CORNELL DEFEATED.

Princeton Wins on Percy Field—
A Stubborn Contest in Which Both Teams Earned the Highest Praise—Magnificent Game.

On Saturday, November 2, was played one of the best exhibitions of football ever witnessed on Percy Field or elsewhere. It gave to Princeton all the glory of victory, but it left Cornell with none of the stigma of defeat. Though the score was 8 to 6 against us, the two points which gave Princeton the game were disputed not only by the Cornell players but also by many of those who were on the side-lines. The referee, however, decided against Cornell, and, as did the players last Saturday, the supporters of Cornell can only accept the decision and wish that the result might have been otherwise. The game was hard fought from start to finish, although a surprising small number of players was forced to leave the game, and only one of those who did, Mills of Princeton, was badly injured, the others dropping out through sheer exhaustion. The playing of Cornell's light line against their very much heavier opponents was little short of phenomenal, and Princeton was not able to make any consistent gains by bucking the line. In the back field, however, the Tigers apparently outplayed the 'Varsity; the Princeton runners started fast and ran well, always with superb interference. The Cornell backs, on the other hand, were rather slow and the interference was far from what it should have been. In running back punts Freeman excelled Brewster, although in justice to the latter it should be said that not once did he have any sort of interference, as Freeman did every time. Warner played an exceptionally good game, both in bucking the line and in getting down the field on punts, where he did far better work than either of the ends who were usually cleverly boxed by the Princeton ends. Brewster played well, although he was in no condition to stand a hard game. He showed poor generalship at the start in changing the style of play when there was a touchdown in sight; on their six yard line Princeton held for downs. For Princeton, Freeman played good football, running back punts admirably and showing great skill in dodging tacklers. All of the backs did well, and deserve a large measure of credit for the victory.

The day was a trifle too warm for the players but ideal for the spectators of whom about thirty-five hundred filled the stands, a new stand having been erected at the south-east corner of the field. The Princeton rooters about two hundred strong occupied the south stand, and the bulk of the Cornell cheering came from the north side. The cheering on both sides was spirited and continuous. A slight breeze from the west favored the Princeton punters in the first half but it died down and was no help to Brewster in the latter part of the game. The halves were unusually long drawn out, and owing to the fierceness of the play and the frail condition of some of the Cornell men, it was necessary to take out time after nearly every play toward the end. The game closed with darkness fast settling over the field.

The Princeton team appeared on the field about five minutes before three and the Cornell men followed them soon after, so that Brewster kicked off promptly at three o'clock. The ball went to Princeton's ten yard line where McClave caught it and carried it back fifteen yards before being downed. On the first line up DeWitt kicked out of bounds at Princeton's thirty-five yard line. Purcell made three yards around right end. Warner went through the center for two, but failed to gain on the second trial. Purcell and Coffin tried the ends for five yards, Warner following with three more through the center. End runs by the backs brought the ball to Princeton's six yard line where Cornell was held for downs. Foulke gained three yards and then DeWitt punted to the center of the field where Brewster was downed in his tracks. Purcell went around Davis for six yards, but Coffin lost a yard in the other direction, and Warner could not gain enough through the center to make it first down. The Tigers failed to gain around Taussig, but made a yard through the center. Cornell was given the ball for off-side play and Purcell made ten yards on the first move. Coffin carried the ball to Princeton's thirty-five yard line where it was held for downs. After a failure to gain, Underhill punted to Cornell's two yard line, Brewster coming back fifteen yards. Brewster punted to midfield. Foulke gained three yards, but the line held when Underhill tried to get through. Foulke made two more through Smith, and DeWitt punted. Purcell gained three yards through tackle but fumbled and it was Princeton's ball on Cornell's thirty yard line. After two short gains DeWitt tried a place kick which fell short. Brewster punted to midfield. DeWitt returned Brewster's punt to Cornell's thirty-five yard line. On a fake kick, Hunt went around the end for one yard but failed to gain on the next trial. Brewster punted forty yards but the ball was brought back and Cornell penalized ten yards for off-side play. Brewster punted to midfield, Foulke coming back ten yards before being tackled by Warner. Princeton could not gain through the center, but a delayed pass made seven yards. Underhill went through the line for three yards, and Foulke gained five on successive runs. DeWitt tried another place kick from the forty yard line which was blocked, the ball rolling to the ten yard line, from where Brewster punted thirty-five yards. Underhill gained two yards through the center, and Mills three more on a trick play but was hurt and retired, Butkiewicz taking his place. Brewster punted to the fifty yard line, DeWitt returning the punt thirty yards. Underhill was succeeded by McCord. Purcell gained his distance in one trial, and Coffin ran six yards around the end, but fumbled the ball, and a Princeton man fell on it in midfield. McCord failed to gain, and DeWitt punted to Cornell's twenty-five yard line, Brewster coming back ten yards before being tackled. Brewster punted thirty yards, Warner tackling Freeman. Princeton punted and Brewster was downed before he could move. Purcell could take the ball only one yard in two trials, and Brewster punted. McClave went around Tydeman for four yards, and Foulke made three around Taussig. A trick play failed to gain through the center, and Princeton lost the ball for holding. Purcell lost five yards on the next line-up, and Coffin could regain only three of them. Brewster punted, but a Princeton man was off-side and the ball was brought back, Cornell receiving five yards. Purcell made four yards in two attempts and Hunt added another. The half ended with the ball on Cornell's forty-five yard line.

