Cornell Companions highlighted for good work

🐾 Sunday, September 1, 2013 - 12:00am

The Cornell Companions, a pet visitation program, was recently highlighted in the Ithaca Journal. Explaining that members of the organization -- pet owners and their pets, which include cats, dogs, camelids, and various other species -- have been helping to enhance the lives of people in nursing homes, schools, and other community-based operations for many years by encouraging bonds between animals and people, the article invited others to join the group.
