Welcome to the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA). NARA is the government agency responsible for overseeing the management of the records of the federal government. NARA ensures, for the Citizen and the Public Servant, for the President and the Congress and the Courts, ready access to essential evidence that documents the rights of American citizens, the actions of federal officials, and the national experience.

The Visitor's Gallery

- Online Exhibit Hall: selected NARA exhibitions
- Gift Shop and Book Store: publications and merchandise relating to NARA and its holdings
- The Digital Classroom: ideas, programs, and publications for the teacher
- Public Programs: conferences, training programs, lectures, films, tours, and other public events

Looking for Information in the National Archives

Genealogy and Individuals

The Genealogy Page provides general information on NARA's resources on individuals, such as veterans, as well as guides to the use of NARA holdings. There are only a very few genealogical records currently available online.

Historical Records of Government Agencies

NARA makes available to the public the historically valuable records of the three branches of federal government: executive (including the President), Legislative, and judicial. National Archives holdings include textual; audiovisual; cartographic and architectural; and electronic records.

Searching the Osborn Collection Finding Aids

Search the available finding aids for the James Marshall and Marie-Louise Osborn Collection Collection using keyword(s) and Boolean connectors (and, or, not). If two search terms are entered without a connector, an "or" connector is assumed. Words can be truncated using an asterisk and the searching is case insensitive. Parentheses may be used to build more complicated searches.

A search will retrieve a list of all files in the Osborn Collection directory which contain the searched keyword(s) anywhere within the text. To a significant extent, search capabilities within each document retrieved will vary in accordance with your local system. Use your local help screens for further information.

In some cases, materials pertaining to an individual whose papers are primarily located in the Osborn Collection can also be found in other Beinecke holdings. The Burney Family Papers, for example, are a large holding in the Osborn Collection, but single letters (or groups of letter) to or from various individual members of the Burney family may be found in other Beinecke Collections. You may wish to search Search All Beinecke Manuscript Collections or to repeat your search in other relevant collection directories to obtain the most complete results. For more information about searching Beinecke Library finding aids refer to About Searching Beinecke Library Finding Aids.

Welcome to the Yale Finding Aid Database

This database consists of finding aids for archival and manuscript materials at Yale University. Their purpose is to provide information about the creation, historical context, arrangement, and content of archival and manuscript collections as well as the information necessary for users to identify and request the portions relevant to their research. These finding aids vary in style, depth of detail, and amount of materials covered, but their common purpose is to describe and enable access to archival and manuscript collections.

Finding aids represent holdings from:

- · Manuscripts and Archives (Sterling Memorial Library)
- Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library
- Yale Divinity School Library
- · Irving S. Gilmore Music Library
- Visual Resources Collection

For more information on conducting research with archival and manuscript materials at Yale, see Primary Sources at Yale.

Pre-1600 Manuscripts at the Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library are now searchable in a separate database.

AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power (ACT UP) is an international direct action advocacy group working to impact the lives of people with AIDS (PWAs) and the AIDS pandemic to bring about legislation, medical research and treatment and policies to ultimately bring an end to the disease by mitigating loss of health and lives.^[1]

ACT UP was effectively formed in March, 1987 at the Lesbian and Gay Community Services Center in New York. Larry Kramer was asked to speak as part of a rotating speaker series, and his well-attended speech focused on action to fight AIDS. Kramer spoke out against the Gay Men's Health Crisis (GMHC), which he perceived as politically impotent. Kramer had co-founded the GMHC but had resigned from its board of directors in 1983. According to Douglas Crimp, Kramer posed a question to the audience: "Do we want to start a new organization devoted to political action?" The answer was "a resounding yes." Approximately 300 people met two days later to form ACT UP.^[2]