Cornell clearly outplayed Princeton in this half, the ball being in the latter's territory constantly with the exception of a few minutes toward the latter part of the half.

In the second half DeWitt kicked off to the twenty yard line, and Brewster returned the kick forty yards. Foulke tried the end and made three yards, but the Princeton backs could make no ground through the Cornell forwards. Princeton was penalized for holding and Cornell was given the ball in midfield. Purcell could make no headway around the end, but Schoellkopf plunged through the center for three yards, trying it again on the next line up, but this time he fumbled the ball. Foulke made a magnificent run of fifteen yards, Warner tackling him. McClave could not gain, but on a delayed pass McCord got five yards. Pell went through for five yards, but Cornell held and DeWitt tried another unsuccessful place kick. Taussig blocked the ball, DeWitt falling on it on Cornell's fifty yard line. Successive plunges netted Princeton five yards, but Cornell was given the ball as a penalty to Princeton for holding in the line. Brewster punted over Freeman's head across the Princeton goal line. DeWitt punted out and Brewster returned the ball to the Tiger's twenty yard line. Foulke gained two yards and then DeWitt dropped back for a kick. Coffin broke through and blocked the punt, carrying the ball over for a touchdown. He kicked the goal a moment later. Cornell 6, Princeton 0.

DeWitt kicked off to the five yard line, and Brewster returned the kick. Freeman caught the ball and ran twenty-five yards through several Cornell players before being tackled.

FORMER PRESIDENT WHITE

Tendered Reception by the New York Alumni at the New Cornell Club.

There was an enthusiastic and representative gathering of Cornellians last Wednesday evening in the handsome new quarters of the Cornell University club in New York. The occasion was a reception tendered by the club to Ex-President Andrew D. White on the eve of his departure for Berlin. Invitations were sent to every Cornell man in Greater New York and the thronged rooms testified to the affectionate regard in which the first president of Cornell is held by all Cornellians.

Ex-President White reached the club, escorted by C. H. Blair, '72, of the entertainment committee, shortly after nine o'clock, and was immediately surrounded by a circle of old friends and former students who were eager to greet him. For over an hour a line filed past the club's distinguished guest, each visitor being introduced by the president of the club and receiving from Dr. White a most cordial greeting. In numerous instances Dr. White recalled the names and faces of former students whom he had not seen for twenty years and there were many reminiscences exchanged of early days at Cornell.

Later in the evening there were calls for a speech and Dr. White was introduced by C. J. Shearer, '90, president of the club, who said: "On behalf of the Board of Governors, I wish first to bid welcome to the club, our guests who are not members and to express our pleasure in having them with us. We hope that those of you who are not yet enrolled as members will realize that the Cornell club is a living vital force in the life of Cornell and that you will join hands with us in making this institution one helpful to our Alma Mater and second to no University organization in the City of New York.

We have gathered here tonight to greet one who shares with our great founder, first place in every Cornell heart. Owing to the calls upon him made by his country, to which he has devoted so many years of distinguished public service, we seldom have the privilege of his personal presence; but to whatever distant land his duties summon him, wherever he may be, in season and out of season, we know that his heart beats true to Cornell and we wish him to feel that every Cornell heart beats true to him.

When we think of the Cornell today, of her three thousand and more students, of her great faculty of nearly four hundred trained teachers selected from the best the world affords, of her noble campus, her splendid equipment, of her part in the development of the intellectual life and material prosperity of our country, we are rightfully proud. But thus far Cornellians are not unmindful of the true reason, the real cause of the commanding position occupied by Cornell to-day. We find that cause not in millions, but in the wisdom, the breadth of vision, the devotion to true scholarship and high ideals of two men—Ezra Cornell and Andrew D. White.

During the recent imposing ceremonial incident to the celebration of Yale's 200th anniversary, one could not but be struck with the thought of how unconscious was the founder of Yale of the real significance of what he was doing, of how purposeless it all was as compared with the manner in which Cornell was wrought out by her founders, because when the time comes for our 200th anniversary and a triumphal arch is erected at the campus gate, there will be two names on its scroll—the name of Cornell and the name of White.

The spirit that gathered together in those days such men as Lowell, Agassiz and that grand old Cornellian, Goldwin Smith, was the spirit that made Cornell. The man who best typified and embodied that spirit is our guest to-night and it is my privilege to present our dear old friend, Ex-President White."

Dr. White received an ovation and was cheered again and again. He spoke briefly but with evident feeling; expressing the appreciation for the warmth of his reception and telling of his love for and devotion to Cornell. He referred to our struggle in the early days; to the devotion alike of teachers and students, to the University's giant strides, and then paid an eloquent tribute to the administration of President Schurman. He said that though absent from Cornell, his first thought after his official duties, was always of Cornell and that it was his constant hope that he might at some future day resume active and intimate relations with the University. In concluding, Dr. White said that the memory of the evening would ever remain with him and that he would not say farewell to Cornellians, but instead "Auf wiedersehen."

