
CONTRIBUTORS

Greg Acciaioli is currently on a one-year appointment as a research fellow at the Asia Research Institute, National University of Singapore. In mid-2005 he will return to lecturing in the Discipline of Sociology and Anthropology, School of Social and Cultural Studies, at The University of Western Australia.

Benedict R. O'G. Anderson is the Aaron L. Binenkorb Professor Emeritus of International Studies, Government, and Asian Studies at Cornell University, New York.

Elizabeth Fuller Collins is an Associate Professor of Classics and World Religions at Ohio University. She is presently completing the manuscript of a book titled "Struggling for Justice: Report from South Sumatra."

Arief W. Djati is a researcher at The AREK Foundation, which supports factory workers in Surabaya. He obtained his degree in Political and Social Sciences at the University of Airlangga, Surabaya. He is the co-author (with Anton Lucas) of The Dog is Dead, So Throw It in the River: Environmental Politics and Water Pollution in Indonesia (Monash Asia Institute: 2000) and of several books in Indonesian. He is interested in the dynamics of social and political affairs in East Java especially and Indonesia generally.

Michael Nieto García is a PhD candidate in the Department of English Literature at Cornell University. He is currently writing his dissertation, an exploration of philosophies of Individualism (in relation to more collective identities) in literature, such as those found in the writing of Herman Melville, Richard Wright, and the Indonesian author Djenar Maesa Ayu.

Danilyn Rutherford is Associate Professor in the Department of Anthropology at the University of Chicago. She is the author of Raiding the Land of the Foreigners: The Limits of the Nation on an Indonesian Frontier.

Dan Slater is a PhD Candidate in Emory University's department of political science. His articles on Malaysian authoritarianism have appeared in Comparative Politics and the Kyoto Review of Southeast Asia. He is also a co-author of a collaborative piece on the political origins of developmental states in East and Southeast Asia, forthcoming in International Organization. His dissertation is entitled "Ordering Power: Contentious Politics, State-Building, and Authoritarian Durability in Southeast Asia."