Actions

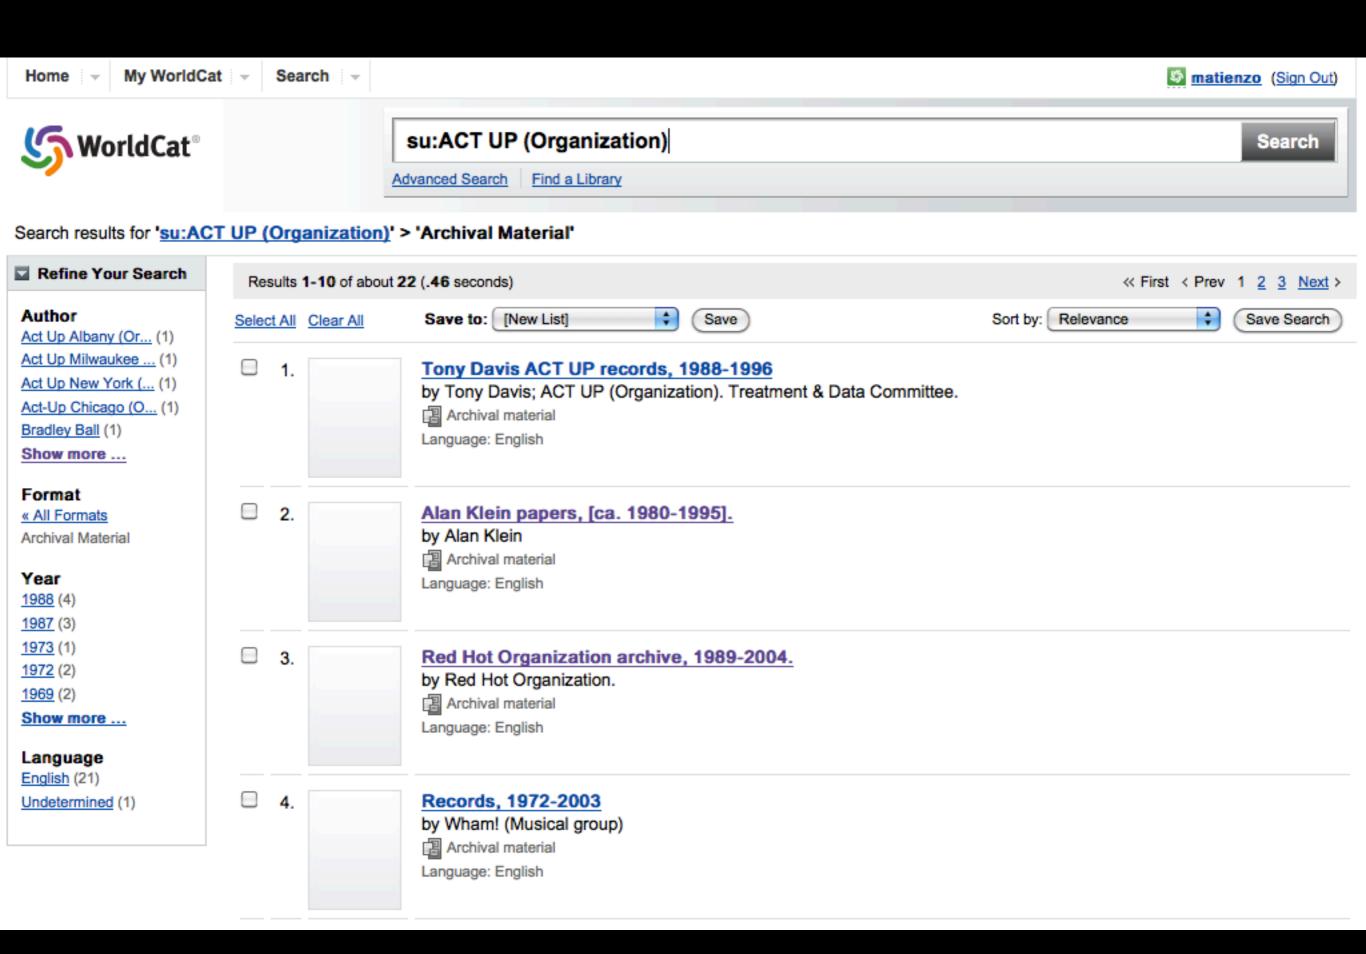

The following chronological accounts of ACT UP actions are drawn from Douglas Crimp's history of ACT UP, the ACT UP Oral History Project, and the online Capsule History of ACT UP, New York. [3]

Wall Street

On March 24, 1987, 250 ACT UP members demonstrated at Wall Street and Broadway to demand greater access to experimental AIDS drugs and for a coordinated national policy to fight the disease. An Op/Ed article by Larry Kramer published in the New York Times the previous day described some of the issues ACT UP was concerned with. Seventeen ACT UP members were arrested during this civil disobedience.

On March 24, 1988, ACT UP returned to Wall Street for a larger demonstration in which over 100 people were arrested. [7]

On September 14, 1989, seven ACT UP members infiltrated the New York Stock Exchange and chained themselves to the VIP balcony to protest the high price of the only approved AIDS drug, AZT. The group displayed a banner that read, "SELL WELLCOME" referring to the pharmaceutical sponsor of AZT, Burroughs Wellcome, which had set a price of approximately $10,000 per patient per year for the drug, well out of reach of nearly all HIV positive persons. Several days following this demonstration, Burroughs Wellcome lowered the price of AZT to $6,400 per patient per year. [8]

The ACT UP Oral History Project is a collection of interviews with surviving members of the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power, New York. The project is coordinated by Jim Hubbard and Sarah Schulman, with camera work by James Wentzy (in New York) and (on the West Coast) S. Leo Chiang and Tracy Wares.

The purpose of this project is to present comprehensive, complex, human, collective, and individual pictures of the people who have made up ACT UP/New York. These men and women of all races and classes have transformed entrenched cultural ideas about homosexuality, sexuality, illness, health care, civil rights, art, media, and the rights of patients. They have achieved concrete changes in medical and scientific research, insurance, law, health care delivery, graphic design, and introduced new and effective methods for political organizing. These interviews reveal what has motivated them to action and how they have organized complex endeavors. We hope that this information will de-mystify the process of making social change, remind us that change can be made, and help us understand how to do it. (ACT UP continues to fight to end the AIDS epidemic. For more information on ACT UP's current activities, see their website www.actupny.org.)

A transcript of each interview is available in full in PDF format, through free download via this website. You can also see streaming video clips of many of the interviews. Just click on Interviews. Unedited tapes of the interviews can be viewed at the San Francisco Main Library and the New York Public Library (5th Avenue and 42nd Street). For further information about the project, click on Contact or to purchase video copies, please click on on Ordering.

This project is a program of MIX—the New York Lesbian and Gay Experimental Film/Video Festival and is funded by a major grant from the Ford Foundation and by grants from the Gesso Foundation, the Gill Foundation, the Jessie Smith Noyes Foundation and the Phil Zwickler Memorial & Charitable Trust. The project has also been supported by public funds from the New York State Council on the Arts. We are also grateful for the generous donation from our friend Philip Willkie.

From MARC to Mosaic: Progressing toward Data Interchangeability at the Oregon State Archives

Dan Cantrall, Oregon State Archives

This article is chiefly devoted to explaining the technology used by the Oregon State Archives to realize the goal of data interchangeability. The ability to present information in a variety of formats, unconstrained by technological barriers is a worthy goal. This goal is worth pursuing because new exciting mediums of electronic information delivery are rapidly being developed and used by higher education and business. Archivists have a "product" that is by definition unique. The information contained in our collective holdings enriches our cultural experience, documents our legal rights, and provides entertainment. We already have the "product", and we now have the opportunity to be on the forefront of information delivery. Our information is too valuable and interesting to be left only to MARC-based electronic finding aids.

Linked Data

I have a dream for the Web [in which computers] become capable of analyzing all the data on the Web - the content, links, and transactions between people and computers. A 'Semantic Web', which should make this possible, has yet to emerge, but when it does, the day-to-day mechanisms of trade, bureaucracy and our daily lives will be handled by machines talking to machines. The 'intelligent agents' people have touted for ages will finally materialize.

Linked Data is a way to link better.

Design Principles

- 1. Use URIs for names of things
- 2. Use HTTP URIs so people can look up those names
- 3. Provide useful information in standard formats* at those URIs
- 4. Include links to other URIs so people can discover more things

Naming things with URIs tells us what to call them unambiguously.

Using HTTP URIs tells us how and where to find these things.