The Hon. Joseph C. Hendrix, '73, followed Dr. White and stirred every one present deeply with a feeling and earnest tribute to Dr. White. He spoke of the debt of Cornellians to their first President, of their love for him and of the part he had in the careers of successful Cornellians. He asked Dr. White to think of Cornellians as his sons and pledged to him the devotion of every true lover of his Alma Mater. Mr. Hendrix's speech was enthusiastically applauded throughout, and, when at its conclusion Dr. White took his departure to go on board the "Deutschland," a delegation of old glee club men escorted him to his carriage singing "Alma Mater."

The reception was managed by the Club's entertainment committee, composed of George W. Bacon, '92, chairman; C. H. Blair, '72, W. R. Bronk, '80, W. F. Atkinson, '95, W. R. Delehanty, '94, assisted by E. B. Katte, '93, chairman of the house committee.

Professor Morse Stephens Presented with a Loving Cup.

On Friday afternoon, November 1, at four o'clock, there was gathered together in the auditorium of Barnes Hall, a large number of graduates and undergraduates who have been, or still are students under Professor Morse Stephens. The gathering was in honor of Professor Stephens and was the occasion of presenting to him a handsome silver loving cup. Jervis Langdon, '97, presided over the meeting, which opened with the singing of Alma Mater.

Mr. Langdon then made a few remarks regarding Professor Stephens' first appearance among the students of Cornell in the fall of 1894. He also told of Professor Stephens' initiation as a Cornell man, where he spoke in the same room in which they were now gathered, at a meeting of students called to consider sending a crew to Henley, and how he, although comprehending perfectly and more than anyone else the difficulties to be overcome, nevertheless urged the students to go ahead and make the fight.

Mr. Langdon closed by introducing to the audience, T. B. Little, '01, who, in presenting the cup to Professor Stephens, spoke of the glorious record he had made as a Cornell man; of the new spirit which had lately come to Cornell; and of the part Professor Stephens had played in this great change.

In responding, Professor Stephens took his friends to task for having done all this, mentioning among other reasons for doing so, his preference that the money might have been devoted to the cause of the new athletic field. He then went on to say that since his arrival he had seen a great change come over the college spirit here, although he considered himself in no way responsible for it. He believed in the spirit of athletic contests for the sake of the contest itself, the glorious effort and matching skill against skill. The sole end was not to win. He had seen a change from the days when a baseball game was won only through rattling the pitcher by yelling, to that shown last spring when in the Ithaca game with Princeton, a fielder received more applause for a fine catch than any other man that day.

Professor Stephens concluded by assuring his old and new students that he loved them more than anything else and that his time was theirs. The audience then sang the "Evening Song" and dispersed.

Negotiations are under way for a chess match with Columbia.

They will make their home in Pittsburgh, Pa.

PAIGE—PARSONS.

Miss Belle Winona Paige and Floyd Y. Parsons, B. Arch. '98, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents in Paterson, N. J., Tuesday evening, October 8. The guests were limited to the family and close friends. The Rev. H. C. Townley of Peekskill officiated. Among the ushers were Walter M. Zink, '99, and among the guests Gardiner S. Dresser, '00.

After the ceremony a supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Parsons then left on their wedding journey. On their return they will make their residence in Paterson, where Mr. Parsons is a practising architect.

THE NINTH JUBILEE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF GLASGOW.

Professor Horatio S. White has kindly favored us in this issue with an account of the four hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the University of Glasgow which he attended as the representative of our University. The degree of LL. D. was at this time conferred upon Professor White and also upon Mr. Carnegie who, though not an official representative of Cornell, was then a member of the Board of Trustees.

THE RECEPTION TO ANDREW D. WHITE.

The reception which the Cornell University Club of New York city gave to Andrew D. White last Wednesday night brings to mind what a strong alumni association the alumni of New York city and vicinity have built up. This association is a shining example to all the other associations in the country and shows what a loyalty and enthusiasm for Alma Mater can do. For some years past it has had quarters of its own, and quite recently it moved into larger and more pretentious apartments. These will be fully described in an early issue of this paper. While the conditions in other cities will probably not allow of such strong organizations, nevertheless it is undoubtedly true that our local alumni associations would be much stronger than they are if their members displayed the same amount of University spirit that their New York brothers do. It is a matter to be greatly deplored that so few of our local alumni associations have anything more than a paper organization. There are only three or four that make any pretense of holding regular meetings. Very few of the associations can afford to have their own quarters, but surely there is no reason why every association should not have at least three or four meetings throughout the year. The alumni can, if properly organized, do so much for their Alma Mater that it is greatly to be regretted that they are not more active in this direction.

THE PRINCETON GAME.

Cornellians generally who saw the football game last Saturday are well satisfied with the work of the team. The teams were so evenly matched that the winner cannot claim any marked superiority over the loser. Our team must, indeed, be very strong in order to be able to play such a close game with a team of Princeton's strength. Our men played a hard, clean game throughout, and finished the struggle without any serious injuries. Their physical condition seems to be quite satisfactory. For our success in future games it is encouraging to know that even though the men fully expected to win, nevertheless they are not at all depressed or discouraged by the defeat, but are determined to maintain a high standard of play throughout the remainder of the season. There are two hard games yet to be played, that with Columbia in New York city on November 16 and with Pennsylvania in Philadelphia on Thanksgiving Day. Scores thus far this season surely indicate that Columbia is stronger than Pennsylvania, and no doubt Cornell's chances for a victory over Pennsylvania are better this year than ever before. Victories in these two games will give Cornell a proud position in the football world and at least will do much to wipe out whatever disappointment is felt over last Saturday's game.

