FORM NEW FOUNDATION

American Agriculturist, oldest farm paper in America and for years operated by Cornellians, henceforth will devote its profits to the betterment of agriculture and farm life, according to announcement made last week. The four Cornellians who owned the paper, Frank E. Gannett '98 and H. Edward Babcock, University Trustees; Edward R. Eastman, former Trustee; and E. Curry Weatherby '15, are giving outright their entire common stock control to American Agriculturist Research Foundation, Inc.

This new Foundation will control the paper, and its charter provides that the profits shall be used "for improving the economic condition and promoting the social well-being and happiness of those who dwell upon the land."

The paper's readers will elect three of the Foundation's seven directors. Three are ex-officio the editor, Eastman; the circulation manager, Weatherby; and the advertising manager, Irving W. Ingalls '24. These six will elect the seventh, who will be chairman of the board.

Thus the former owners not only carry out the same idea which Gannett established in the recently-announced Frank E. Gannett Newspaper Foundation, Inc., but go a step further.

American Agriculturist was formerly owned by Henry Morgenthau, Jr. '13, now Secretary of the Treasury. Several members of the Agriculture Faculty are contributing editors; Hugh L. Cosline '18 is assistant editor, Frederick W. Ohm '15 is production manager at the paper's plant in Poughkeepsie, and Donald D. Eastman, MS '32, is assistant advertising manager.

CLOSE HARMONY OVER THE ASPARAGUS Goodman '12 consults with Dave Watson, Alaska "sourdough" farmer whose land is within the Matanuska colony.

VISITS ALASKA COLONY Goodman '12 Returns

Professor Alpheus M. Goodman '12, Agricultural Engineering Extension, gave the ALUMNI News last week his firsthand impressions of the Government's colonization project in the Matanuska Valley in Alaska, where he spent eight weeks this summer as a member of an official survey party.

Two hundred families, comprising 1320 persons, were recruited by the Government from relief rolls in Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota; transported to land owned or purchased by a corporation set up for that purpose by the Government; and allotted forty acres of land to each family, with a well, a house, a cow and a horse, and credit at the commissary until they are able to become self-supporting. They went last May and at the end of three years, it is expected, will start to pay back a total indebtedness of $3,000 to $3,500 for each household, the entire amount to be retired in thirty years.

About thirty families of the original two hundred, Professor Goodman says, had for various reasons gone back by early September. The remainder were living in tents when he arrived, but construction of their houses was already well under way, and he has heard since his return to Ithaca, September 17, that the houses are virtually finished, about forty barns are completed, and that all humans and animals would be snugly under permanent cover before November 1. Plans for the future include the building of a community center which will include a school, trading post, hospital, homes for teachers, medical staff, and administrative officers, a cannery, creamery, and a power house. Some of these buildings are now being constructed.

Some of the forty-acre plots were partly cleared when the colonists drew them, and within the area are several holdings settled and cleared by earlier homesteaders. The only roads in that country are those within a limited radius of the settlements, so that travel is either by means of the railroad, on which Palmer is the station of the Matanuska colony, or by airplane. Flying the 250 miles from Matanuska to Fairbanks, for example, they cross but two roads.

Professor Goodman believes that the agriculture of the colony must be based largely upon dairying. He says that the native vegetation of the region is not unlike that of Tompkins County, except there are fewer kinds of plants. The trees, undergrowth, and weeds are mostly those familiar around Ithaca.

"None of the colonists is in want," he said. "The Government commissary is as well stocked as Atwater's store in Ithaca, and all have credit there to meet their ordinary needs for food, clothing, and furnishings for their newly-completed homes, as well as for farm machinery and implements. In that climate they can grow barley, spring wheat, winter rye, Canada field peas such as are never seen in the States, hay from native bluetop similar to our redtop, cabbage, root crops, small fruits, and most garden vegetables. The growing season is short, of course—only one hundred days on the average—and the summers are cool, but days are long and the winter extremes of temperature are not below those of a hard winter in upstate New York although cold weather lasts longer, of course."

Professor Goodman was invited to go to Alaska as the agriculturalist of a Government commission headed by S. R. Fuller, Jr., New York City industrialist, to make a survey of the Matanuska colony, with full power to make whatever changes they deemed necessary in its administration, and to make recommendations for its long-term operation. Goodman's part of the work was to report on the number of families who could make a living in the area; what type of farming they should follow in view of the climate, availability of markets, and location; what crops should be encouraged for adequate maintenance of humans and animals; and the adequacy of the water and fuel supply. Besides Professor Goodman and Fuller, the party included Colonel L. P. Hunt, lately in command of the U. S. Marines in Nicaragua, who remained at the colony as "co-ordinator;" two physicians, a commissary expert, and a civil engineer from the Navy; the supervising architect of Government colonization projects; a representative of the Public Health Service; and one from the Department of Justice. The party was transported to Alaska on a Coast Guard cutter and all but Colonel Hunt and Goodman returned after ten days at the colony. Goodman spent much time visiting homesteaders who had long been living in the country, and with the extension director of the Alaska Agricultural College at Fairbanks, and returned alone after eight weeks at Matanuska.

