TRUSTEE OLIN '85 GIVES $700,000 BUILDING To House School of Chemical Engineering

A new building for the School of Chemical Engineering, to cost $700,000, was presented to the University by Franklin W. Olin '85 at a meeting of the Board of Trustees at the Medical College in New York, January 18. Accompanied by Dean S. C. Hollister of the College of Engineering, Olin personally made his gift. It was gratefully accepted by the Trustees, and President Edmund E. Day expressed the appreciation of the University.

Begins College Development

The Trustees designated the new building Olin Hall of Chemical Engineering. President Day characterized it as "a magnificent contribution toward realization of a broad program for development of engineering education at Cornell, which envisions an increasingly important role for the engineer in our national economy." Olin Hall, he said, "will be an integral unit of our general plan to give the College of Engineering the resources it needs to project its tradition of leadership into the future." The plan, he pointed out, contemplates similar buildings for the other three Schools, of Civil, Electrical, and Mechanical Engineering, with a materials and metallurgy laboratory equipped to serve the entire College. These will form a new quadrangle at the south end of the Campus.

Olin has been for many years a Trustee and a generous supporter of the University. He received the CE degree in 1886; is president of Western Cartridge Co., Alton, Ill., and affiliated concerns. He announced that his gift is in memory of his son, Franklin W. Olin, Jr., who received the BChem in 1912 and died in 1921.

Will Build Immediately

Stakes have already been placed along Central Avenue and Campus Road to mark the location of the new building, and service connections are being made to the site. Construction will begin immediately, with a view to occupancy next fall.

Plans show an L-shaped structure of three stories and basement, extending north from Campus Road along Central Avenue 280 feet and east along Campus Road 223 feet, both wings sixty feet deep. It will be fireproof throughout, faced in part with native stone to harmonize with the adjacent Myron Taylor Hall and Willard Straight Hall. Architects are Shreve, Lamb, and Harmon, of which R. H. Shreve '02 is the senior member.

Dean Hollister says, "Olin Hall of Chemical Engineering will have unsurpassed facilities. With more than 100,000 square feet of floor space, the building will provide numerous laboratories of varying sizes adapted to both undergraduate and graduate instruction and research. Most of one wing will be an extensive three-story laboratory in which students can build and operate large-scale model plants with all the equipment necessary to follow through an entire chemical manufacturing process. Thus our students can study chemical engineering not only on test-tube scale, but also closely approximating commercial manufacture, with both the economic and engineering factors they will meet in industry."

Allows Necessary Expansion

The building is planned with most of its lecture rooms, class rooms, and offices on the ground floor to avoid congestion on stairways. Three lecture rooms, seating 300, 110, and 70 will be on this floor, and one, seating 200, will be on the second floor. Small laboratories for specialized instruction and research will be provided. It is planned to accommodate approximately 450 undergraduates and a large number of graduate students.

Present enrollment of the School of Chemical Engineering, limited to selected students, is 277, an increase of 119 since the School was established two years ago. Courses in Industrial Chemistry were first offered in the Chemistry Department in 1920, under Professor Fred H. Rhodes, PhD '14. First Chemical Engineering degrees were offered in 1930, requiring an additional year by Bachelors of Chemistry. Since 1938, with Professor Rhodes as its Director, the School of Chemical Engineering has operated with a five-year integrated program leading to the degree of BS in Chemical Engineering.

Donor Former Athlete

The donor of Olin Hall of Chemical Engineering was born in Woodford, Vt., January 14, 1860. He entered Civil Engineering in 1881 from Buskirk's Bridge in northern New York State. He was second baseman and a leading hitter on the baseball team and its captain for three years, captain of the rifle team, a hammer thrower and shot putter, a director of the Cornell Navy, member of the Athletic Council, and president of the Athletic Association. He was a member of the Association of Civil Engineers.

Following his graduation, he practiced civil engineering and was a contractor in the Middle West until he organized his first manufacturing company in 1892. Two years later he organized and became president of Western Cartridge Co., and has since developed numerous other concerns in this field. He is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and of the Cornell Club of St. Louis, Mo. Besides the son in whose memory the new building is given, he and Mrs. Olin have two other Cornell sons, John M. Olin '13 and Spencer T. Olin '21, both of whom are associated with their father in business.

