

Corson Discusses Drugs

University President Dale R. Corson made public yesterday a statement on drugs and a memorandum on the subject to Lowell T. George, director of the Safety Division. The complete texts follow:

Statement by President Corson:

In September, 1971 I asked for a review of the Cornell policy on drugs, originally adopted by the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs in 1967 and restated by the same committee in 1970. The Office of the Dean of Students, through its Drug Education Committee (consisting of some 22 students, staff and faculty members), prepared a draft of a possible new statement in October 1971 and referred it to the University Senate. The Senate appointed an ad hoc committee under the chairmanship of Professor Leo Lutwak (then of the Graduate School of Nutrition) to study the problem. This committee recommended no change in the Statement on Drugs which is included in the current Policy Notebook for Students, Faculty and Staff.

The 1970 Statement on Drugs has two key elements: first, it provides that drug abuse shall ordinarily be dealt with on a counseling and a medical care basis, and that where drug use leads to a destructive, disorderly or disruptive situation, the University may initiate action against the individuals involved. Second, it provides that information concerning the sale, exchange or transfer of drugs shall be communicated to public law enforcement officials.

I support the Statement on Drugs, but in the light of the recent drug-related incidents in the area and drug-related robberies on campus reported to the Safety Division this fall, I am taking the following additional steps to increase the safety and security of the campus.

1.) I am asking the Office of the Dean of Students and the Committee on Drug Education to give renewed emphasis to preventive programs of counseling and drug education, and to explore the possibility of bringing faculty, staff and students together in the residence halls to discuss the serious implications of drug abuse for the learning process and for individual development. Additionally, I am asking the Office of the Dean of Students to review policies and practices related to the role of the resident staff in drug-related problems.

2.) I have asked the director of the Safety Division to give increased emphasis to investigation of reports of possible drug law violations and to make arrests where he believes it essential for the safety and security of the campus. I have asked him to give priority to the sale or exchange of drugs. My memorandum to the director of the Safety Division follows.

3.) Finally, just as concern for the University as a learning environment is the legitimate interest of all elements of the University community, instances of drug abuse and traffic in drugs which damage this environment should be the concern of all. Hence, I ask all individuals to report promptly to the Safety Division drug-related incidents which jeopardize the well-being of the

Campus Life Budget Gets Senate Approval

University Senators Tuesday night approved the $18.4 million Campus Life budget by a vote of 76 to 13 with one abstention, thus finalizing numerous straw vote decisions made during the Senate's two previous meetings.

In other action the Senate unanimously approved, with recommended modifications, the implementation of the Smith Plan for deferred tuition. The plan was developed by Robert S. Smith, professor of agricultural economics.

The final Campus Life budget vote upheld the Senate's earlier decisions to cut $10,500 from physical education and athletics and to eliminate a $6,000 proposed guideline change to compensate for increased use of men's and women's recreational facilities.

The vote came after an hour and a half debate over the physical education and athletic budget totalling nearly $600,000. The budget was extensively debated at the Nov. 14 and Nov. 28 Senate meetings.

Approximately 100 athletes, predominantly males, sat in the seats and aisles of the visitors' gallery in Kaufmann Auditorium, Goldwin Smith Hall, for Tuesday's debate. The athletes, many wearing red jackets representing various teams, applauded at several points during the meeting, prompting Speaker Mary Beth Norton to at first admonish them, and finally threaten to have them removed from the gallery if the interruptions continued.

She also admonished the Senators against outbursts of applause.

The $10,500 cut from the physical education and athletics budget was transferred to the new program requests. The proposed $6,000 guideline change to compensate for increased recreational use was the only guideline change eliminated by the Senators from the Campus Life Committee initial budget proposals.

In upholding their previous straw vote decisions, made in quasi committee-of-the-whole and therefore not binding at that time, the Senators voted down an amendment to reinstate the $6,000 guideline change. The vote was 44 to 38.

The Senators also defeated, by a vote of 49 to 31, a substitute motion to charge a small fee ($.10 or $.25) for recreational use of the University's swimming pools to compensate for the income lost by the defeated guideline change. Both the amendment to reinstate and a similar substitute amendment were also defeated in separate straw votes last week.

At 9 p.m., the Senators voted to limit further discussion on the entire bill to an additional half hour. Debate ensued on a motion to reinstate into the men's physical education budget $5,000 (part of the $10,500) previously transferred to new program requests. The motion was defeated 46 to 38.

Senate speakers in favor of retaining the cuts in the final budget argued that nearly all departments within the University were making 5 per cent annual cutbacks from a base year of 1970-71, and that increased use of facilities was not sufficient reason for adding on to the athletic and physical education budget in that other services also had increased use of facilities and had to curtail their services.