ENGINEERS REAPPOINTED

Professor John R. Bangs, Jr. '19, head of the Department of Administrative Engineer and director of personnel of Sibley College, and two of his former students have been reappointed by the president of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education to a committee to continue the study of the professional status and employment of engineering graduates. The other two Cornell members of the committee are Professors

Ralph M. Barnes, PhD '33, of the University of Iowa, and Jack E. Walters, PhD '34, of Purdue. All three took active part last June during the annual meeting of the Society at Georgia School of Technology, Atlanta, in the sessions on employment of graduates by industry.

WORKS ON ONIONS

Nearly every day for three long years Dr. Hans Platenius, PhD '31, has been cooking onions. More than two hundred specimens have been put through the lengthy process to yield their oil for analysis by this German-born scientist who, in his basement laboratory in East Roberts Hall, searches doggedly, day after day, for both the "tearless onion" and its opposite, the most "tearful" one. His experiments are not finished. Yet their commercial importance has already induced some of the nation's largest canning concerns to write Dr. Platenius for details of his work to date.

To the ALUMNI NEWS last Saturday Dr. Platenius described how he had already determined the pungency of at least fourteen different onion varieties by testing the sulphur content of onion oil derived from separate steam distillations. These varieties, he said, were collected from different parts of the world and their concentrated oil has such a vehemently assertive odor that but one drop, unguarded in the basement where he works, would quickly permeate the four floors of East Roberts with the homely fragrance of a rotisserie. To produce a half pint of such oil more than two tons of onions are required.

"My investigations," Dr. Platenius said, "indicate that temperature, particularly during the ripening period, plays an important role in determining the relative strength of the bulbs. Humidity, too, might be a deciding factor as well as the quality of the soil. Greenhouse experiments, in fact, suggest that sandy soil with plenty of moisture, will produce milder onions than those grown in drier loam.

"Both the mild and the strong onion have a respectable place in the cuisine," Dr. Platenius averred impartially. "Housewives, to save their tears for more effective occasions, will doubtless insist on the milder onion. Canneries, however, will probably demand the stronger varieties. Not for concentrated extracts, though, for those are easily available already as synthetic preparations. No, the canneries will use the strong onion (in the flesh,) as it were, for they know from experience that the consumer wants to know, smell, taste, and see what he is paying for."

SOCIETY OF THE GENESEE

Cornellians who will have a part in the thirty-seventh annual dinner of the Society of the Genesee, to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City, January 20, include Dr. John N. Norwood, PhD '15, president of Alfred University as one of the guests of honor; and Neal Dow Becker '05, Alexander Otis '97, and Major Andrew E. Tuck '98 as members of the committee on arrangements.

MANY ALUMNI COME FOR FALL WEEK-END

Fraternity houses, hotels, Willard Straight Hall, and most of the furnished rooms in Ithaca were booked far ahead and filled to overflowing with alumni and their families and guests for the last week-end. Central Avenue from Friday afternoon to late Sunday was parked solidly with cars as lawyers, members of The Cornellian Council and Cornell Alumni Corporation executive committees, "C" men, and other alumni and alumnae came to town. Willard Straight of course was the center of alumni activity, with most taking their meals there, except on Saturday noon when everybody gathered in the Drill Hall for luncheon before the game, with many Faculty faces also seen.

Festivities started with the Princeton Hop Friday night, the amplifying apparatus being dismantled in the Drill Hall at 3 a.m. that morning and set up again to serve the stands and press-box at Schoellkopf Field the next afternoon. Many saw the soccer game on Alumni Field Saturday morning, and in spite of the disappointment of the afternoon's football game, a goodly proportion of the "C" men in town forbore the conviviality of reunions downtown to talk things over at Willard Straight. Afterward, however, the Savage Club invited all members to its own party in its rooms downtown, the Westchester lawyers held forth in the Dutch, Interim Club stayed open until the wee hours, and many fraternities held dances where alumni fathers vied with their sons.

"C" MEN TALK IT OVER

One hundred fifty alumni who had won the "C", with a scattering of undergraduate athletes, gathered in the Memorial Room of Willard Straight Hall Saturday evening to discuss with James Lynah '05 and Professor Herman Diederichs '97, and among themselves, the part that "C" men might take in the athletics program of the University. Those present represented virtually every branch of Varsity athletics, were of various ages, and had come from many different parts of the country. Discussion was general and frank, and without exception it was the consensus of those who spoke that no lowering of the academic standards of the University to attract athletes should be considered.

Fifty stayed over night, to return for another meeting in Willard Straight Sunday morning. Here it was agreed that a national organization of Varsity athletes and managers should be formed to cooperate with the University's administration of athletics and physical education, the members of its executive committee to be chosen to represent the same six general divisions of intercollegiate athletics as are represented in the advisory committees provided by the Trustees. Creed W. Fulton '09 was chosen temporary chairman and authorized to appoint a committee to draw up a constitution and by-laws for the new organization and to set the time for its first meeting.