Providing data in standard formats* tells us what that thing is.

*EAD is not a standard format in this sense.

RDF

- 1. Resource Description Framework
- 2. Presents relationships in a simple data structure
- 3. We can draw graphs of those relationships
- 4. We can represent those relationships in multiple formats for computers

In RDF, we say some thing has a property with a certain value.

This three-part concept is called an RDF triple.

The thing in a triple is that triple's subject.

The property in a triple is that triple's predicate.

The value in a triple is that triple's object.

thing (Me) property value

An RDF Graph

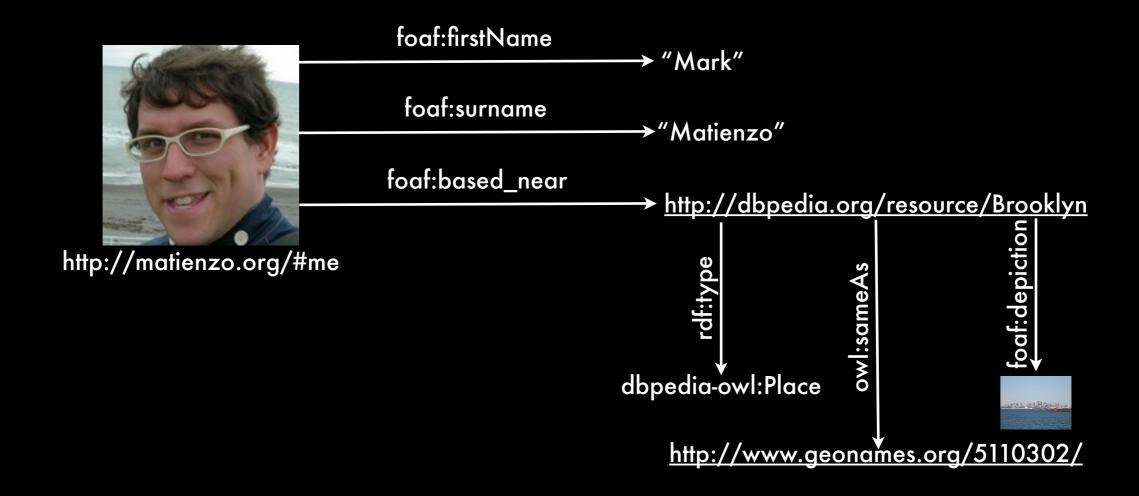

An RDF Graph

An RDF Graph

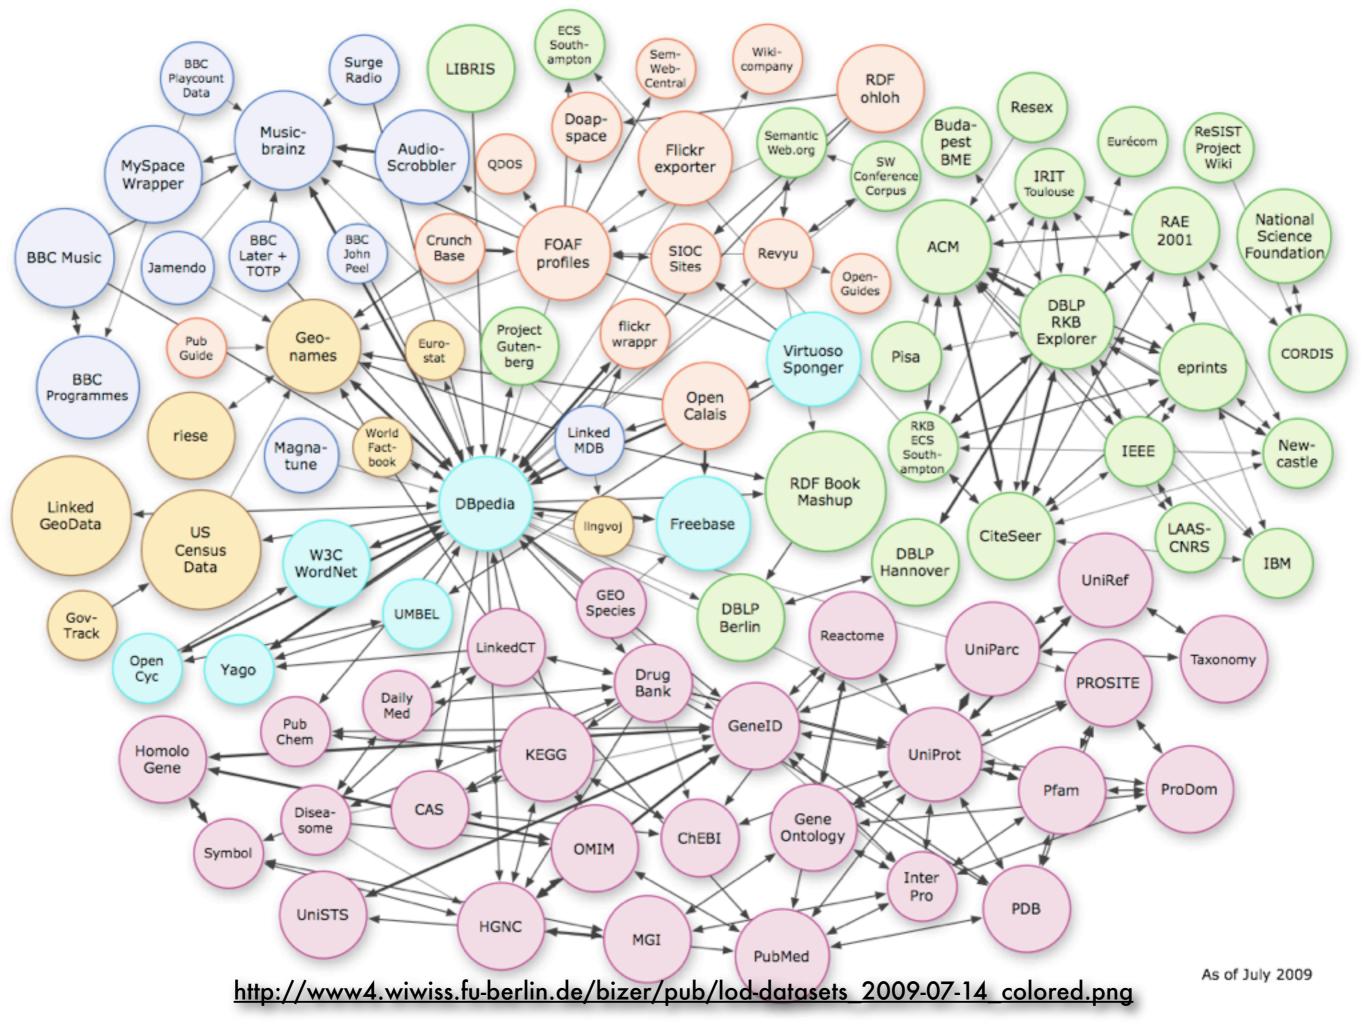

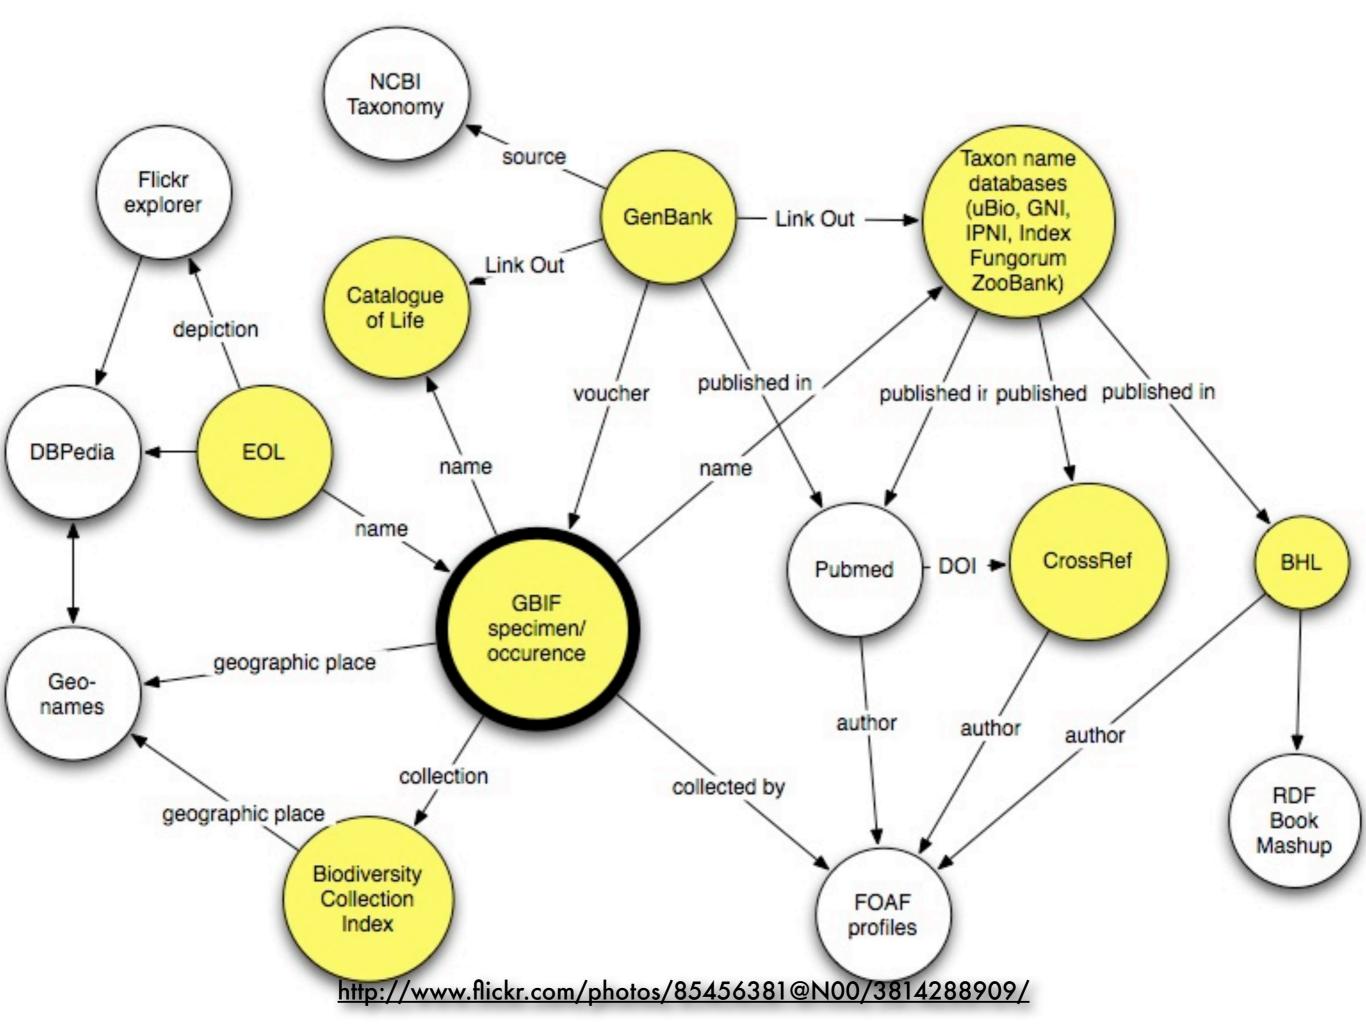

Simply linking to things is not enough.

RDF graphs show why we link to other things.

These links say what the relationships are.