One thing was very noticeable in connection with the Princeton game, and that was, that never before have students and alumni stood so unitedly behind their team and given it their support and good wishes. More alumni were back than come to attend class reunions or commencement or any of the social events throughout the year. This display of love for Alma Mater was good to see, and although brought out primarily by an athletic event cannot but make itself felt in other directions as well. Anything that cultivates this love and develops it must have some element of good in it, and the potency of athletics in this direction is surely one sound argument in their favor.

The University Club of Brooklyn has been organized with a membership of 145 and a waiting list of 25. The officers for the first year are: President, William B. Hurd, Jr., New York University; vice-president, Herbert L. Bridgman, Amherst; treasurer, Henry E. Hutchinson; secretary, William F. Atkinson, Cornell. Frank O. Affeld, '97, is one of the committee on membership. The club expects to be installed in rented quarters within a few weeks.

Debating.

It is possible that Cornell may have two intercollegiate debates this year. Negotiations are being carried on with Pennsylvania, looking to a renewal of relations; as yet, however, no decision has been reached. The Columbia debate will take place in Ithaca this year. It has been decided to hold it in the Lyceum as usual and to defray the expenses by subscription. The subject will be presented by Cornell. The Debate Council have four subjects under consideration, Reciprocity, Anarchy, Insular Possessions, and Cuban Statehood.

In accordance with the new regulations governing interclass debating, the series will begin early. On November 15 will occur the upper-class debate; and the first of the underclass series on November 22.

The first competition for the '94 memorial stage will take place on November 13, the subject being Reciprocity.

A debate club has been organized in the law school; its purpose is to develop public speakers and debaters, fitting the members for a better understanding of legal argument and pleading. It is not affiliated with the Debate Council, and hence will not take part in the inter-club debates. The society is limited to 30 members admitted by invitation. Its officials are: president, E. M. McCord, '04; vice-president, W. S. Ransom, '05; secretary, DeWitt Van Buren, '04; treasurer, G. W. Chapins, '04.

The officers of the other clubs are as follows:

Congress—speaker, R. K. McGonigal, '03; clerk, William Neff, '04; treasurer, E. M. Strong, '02; representative on Debate Council, W. W. Roe, '03.

Woodford club (1902)—president, G. W. Hosford; vice-president, C. M. Doyle; secretary, Richardson Webster; treasurer, Burrill Vastbinder; representative on Debate Council, J. A. Magoffin.

Schurman club (1903)—president, H. S. Braucher; vice-president, W. W. Roe; secretary, J. B. Smallwood; treasurer, J. E. Wentworth; representative on Debate Council, W. A. Frayer.

The Wheeler club (1904)—president, A. E. Mudge, jr.; vice president, A. H. Wright; secretary, W. F. Strong; treasurer, A. C. Morgan.

Goldwin Smith club (1905)—president, W. P. Allen; vice-president, John Tinkler, jr.; secretary, R. C. Butler; treasurer, W. C. McNitt; representative on Debate Council, W. L. Ransom.

THE NINTH JUBILEE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF GLASGOW.

During last summer was held the Glasgow International Exhibition, which, as claimed, was the largest and most important display of industry, science and art ever held in the British Empire. In connection with the Exhibition a new, beautiful and permanent palace of the arts, bestowed by the Glasgow Corporation, was erected, and received a choice collection of art treasures. The whole Exhibition was included in beautiful and rolling grounds, diversified by shrubbery and lakes. Towering above on a prominent hill adjoining the grounds, in the midst of attractive surroundings, is the magnificent structure of the Glasgow University. It seemed a happy coincidence that while below the progress of the arts and the industrial sciences was displayed, the University was holding a celebration illustrating the progress which had been made in educational circles during the four centuries and a half which have elapsed since its birth.

Glasgow University yields to but one other Scotch University in age, the venerable foundation at St. Andrews antedating it by only forty years. Not a few of the sons of Glasgow must have agreed with the intimation in one of the many admirable addresses, which implied that their ancient and honorable Institution was approaching the ideal of a University sketched by Newman many decades ago, as "a place which attracts the affections of the young by its fame, wins the judgment of the middle-aged by its beauty, and rivets the memory of the old by its associations: a seat of wisdom, a light of the world, a minister of the faith, an alma mater of the rising generations."

