Sprees, Tours, Discussions Fill Fall Orientation Week

Ice cream spreeds, Finger Lakes parks tours, bonfires, and panel discussions on such topics as employment opportunities for students' spouses are just a few of the activities underway for some 2,700 freshmen, 700 transfer students and 250 new graduate students arriving at Cornell during the University's orientation week which began last Sunday, and goes through Sunday, Sept. 5.

Freshmen are organized into groups of 15 to 20, each supervised by an upperclass orientation counselor. Some 210 upperclass students are serving as counselors this, the second year of the orientation counselor program.

"The main thrust of orientation is to help incoming students develop a core friendship group," said Connie Murray, associate dean for student activities and new student orientation. "We think that dividing the students into activity groups of about 10 makes it possible for a new student to get to know a few new people pretty well, and that in turn makes it easier for a student to adjust to life at Cornell."

Special counselors and activities also have been arranged for transfer and graduate students.

Some 70 campus organizations will sponsor booths at "Fun in the Sun," an activities carnival for all new students to be held from noon to 4 p.m. Friday on the Arts Quad. Food, music, games and information about campus organizations will be featured.

For married and graduate students, a picnic is planned for the afternoon of Sunday, Sept. 5, at Lower Treman State Park. A panel discussion on employment opportunities for the spouses of Cornell students will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Bache Auditorium, Malott Hall.

Cornell's individual colleges and departments are also planning a number of informational and social gatherings for new students. Details may be found in the orientation schedule, available at the orientation office, 103 Barnes Hall (256-4131).

'Registration Easy If You Know How'

Registration can look complex, but according to the Registrar's Office, the process can be accomplished in 15 minutes or less. A rundown of what is required and where to go follows.

By today all students should have picked up their registration packets, which will have instructions on the time and place for registering. Students in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, the College of Arts and Sciences, the Graduate School, the School of Hotel Administration, the New York State College of Human Ecology and the New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations will register in Barton Hall at their appointed times.

Students in the College of Architecture, Art and Planning, the Graduate School of Business and Public Administration, the College of Engineering, the School of Law and the New York College of Veterinary Medicine will register in their respective colleges or schools. Unclassified students will register at 247 Day Hall.

New students will register at assigned times today. Continuing and rejoining students will register at assigned times tomorrow.

Those who have not yet picked up their registration material must do so today at Lynah Rink between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Registration packets are being held for approximately 1,000 continuing students who have outstanding bills from last semester. They will be given their registration materials as soon as they have cleared with all the offices where they owe money.

Registration Procedure

A Firm Foundation Is Built University Budget Sees Improvement

A preliminary check of year-end figures at Cornell shows improvement over budgeted expectations, University officials reported yesterday.

Based on an unaudited report, general purpose funds for the endowed colleges at Ithaca showed a $90,000 plus balance, but only after a distribution of the University's capital of $1.35 million was applied against those general purpose funds. This is the accounting area in which previous University deficits have been incurred.

More improvement still was shown in the area of designated

Summer Summary

A summary of summer activities on- and off-campus that are of interest to the Cornell community will be published in next Thursday's edition of the Chronicle, when everyone still vacationing this week is back on campus.

Among items to be covered will be:

—The Human Rights Commission decision in the Herbert Parker case.

—The preliminary report of the President's Commission on Self-Governance.

—Testimony taken by a panel of the New York State Board of Regents in Albany regarding Ujamaa Residential College.

Games Galore Available at Noyes Center

Car Permits Are Replaced Free

No, holders of multiple-car permits at Cornell University, you won't have to pay another $108, $54 or $27 for a new windshield card if the one you have is lost or stolen. You can get a replacement at no extra charge.

On the back of the windshield card it says "If this display card is lost or stolen the original fee will again be required for a replacement."

This is true only if the person requests an identical card, which has the same license numbers of the cars for which it is valid, and the same numbers of the AB stickers which go on the bumpers.

This would mean that if the lost card were later found, both cars in the car pool could be on campus legally at once, according to David W. Brown, director of Transportation Services.

But if the holder agrees to the assignment of new AB stickers with new numbers, and returns the old stickers to the Traffic Bureau, there is no extra charge and the new card with the new numbers will be issued. In addition, if a windshield card is damaged, it can be returned to the Traffic Bureau and replaced free of charge, Brown said.

Pass or Exact Fare Needed on CU Buses

Cornell students who wish to ride the red and white campus buses have been reminded that they will need to buy bus passes to ride this year.

Director of Transportation Services David W. Brown said the passes will be on sale at registration, during regular hours of the Traffic Bureau, and during special hours of the bureau, 115 Wait Ave., from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. this Saturday.

Starting next Monday, passes will be on sale at Willard Straight Hall, North Campus Union and Noyes Center.

Those who do not have passes pay 10 cents a ride, exact change only, at the bus. Passes for non-commuting students are $13 per semester or $25 per academic year. Commuting students who park in peripheral lots will pay $5 per semester or $10 per academic year.

All items for publication in the Cornell Chronicle must be submitted to the Chronicle Office, 110 Day Hall, by noon on the Monday preceding publication. Only typewritten information will be accepted. Please note the separate procedure and deadline for Calendar entries, as explained at the end of the Chronicle Calendar on the back page.

'Holiday Pay Rule' Revised by Personnel

A resolution that there is to be no requirement for working the day before and/or after a holiday in order to be eligible for holiday pay has been passed by Cornell University Personnel Planning and Policy Board.

The resolution, passed June 25, 1976, means that if a regular full-time or regular part-time employee in good standing is sick the day before and/or the day following a holiday, he/she will be eligible to receive holiday pay for the holiday rather than sick pay, according to Karl D. Keller, manager of benefits of University Personnel Services.

Any questions about the resolution should be directed to Keller at extension 6-3925.

CU Employees Eligible For Tuition Aid Again

Cornell employees may once again be reimbursed the tuition costs of taking job-related courses at other educational institutions. The tuition aid program is being reinstated for the coming academic year, according to Gerald S. Thomas, director of training and development for the Office of Personnel Services.

The program reimburses employees the costs of tuition for job-related courses which are unavailable on the Cornell campus. This year, $10,000 is being allocated for this purpose, $5,000 each for the endowed and statutory divisions. Last year the program was not available because of the lack of funds.

In order to spread the money widely, Thomas said, each employee will be entitled to a maximum of $200 per year, and the maximum reimbursement will be $25 per credit hour for four credit hours of study per semester. Employees interested in the program should obtain an application from Thomas in the Office of Personnel Services.

Additional funds are available to reimburse employees whose study was previously approved, but who did not receive payment because of the absence of funds. "These reimbursements are being made as quickly as possible, but it will take time to work through the backlog," Thomas said.