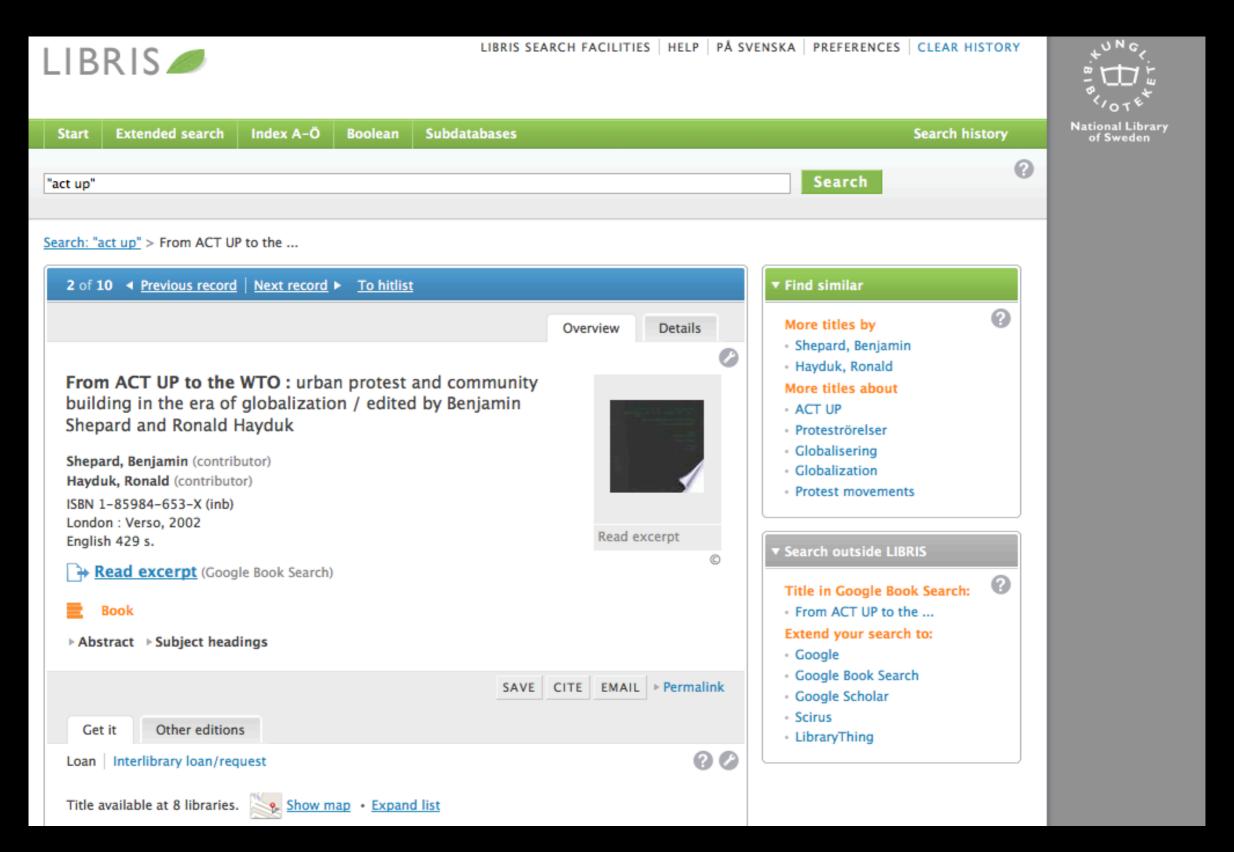

Links between things become crossreferences.

Archival description

Archival description is very different from bibliographic cataloging.

Manuscripts are not books!

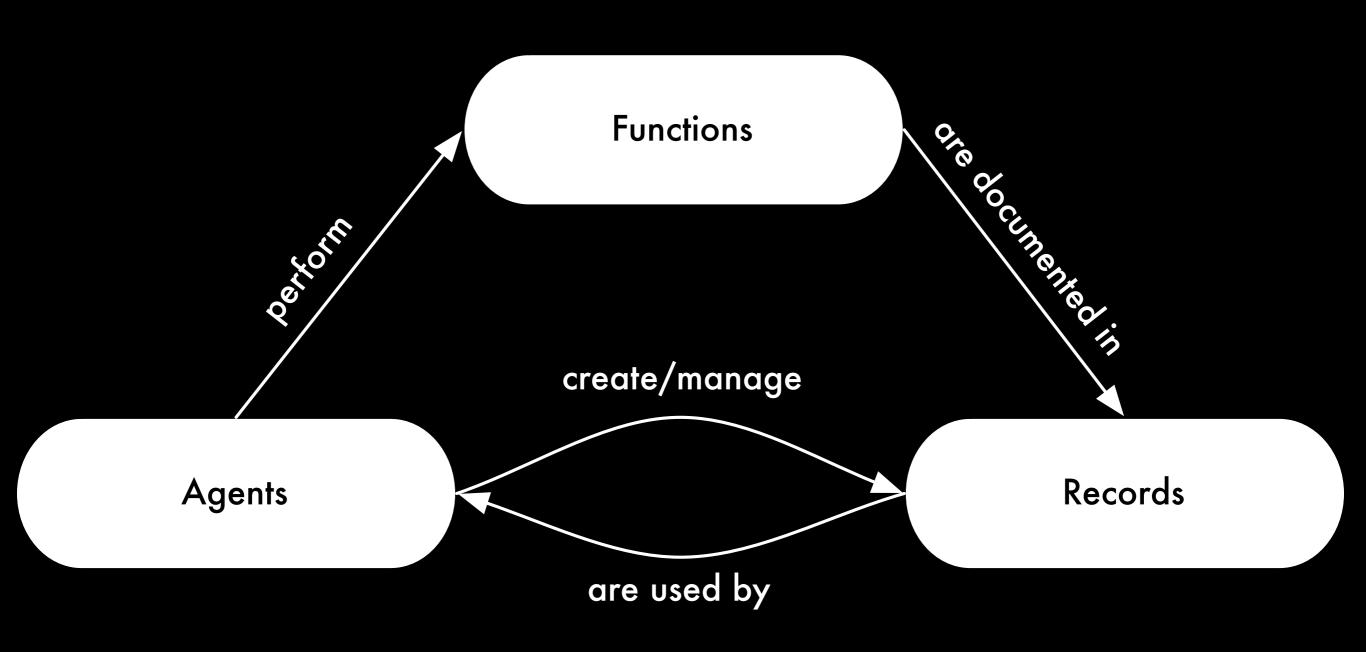

[Square bracket problem]