GIVE COMBINED COURSES

Various departments of the College of Arts and Sciences this year are combining to offer several hundred students understanding of broad fields of knowledge, cutting across departmental lines. In weekly meetings, four study groups are designed to offset the tendency in some quarters to divide knowledge into unrelated compartments and thus produce narrow specialists. By means of these groups, underclassmen in the College are given a basis for choosing a major field for later concentration.

One group, on "Human Growth and Development," is directed by Professors Frank S. Freeman, Education, and James W. Papez, Anatomy. Using materials of anatomy, embryology, genetics, neurology, physiology, hygiene, sociology, anthropology, and psychology, it brings together information about structural, physiological, behavioral, and intellectual aspects of growth and development. It is designed to help prospective teachers to understand human individuals as functioning organisms in a social environment.

Another group, with Professor Julian L. Woodward '22, Sociology, in charge, deals with "The Social Organization of Communities." Historically and by modern examples it introduces its students to the fields of economics, government, sociology, and anthropology.

A seminar on "Nationalism" is conducted by members of the Departments of Government, History, Philosophy, Psychology, and Sociology. Content and background of modern nationalism is explored, with case-studies drawn from Europe, America, and the Far East, analyzed in their social and intellectual settings.

A fourth study group, on "Human Behavior," is conducted by members of the Departments of Psychology and Sociology and Anthropology. It considers the basic development of personality and its functioning in human groups, from the points of view of psychobiology, anthropology, and social psychology.

KIMBALL IN BUFFALO

Cornell Women's Club of Buffalo invited Cornell men, with wives and husbands, to join them at a Founder's Day luncheon January 11 at the Hotel Touraine. Fifty persons enjoyed an illustrated talk by Professor Dexter S. Kimball, Engineering, Emeritus, about the early days and recent events at the University. He was introduced by Marjorie L. Shenk '38, vice-president of the Cornell Women's Club, and Dorothea Bentley '37, president of the Club, presided. Spencer E. Hickman '05, president of the men's Cornell Club, loaned the new recordings of Cornell music which his Club had recently acquired.

Chairman of the luncheon committee was Miss Frank R. Zingerle '36.

About ATHLETICS

TO PLAY IN CUBA

The Athletic Office announced last week that the basketball schedule has been extended to allow the Varsity team to play exhibition games in Havana, Cuba, April 2, 3, and 4, as guests of the Cuban government.

At the instance of Joaquin Molinet, Jr. '21, former Varsity captain, who is in charge of athletics for the annual sports carnival in Cuba, the Cuban Sports Commission invited the Cornell team to meet the outstanding teams of the Island during the carnival. Ten players and the manager of the team, accompanied by Coach Blair Gullion and Trainer Frank Kavanagh, will leave Ithaca at the beginning of spring recess, March 29, travel by train to Key West, Fla., and embark there for Havana.

Molinet was center on the Varsity basketball team in 1919, and played forward in 1920 and 1921, being captain in both years and selected as all-Eastern forward. He practices engineering in Cuba, and has been much interested in fostering basketball there.

LOSE FIRST LEAGUE GAME

In a game that meant the leadership of the Eastern Intercollegiate League, the basketball team lost to Dartmouth, 33-36, in Barton Hall January 18.

Three nights before, on the same court, Cornell defeated Columbia, 38-22.

The Dartmouth game attracted a record crowd of more than 4,000. The victory was Dartmouth's third straight in League play. The standing:

	W	L	PC
Dartmouth	3	0	1.000
Cornell	3	1	.750
Columbia	1	1	.500
Princeton	0	0	.000
Harvard	0	1	.000
Pennsylvania	0	2	.000
Yale	0	2	.000

At the outset of the Dartmouth game, the visitors scored 8 points to 2 for Cornell. After six minutes of play, James E. Bennett '41 scored Cornell's first field goal and added another to start the home team on a rally that steadily cut down Dartmouth's lead to 12-8.