Saturday night's meeting was opened by C. Reeve Vanneman '03, president of the Cornell Alumni Corporation, and turned over to Fulton as chairman of the Corporation's committee which had arranged for the gathering. The other members of the committee were Francis O. Affeld, Jr. '97 and Joseph B. Campbell '11. Invitations had been sent to approximately 1800 "C" men of record; replies were received from more than 700.

Fulton introduced Professor Diederichs, who was for nearly twenty-five years president of the Athletic Association, was a member of the Trustees' interim committee on athletic control, of the committee announced in January "to consider the organization of the athletic interests of the University," and is now the Faculty representative on the athletic policy board set up as a result of that committee's recommendations, to administer, with the Director, the University's athletic and physical education.

Outlines New "Set-up"

"To give the present picture of athletics administration at Cornell," Professor Diederichs said, "and to correct the opinion, rather widely held, that no essential changes have been made except the addition of another salary at the top," he outlined in detail the "new set-up" in athletics. For the first time, he said, Cornell has one man, James Lynah '05, who is responsible to the President and Trustees for the co-ordinated program of intercollegiate athletics and physical education. "He has a seat on the University Faculty, the status of a head of a department, and real authority. At his right hand is the athletic policy board, with a representative of the alumni, George R. Pfann '24; a Trustee representative, Robert E. Treman '09; one of the Faculty (Diederichs); and the Comptroller, Charles D. Bostwick '92. As Director, Lynah is also a member of this board."

For further representation of alumni, Faculty, and undergraduates in intercollegiate sports, the Trustees provided for the appointment of six advisory committees, one each for football, baseball, rowing, track, and basketball, and a sixth for all other sports. On each of these committees is an alumnus, a member of the Faculty, the undergraduate captain and manager of the sport concerned; and with three Trustees, they constitute a general advisory council on intercollegiate athletics. Professor Diederichs pointed out, therefore, that in the new set-up, of the thirty-two members of the athletics administration, seven officially represent the alumni.

He pointed out further that this organization was not authorized by the Trustees until last April, that of the many persons available the one best suited by his previous experience, training, personality, and inclination was not prevailed upon to accept until July, and that Lynah had not arrived in Ithaca until September 1, within three weeks of the opening of the University. By then it was necessary, in fairness to Lynah and all others involved, that no radical changes be made for this year in personnel of the staff. Coaches and all former employees of the Athletic Association, were, however, employed for one year.

Lynah Analyzes Problem

James Lynah drew an analogy from his manufacturing experience in describing his job at Cornell. Any manufacturer, he said, must consider, in order, his plant, the financing of his business, his raw material, and his operating organization. He pointed out that the University has an athletic plant with a value of $450,000, and spoke of the work now being done at Schoellkopf and elsewhere to rehabilitate this plant and put it in shape for most efficient production. Financing is now being done by the University, which holds a mortgage of $115,000 on the physical equipment. Coincidentally it was announced that the Varsity boat-house on the Inlet is soon to be completely reconditioned, with new showers and a locker room for visiting crews on the second floor, a new shop below, and a new launch house nearby; and that Red Key, Junior honorary society, had donated $250 toward these improvements.

As to raw material for winning intercollegiate teams, Lynah said (and was enthusiastically applauded) that he wouldn't trade scholastic standards for winning teams if that were necessary.

He believes, however, that boys with athletic as well as scholastic ability will come to Cornell, with the active interest and help of alumni, and said that a plan would be worked out by which those who take part in athletics will have their scholastic work checked up frequently and regularly so that in justice to them and their parents they may be warned and if necessary dropped from the teams to prevent interference with the University work they came here to do.

Invites Alumni Help

His operating organization, he said, by which the raw material is turned into the finished product, is under review. A part of this he counts as undergraduate and Faculty interest in sports, and said that he had been amazed to find it so nearly lacking. During this year, Lynah said, the coaching staff would be thoroughly considered, each on his merits, but that in fairness to the men concerned he had told them unqualifiedly that he would "back them to the limit" for this one year.

"I want and need," he said, "the active interest and suggestions which should come from the experience in every sport of you men who have won the 'C'. You must share with me the responsibility of rebuilding Cornell's athletics. Comments and suggestions are welcome from alumni, from Faculty, and from undergraduates. It is my part to collect all the information and help I can, then sift the facts and act according to my best judgment."

Lynah was enthusiastically applauded, and at Sunday morning's session, when he came in to report the ratification by the board of athletic policy of the membership of the six advisory committees, he was spontaneously tendered, on motion of Henry J. Kimball '11, a vote of "full confidence in Lynah and the new set-up, and the pledge of the new 'C' organization to cooperate with him in every possible way."