Speakers for reinstating the $5,000 and the $6,000 guideline change argued that physical education and athletic department facilities and programs would necessarily be reduced by that sum.

At 9:35 p.m., after three motions to extend debate were voted down, the Senators passed the entire bill in a roll call vote. Nearly all visitors and several Senators left the meeting following the vote.

The approved budget includes 1973-74 allocations to nearly all non-academic departments within the University. The budget includes three guideline changes, five "understandings," or agreements between the administration and affected departments, and eight new program requests.

The major guideline change calls for a $600,000 capital improvement allocation for renovation of the Willard Straight Hall dining and food preparation services.

The largest single "understanding" allocates an additional $54,300 to the museum budget to cover the initial operating costs of the Herbert F. Johnson Museum.

An additional "understanding" called on the administration to attempt negotiation of an Ivy League-wide reduction in athletic training table expenditures.

The $28,000 new program budget, reduced to $17,500 by the $10,500 in athletic and physical education transfers, lists eight new programs with the request they be funded by the administration. Highest priority went to the establishment of a $5,200 Mainline Program staff salary. The center provides counseling and information on drugs.

Other Dean of Students' Office programs include allocations for a veterans affairs specialist and an off-campus housing advisor. $8,000 and $5,000 respectively were allocated to strengthen the Guidance and Testing Center and women's career counseling in the Career Center.

With very little debate, the Senate passed, in principle, a recommendatory resolution for deferred tuition. The Smith plan was developed at the request of Provost Robert A. Plane following development of a deferred loan plan by the Senate's Admissions and Financial Aids Committee last spring.

The major difference between the Smith Plan and the committee plan according to Hans A. Bethe, professor of physics and a committee member who introduced the bill Nov. 28, is that the Smith proposal is an individual income contingency plan as opposed to a pool plan involving all participating members of a class.

Included in the resolution was an amendment made by an international student Senator recommending "the University investigate ways and means of extending loan programs to international students." International students reportedly are ineligible for many of the loan or employment options available to United States citizens.

The Senate voted to adjourn at 10:20 p.m., postponing discussion of the Cranch Report on long-range fiscal planning to its next meeting.

In other business, the Senate approved the nominations of four additional students to serve on the University Hearing board, as provided for in the Judicial Procedures Act of 1972. They are: Vanda B. McMurtry, a graduate student in philosophy, Caroline Hellman, a junior in the College of Arts and Science, Gaston R. Cloutier, a freshman in Arts and Sciences, and Marsha Wasserman, a senior in the New York State College of Human Ecology.

Gridders Join Dancemakers

POETRY IN MOTION — How many times have you heard sportscasters talk about a "football ballet?" Some of Cornell's football players proved that there was at least a little truth to that comment when they joined the Ithaca Dancemakers in a dance concert last Friday and Sunday in Helen Newman Hall. Football players seen performing in the dance "Tackle," one of three dances in "Cornell Suite," are (from left) Pat Knuff (60), Mike Phillips (70), Ray Kowalski (57), Jim Waite (with the ball), Mark Allen (18), Sam Costa (39) and Jack Corrigan (47). The performers in more traditional dance poses are Wendy Jones and Chas Bruner. The dance was choreographed by Sage Ambegaokar.

Researchers Warn:

Don't Eat This Newspaper!

All the news that's fit to print is not always all the newsprint that's fit to eat, according to researchers at Cornell University.

The Cornell workers are not trying to cater to unusual culinary tastes, but rather, to find a solution to the massive solid waste problem confronting the country.

In recent years the novel solution of feeding discarded paper products, such as newspapers and magazines, to farm animals has been studied. Cattle and sheep have been shown to accept rations of newspapers as a source of cellulose.

"However, the omnipresence and toxicity of PCBs (polychlorinated biphenyls), which can be used as dye carriers in printer's ink, have caused us to re-examine the value of using newspapers as a forage substitute," explained Donald J. Lisk, professor of entomology.

The researchers collected 10 pound samples of each of about 100 popular newspapers and magazines, and surveyed them for chlorine-containing organic compounds such as the PCBs.

Their results indicate that one should be cautious about feeding certain dailies to animals.

Gymnasts to Face Cadets

HIGH FLIER — Junior Dave Van Dyke, a performer in the all-around competition, executes a front off on the parallel bars as he prepares for the Cornell-Army gymnastics meet. The Cadets, traditionally one of the east's strongest teams, will be at Barton Hall Saturday at 2 p.m. Coach Bob Martin of the Big Red sees this meet as a close one that can be crucial in determining Cornell's success for the rest of the season. Cornell, which has never lost an Ivy League meet, is competing this year in the Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastics League, the "big time" of U.S. collegiate competition. This is the first year Cornell's gymnastics team is competing as a varsity sport.

community and its individual members. Sources of information so reported to the Safety Division will be held in confidence, if requested.