Minority Affairs

Williams Assumes New Post

Darwin P. Williams, director of the Educational Development Program (special services) at the University of Cincinnati, has been appointed director of minority educational affairs (COSEP) at Cornell University.

The title encompasses the former directorship of COSEP (Committee on Special Educational Projects).

Cornell Provost David C. Knapp, who announced the appointment, said he is "delighted Mr. Williams accepted the position, particularly since the offer was made to him on the strong recommendation of the search committee, which was composed of representatives of the minority community as well as the Cornell community at large.

"His experience in the development of minority programs at the University of Cincinnati, as well as his active participation in minority educational programs nationally, will make him a valuable addition to the staff at Cornell."

Williams said, "I am delighted to be at Cornell University, and I plan to participate in a wide range of activities related to minority students. I feel confident that the University has made a solid commitment to the continuation and the development of minority education within the colleges at Cornell."

Williams, 34, attended public schools in Cincinnati and was graduated in 1960 from Withrow High School there. He received the B.A. degree in 1964 from Kentucky State University in Frankfort, Ky. He received the M. Ed. degree in 1967 from Xavier University, Cincinnati, with a major in educational administration, guidance and counseling.

He is currently a doctoral candidate at the University of Cincinnati, with a major study in a self-designed interdisciplinary program in Afro-American studies, sociology, psychology and management.

Williams has been director of special services at the University of Cincinnati since 1972. His position has involved coordinating counseling, tutorial and academic services for minority and low-income students enrolled in higher education programs, and developing related resources for the program such as supportive services and academic programs for retention of students.

From 1970 to 1972, he was director of Talent Search, where he coordinated the recruitment, counseling and placement of minority students in colleges throughout the United States.

Williams is currently the vice president of the Mid-America Association of Educational Opportunity Program Personnel and is president of the Ohio Association of Educational Opportunity Program Personnel. These two organizations have promoted the professional development of counselors, academic instructors and administrators who are directly involved in minority educational programs in higher education.

To Aid Minority Students

Brown Will Direct Program

Carl F. Brown has been appointed associate dean of admissions and financial aid with primary responsibility for directing support programs for undergraduate minority students. He will assume the position in late September.

As associate dean, Brown will have responsibility for the planning and development of University admissions and financial aid programs for Committee on Special Educational Projects (COSEP) students and other minority students. He will be responsible for the carrying out of those activities by the Office of Admissions and the Office of Financial Aid, and will coordinate the admissions activities related to COSEP and other minority student admissions in the individual schools and colleges.

In addition, he will have responsibility for developing the COSEP financial aid budget and allocating those funds to the various schools and colleges of the University, according to Donald G. Dickason, dean of admissions and financial aid.

Brown will also develop a financial aid grievance procedure that can be used by minority and non-minority students and develop a long-range plan for identifying, recruiting, enrolling and providing financial assistance to specific groups such as minority and low income students, Dickason said.

Brown is presently associate director of financial aid at the University of Massachusetts, where his primary responsibilities include supervision of all aspects of financial aid to undergraduate students in the Bi-Lingual Collegiate and the Committee for the Collegiate Education of Black Students Programs on the Amherst campus.

He was assistant director of the Middle States Regional Office of the College Entrance Examination Board (CEEB) from 1971 through 1973, where he helped financial aid, admissions and secondary school guidance officers from institutions in Pennsylvania use CEEB services effectively. He also administered the College Scholarship Service program for the region, an activity which involved organizing two-day training sessions for financial aid officers.

Brown received the A.B. degree from Lincoln University in 1966, and served as the school's financial aid officer from 1966 until 1969, when he became director of placement and financial aid at Lincoln. He had previously served six years in the United States Armed Forces.

He was a member of a U.S. Office of Education regional panel reviewing applications for federal funding in 1975, and has served as a consultant to various financial aid institutes and training programs, including those at the University of Houston, Southeastern Massachusetts University, Northeastern University and Framingham State College.

"Carl has an exceptional background in financial aid and has worked very effectively in situations where scarce resources have had to be allocated equitably among several competing groups, and his experience with the College Entrance Examination Board has exposed him to practically every element of admissions practice," Dickason said.

Vet School Appoints Two Associate Deans

Two professors of veterinary medicine have been promoted to positions of associate dean at the New York State College of Veterinary Medicine.

Dr. Lennart P. Krook, professor of veterinary pathology, has been appointed associate dean for postdoctoral education. He also holds joint appointments in the Graduate School of Nutrition and in the Departments of Radiology and Pathology at the Cornell University Medical College in New York City.

Krook received the D.V.M. and Ph.D. degrees from the Royal Veterinary College, Stockholm, Sweden, in 1953 and 1957 respectively.

Dr. Alvin F. Sellers, professor of veterinary physiology, has been appointed associate dean for research. He is responsible for fostering integrated research programs within the college and cooperative efforts with investigators outside the college. A major responsibility is aiding in the preparation of grant proposals to federal and other agencies outside the University.

Sellers obtained the V.M.D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1939, the M.Sc. degree from Ohio State University in 1940 and the Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota in 1949.

CU Seeks New Vice President

The executive committee of Cornell's Board of Trustees has approved the creation of the position of Vice President for Land Grant Affairs, effective immediately.

The new vice president will be responsible for the planning and development of Cornell's continuing responsibility as the land grant university of the State of New York and for developing and coordinating the public service efforts of endowed and statutory colleges at the University.

The new vice president will also be responsible for coordinating relationships among the statutory colleges at Cornell and with the State University, executive agencies and the Legislature and for communicating Cornell's land grant mission to appropriate groups within New York State. Included in the new vice president's responsibilities will be compilation and approval, with the University Provost, of the annual statutory operating and capital budgets.

To fill the new position, the University is seeking an individual who has a knowledge of the purposes and functions of a land grant university and the program and organizational arrangements necessary for fulfilling these purposes. A knowledge of the functioning of Cornell University and the State University of New York and an understanding of the public service needs of New York State are desirable. Candidates for the new position should have academic experience at Cornell or elsewhere in a field encompassed by the University's land grant mission and senior administrative experience in instructional, research and/or extension programs.

Women's Studies Seeks Faculty

Cornell's Women's Studies Program is looking for new course ideas and qualified teachers. Everyone interested in the academic aspects of the program, whether as a student or as a teacher, is invited to share experiences and views with the Women's Studies staff at 4 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 30, in 431 White Hall.

"We see gaps in our current course offerings in the areas of history, literature, history of science and theory which might be filled by such courses as 'The 19th Century Struggle for Women's Rights,' 'Marriage and Female Heroism in Renaissance Drama,' 'Medical Ethics in Obstetrics and Gynecology,' and 'Patriarchal Ideology and the Development of Feminist Thought,'" said Johanna Ettin, acting director of the program. "Strong courses in these or other areas will receive serious consideration for inclusion in our Spring 1977 course offerings. We are open to suggestions, and we welcome new ideas," she added.