The celebration was conducted upon a scale commensurate with the importance of the occasion, the age and extensive curriculum of the institution, and the magnitude of the interests which the Corporation of Glasgow itself represents. The proceedings were initiated by an informal reception on the evening of June 11, for the representatives of the students of other Universities, taking the form of a torch-light procession. The students mustered in large numbers and were attired in various fantastic costumes representing the garb, both male and female, of many nations. The following morning occurred a solemn commemoration service in the cathedral, attended by the University officials, the guests, and the delegates, in academic robes or official costume. In the afternoon the Chancellor received the guests and delegates in the great University Hall and addresses from the delegates were presented. The bearers of these addresses were arranged by countries, beginning with those foreign to England, and classified in a strictly democratic, alphabetical order. Then followed the delegates from the British Colonies and Dependencies, and those from the United Kingdom. Each group was escorted by a University usher, while the grand organ sounded the appropriate national anthem or song, and the proceedings were still further enlivened by a stirring student chorus. Most impressive was this long procession of representatives of educational institutions and learned societies from all continents of the globe, and the distant isles of the sea, many of whom were arrayed in gorgeous academic apparel far removed from cloistered or republican simplicity. Cornell was doubly represented, for, besides the Faculty delegate, one of the members of the Board of Trustees was present, Mr. Andrew Carnegie, whose recent noble benefactions to the Universities of his native land lent an additional significance and interest to his appearance. The mere presentation of the addresses, interrupted only by an occasional brief remark, occupied fully three hours. Many of the addresses were written on parchment, beautifully illuminated and enclosed in rich cases. The most frequent language of the addresses was Latin, while the English, French, German, Welsh, Sanskrit and Japanese tongues were also employed. The Cornell address was couched in Latin, and its external appearance and decorations were also suitable to the occasion. The address from the University of Tokyo was an oriental document in Japanese characters on a roll that unfolded to the length of nearly two yards. This roll was enclosed in a finely ornamented casket, and accompanied by an English translation.

On the evening of the same day a reception was given at Queen Margaret College, an institution for young women connected with the University, and the students held an enjoyable "Gaudeamus" smoker in the Hall of their University Union. On the second day two notable orations were delivered, one by Lord Kelvin, better known perhaps as Sir William Thomson, on James Watt, who had lived in the "Old College" rooms, and was mathematical instrument maker to the University; and the other by Principal Smart, on Adam Smith, who had been among its professors. Following the orations came the ceremony of conferring honorary degrees. On the afternoon of the second day the new Botanical Buildings were opened with appropriate exercises, and a little later a charming garden party was held on the grounds of Queen Margaret College, attended by an attractive programme of vocal and instrumental music. Graduates of the College were present in large numbers, and they were full of rejoicings over the fact that among the worthiest recipients of the degree of LL.D. were four women, whose services in the cause of education and of charity had been specially distinguished. The Conversazione at the University in the evening was attended by over four thousand guests.

Miscellaneous entertainments filled the third day, beginning with an oration on the great anatomist of the last century, William Hunter, followed by an organ recital, receptions in the art galleries of the International Exhibition, and a banquet by the Corporation in the Municipal buildings, with a students' ball to conclude the evening. The fourth day was occupied by an excursion on the Firth of Clyde, when an opportunity was given for the inspection of the world famous ship building plants of Scotland. Throughout the celebration every care was taken for the convenience and comfort of the guests, to whom for the nonce the freedom of the University, the Exhibition and the city was given.

During the bestowal of the honorary degrees, much discrimination was shown in the reception given to the representatives of various foreign nations. While the Russian Universities were well represented, the delegate from Finland, for instance, that oppressed country whose national aspirations have recently been checked by Russian despotism, enjoyed a specially sympathetic greeting, as the representative of the "ancient Grand Duchy where Hel-singfors keeps alive, in evil days, the sacred lamp of liberty and learning." And while one of Scotland's favorite sons, the gallant General Ian Hamilton of South African fame, received a boisterous ovation, equally cordial, if less tumultuous, was the noteworthy welcome bestowed upon the representative of Holland, whose dignified and scholarly features recalled the finest Erasmian portraits. It was a welcome, too, which served as an intimation and illustration of the prevailing note of the celebration, that the republic of letters recognized no narrow national or political boundaries, and an assurance that "the ancient ties between Scotland and Holland were standing the test of untoward fortune and times painful to both, which might threaten with estrangement friendships less sincerely rooted in associations less venerable."

And finally the words of welcome addressed to the American delegates by the stately Vice-Chancellor might well be given a wider currency on this side of the ocean.—"When the Pilgrim Fathers crossed the Atlantic they carried with them not only as concentrated an essence of Protestant religion and political Liberalism as could in those, or indeed in any days, be carried in one vessel across perilous seas, but also that sturdy respect for knowledge and learning which leavened the severity of the austere Puritans' views of life, and kept their minds fresh from the stagnation of mere sectarianism. By and by it embodied itself in Harvard, in Yale, in Princeton; and expanding with the expansion of the great American states since their independence was achieved, has planted over the length and breadth of that huge country, the Colleges and Universities, which, in their thorough organization and their opulence of resource, attest at once the educational science and the generous liberality of its citizens.

The ball was on Cornell's forty yard line. McClave gained two yards around Tydeman. Center plays rolled up five more. On a delayed pass, McClave skirted Cornell's left end, and dodging Brewster crossed the line for a touchdown. DeWitt kicked the goal. Cornell 6, Princeton 6.