Memorandum to Lowell George:

TO: Lowell T. George FROM: Dale R. Corson
SUBJECT: Enforcement of Drug Laws

I am concerned about the increased number of local drug-related problems that are coming to the attention of your office. This also re-enforces my concern over drug abuse and drug trafficking on the campus. Because of these problems, I am asking that you, as Director of the Safety Division, and the members of your department, do the following:

1. Give increased emphasis to the investigation of possible drug law violations, including drug-related crimes. You are empowered and hereby instructed, as law enforcement officers, to make arrests when, in your judgment, the nature of the evidence warrants arrest in order to maintain the safety and security of life and property on the campus and in University facilities.
2. When investigation discloses a possible drug law violation at the level of a felony, the Safety Division will immediately notify the police agency having jurisdiction as well as the District Attorney's office. If the police agency or the District Attorney is already investigating the incident, the Safety Division will provide support as needed. Otherwise, the Safety Division will continue the investigation, keep the appropriate law enforcement agencies apprised of its progress, and make arrests if warranted.
3. In its investigation of possible drug law violations the Safety Division will give priority to cases involving the sale or exchange of drugs.
4. The Safety Division has not in the past, and will not in the future, employ undercover agents to provide evidence on the sale or use of drugs.

Good Heads, Feet Carry Cornell to Miami

Bill Murray (5) gives a clear signal that Cornell has its first goal in last Saturday's NCAA quarterfinal soccer win over Harvard. The goal was scored by Victor Huerta (19), with an assist from Murray. Fernando Nasmyth of Cornell was also close to the action, as was Harvard's prone goalie, Steve Kidder. Kidder wasn't quite close enough for the Cantabs.

Matt Mauro, Cornell co-captain who missed the first Harvard game, was very much in the action in the 2-0 win at Schoellkopf. Cornell's Jay Holbrook is shown in the background.

Victor Huerta, Cornell's all-time leading scorer, kicked in both Big Red goals with two and a half minutes in the second half against Harvard.

Good defense, this bit by an unidentified Cornell player, and several great saves by Cornell goalie Bruce Arena, brought the Big Red the win, their first over Harvard since 1965 and Harvard's only shutout of the season. Cornell's Kip Jordan is shown here on the left.

New Summer Session

The Division of Summer Session and Extramural Courses has announced that it will offer an intensive three-week session in June, 1973, in addition to the regular six and eight-week sessions in the 1973 summer session.

The new program is designed to make it possible for a student to take one course in June and finish it in time to hold a regular summer job or to continue in the six-week session for nine to 12 hours credit in one summer, according to Martin W. Sampson, dean of the Division.

A student who wishes may, for example, take three sequential language courses and become qualified in a language.

Courses scheduled to be offered in the intensive three-week session are: Anthropology 150, The Discovery of the Americas; Anthropology 218,

Popular Cultural Anthropology; An Evaluation; Architecture 525, The Rudiments of Photography; Chemical Engineering 511, Mass and Energy Balances; Computer Science 311, Introduction to Computer Programming; English 157, American Fiction and Culture; English 250, The Reading of Poetry; Government 104, Comparative Government; Government 313, The Nature, Functions and Limits of Law; Government 340, Government and Politics of Latin America;

French 131, French Elementary Reading Course; German 131, German Elementary Reading Course; Spanish 131, Spanish Elementary Reading Course; Psychology 325, Introductory Psychopathology, and Sociology 343, The Family.

The three-week session will start Wednesday, June 6, and will end Tuesday, June 26, the day before registration for the six-week session. For further information, contact the Summer Session Office, B-20 Ives Hall.

Chronicle Comment is a forum of opinion for the Cornell community. Comment may be addressed to Kal M. Lindenberg, managing editor, Chronicle, 122 Day Hall.

On Chronicle Comment's Policies

Editor:

It would've been appreciated if, in addition to entitling my previous letter "Sorry, No Change" (Chronicle, Nov. 9), you had explained why a writer could not request his name to be withheld. It's strange that I have had response from some people to the effect that I brought up a point of policy they did not even know existed! Perhaps you have assumed that people did know about it and why, but if I knew why, I wouldn't have written the letter asking. Please explain!