Course proposals for Spring 1977 must be submitted in writing to the Women's Studies Program, 431 White Hall, by Sept. 15, 1976. The course proposals should include a brief statement of the purpose of the course and should give an indication of why it is important to the Women's Studies curriculum. A detailed syllabus with full bibliography and plans for achieving the goals of the course, a statement of teaching methods to be used, the level and optimal size of the course should also be included, Ettin said. Applicants also should submit curriculum vitae and three letters of recommendation from people familiar with their teaching, research or other relevant experience.

For more information about the meeting or teaching opportunities in the Women's Studies Program, contact Ettin at 256-6480 or Sally McConnell-Ginet at 256-3553.

New Major Offered by STS Program

Cornell students who want to combine biology with a broad liberal education can now take advantage of a new "biology and society major," officially approved by the faculty of the College of Arts and Sciences late last spring.

"We're very excited about the new major," said Stuart M. Brown Jr., professor of philosophy, associate director of the University's Program on Science, Technology and Society and chairman of the committee which developed the curriculum for the new major.

"The new major is not for students who intend to be professional biologists. Instead it is a balanced, multidisciplinary general education program designed to provide students with an understanding of the world in which they live and in which they will later practice their chosen professions.

The biology and society major requires 11 hours of pre-requisites; 29 to 32 hours of "core courses" in science, social science and the humanities and 30 hours of electives chosen in consultation with a biology and society major advisor. Included in the curriculum will be a special course on biology and society and a senior seminar requiring a thesis.

Fall Seminar Topic Is 'Social Control'

"Social Control and Personal Freedom" is the subject of an interdisciplinary fall term seminar sponsored by the Marcham Tutorial Program.

Taught by James Jacobs, assistant professor of sociology and law, and by David Lyons, professor of philosophy, the seminar will cover mechanisms and institutions of social control, such as imprisonment, alternatives to punishment, schooling and conditioning; issues in social control, such as pornography, heroin, population control, and the value of freedom.

The seminar constitutes the first half of a year-long sequence. The spring term seminar, "Social

'Community' Course Open Free to Public

"America and World Community," a multi-disciplinary course taught by seven Cornell faculty members and open to the public without charge, will meet from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays from Sept. 6 through Dec. 6.

Topics to be covered include "U.S. Approach to World Community," "Nature and Man's Treatment of the Environment," "The Flow of Global Communications and Man's Survival" and "Preferred Futures: World Order Models."

Participating faculty members are Theodore Lowi, the John L. Senior Professor of Government; Richard Baer, associate professor of natural resources; Harold and Margaret Feldman, professors of human development; Njoku Awa, assistant professor of communication arts; J. Congress Mbata, associate professor of Africana Studies; Martin Benal, associate professor of government, and J. Bruce Long, assistant professor of Asian studies.

Cornell students may register to take the course and receive three credits. Interested persons may sit in on the entire lecture series or may attend individual lectures. Last year, 75 students registered for the course, and average attendance at lectures was 100.

More information on "America and World Community" may be obtained by calling Robert Beggs, course coordinator (256-4864).

History Grant Funds New, Small Seminars

Cornell's History Department has started a three-year project designed to introduce new freshman and sophomore courses around the concept of small seminar classes with regular written reports from each student.

The program has received first-year funding of $59,013 from the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH). The entire project, which will involve the development of new course material by 14 faculty members, is expected to cost more than $250,000 with almost of the funds coming from NEH.

The curriculum innovation is under the direction of History Chairman Michael G. Kammen, the Newton C. Farr Professor of American History and Culture. "We propose," Kammen said, "to develop a series of underclass seminars of from 8 to 10 students — new in content, focus, and approach — in order to improve the students' skills in writing and in critical thinking about questions of value; to save potentially creative humanists for the humanities; and to insure that our future engineers, doctors, and businessmen have some understanding of the humanities."

Kammen said the emphasis on writing will include having the students' papers duplicated and distributed to other members of the seminar for detailed discussion. Particular attention will be paid to the close analysis of historical texts, to subtle nuances of language and changes in the meaning of language.

Amade Trio, Guests to Perform

Festival Features Schubert

A month-long festival devoted to "The Music of Franz Schubert" begins Saturday, Sept. 4, at Cornell.

Faculty artists Malcolm Bilson (piano), John Hsu (cello) and Sonya Monosoff (violin) will be joined in performance by distinguished guest artists, including pianist Noel Lee, bassoonist Loren Glickman and sopranos Jean Hakes and Susan Davenney Wyner.

"Those of us who are performing all love Schubert, and we've been wanting to put together a festival to celebrate his works for several years," noted Monosoff, one of the festival organizers and a professor of music at Cornell.

A new program taken from Schubert's lieder, chamber and piano works will be presented at 8:15 p.m. each Saturday night and repeated at 4 p.m. the following Sunday at Barnes Hall Auditorium from Sept. 4 through Oct. 3. All concerts are free and open to the public; however, donations to help defray the costs of the festival will be requested.

Now regarded as the father of the modern German song (lied) and as one of the principal composers of the early 19th century, Schubert (1797-1828) spent most of his life struggling to obtain his daily means of subsistence. He never managed to secure an appointment as a court musician or kapellmeister and supported himself largely as a music teacher.

Although his talent as a composer was fully recognized by many of the leading musicians of his day and although his songs were highly praised by Beethoven, Schubert was grossly underpaid for his works by his publishers, and many of his finest works were almost totally neglected.

Labor Leader
ILR Speaker

A former United States Secretary of Labor will be the featured speaker at the Labor Day convocation of Cornell's New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations (ILR).

Peter J. Brennan, now president of the New York City Building and Construction Trades Council, served as President Richard M. Nixon's Secretary of Labor from 1973 to 1975. He is a long-time trade unionist who has held a variety of public positions.

The convocation will take place from 11:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 6, in 120 Ives Hall. All ILR classes will be cancelled for that hour.

Included in the convocation program will be remarks by ILR School Dean Robert B. McKersie and from the presidents of the undergraduate student government and the graduate student association. The Excellence in Teaching Award will be presented to a member of the ILR faculty.

ever gave took place on March 26, 1928. It was a success, both critically and financially, and following it the composer finally was able to afford to buy himself a piano, just eight months before his death.

The Schubert Festival is sponsored by the Cornell Music Department in cooperation with the Council for Creative and Performing Arts and the Faculty Committee on Music. A complete list of the festival programs and performers follows.

"The Music of Franz Schubert" will open with a performance by the Amade Trio Sept. 4 and 5, at Barnes Hall Auditorium. Trio members Monosoff, Bilson and Hsu will perform the Trio in B flat Major, Op. 99. In addition, Bilson will perform two works for solo piano — the Impromptu in B flat Major, Op. 142, no. 3, and the Sonata in A Major, Op. Posthumous.

On Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 11 and 12, guest artist Noel Lee will join Bilson in the performance of three of Schubert's piano works for four hands — the "Lebensstürme, Charakteristisches Allegro," the "Marche Caractéristique" No. 2 in C Major and the Fantasy in F minor, Op. 103.

Also included on the program are nine of Schubert's lieder, which will be performed by soprano Jean Hakes, with Bilson accompanying. Among them are "An Sylvia" and "Die Forelle."

In addition, Lee will perform the Sonata in A minor, Op. Posthumous 143, for solo piano.

The well-known "Trout" Quintet in A Major, Op. 114, and the Quintet in C Major, Op. 163, constitute the program for the Sept. 18 and 19 concerts. Monosoff, Bilson and Hsu will be joined by guest artists Carol Lieberman (violin), John Graham (viola) and Charles McCracken (cello). June Rotenberg, who played the double bass in the last campus performance of the "Trout" Quintet, returns to Barnes Hall to repeat her performance.

The Amade Trio will present the Sonatina in G minor, Op. 137, for piano and violin; the Fantasy in C Major, Op. 159, also for piano and violin, and the Trio in E flat Major, Op. 100, on Sept. 25 and 26.

The final concert of the festival on Oct. 2 and 3 will feature seven lieder performed by soprano Susan Davenney Wyner, a 1965 graduate of the College of Arts and Sciences at Cornell. Wyner will be accompanied by Bilson. Among the selections of the program are "Ganymed," "Die Nachtigal" and "Gretchen am Spinnrade," which was the first of dozens of texts from Goethe that Schubert set to music.

In addition, the Octet in F Major, Op. 166, will be performed. Guest artists Charles Russo (clarinet), Earl Chapin (French horn) and Loren Glickman (bassoon) will join Lieberman, Graham, Rotenberg, Monosoff and Hsu for the performance.

Fighting for Cornell?

"The Lion and the Unicorn were fighting for the crown:

The Lion beat the Unicorn all round the town.

Some gave them white bread, some gave them brown:

Some gave them plum cake and drummed them out of town."

—Lewis Carroll

Students eating in the Oakenshields dining room at Willard Straight Hall should reserve their white bread, brown bread and plum cake for themselves — this lion and this unicorn, who adorn the South Wall, turn a wooden stare on those who tempt them to eat. The wood carving was commissioned by the Department of Dining and was executed by Earl Rumsey Durand, an artist from Cincinnati who also designed the national Bicentennial seal.

Students May Choose
From 8 Dining Plans

Eight dining plan options are lunches and five dinners, option 5-4 open this year to Cornell students, offers five breakfasts and five whether they reside on or off lunches.

campus, according to Jack Pacak, Cornell Dining marketing manager.

Three seven-day meal plans are designed to accommodate the student who spends most of his or her time on campus, he said. Option 7-1 consists of 20 meals per week; option 7-2 (14 meals per week) provides lunches and dinners, and option 7-3 (14 meals per week) provides breakfasts and dinners.

For students who wish to dine on campus during the week, but prefer to eat off campus on the weekends, four Monday-through-Friday dining plans exist. Option 5-1 consists of three meals per day for the five-day period; option 5-2 provides five

In addition, Cornell Dining offers a special program called Coop 2000. Originally designed for students who wished to limit their caloric intake to 2000 per day, the Coop 2000 plan is suitable for all persons who are concerned about sound nutrition, Pacak said. The menu each day includes lean meats, fish, poultry, fresh fruits and vegetables. A vegetarian entree also is available at each meal.

The Coop 2000 plan is administered by a registered dietician in the newly restored Balch Dining Room. Individual dietary consultation is available upon request to anyone in any of the Cornell Dining programs.

Convocation: 'This Is A Waste of Time'

John A. Taylor, Cornell University Unitarian Universalist chaplain, will speak at the first Sage Chapel Convocation of the academic year at 11 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 5.

Taylor's topic will be "This Is a Waste of Time."

"If we knew the Cornell degree wasn't going to help us make money, if parents knew the money they invest in their children's college education would be better invested in a savings account, if we all knew that the University was a waste of time, would we still be here?" Taylor asks. "Probably no. Yet wasting time is the core of Cornell."

By "wasting time," Taylor means indulging in those activities that are not relevant to the making of money or to the kind of production that our society expects of its individuals. According to this definition, to develop a concept of the quality of life — "a concept of irrelevance," as Taylor puts it — is to waste time. "And yet there is nothing more important that a University can teach," he said.

Taylor is heard regularly at 9:05 a.m. Sundays over WHCU radio.

Sage Chapel Convocations are held every Sunday while the University is in session. Through the Dean Sage endowment, leading speakers representing different faiths and philosophies are brought each week to the chapel's pulpit. Music is provided by the 100-voice Sage Chapel Choir, which is open to all interested singers.

Matchmaker

Roster Finds Women Jobs

The Professional Skills Roster, an Ithaca placement service operated largely by volunteers, is helping match part-time professional employees with jobs that fit their skills and suit their schedules.

The program, according to researchers Jennie Farley and James D. Kelly, could serve as a model for other communities where employers need skilled part-time professionals and where women need part-time work. Farley, an assistant professor in the New York

State School of Industrial and Labor Relations, and Kelly, who received the master of industrial and labor relations degree from the school in May 1976, presented their findings in the summer 1976 issue of the Journal of the National Association for Women Deans, Administrators and Counselors.

Farley and Kelly found that since Ithaca's Professional Skills Roster began in 1967 it has been able to fill 46 per cent of the jobs it has listed, largely with wives of faculty, staff and graduate students at Cornell, the city's largest employer. These women are often qualified for professional positions but have family responsibilities which preclude full-time employment.

Job seekers who register with the roster are a highly educated group — most have bachelor's degrees, and some have master's and Ph.D. degrees — but they are not the employees most needed in the academic community where most teaching, research and extension work is carried out by full-time faculty, and where many supporting jobs tend to be routine clerical positions, the researchers discovered.

Nevertheless, the researchers found that the roster was able to match at least some of its applicants with some of its jobs by advertising its service throughout the community as well as within the University. The researchers rated nearly half the matches made through the roster "excellent" because they corresponded closely to the job seeker's requirements for hours worked per day, duration of job, use of education and overall suitability.

Even women who did not find jobs through the roster benefitted from its counseling service and felt that the organization helped smooth their transition back into the paid work force by giving them confidence, the researchers found.

"A roster can make the most of the opportunities (for part-time professional employment) there are; it can take the time to fill them carefully; it could even encourage institutions to create more such jobs in tight budget times," the researchers emphasized.

The Professional Skills Roster, coordinated by Nancy McKersie, is located at 308 Sheldon Court, 410 College Ave., Ithaca, N.Y. Office hours, beginning Aug. 16 are 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. weekdays. The phone number is 256-3758.