Brewster kicked off, and DeWitt returned the ball to Cornell's forty-five yard line, Schoellkopf gaining ten yards. Henry left the game and Roper took his place at right end. Purcell made five yards in an end run. Coffin tried a place kick from the fifty yard line, but it fell short. After two unsuccessful rushes, Princeton was penalized ten yards for off-side play, and punted thirty yards. Purcell went out and Shephard took his place. Tydeman also was succeeded by Ransom. Hunt in a splendid buck, ploughed through the center for twenty yards, but Umpire Waters gave the ball to Princeton at the spot where it had started, for off-side play by Cornell. In two rushes Foulke made five yards. Center plays gave them three more. Again Cornell was penalized for off-side play. A moment later Cornell held for downs. An exchange of punts in which Brewster had the best of it, left the ball in Princeton's possession on their own thirty-five yard line. McCord gained five through the center, a delayed pass adding three more. DeWitt punted to Cornell's twenty-five yard line, and Brewster in a magnificent run carried the ball back to midfield. Princeton was given the ball for a foul by Schoellkopf. By fierce line bucking the Princeton backs carried the ball through the center and right tackle fifteen yards. DeWitt punted to Cornell's fifteen yard line, Brewster sending the ball back to Princeton's forty-five yard line. McCord lost seven yards, regaining two of them on the next play. DeWitt kicked thirty yards. Schoellkopf plunged through the center gaining two yards, and Coffin added one. An exchange of punts left the ball on Princeton's forty yard line from where it was brought back to midfield. Foulke made three yards, and center plays eight more. Foulke went through Smith for two yards and McClave gained three through the center. A delayed pass failed to gain. With a few seconds to play, DeWitt tried a place kick from the forty yard line. It fell short, bounding behind the goal line where Brewster was waiting for it. Before he could grasp it, it bounded back across the line. Brewster, thinking it struck Captain Pell, who had run up, touched it down for a touchback. It was by that time quite dark and Umpire Waters did not see whether it hit Pell or not, and declared the play was a safety, scoring two points for Princeton. Princeton 8, Cornell 6.

In the few remaining seconds, the ball was in Cornell's possession in the middle of the field. The line-up and summary:

Freshman Football.

For the first time in years the freshman football team has been beaten by a high school. This fact, combined with the poor showing which the team has made all along is discouraging to those who realize that recruits for the 'Varsity in the near future ought to be taken from this squad.

The failure of the 1905 squad to distinguish itself is due to two things. The first is lack of spirit. The freshmen have not been so poorly represented on the gridiron in years. Every day big husky freshmen can be seen walking down the campus who are never inside Percy Field except at games. The second reason is probably an indirect cause of the first; it is the new freshman schedule of the engineering courses. The arrangement of chemistry one half the year and drawing the other half, keeps a great many good men on the hill a majority of their afternoons and the result is inevitable.

At present the team is extremely light, but it may be said compara-

Sage Chapel Music.

A comparatively recent innovation into the University curriculum is the department of music, at the head of which is Mr. Sumner Salter. This department offers courses which from the basis of the Sage Chapel music, which is a feature of all the Sage Chapel services. Part of the music is in the nature of chorus work. These choruses are composed of students from the University, and those attending the Ithaca Conservatory of Music. The chorus at the morning service is composed of those who have had but little experience in singing. The selections are confined to anthems by English composers.

At the Vesper service in the afternoon, a chorus, which is made up of advanced students, render different oratorios and cantatas. At these services the University orchestra assists in rendering selections. Solos form a frequent feature of this service.

In addition to these services, there is a Thursday Musicales. Once a month the choruses furnish the program and on the other days the chapel organist, Sumner Salter, renders selections from the standard classical compositions. At each service a solo is rendered. Every afternoon at five o'clock there is a fifteen minute organ recital.

Students in the University may register in the above courses, and receive University credit of two hours per term. An examination is required before admission is secured to any of them. Thorough instruction is given in reading music, and in the presentation of choral selections.

NAVY BOAT HOUSE

Boat House Additions.

The accompanying cut shows the new additions to the boat house. On either side a one story wing has been added, almost doubling the floor space. These wings contain lofts upon which the shells will be hung. Sliding doors are fitted and the platform has been extended on either side so that the boats may be taken in and out with greater facility. No provision has been made for lockers or dressing rooms.

The first preliminary round to select the speakers for the '94 Memorial Stage in debate will be held Friday, November 15, in the hall of Oratory.

President Schurman announced last week that no statement would be made until next June of the progress made toward obtaining the $250,000 necessary for Mr. John D. Rockefeller's donation of an equal amount.

tively fast. Under the training of Coach Duvall they will probably make a good showing against the sophomores in the underclass game, but can hardly hope to win. Their work at present, while it makes some pretense of being snappy, is awkward and will easily stand an immense amount of improvement.

The only freshman who has really distinguished himself at football is Shephard. He is at present playing substitute left half on the 'Varsity and his work in this position is excellent.

The game with the Harvard freshmen has been canceled, but the game with the University of Pennsylvania freshmen is still on the schedule and if our freshmen expect to win it they must take a decided brace. It is thought that they will do this when they come to a realizing sense of what they must do, and will turn out a fast snappy team from what has heretofore been something of a disappointment to the coaches.

THE FOOTBALL TEAM.

The Coaches Comment on Work of the Men in the Princeton Game—Outlook for the Remainder of the Season.

Now, that the game with Princeton has been played, the coaches feel at liberty to express their opinions of the work done so far and what may be expected from the football team during the remainder of the season. Captain Warner expressed himself as satisfied with the game last Saturday. "The game was well played," he said, "we have nothing to feel sorry about. They were man for man about seventeen pounds heavier."

Speaking of the work in the back field especially in the Princeton game, Coach Starbuck said, "I am perfectly satisfied with the showing of the whole team. We have a team that can win throughout the season. The work of the back field has improved much during the last week; on the whole the men played fifty per cent. better than before and for that matter the whole team played a remarkable game. I never saw a better struggle on Percy Field. I do not care to say whether Princeton or Cornell outplayed the other team, but Princeton had the heavier team. Back of the line we have Purcell, Schoellkopf, Finucane, Brewster, Torney, Coffin, Shepard and Warner. The work of these men has been so nearly uniform, that up to just before the game, it was undecided who would play. We have confidence in all of them."