Linda F. Rosen
Department Secretary,
Structural Engineering

(Editor's note: Ms. Rosen has

Will You Withhold The Name of a Letter Writer?

asked for a clarification of policy concerning letters used in Chronicle Comment. Ideally, letters to the editor of a newspaper are brief, clearly written, issue-oriented, free of vituperative attack and offer constructive criticism or comment. Since its inception, Chronicle has not enforced brevity, since one of the unique missions of this newspaper is to bring the issues arising within the University community to the surface for discussion. In a university community, brevity of times diminishes discussion of the issues. Anonymous letters are ignored. So are obscenities and obvious cranks. Names will be withheld on request, for cause, but preference will be given to identified statements of fact or opinion. In the case of a request for the withholding of a name for cause, cause will be determined by the editor.)

An Employee Trustee?

Editor:

Ultimate power over all aspects of the University is vested in a board of 62 trustees: 10 ex officio members; one life member (the eldest lineal descendant of Ezra Cornell); five members appointed by the governor of New York State; 21 elected at large by the Board itself; 10 elected by the alumni of the University; six faculty members; five students; three elected by the Board from the field of labor; and one member elected by the New York State Grange.

It seems everybody related or unrelated to Cornell has a voice on the Board of Trustees except the employees.

The employee of Cornell labors for and cares about this university. With all other members of the "Cornell

Everyone Else Is Represented On the Board

Community" represented (and organizations outside Cornell guaranteed a voice), it would only seem fair the full spectrum be represented and that efforts to have elected employee members on the Board be welcomed.

No doubt many excuses will be found by those who oppose the move or are simply afraid of the dark at the top of the stairs. But in this era where profit corporations have workers on their boards, surely Cornell can bring itself to do the same.

Alcohol and Drug Use

Editor:

A Nov. 20, 1972 editorial in the Ithaca Journal commented on the inconsistency of Cornell officials posting Schoellkopf Field as an area where alcoholic beverages are prohibited, then completely ignoring overt drinking (if not drunkenness in the stands).

The editor might well have commented on the completely open use of narcotics and booze at the rock music concerts held in Barton Hall. While the place is well laced with campus police, they conveniently turn their heads from the smoking and drinking going on all over the place, and the characteristic stench of the pot being smoked.

The latest apparent oversight of the law enforcement officials appears to have to do with armed rape and robberies in the university dormitories where the use of booze and dope is condoned and which goes for the most part unreported and evidently completely unpunished.

Campus Police At Public Events Turn Their Heads

As suggested by the Ithaca Journal editor, either we ought to be consistent in enforcing the laws or we should revoke or repeal the lot of them which we haven't the guts to enforce.

Meanwhile, every day, able-bodied men ride around all day in patrol cars, while others spend their time ticketing University guests (and students) for parking overtime or at the wrong times in areas restricted to those who have paid their fees. This activity, compared to the earlier cited examples, does not seem entirely consistent either with the proper maintenance of some decorum nor with the best utilization of our human resources to which all organizations presumably should be dedicated.

Pancake House Complaint

(The following letter to Milton DeGraw, manager of the Noyes Lodge Pancake House, is printed here at the request of the writer.)
Dear Mr. DeGraw:

Without being an all-out worshipper of organic foods, I still wish to express disagreement with your incorrect advertising regarding your syrup selection in Noyes Lodge Pancake House. In addition to the Strawberry, Blueberry and Boysenberry syrup containers, there is also "Maple." I put this in quotes because you know as well as I do that the syrup referred to is not Maple, but a combination of various chemicals, sugar and corn syrup; perhaps it is Log Cabin or Aunt Jemima! The food technologists have not yet come up with an imitation maple flavoring that is anything like pure maple syrup, and the tongue that knows that taste is not deceived by Log Cabin. Although I cannot make any claims about the other syrups, it makes me wonder if your advertising is incorrect there also.

The 'Maple' Syrup There Is Imitation

Since a larger fraction of the general public does not care whether or not they cover their pancakes with pure or artificially flavored syrups, I seriously suggest that you tell it like it is at your selection table.

Change in 'Modes'

Cornell Snow Policy Is Modified

Two modifications in the University's snow policy were announced today by Jackson O. Hall, executive assistant to the president. The first establishes a new mode which would permit classes to go on as scheduled while the rest of the University remains closed. This will replace Mode One of the procedure developed last year. The second modification establishes a plan to open the University "gradually" during a day when heavy snow restricts travel and parking on and around the campus.

"Our top priority must be to permit the academic program to go forward," Hall said, commenting on the changes. "We will make every effort so that this will be possible."