Full and free discussion followed Lynah's talk and again at the Sunday session. Among those who spoke were John E. Coykendall '25, Hosea C. Ballou '20, Francis O. Affeld, Jr. '97, Frank C. Edminister, Jr. '26, Ray Ashbury '25, Winton G. Rossiter '11 who told of the real pleasure he has had in influencing eleven boys from one preparatory school to come to Cornell, G. Gilson Terriberry '15, Daniel Lindheimer '35, Charles L. Brayton '23, Dean George Young, Jr. '00, Architecture, Ernest V. Strack '22, Herbert F. Plumer '05, Stanley S. Greene '15, Professor Charles V. P. Young '99, Physical Education, John Wigsten '17, William M. Vanneman '31, Henry J. Kimball '11, Julian A. Pollak '07, Dr. Lucas S. Henry '09, Andrew J. Whinery '10, William McKeever '98, captain of the '97 football team, whose son, William W. McKeever '39, is right tackle on the Freshman football team; and Dean Hill, father of the Princeton fullback and former football captain at Georgia Tech. Asked to speak, Hill said that Princeton has some of the best men in the country as assistants to the head football coach, and suggested that Cornell do likewise.

LAW ASSOCIATION MEETS

Nearly two hundred alumni of the Law School, including approximately fifty from Westchester County and the Metropolitan District who had driven up in response to summonses issued by Supreme Court Justice William F. Bleakley '04, attended the annual meeting of the Law Association in Myron Taylor Hall Saturday morning.

Judge Bleakley, as president of the Association, opened the meeting and Professor John W. MacDonald '25 reported as secretary-treasurer. Archie M. Palmer '18, executive secretary of The Cornellian Council, gave a report of progress in the campaign for funds to establish a memorial to Judge Cuthbert W. Pound '87, which was initiated last spring by the Law Association. He said that to date 121 persons had contributed $6,195 to the fund, with $294 additional pledged to be paid before December 31, 1935. Supplemented later by Judge Frank H. Hiscock '75, chairman of the Pound memorial fund committee, Palmer reminded those present that Judge Pound was for nine years a member of the Faculty and for more than twenty years a Trustee of the University; that he personally gave annual Law scholarships; and that the money now being raised among his former students and others who admired him deeply is to be used as an endowment for fellowships and scholarships in the Law School to bear his name, and to procure a portrait of him for the School. It is hoped, he said, that the entire fund may be raised before the end of 1935.

Dean Charles K. Burdick reported to the Association on progress in the Law School, now in its forty-eighth year, remarking on Faculty changes, additions to the library, and the fact that the student body is now two hundred. Professor Lewis W. Morse '28 read a tribute to Edward E. Willever, for twenty-four years librarian of the Law School, who died last March. Arthur J. Keeffe '24, secretary of the New York City Law placement committee, reported that all but four of the members of the Class of '35 of the Law School who had asked for assistance in the Metropolis had been placed. It was also reported that similar placement committees for Cornell lawyers are being formed in a dozen other large cities of the country.

Unanimously re-elected as members of the Association's executive committee for 1935-36 were Judge Harry L. Taylor '88, Earl J. Bennett '01, and Judge Rowland L. Davis '97. The executive committee later elected Judge Randall J. LeBoeuf

'92 of Albany president of the Association for the current year, succeeding Judge Bleakley.

The lawyers had a buffet luncheon in Willard Straight Hall and attended the Princeton football game afterward. The Westchester group, as usual, dined in the Dutch Kitchen that evening, one of their number being busy much of the day taking moving pictures, as is their custom, to be shown at their winter meetings in Westchester County.

CORPORATION DIRECTORS

The board of directors of the Cornell Alumni Corporation met Friday evening at Willard Straight Hall. Among the questions for consideration were relations with secondary schools, including plans for "Cornell Day," election of alumni Trustees, the Alumni Institute which was inaugurated last June, the publication of a song book, the production of Cornell dinner plates.

In attendance at the meeting were C. Reeve Vanneman '03, representative of the Eastern New York district and president of the Corporation; William J. Thorne '11, Central New York district; Herbert R. Johnston '17, Western New York district; Eugene C. Batchelar '02, Keystone district; Creed W. Fulton '09, Southern district; Russell N. Chase '22, Great Lakes district; Alfred W. Mellowes '06, Central district; Mrs. Albert H. Emery (Julia McClune) '04, Dr. Floyd S. Winslow '06, and Joseph B. Campbell '11, directors at large; Foster M. Coffin '12, secretary; and Ray S. Ashbery '25, alumni field secretary.

COUNCIL COMMITTEE HERE

At its meeting on Saturday morning, the executive committee of The Cornellian Council formulated plans for the 1935-36 Alumni Fund and approved the development of several special efforts to raise money to meet the financial needs of the University. The executive secretary, Archie M. Palmer '18, presented reports on the 1934-35 Alumni Fund, on the achievements of the Council since July 1, and on the progress of the Pound memorial fund and other special projects.

The following members of the Council's executive committee attended the meeting: Neal Dow Becker '05, president; J. DuPratt White '90, vice-president; Robert T. Mickle '92, Paul A. Schoellkopf '06, Robert E. Treman '09, W. H. Fries '10, William J. Thorne '11, and Harold E. Irish '16.

IN THE LOW REACHES of Fall Creek these days one hears the insistent chugging of a steamshovel. It is straightening and clearing a channel which the flood of last summer had choked with debris. Duly approved as a WPA project, the repair work will also include clearance of Cascadilla and Six Mill Creeks.

