at the June commencement meeting of the Corporation of Brown University.

Action of the fraternities followed an offer by the university corporation last October to take title to all fraternity chapter houses, to rehabilitate and maintain them as university dormitories and dining rooms, and rent the chapter rooms and social rooms back to the chapter organizations. A spokesman for the corporation said that "members of the advisory and executive committee of thirteen, which had given particular attention to this matter, pointed out that the request for gifts of the chapter houses was but part of a larger plan for solving the housing problem in a manner best calculated to insure the future of the fraternity system." The six fraternities which have not deeded their houses to the university were urged to do so.

Those announced as having accepted the university proposal are Alpha Delta Phi, Beta Theta Pi, Delta Phi, Delta Tau Delta, Delta Upsilon, Kappa Sigma, Phi Gamma Delta, Phi Kappa Psi, Sigma Nu, and Theta Delta Chi. Delta Kappa Epsilon, Lambda Chi Alpha, Phi Delta Theta, Psi Upsilon, Sigma Chi, and Zeta Psi also own houses at Brown.

On The Campus and Down the Hill

Student Council has made another study of representation and adopted a wartime membership of twenty-one, with fifteen votes, as follows: thirteen men (three seamen, two civilians, one soldier, one foreign student, a Senior, a Junior, a Sophomore, each with one vote, and three Freshmen voting as one; total, eleven votes), five women (three WSGA officers, each with one vote, and two Class representatives voting as one; total, four votes), and three non-voting members from The Bulletin, Willard Straight Hall, and CURW. Got that? O. K. The Council then took up a more important matter. It appointed Apprentice Seaman Paul L. Russell '46, USNR, of Grosse Pointe, Mich., "to express the wish of the students that they have a Christmas vacation and to find out the Faculty's reasons for suspension."

Campus opinion is being polled by The Summer Bulletin on the question of post-war compulsory military training for all men. Four replies (two Naval Reservists, one professor, one co-ed) were printed August 25; the three men were for it, with reservations; the co-ed against.

Log of the Mercoe, a forty-eight-page record of Company E of the third class of midshipmen to train at Cornell, appeared a few days before graduation August 23. It contains pictures, biographies, sketches, and a humorous, illuminating Navy view of such Cornell institutions as co-eds, Willard Straight Hall, Campus dogs, and "the city of Ithaca, consisting of two theatres, Zincks, and the Dutch."

Marine Corps unit of the V-12 Naval Training Program at Cornell is now commanded by Captain Wilson Stradley, USMCR. He was a member of the First Marine Division, first ashore at Guadalcanal, which received a Presidential unit citation; in New Britain he commanded a regimental weapons company. Sent to the Philadelphia Naval Hospital after contracting malaria, Captain Stradley arrived at Cornell August 11 after several months at Camp Lejeune, N. C. He is a graduate of Williams College in 1938, of the University of Pennsylvania Law School in 1941. Commanding the Marine Corps unit, he succeeds Major W. J. Dumas, USMCR, who was ordered to Camp Pendleton, Ocean-side, Cal., for reassignment. Major Dumas, promoted from captain last May, came to the Naval Training School June 9, 1943, also by way of Guadalcanal, where he led his company of Marines in the first contingent ashore, later contracting malaria and being hospitalized in the United States.

Cornell Student Assembly sponsored a meeting August 29 at which Vladimir D. Kasakevich, lecturer in the Russian courses, led a discussion of "Freedom Under Socialism."

An iron lung, presented to the Ithaca Reconstruction Home August 15 by local chapters of the Elks, Eagles, Moose, and Veterans of Foreign Wars, is helping to fight poliomyelitis in Ithaca. Last week Dean S. C. Hollister announced that the College of Engineering has undertaken experimental construction of a new iron lung, of improved design, to be turned over on completion to the University Infirmary. Professors Walter A. Johnson, Machine Design, and Roger L. Geer '28, Materials Processing, and Rolland T. Hinkle, PhD '44, Machine Design, are working on the new lung.