The key to the decision to go into Mode One will be the availability of parking in the 'A' and 'B' lots, Hall said. After emergency access has been provided to the campus and to the student living and dining units, attention will turn to the two major perimeter lots. "Once we can provide between one-third to one-half of the capacity in each of these two lots, we will be in a position to open classes," Hall said. "This may delay the opening of the rest of the University for an hour or so, but we will keep all of the area radio stations informed as conditions change so that students, faculty, and employees will know when access to the campus is possible."

In a statement issued simultaneously by Diedrich K. Willers, director of Personnel Services, he noted that "the policy developed last year for Modes Two and Three, where only essential life support services and special functions are maintained, is still in effect. This provides that all regular, full-time employees who are regularly scheduled to work will be paid, and those who actually do work will be granted equal time off at a time in the future mutually convenient to the employee and the director or department chairman." Regarding the new procedure to "gradually" open the University, Willers said that "when there is a delay in opening due to weather conditions, an employee will be paid as if the employee had worked up until the time his facility was expected to be open."

It will be important for people to work out car pool arrangements wherever feasible in order to reduce the number of parking spaces needed, Hall noted. Bus transportation from the two perimeter lots will be provided in order to bring persons to the center of the campus. Persons may be permitted to drive on to the campus to let passengers out, but Hall emphasized that under these types of conditions, there will be no parking permitted on the campus. Cars will be towed away if they are left in places that impede the snow clearance effort.

Hall also noted that it will be necessary at the outset, if classes have been opened, to permit limited student parking in the 'A' and 'B' lots. Once the clearance of the Kite Hill lot is well under way, student vehicles will be diverted to this area so that the restricted lots will be accessible to employees.

"In order for any effort of this magnitude to work at all," Hall added "it will be essential for people to bend a little."

SNOW EMERGENCY CONDITIONS

Mode One: Classes and examinations will continue as scheduled, but the rest of the University will be closed until otherwise announced. (NOTE: Where it is not feasible to start classes at 8 a.m., an announcement will be made as to the time when classes will officially begin. Announcements will also be made concerning the opening of non-academic functions.)

Mode Two: Cancel classes and examinations and all other functions except the operation of specified facilities and events, as announced.

Mode Three: Cancel classes and examinations and all other functions except those essential to life support, health, safety, and basic physical plant operations, until further notice.

Bulletin of the Faculty

(Publication of this Bulletin is supervised by the Secretary of the University Faculty Robert M. Cotts, 315 Day Hall, 256-4843).

Note From the Cornell Campus Store Committee

To the Cornell Faculty:

The Cornell Campus Store Committee is trying to get some faculty cooperation in turning in course reading lists before the deadline established by the Cornell Campus Store, so that these books have time to be ordered and arrive before classes. In the past, many reading lists were not turned in by the deadline time and students suffered without books while assignments were already made.

Furthermore, without professors' or departments' notice that the same books will be used next semester, the Cornell Campus Store cannot buy them back from students at the maximum price they would normally pay if they had assurance that the books would be used again. Students thus lose financially as well. The Cornell Campus Store also suffers additional expenses in trying to order books at the last minute, being forced to utilize its resources less efficiently.

We therefore ask all professors and departments involved to cooperate in turning in their reading lists if they have not yet done so. The entire Cornell community will benefit.

Memorandum on Academic Integrity

To: Members of the University Faculty
From: The Academic Integrity Hearing Board

Re.: Academic Integrity

The University Code of Academic Integrity was adopted by the Faculty in 1969 and revised in 1972.

The Code imposes specific responsibilities on the Faculty, not only for enforcement, but also for making the Code known to the whole University. We hope that the following summary of Faculty responsibilities will be helpful to individuals and to the improvement of the academic atmosphere of Cornell.

1. Instructors should, early in their course, thoroughly explain those matters of academic integrity which pertain to the course, in particular to what extent they will accept prior work, collaborative effort and exchange or use of aid or information and indicate what constitutes an act of plagiarism. They should also be sure to state whether they will accept work being used to satisfy the requirements of another course, and whether students must notify the professors involved if a required paper is being submitted in more than one course. In courses with teaching assistants, the assistants should also be made aware of the ground rules and their responsibility for enforcing them.

2. In case of a violation or suspected violation of the Code by a student the Faculty's controlling legislation unequivocally requires that the Faculty member bring this violation to the attention of the Academic Integrity Hearing Board. Circumvention of the judicial process threatens the existence of academic integrity on campus. To notify the Board, send a letter with a full explanation of the charge to the Secretary of the Hearing Board, c/o Mrs. Barbara Daniluk (315 Day Hall, 256-4963). You must also inform the student of your action.