COMPLETE ATHLETIC BODY

The athletic policy board, meeting Sunday morning, rounded out the representation of alumni, Faculty, and undergraduates in the University's athletics administration by ratifying the appointments of Faculty and alumni members of the six advisory committees on intercollegiate sports and announcing the names of the three Trustees who will also serve as members of the advisory council on intercollegiate athletics.

The three Trustees appointed to the council are Horace White '87 of Syracuse, Nicholas H. Noyes '06 of Indianapolis, Ind., and James W. Parker '08 of Detroit, Mich.

Of each of the five specific advisory committees the undergraduate captain and manager of the sport it represents are members. Professor John G. Jenkins '23, Psychology, and Walter R. Rollo '23 of Elmira are the Faculty and alumni members of the baseball committee; Professor Hubert E. Baxter '10, Architecture, and Carl F. Wedell '24 of Buffalo, basketball; Professor Charles L. Durham '99, Latin, and William H. Forbes '06 of Cleveland, Ohio, rowing; Professor Alex M. Drummond, '09 Grad, Public Speaking, and Edmund W. Butler '13 of Brooklyn, football; Professor Bristow Adams, Agriculture Publications, and Alfred H. Hutchinson '09 of Chicago and Ithaca, track. Members of the committee for other sports are Harrison L. Goodman, Engineering, and Thomas I. S. Boak '14 of New Haven, Conn., with Gordon F. Stofer '36 and Donald C. Graves '36 as undergraduate members.

The board recognized six additional sports formerly maintained independently of the Athletic Association by those participating in them: boxing, polo, 150-pound crew, swimming, golf, and skiing. It also ratified membership of the Varsity golf team in the Middle Atlantic division of the Eastern Intercollegiate Golf Association.

CAMPUS NEWS TO CHICAGO

The Cornell Club of Chicago at its regular luncheon of October 24 heard the latest news of the Campus and the football team from Alfred H. Hutchinson '09, just returned from a two-weeks' visit to Ithaca. He was chairman of the Club's regional alumni scholarship committee and his son Edward M. Hutchinson '36 is tackle on this year's Varsity team.

The largest crowd of the year heard B. W. Snow, of Bartlett, Frazer & Company, discuss "The Regimentation of Agriculture" at the luncheon of October 17.

Five Cornellians are among the incorporators of "New York World's Fair 1939," for which papers were filed in Albany October 21. They are Henry Bruere '02, president of the Bowery Savings Bank; Peter Grimm '10, adviser to the Secretary of the Treasury; Clarence J. Shearn '90, president of the Association of the Bar of New York City; Myron C. Taylor '94, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation; and Walter C. Teagle '99, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

The new corporation purposes to hold on a tract of a thousand acres in what will become Flushing Meadows Park, a "world's fair to be opened in 1939 to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the inauguration of President George Washington and of the establishment of the Federal Government in the city of New York, the first capital of the nation."

SYRACUSE WOMEN ELECT

Officers of the Cornell Women's Club of Syracuse for the current year have been elected: president, Mrs. Harold A. Smith (Ruth R. Geisenhoff) '20; vice-president, E. Edwina Carpenter '25; secretary, Mrs. Paul F. Grassman (Florence A. Case) '30; treasurer, Frances A. Scudder '24.

"C" MEN WILL HELP

The meeting of the wearers of the "C" was a most encouraging start toward a wholesale backing for the new administration of athletics. Former athletes from every epoch and from every sport came and stayed to offer their support.

Of course, in face of the ghastly clawing by the Tigers of the little red team, the occasion was marked less by hilarity than by a determination for the future to present a solid front to the enemy, and in so far as possible to find the causes and prevent the recurrence of what might be euphemistically called Cornell's athletic slump.

Obviously an organization meeting, the open discussion was full of panaceas, each stated with that positiveness and assurance that is characteristic of the impromptu address, as if the patient had a simple disease and that the application of talcum powder to the rash would cure it.

With such a group, properly organized and fully cognizant of the problems, the new Director of Athletics will have at his back an adequate source of help, counsel, and advice. These men have, each in his time, given all they had to make a success of Cornell athletics. As in any other field of endeavor it is those that have given generously that can be expected to give generously again.

Under capable guidance we can look to this group and the hundreds of other "C" men that were unable to come to produce several fundamental results that will make the answers to Cornell's various weaknesses so apparent that answers will become unnecessary.

We hope that they will end internal bickerings and jealousies; that they will inspire the end of Cornell's own hamstringing of herself by self-inflicted penalties; that they will emphasize the respectability of preaching Cornell in the preparatory school and high school; that they will help produce in the undergraduates a loyal support that will include a will to win and a restoration of athletics to their merited pedestal; and that they will inspire the non-athletic alumni to a like return to these same old-fashioned qualities that are sometimes regarded as a bit bourgeois.

In a world of college athletics that is more highly professionalized than in any previous era, Cornell has her choice in athletics of going pro, of folding up, or of adopting some such rational amateur program.