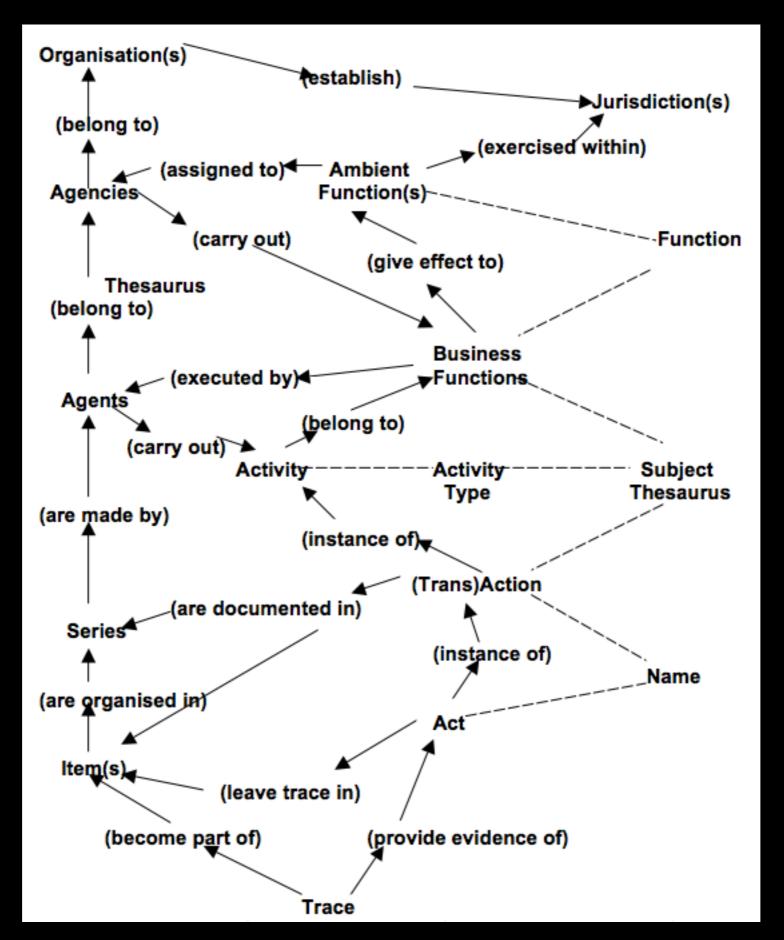

Context and provenance

	Arthur Wellesley's Activities as	are documented in the Archives of
by 1769 -post 1852	1. a member of the Wellesley family	Wellesley Family - Mornington Branch Wellesley Family - Wellington Branch
1790-1794 etc. etc.	2. a member of Parliament	Parliament - House of Commons Parliament - Constituencies Parliament - Committees Parliament - House of Lords
1803-1805	3. Political & Military agent in Deccan and S. Mahratta states	Government of India - Political Records Government of India - Military Records
1807-1809	4. Chief Secretary for Ireland	Govt of Ireland - Executive Records
1809-1814	5. Commander of Allied Forces in Iberian Peninsula.	 Allied Military Forces - Peninsulao Portugese M/F - Peninsulao B Peninsula Spanish M/F - Peninsula (from 1812)
1814	6. Ambassador to France	British Diplomatic Service
1815	7. British Plenipotentiary - Congress of Vienna	British Diplomatic Service

Chris Hurley, "Problems with Provenance," Archives and Manuscripts 23(2) (November 1995).

Archival description is inherently multi-level and relational.

Chris Hurley, "Relationships in Records," originally published in New Zealand Archivist, 2001-2004.

ISAD(G) § 2.4

NON-REPETITION OF INFORMATION

Purpose:

To avoid redundancy of information in hierarchically related archival descriptions.

Rule:

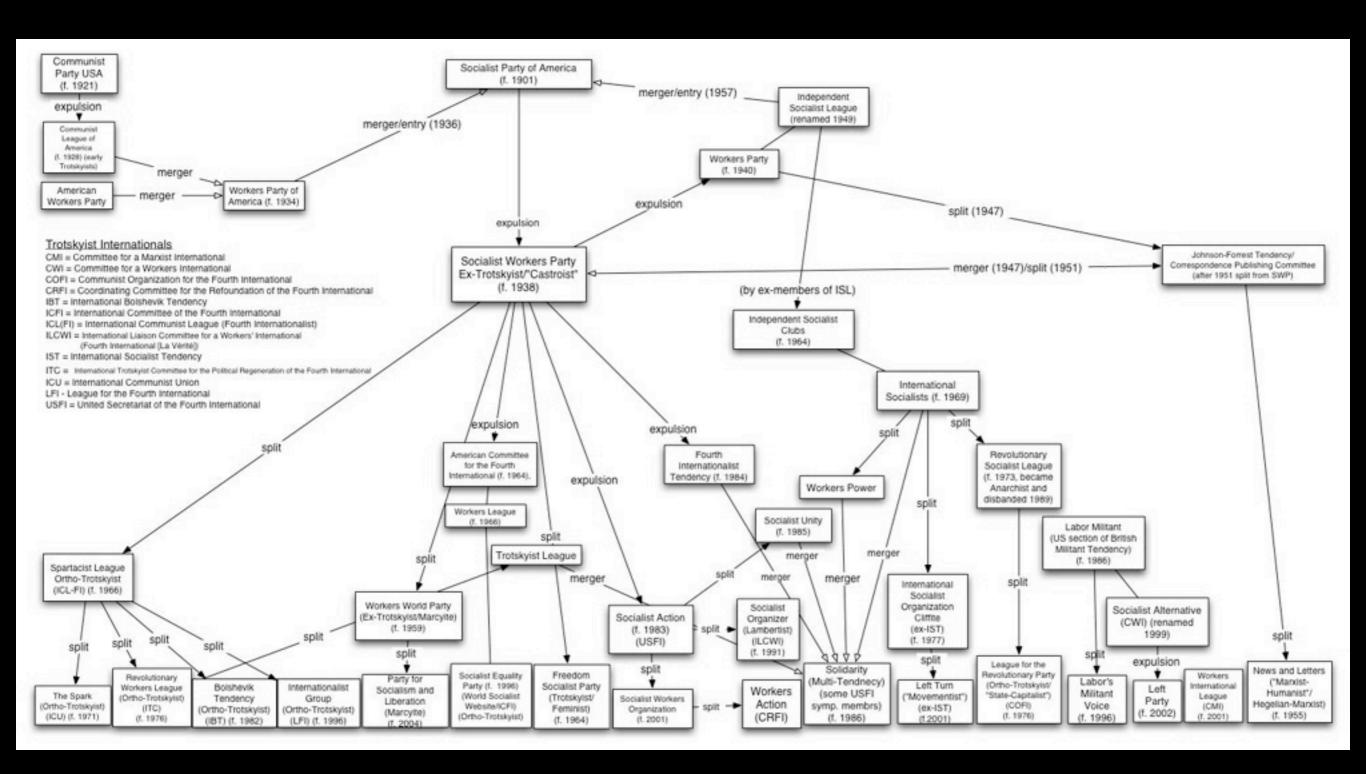

At the highest appropriate level, give information that is common to the component parts. Do not repeat information at a lower level of description that has already been given at a higher level.

Archival description is different from cataloging, but...

Structural description is analogous to bibliographic control

Contextual description is analogous to authority control

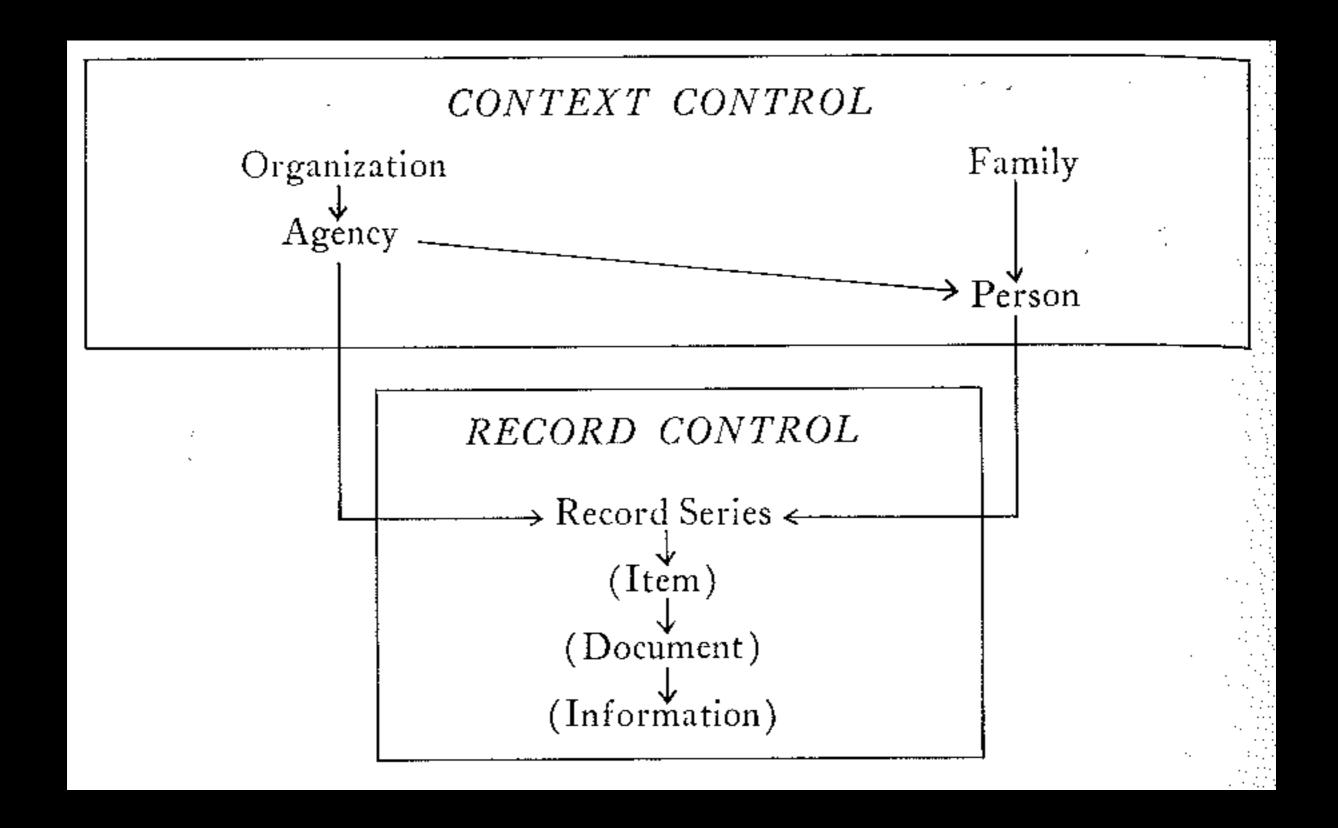

The Importance of Context

Linked data is not a new concept in archives.

[W]hat should be done with series which begin under one Administration and End under another? ... It seems quite clear that the Archivist's only plan in such a case if he wishes to avoid confusion is to class the Archives separately under the Administrations which actually created them ... a proper system of cross-reference will leave no doubt as to what has occurred.

If the series becomes the primary level of classification, and the item the secondary level, a) items are kept in their administrative context and original order by physical allocation to their appropriate series, and b) series are no longer kept in any original physical order in a record or shelf group (if there is any such order) but simply have their administrative context and associations recorded on paper.

Peter J. Scott, "The Record Group Concept: A Case For Abandonment," American Archivist 29(4), 1966.

STRUCTURAL AND DIACHRONIC LINKS OF SERIES

Element

Links

Record

A. CONTEXT CONTROL;

1. (a) Organisation

To Same Element:

- (1) Previous
 Organisation
- (2) Subsequent Organisation
- (3) Organisation(s) controlling
- (4) Organisation(s) controlled

To Other Elements:

(5) Agencies controlled

- (1) Register of Organisations.
- (2) Register of Organisations
- (3) Register of Organisations
- (4) Register of Organisations
- (5) Index to (and inventory of)
 Agencies by Organisation

All these interrelationships are not fixed one-to-one linkages, as in most archival descriptive approaches (despite some crossreferencing), but rather exist as many-toone, one-to-many, and many-to-many relationships ... In effect, Scott shifted the entire archival description enterprise from a static cataloguing mode to a dynamic system of multiple interrelationships.