A hearing by the Hearing Board will then be arranged. Your presence will be necessary, to explain the suspected violation and answer questions about it. At the hearing guilt or innocence will be determined and the appropriate penalties applied by the Hearing Board.

3. If a final grade is due before the hearing has taken place a grade of "INCOMPLETE" must be reported.

It is known that sometimes Faculty members are reluctant to use these procedures, because they feel that the penalties might be too severe or — in other cases — too light. We urge you to bear in mind that individual action by teachers can lead to very serious inequities and discrepancies. Also, such action opens the doors to justified complaints by students to the Ombudsman and the Hearing Board.

Statement on the Cranch Report From the Department of Anthropology

The Department of Anthropology is seriously disturbed by the proposals put forth by the Cranch Committee in its Report on long range planning for the University. Our concern is motivated neither by the particular issues of tenure and academic privileges nor by an opposition to planning. Indeed, we welcome and support changes which might provide a better perspective and clearer vision of the academic aims and objectives of

Notice of Hearing

On Wednesday, Dec. 13, 1972, the Committee on Freedom of Teaching and Learning will have a hearing on Recommendations 9, 11, 12 and 14 of the Cranch Report. The hearing will be from 9-11 a.m. in the Board Room, Day Hall.

FCR Meeting

The regular December meeting of the Faculty Council of Representatives will be held at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 13, in 110 Ives Hall.

the University. We categorically reject, however, the Cranch Committee's view that such aims and objectives can be determined by current economic trends and the desire to maintain a balanced budget.

The Cranch Report mistakenly attributes recent "Unplanned Ubiquitous Growth" to policies of academic laissez faire. We would like to place these issues in their proper perspective by reminding the Cranch Committee that this growth was itself originally the result of economic trends (albeit defined by a budget surplus instead of a deficit) rather than academic concerns. The Cranch Report proposes not a turning from past errors, but their continuation under considerably more trying circumstances.

(We are generally in sympathy with the Psychology Department's recent criticisms of the Cranch Report. However, we are somewhat less optimistic about financial daring as the essence of good planning. We are stressing instead the clear formulation of academic aims, a view that is otherwise not inconsistent with that expressed by the Psychology Department.)

Should its recommendations be adopted, we shall have repeated the historical error of defining the objectives of the University exclusively in terms of current economic trends. We cannot, therefore, support the Committee's recommendations pertaining to academic affairs and indeed fail to understand their relationship to the proper intellectual concerns of an important University.

In particular, we would like to mention several specific errors in the Cranch Report, all of which follow, we believe, from the absence of any conception of the University's purposes and aims on the part of the writers of the Report.

1. The Cranch Report conceives of planning as defined exclusively by economic considerations, implicitly accepting that the essential character of the University issues directly from balance sheets and responses to the arbitrary demands placed upon the Administration.

2. This reverses the proper procedure for planning and nullifies much of the efforts of the Committee. An economic analysis of the University can take place only in the context of the careful formulation of the University's academic goals.

3. The approach to planning is quantitative and atomistic. University-wide indexes of productivity are formulated and then applied to the department level and even the level of individual faculty members. There is no recognition of the necessity for some departments, by their very nature, to be extremely inefficient from the viewpoint of economic productivity.

4. We are appalled by the Cranch Report's recommendation concerning tenure, annual reviews, and the conversion of department chairmen into front-line managers. We have noted that the Department of History has recently called for the revision of these proposals. While we are in sympathy with this position, we think that it would be unfortunate if the faculty were to become preoccupied with these particular issues. It is our concern that the larger issue, the fundamental misconception of planning in the Cranch Report, not be obscured.

The Department of Anthropology fully supports Dean Kahn's actions in forming a committee to respond to the Cranch Report on behalf of the College of Arts and Sciences and hopes that the subcommittee on "General Philosophy and Assumptions" will address the criticisms raised here. Furthermore, we hope that the committee will work toward insuring that future planning will be motivated by specific college and departmental concerns of faculty and students rather than by administrative convenience. We feel that such a committee must seek to correct the many errors which have resulted from the basic failure of the Cranch Committee to consider University planning in relation to University objectives.

Tenure and Promotion— A Statement of Principles and Procedures

(Approved unanimously by the History Department, November 29, 1972)

The Cranch Report and the recent memo of the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences on tenure procedures contain assumptions about academic life at Cornell that the History Department wishes to make explicit and to repudiate. The financial condition of Cornell may be such that new and drastic measures may possibly be called for (although we are not convinced by the evidence published to date that such is, in fact, the case) but the Department holds that the policies suggested in the two above-mentioned documents, far from promoting the continued excellence of the Cornell faculty and the University's preservation as a first-rate institution of higher learning, will work in the opposite direction. In what follows, we shall draw only upon the experience of the History Department, but we have no doubts that other departments could make much the same case.