Cornell Receives Grants

Gene E. Likens, Cornell University professor of ecology and systematics, and F. Herbert Bormann, professor of forest ecology at Yale University, have received a two-year $750,000 grant from the National Science Foundation to continue their research on hydrologic-nutrient cycle interactions at the U.S. Forest Service's Hubbard Brook Experimental Forest in the White Mountains of New Hampshire.

The study, which has been underway for the past 13 years, is the first to emphasize the importance of abiotic factors (soil, climate, geology, etc.) as well as plants and animals in the study of an ecosystem. It is also the first to quantify the effects of modifying entire ecosystems (by removing all the vegetation, for example) and the first to measure the inputs and outputs of nutrients for the ecosystem, a diagnostic technique which allows researchers to keep track of what the entire system is doing.

"We've collected a wealth of information in the past 13 years, but it's like a giant jigsaw puzzle. We now have a lot of the pieces, and we're hoping in the next two years to make them fit together much better," Likens explained.

Cornell's Department of Geological Sciences has received a $5,000 grant from the Gulf Oil Foundation in support of its research programs.

The grant will be applied to a program of seismic exploration of the crust in areas of geological interest, according to Jack E. Oliver, the Irving Porter Church Professor of Engineering and chairman of the department.

The grant was made through Gulf's educational assistance program, which includes research grants, undergraduate scholarships, matching of employee gifts to colleges, capital grants, departmental assistance grants and graduate fellowships.

Perkins Donates Chamber Music

More than 750 pieces of chamber music have been donated to the Cornell Music Library by Harold C. Perkins '15, Cornell professor emeritus of theoretical and applied mechanics. Perkins donated the musical scores in memory of his daughter, Helen Perkins Strok '39.

An amateur cellist, Perkins collected the music over a period of more than 50 years, obtaining the bulk of it in the 1930s. He selected the best editions he could find, not only of the standard chamber repertory such as the quartets and trios of Mozart and Haydn, but also the lesser known works of such composers as Gavini, Rode and Boccherini. With other local musicians, Perkins would perform the works in his collection for family and friends at frequent evening musicales. Perkins' daughter Helen was an amateur violinist.

Cadets Win Prize

Army ROTC cadets at Cornell University received the top award for military proficiency in competition with 103 colleges and universities at the six-week ROTC summer encampment at Fort Bragg, N.C.

The 14 Cornell cadets included three women. In all there were 250 women among the 2,500 cadets at the camp. The women participated fully in all the training activities with no quarter shown, according to Lt. Col. Gerard H. Luisi, professor of military science and commandant of the Cornell unit.

The 14 Cornell students attained the highest total scores in a series of field tests given at the end of the program. These included exercises in navigating over terrain, radio operation, emplacement of weapons and assembly and disassembly of weapons. There were 15 tests in all.

The Cornell ROTC unit received a three-foot trophy which will be on display at Cornell until next summer's encampment.

"This gift is a particularly welcome addition to the library, because it fills in some important gaps in our chamber music collection," says Michael A. Keller, music librarian. "The Perkins donation includes several rare items — such as pre-revolutionary Russian editions of works by Malischewsky and Persiani."

The music will be placed in the library's chamber music collection, which is used by Cornell's faculty and students for performance as well as research.

'Academic Resources Center'

Support Services Centralized

Vice Provost June Fessenden-Raden and the Cornell University Libraries are joining together in an effort to centralize academic support services on the Cornell campus.

The Academic Resources Center (ARC), as it is called, will maintain a desk in the lobby of Uris Library where trained staff will be available to answer questions and direct students, faculty and staff to resources.

ARC is a teaching-learning resource for the entire University community. The need for such a center has increased as Cornell has grown larger, Raden said. In gathering information for ARC, the staff has discovered that there are resource people in each department able to identify all of the academic resources of that department, but who do not know what is available outside of their department. As a result, valuable resources are often unused or underused, and ARC is trying to remedy that situation, she said.

ARC is concerned with four areas: audio-visual equipment and the persons trained to use it, tutorial programs, guidance and counseling programs, and research (as it applies to libraries and collections). ARC provides a way for a teaching assistant who needs video equipment for a class to find that equipment and learn to use it properly. It will help the faculty member who wishes to purchase a piece of equipment by providing an opportunity to look at the equipment and discuss its qualities with someone who already owns it. It will provide the undergraduate with information about term paper clinics, tutorials, reading and study programs.

Anyone wishing to use the services of ARC or to provide the center with more information should contact the ARC desk in the Uris Library lobby or call 6-4199. The desk will be open Mondays through Thursdays from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9:30 p.m., Fridays from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Sundays from 1 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m.

University Receives Grant for Libraries

Cornell University is one of 12 colleges and universities to receive a Library Service Enhancement Program grant from the Council on Library Resources (CLR). The one-year grant of $20,000 provides funds to improve services and increase use of campus libraries.

The CLR grant will pay the salary and benefits of a librarian to spend full time developing a program to expand and improve library services. J. Gormly Miller, director of the Cornell University Library system, has selected Joan Ormondroyd, associate librarian, to develop such a program. She will be working closely with faculty, students and staff to improve library instruction for undergraduates, provide instruction and guidance in bibliography, documentation and library research methods for upperclassmen and graduates, review the course reserve system, and, with Vice Provost for Undergraduate Education June Fessenden-Raden, create an Academic Resources Center for the dissemination of information about learning and instruction materials, equipment and expertise.

Ormondroyd has been at Cornell since 1971 working as a reference and reserve librarian. She came to Cornell from California where she worked as an outreach librarian in the Contra Costa County public library system after receiving the master's degree in library science in 1969 from the University of California, Berkeley.

Her undergraduate work included a bachelor's degree in Spanish from the University of the Americas in Mexico and a bachelor's degree in history and English from UC, Berkeley. She also holds a master's degree in teaching arts from UC, Davis, and taught for a number of years in both public and private schools in California and Canada.

Honors

Philip A. Minges, professor of vegetable crops at Cornell, received the 1976 Carl S. Bittner Extension Award from the American Society for Horticultural Science in August.

He was recognized for outstanding contributions to horticulture through innovative and valuable extension activities. The award, which consists of a plaque and $200 in cash, was given at the Society's annual banquet held at Louisiana State University.

tive colleges. All other students pick up their packets at Lynah Rink.

2. The campus Traffic Bureau table at Lynah is where all motorized vehicles must be registered (no charge), parking permits can be purchased (if parking on campus) and bus passes can be purchased, if desired (required to ride the campus buses).

3. All registration material is to be completed before reporting to register.

4. Students report to register at the assigned time and place indicated in the packet.

5. Students in architecture, business and public administration, engineering, law, veterinary medicine and unclassified report to their respective divisions to complete registering.