EAD as Linked Data, EAD and Linking Data

Seemingly a natural fit

It's not necessarily easy to execute.

EAD isn't up for the task.

EAD is document-centric standard, not a data-centric standard.

EAD is both too flexible and too unforgiving.

EAD doesn't allow elements from other namespaces.

Attributes like @authfilenumber and @encodinganalog are totally insufficient.

None of those linking elements describe why we make links in a machine-friendly way.

What about archival description as RDF, reusing library-focused ontologies, etc.?

Here be dragons.

I would argue that, as we explore the facets of multiple-provenance more deeply, the greatest danger to be avoided is any confusion between linkages (relationships) which are established to show provenance and others which are designed to retrieve on the basis of different ideas (e.g. subject).

Archival description contains lots of implicit information.

"Inheritance" of data in multi-level description is highly implicit.

Hurley/Bearman: Terminological Control Physical Inheritance

Hurley/Bearman: Contextual Control Associational Inheritance

Series, items, etc. in archival fonds are neither subclasses nor instances of fonds.

Archival inheritance is, in some cases, attribute propagation.

Some information should not propagate across multiple levels.

How does a descriptive system inherit data across descriptive levels?

ISAD(G) § 2.4

NON-REPETITION OF INFORMATION

Purpose:

To avoid redundancy of information in hierarchically related archival descriptions.

Rule:

At the highest appropriate level, give information that is common to the component parts. Do not repeat information at a lower level of description that has already been given at a higher level.

This should be resolved in descriptive output, not the underlying data.

Humans can benefit with non-redundant data.

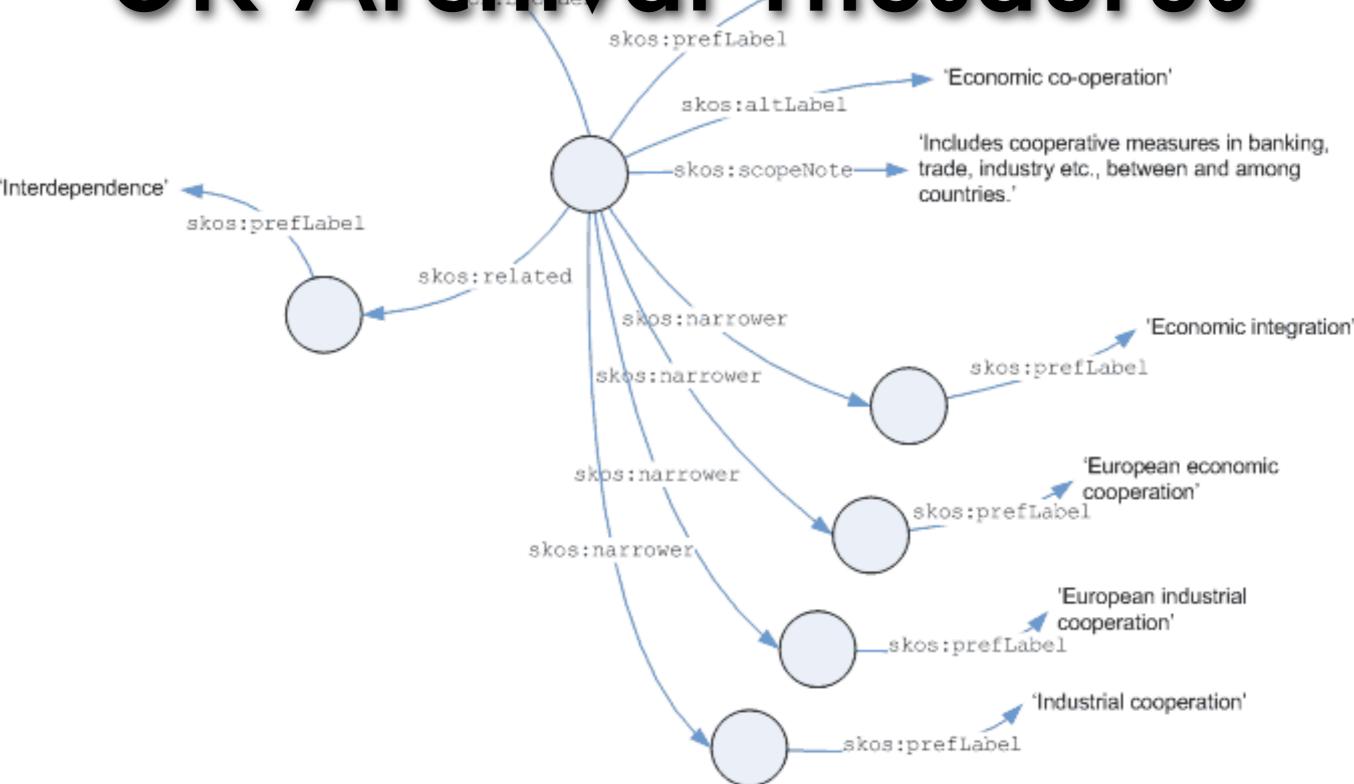

Computers need that extra redundancy.

Archival description, in its current state, is not computer-friendly.

Archival Ontology

Overview

archival-ontology is a high-level vocabulary for describing archival collections. The goal is to make it easy to publish names, collections, and the archives that hold them as linked data. The ontology might also provide a path for semantically archiving contemporary information like emails, blogs, and content from social media.

About This Service

Archival is a web service that exposes names from archival collections as linked open data. Collections are from the Special Collections and University Archives at the University of Massachussets, Amherst.

Names are described using the Friend-Of-A-Friend (FOAF) vocabulary, the Relationship vocabulary, and the Provenance vocabulary, developed specifically for this project and currently in a rough-draft form.

Here are some examples to get started:

This project is currently a proofof-concept and is in active development.

Future Work and Improvements

Identify subsets/types of relationships that are easy to model in RDF.

Expose data in public descriptive systems as best we can (e.g. RDFa).

Add meaningful links to online descriptive apparatuses.

Revise our descriptive standards to allow better recombination of metadata.

Follow the lead of our library and museum colleagues and develop conceptual models of archival description.