1. The proposed policies rest upon the assumption that there is widespread "goldbricking" among the faculty and that the tenure system is currently widely and seriously abused. We challenge this assumption. The argest figure cited by anyone in the discussions following the presentation of the Cranch report for the number of faculty who should not now be enjoying the protection of tenure is 1 per cent. That is some 15 out of a total faculty of 1,500. We are confident that no member of the History Department would be placed in this category. The record shows that many professors, including chair holders, have, in recent years taught more than the normal teaching load simply because the courses had to be taught.

2. It has additionally been asserted that there is an optimum ratio of tenured to untenured people in a department. In the field of history, there is no such ratio. Historians, and probably most humanists, tend to get better as they get older, and the methods of their disciplines do not suffer rapid and revolutionary changes. To set artificial and unrealistic limits to the numbers of tenured professors is to deny the university the possibility of retaining excellent teachers and scholars. Such a move can only lead to the deterioration of Cornell as a great university.

3. One of the implicit assumptions behind the notion that only a certain percentage of the total faculty in a department should be tenured is the ex parte judgment that departments make serious mistakes in the initial appointments of junior faculty. Since departments then feel obliged to recommend these "mistakes" for tenure, it is argued, a higher authority must stand guard to protect departments from themselves. The History Department rejects this insinuation out of hand. Again, the record will show that we have consistently sought to obtain only the best people on the junior level and that we have resisted temptations to hire or promote historians who either did not meet our standards or who were offered to us by other agencies. Thus, for example, some years ago we refused to add a member in Japanese history, and declined to accept the funds for his salary offered us by the then President of Cornell, because we felt that Cornell's resources in this field were too slim to permit him to do his work adequately. Last year we interviewed or examined the dossiers of literally scores of applicants for three vacancies in American history. Only one candidate was selected in spite of the pressures on the American historians to find people to help out with the ever-increasing numbers of students in their courses. We maintain that the assumption of departmental irresponsibility in initial appointments or in promotion of junior faculty is totally inapplicable to the History Department. We have adhered to the highest standards precisely because we have felt that appointment as an Assistant Professor in the History Department implied the possibility of promotion and tenure. If that implication is removed, the way will be opened to expediency and the consequent decline of teaching and scholarship.

4. Responsible recommendations for hiring and promotion implies that only the department and the academic advisors to the Dean (the ad hoc committee) should decide who is given tenure and who is not. The present policy of the department is to inform all junior members, when they are hired, that they are potential tenured members of the department. The only requirement is that they show themselves to be excellent teachers and scholars. When they do so, they should be promoted. It makes no sense to hold such proven scholars and teachers "in grade" for an arbitrarily chosen period of time. As for a policy that necessitates a "weeding out" of some fraction of our junior faculty, nothing could be more calculated to destroy their morale and inhibit our ability to recruit truly superior talent to their ranks. The Department, therefore, rejects any policy that attempts to impose artificial methods of selection and timing of promotion to tenure.

5. The History Department recognizes that there may be financial considerations which may necessitate some belt tightening in the near future. It wishes to repeat that it does not feel that the Administration has made a convincing case that that time is now and respectfully requests that the financial position of Cornell be opened up to faculty scrutiny in such a way that we can appreciate the dimensions of our financial difficulties. In the event that relatively severe sacrifices may be called for, we wish to remind the Administration that there must be an attempt to balance financial stringency against academic excellence. If the Administration wishes to retain that excellence then it must be prepared to find the means of paying for it. The Department feels most strongly that one of the poorest places to attempt to practice economies is in inhibiting the promotion of junior faculty to tenure. In the short run, some trifling sums can be saved since, on the average, assistant professors make less money than do associate professors. In the long run, however, the policy will lead to academic bankruptcy. No promising young scholar, if he exercises reasonable prudence, is going to develop a loyalty to Cornell or a commitment to his students in such a situation. Quotas are intolerable — a kind of academic Russian roulette. A young scholar will hedge his future by taking the time from his teaching to build the reputation that will guarantee tenure elsewhere. Thus the quality of a Cornell education will be directly and adversely affected. Cornell will save money and lose excellence. It seems to us to be a very high price to pay for economy.

Recent Judicial Decisions

A freshman in arts and sciences admitted stealing a pair of Dri-Grip wristbands valued at 75 cents from the Cornell Campus Store. The summary decision which he accepted consisted of a written reprimand and an order to either pay a $75 fine or perform 40 hours of acceptable community service by March 10, 1973.