Then Cornell scored 7 points in a row, with Samuel W. Hunter '43 tying the score with a free throw and putting Cornell ahead with a field goal. Then Dartmouth forged ahead, 16-15, before Howard S. Dunbar '41 and Bennett dropped a brace of field goals in a spurt that left Cornell ahead, 22-18, at the half.

Cornell stretched the margin to 27-21 in the first 7½ minutes of the second half, then went scoreless until less than three minutes remained to be played. Shot after shot fell away from the basket and backboard. Dartmouth, playing more carefully, made its shots count and scored 13 consecutive points for a 34-27 lead.

William D. Stewart '42 finally found the range, not once, but three times, from the field, and with less than a minute to play the score was only one point in Dartmouth's favor, 34-33. Dartmouth had the ball and in a scrimmage under the Cornell basket Olsen, the Dartmouth center, came up with a game-clinching basket.

The Columbia game was one-sided. After the first fifteen minutes of the first half, Cornell gradually drew away from a 9-9 tie with the visitors, leading, 15-11, at the half, and holding Columbia to four field goals the second half.

WRESTLERS BEAT COLUMBIA

The wrestling team won its second straight meet January 18, defeating Columbia, 21-8, in Barton Hall, as two Cornell wrestlers scored falls.

Joseph S. Mount '42 threw Fromer with a far-nelson and reverse body scissors in 4:10 in the 145-pound class, and Forbes H. Brown '42 of Broadalbin, the 175-pound entry, threw Stenberg with a barlock and half-nelson in 1:45.

The meet opened with a draw decision in the 121-pound class between Harry K. Crandall '42 and Marasca of Columbia. Each wrestler, under the new scoring system, scored 2 points instead of 1 as formerly. Joseph C. Littleton '42 and Richard R. Nickerson '43 scored decisions over Norris and Baum, respectively, in the 125- and 135-pound classes. When Mount threw Fromer, the score was Cornell 13, Columbia 2.

Then Columbia won two decisions, Barber besting Nicholas Hunter '41 in the 155-pound division, and Zaro, 165-pounder, defeating Frederick W. Riggs '41.

That ended Columbia's scoring as Brown won with a fall and Richard C. Kern '42, who during the week had ousted Captain William R. Harrison '41 as Cornell's unlimited class representative, earned the decision over Bruno.

SWIMMERS LOSE NARROWLY

The swimming team lost by one point, 37-38, to Rider College in the Old Armory pool January 18 after a 54-21 victory over Colgate here January 14. The Rider meet was lost, actually, in the first event, the medley relay, when Cornell was disqualified because one of its swimmers left the mark before his teammate touched it.

Of the nine first places, Cornell won three. Edward S. White '42 was first in diving, George F. Critchlow '42 won the 150-yard breaststroke, and the team of Herbert H. Wallower '43, Jay C. Miller, Jr. '43, Jeffrey W. Graham '41, and Warren H. Fisher '43 captured the 400-yard relay.

Another 400-yard relay team, in defeating Colgate earlier in the week, swam the distance in 3:45, cutting three-tenths of a second from the University record. The pool record, held by Syracuse, is 3:44.8. This team comprised Graham, Fisher, David B. Williams '43, and William W. Paty, Jr. '42.

OUTFENCE ARMY

The fencing team defeated the US Military Academy, 5-4, at West Point January 18, in a nine-bout meet.

Ordinarily, fencing meets consist of twenty-seven bouts, nine each with foils, epee, and sabers. At West Point, however, each man in each weapon fenced only one opponent, instead of three. The number of touches required for a decision was raised to ten in foils and saber and to five in epee.

With the score tied at 4-4 and with touches also tied, 9-9, in the final saber duel, George E. Rappaport '43 of Brooklyn scored the meet-winning touch.

HOCKEY TEAM LOSES

The hockey team lost to the Military Academy, 4-8, at West Point January 18 on an indoor rink.