6. Those registering at Barton Hall go to the Registrar's table where certain data processing cards and a matriculant slip (new students only) will be collected. Specific cards are returned to the student with appropriate instructions to report to their division tables to complete registering.

7. Any new students who have not yet had their I.D. picture taken should report to the I.D. picture table in Barton Hall. At that time a temporary I.D. is provided with instructions as to time and place to pick up the permanent I.D. card.

8. Male students required to take Physical Education should report to Teagle Hall for a swim test appointment.

All women taking Physical Education report to Helen Newman Hall between Sept. 6 and 10 to get assignments and take swimming tests.

9. Students interested in ROTC report to ROTC stations in Barton.

Matriculants

All new students must complete and turn in the Matriculant slip included in the registration packet. Any new student who does not receive a Matriculant slip should report to the Registrar's Office, 222 Day Hall.

Temporary Registration

A student who does not have a set of permanent registration materials for any reason prior to registration day should obtain a set of temporary registration materials at the Registrar's Office. There will be a special table at Barton Hall for all students with temporary registration material.

Change of Information

Students should make changes or corrections to home address, local address and local telephone number on the Directory and Biographical Record card and the Registration Permit card. To make other changes, a Biographical Record Change form should be used. These forms are available throughout the year at the Registrar's Office, 222 Day Hall.

Course and Room Rosters

Course and Room Rosters for the fall term 1976 will be distributed at registration.

Cornellcard

Students can apply for a Cornellcard (campus charge card) at a table at Lynah Rink, through Friday, Sept. 3 (8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.). After that, continuing students may apply for a Cornellcard at the Bursar's Office, 260 Day Hall. New students may apply for a Cornellcard at either the Bursar's Office or the Campus Bookstore. Students under 21 years of age need parental consent to have a Cornellcard.

Selective Service

The Selective Service 109 card (verification of enrollment for male undergraduates) is no longer required by most Selective Service Boards. Students who do need the Selective Service 109 card can get one at the Registrar's Office.

Students who will become 18 years of age subsequent to registration at Cornell should register with their local Selective Service Board within 30 days following their 18th birthday.

Graduate level students needing verification of enrollment (SS103) can get the card at their college office.

Motor Vehicle Registration

Motor vehicle registration will be conducted in Lynah Rink through tomorrow, 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

After that, vehicles may be registered at the Traffic Bureau, 115 Wait Ave.

Medical Insurance

All regularly enrolled students and students registered in absentia will have a medical insurance charge on their account at the Bursar's Office. The insurance is for hospitalization, surgical fees and major medical coverage from Aug. 28, 1976 to Aug. 31, 1977 for students covered under previous policy, and from Sept. 2, 1976 to Aug. 31, 1977 for new enrollees. Any student may decline this coverage and assume personal responsibility for charges associated with hospital care by completing a waiver form at their place of registration, the Bursar's Office or at the Student Insurance Office at Gannett Clinic. Waivers will be accepted until Sept. 30, 1976.

Late Registration

Budget 'Better than Expected'

funds, which showed a surplus of approximately $940,000, and related activities accounts, where the surplus is approximately $1,530,000. Against these last two accounts, however, there was a distribution of $1.08 million of restricted capital funds.

Much of the improvement in designated funds represents savings by deans and managers, which will be reappropriated into their budgets for the current year. In the related activities area, the largest single item was in Physical Plant Operations, which began the year with an $885,064 "negative reserve" (or deficit) and improved its position by $933,500, so that it ended the year in an almost break-even position.

At the Medical College in New York City, the unaudited year-end figures show a surplus of $65,900, but this, too, was after capital distribution of $1.02 million.

For all the endowed units, the total accounting surplus was about $2,967,000, which was accompanied by a capital distribution of approximately $3.4 million.

The improvement in the year-end figure, when compared to earlier budgeted deficits, came about largely because of efficient management in the face of the University's financial problems. President Dale R. Corson said the credit belongs "to people at all the operating levels of the University, to deans, to departments heads, to faculty members and to the support staff, people who have taken seriously Cornell's problems and been zealous in their efforts to cut costs and increase income."

In addition to the use of the $3.4 million of its capital funds, he said, however, that the University also used another $728,000 of unrestricted bequests which previously would have gone into endowment.

"Essentially the University was able during 1975-76 to make substantial progress towards achieving financial equilibrium, whereas we had feared we would lose ground," said University Treasurer Arthur H. Peterson. "The budget for the year was prepared almost two years ago, during the worst of the recession, so that in part one might attribute the results to improvements in the economy. In the main, however, the results reflect hard work by the campus community."

Peterson cautioned against undue optimism that the University has overcome its financial problems. He pointed out that over the past 11 years, $37.5 million in capital funds have had to be used in support of operations. "This amount slightly exceeded the amount of gifts and market gains on the University's invested funds which are available for support of operations. When viewed in the light of inflation which has occurred during that period, we are not where we were, or should be, in terms of a strong capital position."

President Corson also referred to a backlog of deferred maintenance projects that have been left undone during recent years. "It has been estimated," he said, "that we have from $7.5 to $10 million in such projects that are of an emergency nature. Also, we have important unmet needs in our library and in keeping abreast of academic developments in a number of fields. So, the University will need to continue its austerity programs for several years to catch up, even with such fine performances as 1975-76."

There were other factors cited by Treasurer Peterson in his report to trustees on the budget picture, which has continued to improve throughout the year. An originally anticipated deficit of $1.5 million in general purpose funds was revised downward to $920,000 in January and to $620,000 in March.

Among these factors, Peterson said, are the following: Managers have held back current funds against anticipated needs in years ahead; pricing policies in the enterprise units of the University were changed to catch up with past losses and negative balances in their accounts, and there was general improvement in the economy.

Many of the accounts, however, still show substantial negative reserve balances in the books, he said. As an example, the Central Heating Plant showed a $380,000 improvement from its negative reserve balance of $555,000 at the end of last year, but ended 1975-76 still $175,000 in the red.

Another positive factor cited by Peterson was a much larger number of lapses — jobs that became vacant and were not immediately filled or were left unfilled. This was originally budgeted at $340,000 but actually came in at about $915,000, for an improvement of some $575,000.

He also cited an increase in current fund investment income of roughly $560,000, approximately half of which was due to an improved program of money management that permitted the University to invest, at interest, a larger part of its current fund balances.

Peterson emphasized the figures are preliminary. "The full audited report, including charges to endowment, loan, and plant funds will not be available for several weeks," Peterson said.

Family Football Day Features Mini-Clinics

Family Football Day at Cornell, featuring picture-taking and a clinic, will be held on Schoellkopf Field at 3:30 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 5.

The Big Red squad and the coaching staff will be in uniform and on the field to meet youngsters and their parents. At 4 p.m., Coach George Seifert, his staff and squad will conduct "mini-clinics" on the field.