"Up to the last week the defensive work was poor and slow, but a remarkable improvement has occurred since then. From now on especial attention will be paid to interference, punts and defensive work. The Princeton backs were among the fastest I ever saw. However, on the whole, they did not outplay our men. Although our men were slower their interference was stronger and defensive work better. Our material is good and, if the men do not get laid up, ought to make a splendid showing."

"The greatest weakness is with the ends. They are slow on kicks, rather generally loose in tackling and easily blocked out of play. They have done better work. Their failure to reach their former standard was evidently due to the fact that both ends have been laid up and are in very poor physical condition. Turnbull, a new man, has come out lately, who, if he continues to improve, has a good opportunity of replacing either Tydeman or Taussig. There still remains much to be accomplished in filling these positions."

In speaking of the work of the line men Coach Reed said, "The line has been trained by teaching daily a few fundamentals. We expect to keep on teaching fundamentals until the men reach the highest point of scientific individual play at the last game of the season. We think the best is far from accomplished yet, but we are satisfied with what has already been done. Football cannot be taught in one or four weeks but requires constant work throughout the season. No special work was given preparatory to the Princeton game, nor will any be given for future games, the gradual development of the team will be relied upon to meet the emergency. The work Saturday was fair and we expect better as time goes on."

"In the future, although we do not intend to neglect the fundamentals, more time will be given to team work. So far most of the time has been devoted to defensive play, now it will be more evenly divided. Special training will be given the guards in carrying the ball, also running and interference."

"The work of the tackles in the game with Princeton was very commendable. They are light and had had less time devoted to them than the guards. In some particulars Lueder and Smith outplayed their opponents and in some they were outplayed. I am looking for more improvement in tackle work than in any other position in the line. This will be necessary to win future games. The work of Kent at center was very satisfactory considering his weight. He is probably the lightest center on any of the big college teams. He played Princeton to a standstill on both offensive and defensive. He was so outweighed however that he was unable to get down the field like Warner and Hunt."

"The present prospect for new material is much brighter than a few weeks ago. At tackle we have Waud and Fitzman, who if they continue to improve, may displace Lueder and Smith. If Emmons, who weighs about 182, continues to do good work he is almost certain to have a regular position in the line. His great fault at present is that he does not charge quick enough; he is also inclined to play too high but has shown improvement lately. Utz is now weighing more than earlier in the season and all that keeps him off the team is the fact that he is not aggressive enough, he is too slow in charging his men. It is a question of determination on his part whether he makes the team. Early in the season and even now the coaches had great hopes of Cooper at center. It is not a case of strength or speed whether he makes the team but of replacing carelessness and indifference by determination and training. It seems as if so big a man ought to be doing the team some good."

Sibley Lecture.

The first of this year's Sibley lectures was delivered Friday, November 1, by Dr. A. E. Kennelly of Philadelphia. Dr. Kennelly is a member of the firm of Thompson & Kennelly, consulting electricians, and is well known to the older students of Sibley. He took for the subject of his lecture, "Electric Switches and Other Details of Construction."

The lecture was based upon the theme that the development of electricity may be traced in the development of electrical switches. Lantern slides of the various switches that have been used, served to illustrate the lecture. These showed the various stages in the development of the switch, and also how the needs of electrical mechanism have been met by these switches. Switches for a high pressure were explained and the difference pointed out between them and the switches used for a large current. In conclusion Mr. Kennelly showed several views of the electrical machinery of the Pan-American Exposition.

The annual debate between Yale and Princeton is to be held at Princeton, December 6. Princeton has the choice of question.

Professor H. Wade Hibbard and a party of students in the school of Railway Mechanical Engineering spent last Friday at Sayre inspecting the Lehigh Valley car shops.

Kellogg, '96, was appointed an instructor in German. This appointment was made necessary owing to the great increase in registration in the German courses this year.

Princeton Number of the Widow.

In the Princeton number, outside of the usual line of jokes, there is a ring of the true sportsmanlike spirit. From the cover design, done in orange and black, showing Princeton and Cornell football men, holding the laurel wreath between them; to the editorial on the game, everything reflects credit on the editors. The tiger's head done by Fuertes and the verse under it are especially apropos. On the whole, the number is the best so far, this year.

UNDERCLASS RUSH.Held on Armory Green Halloween-Won by Sophomores.

The second annual sophomore-freshman rush, to settle the class supremacy; took place on October 31, on the green at the north side of the Armory. The affair, like the one last year, proved a success, and since it again showed the superiority of a well organized and systematic rush over the fruitless and promiscuous rushes that generally occur between the underclasses, it will undoubtedly develop into a Cornell custom. A committee of seniors appointed by President Kent of the Senior Class had charge of the arrangements. Just as last year the head football coach was made master of ceremonies so also this year, the committee invited Coach Starbuck to act in that capacity. Marshalls were appointed as follows: from the Senior Class, C. D. Young, E. J. Toohill, J. P. Kittredge, A. F. Brinckerhoff, C. M. Vail, R. R. Fernow, C. S. Yawger, W. J. Tuttle, G. H. Hooker, L. S. Haskin, G. P. Winters, A. S. Petty, W. F. Lantry, Bunnell Vastbinder, A. E. Flowers, Albert Walton, C. L. Edmonston, W. O. Bever, E. H. Rowley, W. P. Foote, J. R. Patterson, H. L. Chase, J. G. Utz, D. K. Brown, R. H. Shreve.