Army went into a 1-0 lead in the first period, and Cornell tied the score early in the second period on a goal by Robert D. Ladd '43. Then Army launched a rally that produced 6 goals to 2 for Cornell and a 7-3 advantage going into the third and final period, when each team scored once.

Other scorers for Cornell were Jerome A. Batt '43, Albert Schmid '42, and George L. Babson '42.

SKI TEAM BEATS SYRACUSE

The skiing team defeated Syracuse, 199.92-189.63, in the Caroline hills January 18.

Johannes P. Kulka '41 won the cross country race in 48:36.5, finishing twenty seconds ahead of Philip B. Gibson '43. Gibson placed second to Maxwell of Twenty-seven football players won the C last fall, according to the official list from the Athletic Association. Eight cross-country and fourteen soccer letters were also awarded, along with one Varsity crew letter as a result of last June's Poughkeepsie regatta.

In addition to the Varsity awards, the list included 29 Junior Varsity football letters, 55 Freshman football numerals, 27 letters for 150-pound football, 4 Junior Varsity crew letters, 5 Freshman crew numerals, 9 Freshman cross country numerals and 23 for Freshman soccer.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES--PROFESSOR

Reminiscences of the Law School

By Judge Harry L. Taylor '88

Charles Evans Hughes came to the Cornell Law School in the autumn of 1891. This, had he remained, would have been his fiftieth year as a teacher of law. It is not difficult to go back over the years to the young man in his late twenties as we law students first saw him at Ithaca. Some attributes of the teacher which impressed themselves upon us I distinctly recall, and these may be of interest.

The group of students encountered by the new professor was typical; that is, it was made up of young men not intolerant, perhaps, not inclined to be unfair, but affected somewhat by skepticism as to "professors" and willing to be "shown."

It cannot be said that Mr. Hughes was not well cast in the part of professor. He bore himself with dignity but without aloofness. There was nothing of the frivolous about him; he was constantly "on the job." He created in all of us respect for his extensive and (so far as we could judge) accurate learning, his uncanny memory, and his ability to "put over his messages." He never produced in us any feeling of doubt as to his genuineness or as to his desire to help us on our way to become lawyers. He grew in favor with his students as their experiences with him progressed. He was especially happy in his conduct of oral examinations of each of us privately at test times. When one left him after such a session it was with a feeling that here was a man not only capable but kindly, a man truly desirous of assisting us to develop ourselves, not a bogey man looking for a chance to "bust" someone.

The result of all this finally was a deep-seated regard for the man as well as the professor, something which had been growing until it was ripe and thoroughly felt and understood by us all. None of us, I am sure, will ever forget that last lecture he gave us when, at the end, he laid aside the law books and showed us his true self without restraint. He said: "Young men, I have been here on this Hill for a short time trying to help you young people to learn some law. My work here is ending. I have been very happy in it. I want you to know that I am a friend of every one of you and that I want each one of you to be my friend." It was the first thing even bordering on the sentimental we had ever heard him say. We liked it. We knew how he felt but we were glad to have him tell us, and the room rang with applause as he went back through the door out of our sight.

"Professor" Hughes has been seen since he passed through that schoolroom door in 1893. He has been much observed and fully tested. It is not for me to comment here upon his development or his stature as counsellor, advocate, governor, statesman, jurist. But an element of full manly growth is kindness, and we discovered that in our law professor. We were all young in 1893, and our hearts—his and ours—were more easily stirred than now, when we are all traveling down the hill toward the terminal. But I am confident that the spirit which filled the minds and hearts of those who were in that schoolroom that last day over forty-seven years ago will be again felt and understood by all those there present who may read what I have been saying, including the present Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

By Chief Justice Hughes

As I look back over a life of varied activities, I think that I enjoyed teaching most of all. I had a taste of it after leaving college and, following graduation from the Law School at Columbia, I held law "quizzes" there for three years and had private classes in addition. So, when I was offered the appointment at Cornell, the lure of an academic refuge from the drive and strain of an active practice in New York, and of an opportunity for quiet study and research, was irresistible. But Cornell was a hive of industry and, while there was immunity from one sort of demands, there was an abundance of others and the strenuous life was lived in another sphere. The Law School was young and its faculty small, but there was the enthusiasm of youth, and the intellectual climate—like the physical—was most invigorating. I have never known more earnest students and there was plenty of work. I had the courses in Contracts, Partnerships, Bills and Notes, and Evidence, and also, in one year during the absence of the professor of international law, I had the University course in that subject. Whether my efforts were of benefit to the students I cannot say, but they were of incalculable benefit to me. It was for me the equivalent of a post-graduate course with a lively sense of responsibility and an immeasurable zest.