All youngsters attending Family Football Day will receive a free photo and autographs of all members of this year's Big Red squad.

In addition, Cornell cheerleaders and a portion of the Big Red Band will be on hand to liven up the festivities.

The on-the-field clinics will accommodate eight groups of youngsters — 8 and under, 9, 10, 11, 12, and over 12. They'll be positioned at eight points on the field and each age group will be visited by players and coaches who'll conduct brief clinics on all aspects of the game.

The players will be divided as follows: quarterbacks, running backs, receivers, offensive linemen, defensive linemen, linebackers, defensive backs and kickers.

After the clinics, Seifert will describe how the Big Red will deploy on offense and defense this year and explain some of the formations and sets Cornell will be using.

The Big Red opens its 1976 season at Schoellkopf Sept. 18 against Princeton.

Piguet Is Assistant Fencing Coach

Jacques Piguet, fencing coach at the State University of Binghamton (Harpur) since 1973, has been appointed assistant to Cornell's new head coach Jean-Jacques Gillet, athletic director Dick Schultz announced recently.

Piguet, 29, will assist in both men's and women's programs, replacing Gillet who formerly aided Raoul Sudre; Sudre resigned as of June 30 after directing the Big Red for 15 years.

Piguet is a native of France where he received the B.A. degree in physical education and fencing from the Academie D'Armes in 1967.

After working as a fencing master for several prominent clubs in France, he accepted a position as fencing master in 1971 with the Oklahoma City YMCA. Two years later he joined the staff at Binghamton and last fall he was appointed an assistant professor of physical education.

Piguet lectured at the Cornell fencing clinics in 1973 and 1974.

Cornell In Engineering Minority Consortium

Cornell University, 18 other colleges and universities and eight research centers have formed a national consortium to increase the number of minority men and women with graduate degrees in engineering.

The new organization, known as the National Consortium for Graduate Degrees for Minorities in Engineering, Inc., will offer financial support and practical laboratory experience to minority students — Black Americans, Mexican Americans, Puerto Ricans and American Indians — while they pursue master's degrees in engineering. The program's goal is to increase by 100 the annual number of minority students receiving master's degrees in engineering.

The consortium is supported by annual fees of $15,000 paid by each participating research center. These funds, together with funding provided by each of the participating universities, support the student fellowships throughout the master's program.

Businessman Creates Hotel Scholarship

New York City businessman George H. Mouchett has established a fund in honor of his father to provide scholarships for native-born black Bermudans to attend Cornell University's School of Hotel Administration.

The George Albert Mouchett Memorial Fund was started with a gift of $5,000 to the school this summer from Mouchett. His father was born in Bermuda and kept lifelong ties on the island although he lived for many years in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mouchett, who lives at 788 Columbus Ave., is a 1950 graduate of the University of Wisconsin. He said one of the reasons he chose to establish the scholarship fund at Cornell's Hotel School was because he has been impressed during his travels by the number and quality of hotel managers the world over who have graduated from Cornell.

Big Red Football

First Game September 18

Preparations for Cornell's 89th football season began Thursday, Aug. 26 when 85 candidates reported to second-year coach George Seifert.

The squad includes 29 lettermen, along with some talented newcomers, whose objective is to turn around last year's record of 1-8 and give the Big Red its first winning season since 1972. While Cornell outscored only Bucknell in '75, four other contests were unsettled until the final minutes — Colgate and Princeton here, Yale and Penn away.

For historical firsts, Princeton will be met in the opener here Sept. 18 while Penn will close the season here Nov. 13.

"We'll be a better all-around club, no doubt about it," says the 26-year-old former Stanford defensive strategist.

Wholesale position switches of veterans have been made in both his offensive and defensive alignments as Seifert seeks a wider distribution of his better athletes. For example, two of last year's three quarterbacks, all of whom played considerably, have been moved, Joe Mollica to the receiver back and Garland Burns to a defensive half-back. Mollica will battle senior Eamon McEneaney, a standout receiver in 1974.

Jay LaRochelle, a 6-4, 205-pound senior, will be the No. 1 quarterback unless replaced by any one of sophomores Jim Hofher and Mike Tanner or junior transfer Mike O'Malley.

The Big Red has the potential for an explosive running attack. Particularly threatening should be half-backs Tim LaBeau and Neal Hall, averaging 4.5 and 4.1 yards respectively last year, and sophomore Johnny Riley who had a 6.1 ave. with a 4-1 freshman team.

At fullback is junior Dave Tretter, a flanker back a year ago; junior transfer Joey Holland (son of Brud who was an All-America end here in 1937-38), and Ken Talton, a highly promising sophomore.

Up front on offense, Seifert has experienced performers in split end Bob Henrickson, tight end Paul Haydon; tackles Joe Meaney, Tony Anzalone and Dave Sheil; guards John Shavers and Tony Vegh, and center Jeff Brown, moved to the pivot post after lettering as a guard the last two years.

Light but quick veterans on defense are ends Don Versteeg, Ron McCurdy and Charlie Payne; tackles Jim Lorditch, Glenn Osterhout, Jim Walker, Ernie Taddei and Mark Cieslak; middle guards Cal Washington and Bob Weggler, linebackers Don Papich and Terry Lee, two of the better Ivy backers, and backs Dave Johnson, Jim Henry, Larry Skoczylas, Dave Monahan, as well as Burns.

Sophomores expected to help defensively are tackle Pat Hansen, backer Russ Stahl and backs John Curran and Jim Lewis.

Seifert's varsity includes two new assistants, Fred Manuel from Brown, working with the offensive running backs, and Jim Kaffen of Stanford who will be an assistant defensive end coach. Holdovers include Nelson Bobb, defensive line; George Landis, defensive backfield; Terry Mallett, offensive line; Paul Paolisso, quarterbacks and receivers, and Bob VanLancker, linebackers and defensive ends, who coached the freshmen in '75. The new freshman coach is Dino Paparella from the University of Cincinnati.

The schedule is: Sept. 18, Princeton; 25, Colgate; Oct. 2 at Rutgers; 9, at Harvard; 16, Brown; 23, Dartmouth; 30, at Yale; Nov. 6, at Columbia; 13, Pennsylvania.

Tip Macdonald sports loyal look for football players.

University Designs Health-Planning Class

A course to help union and community members take an active role in health planning and decision-making has been designed by two Cornell University units under a grant from the New York State Education Department.

The $38,000 grant is shared by the Cornell University Medical College and the New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations (ILR).

The nine two-hour sessions will be taught in the evenings beginning in September at the ILR School's New York office (known as NYSSILR-Cornell) at 7 East 43rd St., and at a location in Queens to be announced. The course will be offered four times during the year.

Among subject areas to be taught are symptoms and prevention of common diseases, promotion of good health practices, nature of health-care delivery systems, identification of health needs of particular groups and the development of health programs such as prevention, screening and immunization in the community and place of work.

