Dear Dean Teitelbaum:

Last week your technology support staff, Michael Cleary and Chuck Perkins, went way beyond the bounds of professional courtesy in assisting us set up an Internet presentation for the FOLIO Corporation of Provo in your law school. My colleague Tom Bruce and I told them how much we appreciated all they did; but we wanted you to know as well.

Tom and I have done presentations in many settings. I don't think we have ever before been so secure in the technology arrangements. Mike is highly regarded by his peers; I now understand why. Too many law schools have not yet discovered the importance of having technology professionals of such stature.

Let me add my warm appreciation for the generous interest shown by your faculty and library staff who turned out in surprising numbers on short notice, between terms, to see our course material demonstration. In the brief time Tom and I were in Utah we were immensely impressed.

Sincerely,

Peter W. Martin