Added to this was the privilege of association with men of outstanding talent. Among the leaders at Cornell at that time were Jacob Gould Schurman, head of the School of Philosophy (who soon became President of Cornell University), Benjamin Ide Wheeler, head of the Greek department (who became president of the University of California), Harry B. Hutchins, acting Dean of the Law School (who became dean of the law school, and later president, of the University of Michigan), J. Laurence Laughlin (who became head of the department of political economy at the University of Chicago), and Liberty Hyde Bailey (who became Dean of the College of Agriculture at Cornell). These were young men who gave tone to the University life and set pace to ambition. We had our homes on the Campus and enjoyed the intimacy of an informed society of congenial spirits.

When I went to Cornell in the fall of 1891, the physical equipment of the Law School was pitifully meager. Classes were held on the top floor of one of the old college buildings (Morrill Hall), but in the following year we were housed comfortably and adequately in the new Boardman Hall. Now the School has the advantages of Myron Taylor Hall, the gift of one of the Law School Class of 1894. The Law School has fulfilled its promise and won an enviable prestige, taking rank among the leading law schools of the country. I regard its Law Quarterly as one of the best legal periodicals. I send my heartiest congratulations to the members of the Faculty and to the students. While my association with the School was for a brief period, and long ago, the memory of it is very vivid and I count that experience as one of the happiest of my life.

The law schools of America have a unique place. In training students, they practice and develop the fine art of criticism, providing a continuous review of the work of the courts of the country. That service, when well performed, is an invaluable aid to the judicial process through which we seek to assure the proper interpretation and the fair and impartial application of our laws. May the Cornell Law School continue to maintain its high standards in training and critical exposition.

WOMEN'S AWARDS OPEN

Announcement and application blanks for the new Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs Scholarships for students entering the University next year have been distributed to officers of the Federation and secretaries of all Cornell Women's Clubs. They comprise a blank for the applicant herself to fill out and detailed reports to be submitted by her school principal and by three references. One scholarship of $400 or two of $200 each will be awarded for next year, on the basis of health, character, scholarship, personality, leadership, special abilities, and financial need.

Chairman of the Federation committee on scholarship awards is Mrs. Simon H. Gage (Clara C. Starrett) '18, 126 Roberts Place, Ithaca. Applications on these forms must be received by her not later than March 15 and blanks may be obtained from her.

The Federation Scholarship Fund has been established at the University to provide assistance to outstanding undergraduate women. It was amassed from contributions of Cornell Women's Clubs and individuals during a campaign directed by Mrs. R. H. Shreve (Ruth Bentley) '02.

HERE FROM PHILIPPINES

Visitor to Alumni House January 13 was Manuel I. Felizardo, Grad '27-28, of the board of public works of Manila, P. I. He completed his term as president of the Cornell Club of the Philippines last November, and has been succeeded by Fay C. Bailey '19. Victor Buencamino '11 was re-elected secretary of the Club.

HEADS BEQUEST COMMITTEE

THOMAS B. GILCHRIST '06 has been appointed chairman of the bequests committee of the Cornell Alumni Fund Council by the president, Christopher W. Wilson '00. Gilchrist succeeds Winthrop Taylor '07.

The bequests committee comprises several hundred Cornell lawyers, bank officials, and others all over the country who are interested in obtaining bequests as a means of augmenting the resources of the University.