The course will be directed by Dr. George Reader, chairman of the Department of Public Health of the Medical College and Dr. Betty Lall, director of the Trade Union Health Education Project of the ILR School.

To take the course, a person should have a high school diploma or its equivalent. It is designed especially for those in the labor movement and community health boards.

Further information is available from Cynthia Hosay, project coordinator, at NYSSILR-Cornell.

High School Diploma Preparatory Course Set

For Cornell employees who have not completed a high school education and who wish to take the High School Equivalency Test, the University's Office of Personnel Services offers a preparation course.

The course begins Sept. 14 and ends Nov. 18. Twenty sessions will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10 a.m. to noon in B-49 Olin Hall. To enroll, employees should telephone Personnel's training section (256-4869).

There is no cost to the employee. With a supervisor's permission, employees who enroll will be released from work to attend classes, at full salary, and will not be expected to make up the time.

The High School Equivalency Test will be given at BOCES on Nov. 19 and 20. The standardized test, administered by New York State, verifies that those who pass have the educational background of a high school graduate. Equivalency diplomas are awarded, which are recognized by colleges and businesses.

The five subjects covered by the test — English usage, mathematics, science, social studies and literature — are treated thoroughly in Cornell's preparation course, according to Virginia K. Rinker, training specialist.

Ask CIRCE

This column is used to answer frequent or unique and interesting questions received by CIRCE or to present other information to the members of the Cornell Community.

CIRCE (that's sir-see) is the Cornell Information and Referral Center, the place to get your questions about Cornell answered. Along with the Academic Resources Center (ARC) in Uris Library, which has the low-down on the resources available at Cornell for academic pursuits, CIRCE will help you find out what you want to know about the University.

Cornell's diversity is one of its greatest assets, but it sometimes adds a touch of confusion. The CIRCE staff is dedicated to the proposition that accurate answers to your questions can be vitally important to you. We are set up to handle questions from the entire Cornell community—faculty, students and staff. If we do not have the answer to your question, or the name of the person to refer you to, we will research it until we find what you need to know.

CIRCE has a desk just inside the main entrance to Day Hall (the doors the buses stop at on East Avenue). The desk is staffed Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Saturday from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Stop by with your questions or just to meet us. You can also call 256-6200 (6-6200 from a campus phone). After hours our answering device will record your questions. And in case you can't call or come in, a CIRCE question box is provided outside the main entrance to Day Hall where you can leave your questions and we will get in touch with you.

Cornell's offerings go beyond academics, employment and entertainment. We'd like to make it easy for you to make the most of the opportunities available here.

Public Information Wins Grand Award

A multi-media program on the radio-radar telescope at Arecibo, Puerto Rico produced by Cornell University's Office of Public Information has won the grand award in its class in the annual Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) Recognition Program.

The show was produced by Wesley Tree, director of radio, television and film, and Sol Goldberg, director of visual services. Photos for the production were taken by Russell Hamilton, photo-journalist in the Office of Public Information, and Goldberg.

Engineering: Cornell Quarterly, edited by Gladys J. McConkey, and Cornell Alumni News, edited by John Marcham, were selected for exceptional achievement awards in the magazine publishing category.

Both magazines were among the top 10 magazines submitted to CASE from throughout the country.

The Alumni News also was cited for exceptional achievement in the category "public affairs program in periodicals" and was given a citation for its special 75th anniversary issue.

Russell Hamilton also received a citation in the special division of "photographs" for his photographs in the Cornell Alumni News.

CASE is a nationwide organization of employees of educational institutions who work in the areas of alumni, public relations, fund raising, publications and government relations. Its annual awards program recognizes institutions with superior programs in these areas. Almost 1,900 entries were submitted to CASE for this year's competition.

Stipend checks for fellowships, scholarships and traineeships will be available on and after Sept. 3 at 130 Day Hall. Most awards are payable monthly and are available on the first Friday of each month. Lehman and Afrad Fellows should contact the Fellowship Office, 116 Sage Graduate Center. Checks for teaching assistantships, research assistantships and graduate research assistantships will be available bi-weekly on and after Sept. 9 at the various departmental offices.

Students who have Cornell administered awards or assistantships which provide full tuition should disregard that portion of the Bursar's bill. Credits for financial aid will appear on the Sept. 10 or Oct. 10 bill. Questions concerning awards should first be directed to the Graduate Faculty Representative's Office and then to the Fellowship Office.

All completed green course cards should be turned in to Sage Graduate Center by Wednesday, Sept. 15.

Students who have completed four years of residence, are not receiving money from Cornell, and who need only library facilities (use of carrel included) to complete their theses, may be eligible for a special tuition rate of $400. Check with the Graduate School for details and application forms. Graduate students whose employment is other than or in addition to a teaching or research assistantship may be eligible for proration of tuition for reasons of employment (applications available at the Information Desk, Sage Graduate Center).

All doctoral program students who have completed six residence units prior to the beginning of this semester and have not attempted the Admission to Candidacy Examination must either schedule the examination by mid-September or request permission from the Graduate School for an extension (by recommendation of special committee).

Graduate students are reminded that in nominating their special committees only members of the Graduate Faculty of the appropriate field may represent major or minor subjects.

Information on fellowship programs for graduate students is available in the Career Center (in Sage Graduate Center), and will be sent to Field Offices as it becomes available. All students should check regularly for programs for which they may be eligible. Some programs will also be described in Sage Notes.

Visitors Program Announced

Registration for the Cornell Visitors Program fall semester will begin Monday, Sept. 6, and continue through Friday, Sept. 17.

The program, begun last year, offers a continuing education opportunity for area residents. Visitors may attend virtually any course for a nominal fee, on a non-credit basis, contingent upon the existence of available space in the class and the agreement of the instructor. No record of participation is kept.

Fees for Visitors Program participants are $10 per credit hour. A three-hour course will cost $30. The same course taken for credit at the extramural rate of $100 per credit hour would cost $300. Colleges may assess additional fees to cover costs of special equipment, materials or services for courses which require them.

The program is administered through the University's Division of Summer Session and Extramural Courses, 105 Day Hall, where additional information may be obtained.

NSF Undergraduate Program Proposals Due Next Week

The National Science Foundation has announced details of its Undergraduate Research Participation (URP) Program for 1977. URP projects can be in any field of science: mathematical, physical, biological, medical (but not clinical), engineering, and social sciences; history and philosophy of science, and interdisciplinary fields which comprise overlapping areas of two or more sciences (e.g. biophysics, geochemistry, meteorology and oceanography).

Last year 201 URP projects were funded for a total of $2.55 million. The same level of support is available this year.

Proposals are due at NSF by Sept. 10, 1976. For further details, contact Peter Curtiss in the Office of Academic Funding, 123 Day Hall (6-5014).