James Thurber has a one-man show in the music and art room of Willard Straight Hall; his original drawings of men, women, and dogs are being shown there until September 9.

"BOYS 'N IVY," a variety show sponsored by the Student Council with proceeds going to the Tompkins County Infantile Paralysis Fund, takes the stage at Bailey Hall September 30, after the Cornell-Bucknell football game. The cast, composed of service men and civilian students, is directed by Alvin S. Evans '42, who has written the script and will be producer of "Boys 'n Ivy" (last February, Evans wrote and directed the highly successful "Give Me Liberty"). After the show, the honor societies in Engineering, Atmos, Chi Epsilon, Eta Kappa Nu, and Tau Beta Pi, will sponsor a formal dance in Barton Hall, featuring "the sweetest trumpet in the world," Charlie Spivak and his orchestra, last seen at Cornell in May, 1941, when he and Jimmy Dorsey played for the Navy Ball. The Summer Bulletin says "the whole week end will be on a holiday basis and a twenty-four page booklet full of information and humor will be on sale shortly."

Charles Collingwood '39, representing the Columbia Broadcasting System, is the American correspondent whose premature dispatch "liberated" Paris.

Army band has been reorganized under the direction of Private First Class Robert K. Barton. Composed of some forty men, civilian students in ROTC and Army trainees in ASTP, the band made its first appearance August 18 at the summer's first ASTP retreat parade on the Quad-rangle.

President of Willard Straight Hall is Nancy C. Barone '45 of LeRoy, second woman elected to that office by the board of managers (first was Greta E. Wilcox '44).

Zeta Psi house on Stewart Avenue is to be sold. Ithaca Post 221 of the American Legion, of which John S. Howell '12 is commander, has voted to buy the property for a club house. The local chapter of Zeta Psi was established in 1868, the first of the "secret societies" at Cornell. Now owned by the Tompkins County Trust Co., the house was last occupied by ASTP students.

The Royal Palm, "Ithaca's newest restaurant and night club," opened its doors on Dryden Road, just above College Avenue, August 9. Specializing in "dining, dancing, legal beverages, and a la carte Italian and American foods," the new dive is owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Leonardo, formerly of Leonardo's on Eddy Street. The decor, an agreeable combination of blue, rose, and yellow, boasts indirect lighting, a blue-mirrored bar, and the ubiquitous juke box. Forty years ago, Hyman Goldenberg's tailor shop was in this building, and he was followed by a succession of student eating places.

Peter Floros, proprietor of the Normandie restaurant on East State Street, died August 18 in Ithaca. Born in Greece in 1887, he went to Canada as a young man, entering the candy business there. In 1909 he came to Ithaca and established the Floros Candy Co. on State Street with his brother James, who later moved up to Stewart Avenue as proprietor of Jim's Place. Sons, Lieutenant Nicholas P. Floros '36, with the Adjutant Generals Department in France, and Sergeant John P. Floros '36, recently home from nineteen months overseas.

Cornell's Big Red Team

Rugged • Aggressive • Colorful

This squad lists many heroes of offensive actions in the South Pacific, the African and Sicilian Landings, Murmansk Convoy and Atlantic Patrols. Our large foreign service contingent that fought as Sailors and Marines all over the Globe has instilled a new spirit in the Big Red that will be reflected in these games:

Sept. 23—Syracuse at Syracuse (night)

Oct. 28—Open

Sept. 30—Bucknell at Ithaca

Nov. 4—Columbia at New York

Oct. 7—Yale at New Haven

Nov. 11—Navy at Baltimore

Oct. 14—Colgate at Ithaca

Nov. 18—Dartmouth at Ithaca

Oct. 21—Sampson at Ithaca

Nov. 25—Pennsylvania at Philadelphia

The summer practice period has convinced Coach Carl Snavely that he will have a "creditable team for the times and circumstances." Other observers believe Cornell will be represented by a team of high ranking in wartime football.