President Burns of the Junior class appointed the following marshalls from 1903: T. J. VanAlstyne, Stuart Hazlewood, H. T. Kuschke, P. F. Ballinger, J. P. Frenzel, J. G. Smith, Whitney Merrill, F. C. Howland, Henry Purcell, Jr., T. R. Finucane, B. F. Longnecker, Ransom Pratt, W. A. Frederick, K. W. Woodivard, H. F. Sommer, J. D. Hull, J. W. Davitt, J. M. Lee, H. F. Blount, W. F. Steel, F. S. Carlisle, C. A. Lueder, W. J. Warner, W. A. Tydeman.

The rush was conducted according to the scheme introduced last year. There were three distinct rushes. Each class chose, or the president appointed, 45 men. These men were divided up, according to size, into groups of 15 men each. One man of each group acted as captain. There were two flags, one bearing the numerals of 1904, the other bearing those of 1905. The crowd was forced back so as to form a large oval. In the centre five men from each of the two divisions, which were to take part in this particular rush, lined up, holding the flag between them, while the other men stood back fifteen paces. At the given signal the latter rushed upon those in the centre and for five minutes the 30 men were allowed to struggle for the flag. At the end of that time the side having the largest number of hands on the flag was declared the victor. The first and last contests were rather tame but the second made up in excitement for the other two as it was hardly fought out until time was called. The results, as announced by Coach Starbuck, were as follows: First rush; Sophomores, 13 hands; Freshmen 7; second; Sophomores 7, Freshmen 11; third; Sophomores 14, Freshmen 8.

The sophomore team was composed of the following men:

Division 1—G. B. Lull, captain, J. W. Schode, B. E. Fernow, Jr., L. A. Parke, J. L. Jacobs, C. A. Lyford, W. S. Pratt, J. A. Studwant, Arthur Gordon, W. H. Kniskern, C. E. Kelley, C. A. Sleicher, H. B. Tibbetts, W. S. Thompson, A. A. Geisel.

Division 2—E. A. Wadsworth, captain, R. W. Nutting, F. M. Sears, H. E. Thompson, R. W. Rogers, W. A. Whittlesey, M. C. Overman, E. H. Clapp, O. T. Bennet, M. Fetzer, E. H. Webb, D. W. McLaury, H. M. Sloat, J. B. Odell, J. T. Driscoll.

Division 3—R. A. Trumbull, captain, M. E. Roe, G. H. Potter, Haines Gudley, N. C. Fassett, D. S. Hunkins; H. S. Bope, R. W. Sennis, L. D. Whitwood, H. B. Judd, H. E. Lantee, W. F. Morley, W. C. Yenger.

The freshman team was as follows:

Division 1—C. D. Ruland, captain, L. G. Gates, H. T. Bergeman, B. F. Lies, P. Lewis, D. F. Reese, H. E. Schaff, P. A. Wells, D. D. LeFeore, C. J. Schlenker, U. W. Holmes, D. F. Stevens, A. W. Kelsey, B. C. Dennison.

Division 3—W. W. Gephart; captain, H. W. Pitzman, H. D. Dunning, H. A. Bruce, J. K. Williamson, W. A. Atwood, C. N. Reitze, P. Lewis, F. N. Thomas, L. Middleditch, A. M. Rossman, A. J. Nylie, A. D. Young, F. G. Anderson, F. Miller.

Dr. Thurston has received a letter from Nikola Tesla, the famous electrician, in which he says that he must defer his hoped-for visit to Cornell University. He is engaged in work which cannot now be dropped, the results of which it is expected may soon be published. Accompanying the letter Mr. Tesla sent a photograph of a remarkable scene in his laboratory showing him at his work, with lightning of his own product flashing across the room on all sides. The picture has been reproduced in a German technical journal and is attracting much attention.

Johns Hopkins University has started a department of the Philippines. Its course is planned to familiarize the student with the dialect, patois and customs of our new possessions. So complete is the organization of this department that a person graduating from it will be thoroughly conversant with the manners, methods and language of the islands. Prof. Paul Haupt has immediate supervision of the new work, and will be assisted by F. R. Blake, an authority on matter pertaining to the Philippines.

The officials of the Yale-Harvard game this year will be: umpire, Paul Dashiell, Annapolis; referee, McClung, Lehigh; timekeeper, Whiting, Cornell.

Professor Hewett, of the German department, has received a letter from Director Conreid of the Irving Place Theatre, New York saying that the German play which was to be presented before the students of Cornell last year but which was postponed, will surely be given in the Lyceum theatre this year. Director Conreid says he will bring with him his best actors and that the play to be presented will probably be Minna Von Barnhelm. The date of the performance will be announced later.

President Schurman gave the following reason for Ambassador White's not speaking while at Cornell: Owing to the many and heavy burdens which Dr. White is forced to bear during his short stay in the United States, he wished to be excused from making any public addresses.