It is clear that this group of "C" men, with perhaps a certain amount of help from the former scrubs, managers, and an occasional non-athletic fanatic, is the logical outfit, and perhaps the only group, from which this help can come. We therefore devoutly wish them success.

ASHBERY AT BUFFALO

Ray S. Ashbery '25, Alumni Field Secretary, was the guest of the Cornell Club of Buffalo on October 18, speaking at a luncheon at the Athletic Club. The Buffalo alumni were interested in hearing a report of the Cornell Day activities.

CLUB GIVES "HOLIDAY"

In the University Theatre at Willard Straight Hall last Friday and Saturday nights the Dramatic Club did two things: It presented Philip Barry's three-act comedy, "Holiday"; and it made this reviewer homesick for "hams."

So neat, indeed, was the coaching of these student actors that they almost touched professionalism and, falling just short of it, devitalized a lively play. Thus Barry's spirited satire of the acquisitive rich and their stupid lives loses tempo, elan, conviction, when presented by a group which, for the greater part, was too studiously concerned with the business of acting naturally, correctly, and with proper reserve. Restraint on the stage, like understatement in writing, can be overdone. In this case it was. The result was a refinement of manner which made the presentation vaporous, rather than effervescent, and deprived it of that essential substance which makes "the play the thing."

Julia Hardin '36, as Linda Seton, was by far the most talented member of the cast. She, alone, brought spontaneity and a certain saving tension to her role. John Clausen '36, playing Johnny Case, acted smoothly and with finish—too much finish. Although miscast because of a countenance which lacks the necessary plasticity, Jeanne Paquette '37 was still considerably better than fair in the role of the parvenue, Julia Seton. Charles Brunnelle '36, as Edward Seton, played the obvious role of the father too obviously. This, perhaps, was Barry's fault rather than Brunnelle's, for the playwright gave him lines that were often stupid without being delineating. As the heavy-drinking, unhappy Ned Seton, John Williams '38 acted gracefully. His fine mobility of expression did much for the role. Others in the cast were Jean Bradley '37, Charles Clark '37, Marie Prole '36, Charles Mendick '37, Oliver Vaughan '38, John Goodnow '36, and Leah Sahm '37.

Skillful makeup, incidentally, would have made the presentation even more creditable than it was. This should have been applied heavily to the men in the cast who, strangely, looked much younger than the women.

BRIEF NEWS OF CAMPUS AND TOWN

MELLOW ILLUSION: A harvest moon twenty-five feet high. The moon, with cornstalks, pumpkins, and colored oak leaves, was at the Princeton Hop in the Drill Hall the night before Saturday's Armageddon.

SUGGESTIVE SEQUENCE: "Serenade to a Wealthy Widow" and then— — Rachmaninoff's "Prelude." In that order they were offered October 28 by Cornell's newly-formed Radio Guild. The "Prelude" was composed for the "Seven Who Were Hanged." The Guild also presented a five-minute playlet by undergraduates.

FRESHMEN in the Department of Hotel Administration have already learned the power of suggestion. Meeting as the Cornell Greeters for the first time October 23 in Willard Straight Hall, they named Henry Ford, Jr., chairman of their publicity committee. The Detroit tycoon, incidentally has no "Junior." Other officers of the Greeters are Walter Foersch, president; Alfred Van Ranst, vice-president; E. Harriet Smith, secretary; and Carlton D. Norton, treasurer.

HE STOOPED to conquer and—he stooped 710 times straight. That's how Richard Croop '39 conquered budget difficulties last Saturday. On Friday 6,000 handbills were dropped from an airplane over the Campus. To the two best handbill collectors went complimentary tickets to the Princeton Hop. Croop was the best. A co-stooper, Charles E. Greif '37, picked up 598. He was second best.

SUPERVISORS of New York dairy herd improvement associations will meet in conference in the Animal Husbandry Building, November 1-2. At the close of the first day's session a banquet and business meeting will be held in Willard Straight Hall.

WELL, WELL, and well! While laying sewer lines for the new G.L.F. office building on South Hill Terrace, October 24, workmen uncovered what may be Ithaca's oldest and deepest well. The laborers struck the large flat slab covering ten feet down. They removed the stone to reveal a well forty-eight feet deep and five feet in circumference. In it was six feet of very cold water.

"AND MAY YOU have many more of 'em!" It was the toast of the Savage Club October 18 to Ithaca's most "tradition-est" Negro, James Miller. James, the Savage chef, (no errors, compositor, if you please!) was seventy years old. In his life there were two high spots. One, when he delivered three dozen American Beauty roses to the Spanish Infanta in Washington, D. C. many years ago; the other when he received a gold watch from members of Phi Delta Theta to commemorate his forty years of service in that fraternity.

WITH REVERBERATING emphasis the members of the Ithaca Woman's Club launched a campaign October 21 against unnecessary noises in Ithaca.

DECRYING printer's ink as an enemy of the ballad, and calling modern poetry a "voice in the wilderness," Sir Herbert Davis, professor of English at the University of Toronto, told a large audience in Goldwin Smith Hall, October 24, that now is the time for folk literature to come to the fore. Sir Herbert is the first of several exchange lecturers which the English Department hopes to bring from the larger universities of the United States and Canada. Professor William C. DeVane, the new head of the Department, will lecture at Toronto during the Thanksgiving recess.