A senior in arts and sciences admitted a violation of Article I, Section 2 of the Statement of Student Rights. ("No student shall be denied enjoyment of the benefits of University programs and facilities to which he would normally be entitled without due process. No member of the Cornell community

Bulletin Board

Student Bills to Be Mailed

Spring tuition and housing charges will be included on the Bursar's consolidated monthly student account bill which will be mailed to continuing students on Jan. 2 by the Bursar's Office, according to Alan R. Greenwood, assistant director for student records and finance. Cornellcard bills will be mailed by the Cornellcard Office on Jan. 5.

Students wishing to change their mailing address now on the Bursar's file are asked to do so by Dec. 20 at the Bursar's Office, 260 Day Hall, in order to have the January bill sent to the new address.

Students may temporarily change their mailing address for the Cornellcard January billing by filling out a mailing label at the Cornellcard Office, 204 Day Hall. Under this system, the February bill and subsequent Cornellcard bills will be sent to the student's permanent address on that office's file.

Temporary Sex Counselor Named

Joan Bechhofer will serve temporarily as the University Health Services sex counselor, substituting for Rosalind Kenworthy until Mrs. Kenworthy is able to resume her duties.

Mrs. Bechhofer will maintain a schedule similar to Mrs. Kenworthy's at Gannett Clinic and will fill part of her schedule at the Planned Parenthood Clinic in Sage Infirmary, according to Dr. Allyn B. Ley, director of the University's health Services. Mrs. Bechhofer has a master of social work degree.

Mrs. Kenworthy was severely injured in an automobile accident last month.

Personnel Records Being Updated

More than half of the nearly 13,000 employe record forms distributed this fall to Cornell employes for verification contained outdated or erroneous information, according to the Office of Personnel Services.

Conducted for the first time on a University-wide-basis, the record verification proved useful and efficient as evidenced by the 100 per cent response to the review and the nearly 7,500 individual employe records corrected through the program.

Charles P. Arthur, personnel specialist in the Office of Personnel Services, said the corrections are now being fed into the University's computerized payroll-personnel information program.

Arthur said it is expected similar record review programs will be conducted annually. Through the review, he said, employes have been able to verify and correct important personal data: social security numbers, tax exemptions, service data, insurance beneficiaries and on and off campus addresses.

Holiday Bus Schedule, Parking Rules

Campus parking restrictions will be lifted for the Christmas and New Year holidays. The campus bus service will not operate on certain days during the two holiday periods, according to Lance W. Haus, director of transportation.

With the exception of "no parking" and "loading zone" areas, parking restrictions will be lifted at 1 p.m. Friday, Dec. 22, and will resume at 7:30 a.m. Thursday, Dec. 28. They will be lifted again at 1 p.m. Friday, Dec. 29 and will resume at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 2.

On all other days during the Christmas season and intersession, campus restrictions will remain in effect.

There will be no campus bus service on Dec. 25, 26, and 27 and Jan. 1. Buses will run as usual on all other days during this period.

Purchasing, Graphic Arts Open House

An invitation is extended to all departments to visit the new Purchasing Department and Graphic Arts Services facilities and get acquainted with the staff on Dec. 14, 2-4 p.m., 120 Maple Ave. (Parking is available at 120 Maple Ave., East Parking Lot or lot across from the building by the railroad tracks.)

NATO Science Fellowships

Fellowships providing travel and per diem for up to three months are being offered to senior staff members for the purpose of observing and studying, in NATO countries, new scientific techniques and developments. The fellowships are not intended for support of research or sabbatical study. A fellow can continue to receive his regular salary.

Application materials may be obtained from the Division of Graduate Education in Science, National Science Foundation, Washington, D.C. 20550. A completed application, containing an endorsement by the department chairman, must be received by NSF not later than Jan. 31, 1973.

Further information on this program is available in the Office of Academic Funding, 123 Day Hall.

Judicial Decisions

shall by his conduct obstruct this right.") The summary decision which he accepted consisted of a written reprimand and an order to pay the fine for a book that he had deliberately kept overdue, the only copy of an out-of-print book that was on reserve for a course of more than 70 people. He kept the book out for 14 hours beyond the due time just two days before a prelim in the course, after being told that there were several people on a waiting list to use the book that night, but that if he did not return it he could only be fined. The staff of the library later filed charges of a denial of other students' right to study.

Despite the seriousness of this offense, no more severe penalty than a reprimand was assessed because of failure of the library to notify the student of the possibility of his act being a violation of the Statement of Student Rights. The libraries are being notified of this. Recurrence of this type of action is likely to result in more severe penalties.