Gilchrist is a member of the law firm of Cadwallader, Wickersham & Taft, 14 Wall Street, New York City. He entered the College of Arts and Sciences in 1902 from Glens Falls, with a State Scholarship; transferred the next year to Law and received the LLB in 1906. He was secretary of the H. Morse Stephens Debate Club and a member of the Cosmopolitan Club. Three years ago he was elected to the executive committee of the Cornell Law Association.

NOW IN MY TIME!

By Romeyn Berry

The new Cornell Song Book is out. It is unfortunate that such a excellent production should be destined to enrage. For there are anthems in this opulent volume that Detroit's Blood Pressure Bloc never even suspected, and the Scotch and Soda Squad at the Cornell Club of New York will search its pages in vain for the Beebe Lake Rowing Song and the one about Aunt Stella Miller.

Moreover, many of the familiar tunes have suffered "arrangement" and shocking liberties have been taken with the texts. Teefy Crane has been spelled "Tee Fee" and the lines now appear "Pale-face students—Dagoes—killed 'em at an early age," whereas when the Blood Pressure Bloc and the Scotch and Soda Squad dwelt briefly in Arcady they always rendered it "Pale-face Dago students," etc. If any one thinks the Squad and the Bloc are going to take that outrage lying down, he is unfamiliar with what blood pressure and Scotch can do in the course of years to middle-aged tempers.

However, it's a good book and you mustn't get the idea the committee weren't fully aware that they teetered on the edge of disaster every time they made a decision about it: which of many versions to adopt; what to leave out and what to put in. You must give that committee credit for raw, stark courage whatever low opinion you may entertain of their judgment; for they made their decisions crisply and bravely in the full knowledge that whichever way they turned at the cross-roads, some group of apoplectic old gentlemen would demand their severed heads upon a charger, with lots and lots of dish gravy.

The trouble is, of course, that while the memories of Arcady remain a constant in the hearts of ex-Arcadians, Arcady itself is always in a fluid state. The songs of Arcady refuse to stay put. Each generation of undergraduate troubadours unconsciously makes some slight change, and first thing you know the current version has become incoherent and repugnant to all alumni; particularly repugnant to the alumnus who wrote the original words and music at a time of life when the song in the heart dulls the ear to false rhyme and faulty meter.

It's a good book. It preserves in enduring print excellent tunes and lyrics which heretofore have existed precariously in unreliable memories; which have been published only in spontaneous outbursts on the back porch in the long June twilight. "Heidelberg" is in, this time coupled with verses worthy of it by Morris Bishop, and many another which you will dimly recall having heard rendered on the last trolley up the Hill.

You'll like it—after you're gotten over the first shock. What if the committee has outraged sentimental old-timers by adopting current versions of old songs, by departing here and there from an outworn nomenclature? After all, the Cornell Daily Sun has spelled it "Tee Fee" for a half-score years. There hasn't been an eight-oared barge on Beebe Lake since before the trolley cars stopped running. (What? You didn't know they'd stopped?) Only the Professor of Ancient History could tell you who Aunt Stella Miller was or what became of Senator Murphy.

Youth now prevails within the Quadrangle—as it always has. You had your time at bat and for Heaven's sake sit down and pipe down. "Arcady for the Arcadians!" That's the motto which governed the Song Book Committee, which governs the distribution of football seats, and which seems destined, apparently, always to goad the Scotch and Soda Squad along the road to apoplexy.

ITHACA CLUB ELECTS

Cornell Club of Ithaca at its annual meeting December 16 elected Norman G. Stagg '26 its president, succeeding Dr. Dean F. Smiley '16. Clarence F. Morse '14 was re-elected treasurer, and Professor A. Wright Gibson '17, Director of Resident Instruction in the College of Agriculture, was elected a director.

Coach Carl G. Snively showed and described football motion pictures, and Emmet J. Murphy '22, Alumni Secretary, told about the convention of the Alumni Association in Boston, Mass., November 14-16.

SEND VITAMINS TO CHINA

Important aid to the Chinese National armies went to China as a unique Christmas gift from a group of Chinese and other graduate students and a few Faculty members interested in nutrition. It was a small package, about the size of a two-pound box of candy, of the new crystalline vitamins, sent to Dr. Tung Shen, PhD '39, for his researches at the National Tsing-hua University to improve the nutrition of Chinese soldiers.