SAGE CHAPEL PREACHER for Sunday, November 3, will be the Rt. Rev. G. Ashton Oldham, Bishop of Albany.

ONE ALUMNUS member and seven undergraduates were recently elected to Scarab, honorary society of the College of Agriculture and Department of Hotel Administration. The alumnus is Edgar A. Whiting '29, assistant director of Willard Straight Hall.

ALEPH SAMACH, Junior honorary society, has just increased its membership by seventeen neophytes. Another Junior honorary society, Red Key, added nineteen new men to its roles. Both organizations chose their members on the basis of extra-curricular prominence.

DID JOHN JOHNSTON, father of the American tile, ever wear one? A mooted question, this, with the "nayes" as good as the "ayes." As the pioneer who laid the first tile-drains in America on his farm near Geneva one hundred years ago, John could hardly be called "high hat." And still, even as he ditched, trousers were being buckled under insteps and the only respectable hat of a gentleman was a tile—"plugs" they called 'em in those days. Now that the Smithsonian Institute is soon to get a tile from America's first ditch, what about John's headgear?

About ATHLETICS

CORNELL 0, PRINCETON 54

The season's largest crowd in the Crescent, ten thousand, saw a graphic demonstration Saturday afternoon of what happens after a small hole appears in a dam and there is no little Dutch boy about to prevent the flood which results. The dam held nicely the first period without the need of reserve pluggers, due largely to Batten's kicking, twice from well beyond the center of the field across Princeton's goal line and again from the twenty-five-yard line. The line held too, the Varsity taking the ball from Princeton on downs within three yards of their own goal near the end of the period.

The little hole didn't even appear to be dangerous when White, early in the second quarter, dashed around left end for the first touchdown after a fake field goal try. But when Pauk got through the entire Cornell team to run back the kick-off eighty yards to make the second touchdown, the flood was unleashed, never to be stopped. Princeton ran roughshod over the Varsity to make eight touchdowns in all, blanking them by the largest score since football moved to Schoellkopf Field in 1915. Only three times in history had Cornell scored nothing against a greater total: twice to Yale in 1889, 56-0 and 72-0, and to Harvard in 1890, 77-0. Next year Yale replaces Princeton on the Varsity schedule, probably for one year.

Princeton scored 20 points in the second quarter of Saturday's game. After two touchdowns had started the flood, the Varsity elected to receive and Batten fumbled on his twenty-eight, the ball being recovered by Princeton. A lateral pass behind the line failed, but on the next play White got away to run twenty-eight yards for the third touchdown, all within the first four minutes of the quarter. Thereafter a series of unsuccessful Princeton pass attempts and a punting duel kept play centered in the field until the half.

Opening the third, the Varsity threatened seriously to score after an exchange of punts, but could not get beyond Princeton's four-yard line. Batten hurled a pass to Nelson to gain fifteen yards and put the ball on the Princeton twenty-eight, and another forward, Wilson to Nelson, netted twenty more to the eighty-yard line. Two line smashes by Andrew Peirce advanced the ball to the four-yard line, but it was lost on downs when Hack Wilson was stopped without gain on an off-tackle thrust and his attempted pass to Wilson was knocked down.

From then on the flood swept over the field unchecked, with reserves coming in almost in unceasing stream from the Princeton bench, and the Cornell reserves being put in as they were able, mostly in the backfield. Nothing could stop it, however, as Kaufman ran thirty-nine yards through right guard late in the third to bring the score to 26-0, and Irwin, on the fourth play of the final period, ran forty-one yards for another touchdown. Three more were made before the whistle blew, the play not once getting into Princeton territory and the Cornell defenders against the flood, game but completely routed.

Elliott H. Hooper '38, left-footed punter, son of Franklyn D. Hooper '07, played in his first Varsity game as No. 3 back in place of Andrew W. Peirce, son of Clarence A. Peirce '07. Nelson and Henry A. Lanman '38, son of Henry A. Lanman '12, played the entire fourth quarter, and Herbert J. Mols '36, advanced during the week to the second team from the All-Americans, took Captain Wilson's place and did a good job, considering the odds.

Borger, left guard, was helped off the field late in the first half with a dislocated shoulder which may keep him out for several weeks. His place was taken by Burdick W. Pierce '38, a son Ralph E. Pierce '11, who also turned in a good performance rivaling Batten in the third with a sixty-yard kick-off over the goal line. Nelson played with a broken toe.

BOOTERS WIN AGAIN

The soccer team successfully defended the Cornell championship of the Middle Atlantic League against an undefeated veteran Princeton team Saturday morning on Alumni Field, winning 1-0. The game was bitterly contested throughout, with the Varsity dominating but unable to score until after five minutes of the fourth period, when Chewning at inside left came out of a scramble and booted home the tally. Thereafter the Princeton booters made several dangerous attempts at the Cornell net, but Coors warded off all thrusts.