Enough vitamins for a year's experiments with sixteen men were in this small box, forwarded through a Chinese relief agency in New York City. Professor Clive M. McCay, Animal Nutrition, has been investigating the new crystalline vitamins and has found that a two-ounce bottle will contain all the vitamins known to be needed by one man for a year. Some of his graduate students headed by Walter L. Nelson of Norwich and Peng Cheng Hsu, MSA '32, of Foochow, China, collected ninety-seven dollars and with Dr. McCay's help arranged for the purchase and shipment of the gift.

A TRAITOR IN OUR MIDST?

Frank Sullivan '14 writes in the Dartmouth Alumni Magazine for January "exposing" his friend and fellow-humorist, Corey Ford. Ford has been writing in the Magazine seeking to qualify as an honorary alumnus of Dartmouth, and had recently claimed that Sullivan owed him five dollars on the outcome of the Cornell-Dartmouth football game. Sullivan accuses Ford of having sought to become an alumnus of every known college, including the Electoral College, the College of Cardinals, Vassar, and Tuskegee, and recounts this about his attempts at Cornell:

No, I have no desire to spoil Ford's little game. I shall say nothing about the time he came to me, full of honeyed words, and told me it was the dream of his life to become an honorary alumnus of Cornell. "Furthermore, Frank," he enthused, "I want to become an honorary member of the finest, the grandest, the handsomest, suavest and most-likely-to-succeediest class that ever graduated from Uncle Ezra's Select Academy For The Development Of The Medulla Oblongata—I want to belong to the Class of 1914!" Well, I simply could not get him in the Class of 1914. We are one of the most clannish classes ever to graduate from Cornell and we never take in honorary barbs. There was however a vacancy in the Class of 1869 and I got that for Ford. But when I sent him word to get his beard and cane and appear for his class reunion I found he had already tired of my Alma Mater and was now an honorary alumnus of Syracuse. . . .

Having "finished off" Friend Ford, Sullivan then traitorously continues:

I do regret that as long as you were tapping outlanders for honorary allegiance to Dartmouth you did not consider one who, while unwavering in his loyalty to the noble pile above Cayuga's waters, certainly fell hard for Eleazar Wheelock's academy on the occasion of his first visit for that game, November 16. You know, I might make a passable Dartmouth alumnus, provided you didn't put me too far ahead in the nineteenth century classes. I'm a little mildewed around the edges and dented in a few places by the buffeting of fate, but I can ski, if I stay on level ground, and I know several of the student body at Skidmore College here in Saratoga. I admit they refer to me as "Gramps" but hell, you can't have everything at forty-eight!

PIANO DUO PLEASES

Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson were called back to their two pianos on the Bailey Hall stage again and again by the appreciative audience at the second of the University concerts, January 14. The two artists exhibited striking dexterity, sympathetic interpretation, and noteworthy coordination in a varied program that included three selections from Bach, one each of Handel and Brahms, an English folk dance, "The Keel Row," and several modern compositions.

Their rendering of the suite, "Scaramouche," by the French modernist, Darius Milhaud, showed them at their best, and brought such an ovation that the artists repeated the final movement, a Brazilian dance. One of the arrangements they played was their own, of the famous "La Maja" passage of the Granados opera, "Goyescas."

RUMORS of a serious influenza epidemic at the University were set at rest by a statement in the Sun Monday from the Medical Office that the number of influenza cases in the Infirmary was "approximately sixty," a decrease from the peak number of eighty-five patients reported last week; and that present cases are less severe. "The Infirmary is equipped to handle 142 patients and is not overflowing as some Campus rumors have erroneously reported," the statement concluded.

COMMENTARY on the decreased earnings of the University's invested funds is the announcement that the '94 Memorial Debate Prize this year will be but $75. The Class of '94 established a fund of $1894 to endow an annual prize of $94, but this year and last, earnings from the fund have not been sufficient to maintain that amount. Topic of this year's contest is announced as "How Far Can Democracy be Tolerant and Survive?"