With but three letter men back, the Varsity was against a Princeton squad of thirteen experienced players.

Concerning THE FACULTY

WILLIAM F. DURAND, associate professor of marine engineering at the University from 1891 to 1904 and now professor emeritus of mechanical engineering at Stanford, has been awarded the John Fritz gold medal for 1936. The thirty-second scholar ever to receive the award, Professor Durand was cited by the judging board as an "authority in hydrodynamic and areodynamic science and in its practical application; outstanding leader in research, and in engineering education."

PROFESSORS GEORGE F. WARREN '03 and Frank A. Pearson '12, Agricultural Economics, issued a joint statement October 21 that there would be no appreciable rise in American prices unless a world-wide rise in the price of gold occurs. On the same day Dr. Warren also assured 1,300 delegates to the Grange League Federation Exchange in Syracuse that the nation had reached a period of "partial recovery" and that factors governing the price of farm products are more favorable than for several years.

JAMES LYNNAH '05, Director of Athletics and Physical Education, was elected a steward of the American Rowing Association at a recent meeting of that organization in New York City. Romeyn Berry '04, Director of Intercollegiate Athletics, was re-elected to the same position.

MEMBERS of the Faculty scheduled for addresses in Canton during Farmers' Week October 23-25 were: Dr. Earle L. Brunett '22, Poultry; Professor Elmer S.

Savage, PhD '11, Animal Husbandry; and Professor D. B. Johnstone-Wallace, Agronomy.

Concerning THE ALUMNI

'94 CE—A daughter was born October 14 to John D. Rockefeller, 3d, and Mrs. Rockefeller. The latter is daughter of Elon H. Hooker '94. The infant, named Sandra Ferry Rockefeller, is a great-grand-daughter of John D. Rockefeller, founder of the oil empire.

'95 ME—Ellis L. Phillips, president of the Long Island Lighting Company, announced October 7 that his company had just completed negotiations for private sale of $5,992,000 of its first refunding mortgage four percent bonds to three large insurance companies.

'95 LLB—Le Roy J. Skinner of Medina was elected second vice-president of the New York State Automobile Association when members of that organization met in New York City October 9.

'01 ME (E)—The Carrier Engineering Corporation, Newark, N. J., of which Willis H. Carrier is chairman of the board, is installing the world's largest air-conditioning plant in Robinson Deep, a rich gold mine at Witwatersrand, South Africa. The contract, calling for a $500,000 expenditure, will supply the mine, 8,500 feet deep, with 400,000 cubic feet of air blown into the shaft and its galleries at a velocity of 2000 feet a minute. This air, kept at a temperature of thirty-five degrees Fahrenheit, will produce the cooling effect of 4,000,000 pounds of ice.

'01 LLB—Roy M. Hart retired recently as a director of the Brooklyn Real Estate Board.

'03 ME—John H. Van Deventer, editor of Iron Age, told members of Kiwanis clubs assembled in Lancaster, Pa. for their state convention October 8, that the machine age has been the greatest multiplier and equalizer of wealth the world has ever known. He pointed out that although ninety-eight percent of present-day Americans earn less than $3,000, one in every three owns his own automobile.

'05 LLB—William L. Ransom, president of the American Bar Association, discussed "The Better Organization of the Bar Association" to two hundred members and guests attending the sixth annual conference of the Federation of Bar Associations of the Sixth Judicial District in Binghamton, October 5.

'09 AB—Robert E. Treman addressed members of the Ithaca Section of the American Society of Civil Engineers, October 17, on "Big Game Hunting in the Rockies."

'09—Dr. Charles F. Pabst, Brooklyn dermatologist, recently presented to President Roosevelt for government use his non-patented method for fireproofing ships' furnishings. To the ALUMNI NEWS Dr. Pabst writes that he discovered the method twenty years ago when he was coroner's physician of Brooklyn. It is a solution of ammonium phosphate and, he says, can be applied without resulting damage to draperies, decorations, and children's play suits. The solution, it is believed, will help obviate marine disasters similar to that of the Morro Castle last year.

'10 AB—Benjamin D. Beyea is employed in the development department of E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company, Wilmington, Delaware. He lives there with his wife, son, and daughter, at 728 Greenhill Avenue.

'11—"How does one keep a red bird red?" This is the nettling question Lee S. Crandall, curator of birds at the Bronx Zoo, is asking himself these days as he gives two new ibis from Para, Brazil, a strong diet of ultra-violet rays and vitamins, to preserve, if possible, their scarlet plumage. Crandall, quoted at length in the October 8 issue of the New York Sun, says that brilliantly colored birds quickly lose their natural hues once they are captured. The exact cause for this, he adds, is not known. It is believed, however, that the fierce sunlight of their tropical habitats and the chemistry of their natural food contribute much to the coloration which is lost in zoo life.

Sentimentalists, too, suffered a jolt from the Crandall interview. Bird mating, theme of poets and pious analogy, is not the result of any feathered romance whatever, Crandall says. "The female bird, upon reaching the marrying age, simply chooses the first handy male who can offer her what she thinks she should have in the way of a home and security."