Concerning THE FACULTY

PROFESSOR LIBERTY HYDE BAILEY, Agriculture, Emeritus, former Dean of the College of Agriculture, and his work for American rural life are described in "These Men, This Land," appearing in Free America for October. Designating Professor Bailey as the "Cornell Cassandra," the article shows the similarity between the issues "before the American eye a quarter century ago" when he quitted public life, with the issues facing America today, and that the beliefs and policies advocated by Professor Bailey twenty-five years ago are applicable to the present scene. The story of Professor Bailey's fight for education for a "sufficient country life" and his deep faith in the rural way of life is followed by a description of his more recent work, travels, and writings as Director of the Bailey Hortorium in Ithaca.

MRS. MARY LOUISE MOORE, widow of the late Dr. Veranus A. Moore '87, Dean of the Veterinary College for twenty-one years, and mother of Dr. Erwin V. Moore '17 and Dr. Norman S. Moore '23, Director of the University Clinic, died January 7, 1941, in Ithaca.

OIL PAINTINGS by Professor Walter King Stone, Fine Arts, are on exhibition at Mechanics Institute, Rochester. Professor Stone first studied at the old Rochester Athenaeum, now merged with Mechanics Institute.

PROFESSOR CHARLES O. MACKEY '25, Heat-Power Engineering, is the author of Air Conditioning Principles, a 210-page text, with a foreword by Willis H. Carrier '01, pioneer in air conditioning, published by the International Textbook Co.

PROFESSOR BRUNO ROSSI, Physics, has a daughter, Florence Sylvia, born in December.

PROFESSOR WILLIAM I. MYERS '14, Agricultural Economics, former Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, told a recent annual meeting of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture in Topeka that centralized Washington control of farm credit, as proposed by the Wheeler Bill introduced in Congress in March, 1940, would "make the district land banks and local farm loan associations mere branch offices of a government credit system" and that "farmer control is of vital importance to the permanence of the institution and should be strengthened, not destroyed." He described the bill, which would substitute government guaranteed bonds for member ownership and independent financial strength of the Federal Land Banks, as "endangering" the "continued existence of a sound source of mortgage credit for stockmen and farmers."

Europe needs this trade, he said, and many Europeans have settled in South America, later developing trade with their homelands. CLASS OF 1913

By Class Correspondent

Friends of Jessel Whyte in Kenosha, Wis., and surrounding area were astonished some time ago to receive a draft board summons to appear at the Elks Club in Kenosha on the evening of November 25. Answering the summons they found themselves at a surprise stag party arranged by Mrs. Whyte to celebrate an important milestone in her husband's life. From all accounts, Mrs. Whyte should be added to the committee of arrangements for the next Class Reunion, as she seems to know how to plan parties for men. Among messages that reached the Elks Club from Whyte's distant friends was a telegram from a group of '13ers in New York, who are suspected of having celebrated the occasion as best they could.

For our Reunion this June, we are collecting vital statistics and interesting facts in the lives of our Classmates. So even if you have been married for quite some time, I should very much like to have all the details: time, place, where your husband went to school, what his work is, where you live, names and birthdays of all "juniors." And from our career gals, I'd like to hear all about your jobs and hobbies and travels.

Among such interesting facts: Jessie Lord was married in July, 1939, to Chester E. Borck, who is a graduate of Syracuse University and of Babson Institute, and now is wholesale manager of Borck & Stevens, New England's largest independent bakery. Jessie taught in the Bridgeport schools until this year. They live at 455 King Street, Stratford, Conn.

Benefits and Burdens

"They go together," was the sage observation of the late Lord Bryce, and he added: "like power and responsibility."

Leaders in the business and professional life of any city could profit by subscribing to rules of conduct proposed by this noted statesman. He said, among other things:

"Whoever claims a right for himself must respect the like right in another. Whoever wishes to assert his will as a member of a community must not only consent to obey the will of the community but bear his share in serving it. As he is to profit by the safety and prosperity the community provides, so he must seek his good and place his personal will at its disposal."
